See heer a Shadow from that setting SUNNE,
Whose glorious course through this Horizon runn
Left the dimm face of our dull Hemisphære,
All one great Eye, all drownd in one great Teare.
Whose rare industrious Soule led his free thought
Through Learning's Universe, and vainly sought
Room for her spacious Self; untill at length
She found y way home: with an holy strength
Snatcht herself hence to Heavn; filld a bright place
Midst those immortal Fires, and on the face
Of her Great MAKER fixt a flaming eye,
Where still She reads true, pure Divinitie.
And now y graue Aspect hath deignd to shrink
Into this lesse appearance. If you think
Tis but a dead face, Art doth heer bequeath
Look on the following leaues & see him breath.

SERMONS

BY

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

AND

REVEREND FATHER IN GOD,

LANCELOT ANDREWES,

Late LORD BISHOP of WINCHESTER.

TO HIS MOST SACRED MAJESTIE CHARLES,

By the grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, DEFENDER OF THE FAITH, &c.

Most Gracious and Dread SOVEREIGNE:

WE here present to Your most SACRED MAJESTY, a book of Sermons. We need not tell whose they are, the Sermons are able to speak their Author. When the Author dyed, Your Majesty thought it not fit his sermons should die with him. And though they could not live with all that eleganey which they had upon his tongue, yet you were graciously pleased to think a paper-life better than none. Upon this Your Majesty gave us a strict charge, that we should over-look the Papers (as well Sermons as other Tractates) of that Reverend and Worthy Prelate, and print all that we found perfect. There came to our hands a world of Sermon-notes, but these came perfect, Had they not come perfect, we should not have ventured to adde any limbe unto them, lest mixing a Pen farre inferiour, we should have disfigured such compleat bodies.

Your Majesties first care was for the Presse, that the work might be publike. Your second was for the work it self, that it might come forth worthy the Author; which could not be, if it came not forth as he left it. In pursuance of these two, we have brought the work to light, and we have done it with care and fidelity; for as the Sermons were preached, so are they published. When he preached them, they had the general approbation of the Court, and they made him famous for making them. Now they are printed, we hope they will have a general liking of the Church, and inlarge and indear his name, to them that knew not him.

VVe know there is a great prejudice attends the after-printing of dead mens works. For the living may make the dead ſpeak as they will, and as the dead would not ſpeak, did they live. And many worthy Authors in all profeſſions, have had ſuch unſuitable peeces ſtitched to their former workes, as make them ſpeak contrary to themſelves, and to their known judgments while they lived. As if they had ſeen ſome viſion after death, to croſſe or recall their judgment in their life. VVe would be loth to ſuffer under the ſuſpition of this. And therefore in a full obedience to Your Majeſties Command, as we have printed all that we could find perfect and worthy his Name: ſo have we not added or detracted in the leaſt, to alter or divert his ſenſe. That ſo the work may not onely be his, but as himſelf made it: And the honour Your Majeſties, that ſo carefully commanded it: And the faithfulneſſe ours in our obedience to Your Majeſty, and our love to his memory.

And now will Your Majeſty graciouſly be pleaſed to give us leave, to commend this work to Your Protection, which would have needed none, had not Your Majeſty commanded it to be publike. For, publike view is as great a ſearch as many eyes can make. And many eyes can ſee what two cannot, be they never ſo good. And among many eyes, ſome will ever look aſquint upon worth, and maligne that which they cannot equal. And if ever any mans patience and temper could prevent this evil Eye, we hope his may: And yet, even whilſt we hope the beſt, we humbly begge Your
Eph. 5. 15. Majeſties protection againſt the worſt, becauſe the dayes are evil.

VVe have but two things to preſent to Your Majeſty. They are the Perſon to Your memory; and this his work to Your eye. For the Perſon, we can adde nothing to him. To name him, is enough to all that knew him; and to read him, will be enough to them that knew him not. And though Vertue have but its due, when 'tis commended, yet we conceive not how praiſe may make Vertue better than it is, eſpecially when the perſon in whom it was, is dead to all encouragement or comfort by it. And yet
Pater. Lib. 2 though Vertue cannot thus be bettered, it may be righted thus. For, Vivorum ut magna admiratio, ita cenſura difficilis. Tis eaſie to admire the living, and we do it, but it's hard to cenſure them any way. Both becauſe there will be no preferring one before another without offence: And becauſe, as we know not what may come upon them before death, ſo the cenſure may be ſo good, as they will ne're deſerve; or ſo bad, as though they do deſerve, they will not bear. 'Twas Bibulus his caſe. The admiration of men had carried him up to Heaven; no lower place would ſerve him. Yet when it came to a Wiſemans cenſure, he profeſſed, He knew no ground for that admiration, and leſſe worth in him for ſuch a height. But when men have payed all their rights of nature to death, and are gone into their ſilence; then where admiration ceaſeth, cenſure begins. Now, if the cenſure be heavy (as it is too oft upon the beſt) yet then it ſhould be ſparing for Humanities ſake. For that humanity, which forbids the rifling of a grave; bids forbear him that is ſhut up in it, and cannot anſwer. But if the cenſure be good, you may be bold with the grave: And you cannot praiſe any ſo ſafely as the dead; for you cannot humour them into danger, nor melt away your ſelf into flattery.

Cicer. 2. ad Attic Ep. 19. Bibulus hominum admiratione in Cœlo eſt, nec quare ſcio.

The Perſon therefore, whoſe workes theſe are, was from his youth, a man of extraordinary worth and note. A man, as if he had been made up of Learning and Vertue. Both of them ſo eminent in him, as 'tis hard to judge, which had precedency and greater intereſt. His Vertue (which we muſt ſtill judge the more worthy in any man) was comparable to that which was wont to be found in the Primitive Biſhops of the Church. And had he lived among thoſe ancient Fathers, his Vertue would have ſhined, even among thoſe vertuous men. And for his Learning, that was as well, if not better known abroad, than reſpected at home. And take him in his Latitude, we which knew him well; knew not any kind of Learning to which he was a ſtranger; but in his profeſſion admirable. None ſtronger than he, where he wreſtled with an Adverſary. And that Bellarmine felt, who was as well able to ſhift for himſelf, as any that ſtood for the Roman party. None more exact, more judicious than he, where he was to inſtruct and informe others. And that, as they knew, which often heard him preach, ſo they may learn, which will read this which he hath left behind him.

him. And yet this fulneſſe of his Material Learning, left room enough in the temper of his brain, for almoſt all Languages, learned and moderne, to ſeat themſelves. So that his Learning had all the helps Language could afford, and his Languages learning enough for the beſt of them to expreſſe. His Judgment in the mean time, ſo commanding over both, as that neither of them was ſuffered idly, or curiouſly to ſtart from, or fall ſhort of, their intended ſcope. So that we may better ſay of him, than 'twas ſometimes ſaid of Claudius Druſus; He was of as many, as great vertues, as mortal nature could receive, or induſtry make perfect. And ſince we are both taught, and ſee it by experience, that wiſe men alſo die, and periſh together, as well as the ignorant and fooliſh, and though they leave their riches, yet cannot diſpoſe their wiſdom to others: 'tis fit we ſhould be converſant in the writings of wiſe and religious men, that we may in part learn that in their works, which the dying Authors had not power to bequeath unto us. Pater. Hiſt. lib. 2. Pſal. 49. 10.

Theſe works then comming from ſo Grave, Learned, and Religious an Author, have but two things to do, in their publiſhing to the World, The one is, to teach the world What a treaſure they have of them. And the other, to tell this Church, what a Iewel ſhe loſt, when ſhe loſt their Author. The work is a Body of Sermons. To them he had been moſt bred, and in them he moſt excelled. And he was not a greater Preacher in his age, than he was both great and frequent, in his younger and ſtronger time. As for the body of the work it ſelf, were it not that we like not to diſparage any mans endeavours by comparing, we would ſay, the Chriſtian world hath not many ſuch Bodies of Sermons, as we here preſent, under Your Majeſties favor, to the view, and uſe of this Church. And if another Nation had them, they would as highly value them.

And here we humbly beg leave to tell Your Majeſtie, that theſe Sermons are in this, like their Author, mixed, of Religion and Wiſdom. It is an excellent thing for a man to ſpeak wiſely, and eloquently, both at once: but where theſe perfections meet not, there ſaith S. Auguſtine, Dicet ſapienter, quod non poteſt eloquenter. Let the Preacher (of all men) ſpeak that wiſely, which he cannot utter eloquently. And if S. Auguſtine in his time found that fit, out of all doubt it is neceſſary now, that men of our profeſſion, ſet themſelves to preach with more wiſdom, than eloquence. With Chriſtian and religious wiſdom; which alone knows how to preſerve Truth and Peace together. For as all other Churches in the world, are moſt happy when theſe meet; ſo is this too. But too many among the people, chooſe rather to have their humor fed, than their ſouls edified. And carry partial eares even to the houſe of that God, who is no accepter of perſons. To ſettle therefore the peace of the one, and to abate the humor of the other, nothing certainly under God, would be of greater efficacy; than Conciones ſapientes, wiſe, and diſcreet Sermons, which yet may be as zealous and devout as any other. For he that is zealous according to knowledge, is not leſſe zealous for his knowledge ſake. And true wiſdom, which is not true, if it be not Chriſtian, carries no water about it to quench zeal, but onely to ſprinkle it, that it may burn within compaſſe, and not fire that houſe which it intended but to warm. De doctrin. Chriſt. 4. Chap. 28. Act. 10. 34.

We have neither purpoſe nor Commiſſion to ſtep aſide here, and complain of the Times. All times have ſomewhat amiſſe in them, elſe Preachers ſhould have the leſſe work. And if theſe times have more than many others, which our Fore-fathers have ſeen, we muſt needs be ſorry there is ſo much work for Preachers: and more, if they which live by the Goſpel of Peace, ſhould make any. For after the building up of the Faith of Chriſt, their chief work ſhould be, to beat down thoſe ſtrong Holds, which any ſins have built up in the hearts of men, to pollute or defame Chriſtianity. And true Preachers indeed are, as S. Ierome ſpeakes, Maxillæ Eccleſiæ, the Jaw-bones of the Church, which by preaching, beat down the carnal life of man. Now all hatred, contention, variance, all ſedition and diſobedience to Lawful Authoriy is (as 'tis reckoned by the Apoſtle) among the works of the fleſh. And therefore ſince all Preachers are the Iawes of the Church, and the ſinnes of the people are, as it were, to be ground inter Maxillas, between theſe Iawes, before the People themſelves can be made fit to nouriſh the Church, or the Church them: How can this be done, (eſpecially done as it ought) if the Iawes be weak or fallen, and cannot do their office. In Thren. 1. Gal. 5. 1.

But our hope is that God will ſo bleſſe your Majeſty in your government, Your people in their loyalty, the Preachers in their wiſdom added to zeal and diligence, that the hearts and hands of all ſorts of men, ſhall be joyn'd together to preſerve Gods worſhip in truth, Your Majeſties throne in honour, the Church in religious devotion, and all Your People in obedience and union; the onely means to make both your Majeſty, and your People happy in this life, and bleſſed in that which is to come. And we humbly deſire men of all ſorts to think ſeriouſly of this; that if the Publike ſuffer either in Church or State, no mans private pleaſure, or profit can ſtand firme unto him. No mans. And Cicero had reaſon enough to laugh at the folly of thoſe men, Qui amiſſa Repub. Piſcinas ſuas fore ſalvas ſperare videntur, which in his time ſeemed to conceive ſuch a windy hope, that their fiſh-ponds and places of pleaſure, ſhould be ſafe, when the Common-wealth was loſt.

Lib. 1. Ep. 15. ad At.

Theſe Sermons, when they were preached, gave great contentment to the religious, and judicious ears of Your Royal Father, of ever bleſſed memory, the moſt able Prince that ever this Kingdome had, to judge of Church-work. And therefore we hope that the printing of them ſhall be as acceptable to Your Majeſty, as the preaching of them was both to your ſelf and him. We conceive, if your liking had not continued to them, Your Majeſty would not have commanded us the printing of them. And we aſſure our ſelves, ſince the Lines are the ſame, the Preſſe which hath made them legible, hath made no blot upon your gratious favours. We have been only Servants, as we are many wayes bound to be, to Your Majeſties command, in making them ready for the Preſſe, but Authors of nothing in them. And we heartily pray that the publiſhing of them, may be Honour to Your Majeſty; Good to the Church; and meanes of Comfort and ſalvation, to them which read them. And in theſe, and all other prayers for your Majeſties long life, and happy Government, we humbly beſeech You to conceive of us, as we are, and ſhall ever be

Your MAJESTIES moſt loyal, and humbly devoted Subjects and Servants;

SERMONS

PREACHED UPON

Christmas-Day.

A SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Maiesty

At WHITE-HALL on Tuesday, the xxv. of Decem. Anno Domini, MDCV., being CHRIST MAS Day.

HEB. Chap. II. Ver. XVI.

For, He in no wise took the ANGELS: But, the Seed of ABRAHAM He took.

AND, even because, this day, He took not the Angels Nature upon Him, but took our Nature, in the seed of Abraham: therefore hold we this Day, as a high Feast: therefore meet we thus, every year, in a holy Assembly; even, for a solemn memorial, that He hath, as this Day, bestowed upon us a dignity, which upon the Angels, He bestowed not. That He (as in the Chapter before, the Apostle setteth Him forth) that is the brightness of His Fathers glory, the very Character of His substance, the Heir of all things, by whom he made the World: He, when both needed it, (His taking upon him their Nature:) and both stood before Him, Men and Angels: the Angels He took not, but Men He took; was made Man, was not made an Angel: that is, did more for them, than He did for the Angels of Heaven. Heb. 1. 3.

Elsewhere the Apostle doth deliver this very Point positively; (and that) not without some vehemency. Without all question great is the mystery of Godliness, God is manifested in the flesh. Which is in effect, the same, that is here said; but that, here it is delivered by way of comparison. For, this speech is evidently a comparison. If He had thus set it down: Our Nature He took; that had been Positive. But, setting it down thus; Ours He took, the Angels He took not, it is (certainly) comparative. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

1. Now, the Masters of speech tell us, that there is power in the Positive, if it be given forth, with an earnest asseveration. But nothing to that, that is in the Comparative. It is nothing so full, to say; I will never forget you: as, thus to say it; Can a mother forget the child of her own womb? Well, if she can, yet will not I forget you. Nothing so forcible, to say thus; I will hold my word with you: as thus, Heaven and Earth shall pass, but my word shall not pass. The Comparative expressing it (without all question) more significant: And this here is such. Theirs, the Angels, assumpsit, He took hand: but ours, He did.

Luk.19.17.

2. Now, the comparison is, as is the thing in nature, wherewith it is made: If the thing be ordinary, the comparison is according: but, then is it full of force, when it is, not with no mean or base thing, but with the chief, and choice of all the Creatures; as, here, it is even with the Angels themselves. For then, it is at the highest. 1. That of Elihu, in Job: That God teacheth us more than the beasts, and giveth us more understanding than the fowles of the aire; (that is) that GOD hath been more gracious to us, than to them, being made of the same mould that we are; that (yet) He hath given us a priviledge, above them; this, is much: 2. That of the Psalmist, He hath not dealt so with every Nation; nay; not with any other Nation, in giving us the knowledge of His heavenly truth and Laws: even, that we have a Prerogative, if we be compared with the rest of mankind: (More than the beasts, much: more than all men besides, much more.) 3. But this here, Nusquam Angelos, &c. that he hath given us a pre-eminence above the Angels themselves; granted us that, that he hath not granted the Angels; that, is a Comparison at the very highest, and further we cannot go.

3. One degree yet more: and that is this. As, in comparisons making, it skilleth much, the excellency of the thing wherewithal it is compared; so doth it too, the manner, how the comparison is made. the pitch that is taken in it. It is one thing to make it de primo; another, in secundo. One thing, when it is in degrees; that more, this less: this not so much as that, yet that somewhat (though little). Another, when one is, the other is not at all. So is it here: Assumpsit, non assumpsit: Us He did take; the Angels, idque, not in any wise; not, in a less, or a lower degree than us: but them, not at all. So, it is with the highest, and at the highest. So much is said here; and more cannot be said.

The only exception that may be made to these comparisons, is; that, (most what,) they be odious: it breedeth a kind of disdain in the higher, to be matched with the lower; especially, to be overmatched with Him. We need not fear it, here. The blessed Spirits, (the Angels) will take no offence at it; they will not remove Jacobs ladder for all this; descend to us, or ascend for us, ever a whit the slower, because He is become the Son of man. There is not, in them, that envious mind, that was in the elder brother, in the Gospel, when the younger was received to grace after his riotous course.

Luk.15.28.

1 Tim.3.16. When the Apostle tells us of the great mystery, that God was manifested in the flesh; immediately after, he tells, that He was seen of the Angels: And (lest we might think, they saw it, as we do many things here, which we would not, see) St. Peter tells us, that desiderant prospicere; that with desire, and delight, they saw it; and cannot be satisfied with the sight of it, it pleaseth them so well. And, even this day, the day that it was done, an Angel was the first that came to bring news of it to the shepheards; and he no sooner had delivered his message, but presently there was with Him a whole Quire of Angels, singing and joying, and making melody, for this εὐδοκία ἐν ἀνθρώποις, this Good-will of God towards men. So that without dread of any disdain or exception on the Angels parts, we may proceed in our Text.

1 Pet.1.12.

Luk.2.10.14.

The division.

I. Wherein, first of the parties compared: Angels, and Men.

II. 2. Then, [1] of that, wherein they are compared, assumption, or apprehension; in the word Taking:

1. [2] And, not every taking, but apprehensio seminis, taking on Him the seed.

III. 3. Lastly, of this term [Abrahams seed:] the choice of that word, or term to express mankind by, thus taken on by Him. That He saith not: But Men He took: or, But, the seed of Adam; or, the seed of the Woman He took: But, the seed of Abraham He took.

I. The Parties compared. MEN with ANGELS.

1. OF the parties compared; Angels and Men. These two we must first compare, that we may the more clearly see the greatness of the grace and benefit, this day vouchsafed us. No long process will need, to lay before you, how far inferiour our Nature is, to that of the Angels; it is a comparison without comparison. It is too apparent, if we be laid together, or weighed together, we shall be found minus habentes, far too light. They are in express termes, said, (both, in the Old, and in the New Testament) to excell us in power: And as in power, so in all the rest. This one thing may suffice, to shew the odds: That our Nature; that we, when we are at our very highest perfection, (it is even thus expressed, that) we come near, or are therein like to, or as an Angel. Perfect beauty, in St. Stephen: They saw his face, as the face of an Angel. Perfect wisdom, in David: My Lord the King is wise as an Angel of GOD. Perfect eloquence, in St. Paul: Though I speak with the tongues of Men, nay, of Angels. All our excellency, our highest and most perfect estate, is but to be, as they: therefore they above us far.

Luk.20.36.

But, to come nearer: What are Angels? Surely they are spirits; Glorious spirits; Heavenly spirits; Immortal spirits. For their Nature or substance, Spirits: For their Quality, or property, Glorious: For their Place, or abode, Heavenly: For their Durance, or continuance, Immortal.

Gen.18.27.

And, what is the seed of Abraham, but, as Abraham himself is? And, what is Abraham? Let him answer himself; I am dust and ashes. What is the seed of Abraham? Let one answer, in the persons of all the reſt; Dicens putredini, &c. ſaying to rottenneſs, thou art my mother, and to the worms, ye are my brethren. 1. They are ſpirits; now, what are we, what is the ſeed of Abraham? Fleſh. And what is the very harveſt of this ſeed of fleſh? What, but corruption, and rottenneſs, and worms? There is the ſubſtance of our bodies. Job. 17. 14. Gal. 6. 8.

of

2. They, glorious ſpirits: We, vile bodies (bear with it, it is the Holy Ghoſts own term, Who ſhall change our vile bodies.) And not only baſe and vile, but filthy and unclean: ex immundo conceptum ſemine, conceived of unclean ſeed: There is the metal. And, the mould is no better: the womb, wherein we were conceived, vile, baſe, filthy, and unclean. There is our quality. Phil. 3. 21. Job 14. 4. Pſal. 51. 6.

3. They, heavenly ſpirits, Angels of Heaven: that is, their place of abode is in heaven above, Ours is here below, in the duſt; inter pulices, & culices, tineas, araneas, & vermes; Our place is here among fleas, and flies, moaths, and ſpiders, and crawling worms. There is our place of dwelling.

4. They, immortal ſpirits; that is their durance. Our time is proclaimed in the Prophet: Fleſh, All fleſh is graſs, and the glory of it, as the flower of the field; (From April to June.) The Sithe cometh; nay, the wind but bloweth, and we are gone. Withering ſooner than the graſs, which is ſhort: nay, fading ſooner, than the flower of the graſs, which is much ſhorter: nay, (ſaith Job) rubbed in pieces more eaſily, than any moth. Eſay 40. 6. Job 4. 19.

This we are, to them, if you lay us together. And, if you weigh us upon the ballance, we are altogether lighter than vanity it ſelf: there is our weight. And, if you value us; Man is but a thing of nought: there is our worth. Hoc eſt omnis homo; this is Abraham, and this is Abrahams ſeed: And who would ſtand to compare theſe with Angels? Verily, there is no compariſon; They are, incomparably, far better than the beſt of us. M E N, by themſelves: Pſal. 62. 11. Pſal. 144. 14. Rom. 4. 17.

Now then: this is the rule of reaſon, the guide of all choice, Evermore to take the better, and leave the worſe. Thus would man do; Hæc eſt lex hominis. Here then cometh the matter of admiration: notwithſtanding theſe things ſtand thus, between the Angels and Abrahams ſeed: (they Spirits, glorious, heavenly, immortal;) yet took He not them; yet, in no wiſe, took He them; But the ſeed of Abraham. The ſeed of Abraham, with their bodies, vile bodies, earthly bodies of clay, bodies of mortality, corruption, and death: Theſe He took, theſe He took for all that. Angels, and not men; So, in reaſon, it ſhould be: Men, and not Angels; So it is: And, that granted to us, that denied to them. Granted to us, ſo baſe; that denied them, ſo glorious. Denied, and ſtrongly denied; Οὐ, πάντως; Nay, not in any wiſe, not at any hand, to them. They, every way, in every thing elſe, above, and before us; in this, beneath and behind us. And we (unworthy, wretched men that we are,) above and before the Angels, the Cherubim, the Seraphim, and all the Paincipalities, and Thrones, in this dignity. This being beyond the rules and reach of all reaſon, is ſurely matter of aſtoniſhment: Τί τοῦτο, &c. (ſaith Saint Chryſoſtome,) this, it caſteth me into an extaſie, and maketh me to imagine, of our Nature, ſome greater matter, I cannot well expreſs what. Thus it is: It is the Lord, let Him do what ſeemeth good in His own eyes. 1 Sam. 3. 18.

And, with this, I paſs over to the ſecond point. This little is enough, to ſhew what odds between the Parties here matched. It will much better appear (this) when we ſhall weigh the word ἐπιλαμβάνεται, that, wherein they are matched. Wherein, two degrees we obſerved: 1. Appehendit, and 2. Apprehendit Semen. II. Wherein they are compared.

1. Of Apprehendit, firſt. Many words were more obvious, and offered themſelves to the Apoſtle (no doubt,) Suſcepit, or Aſſumpſit, or other ſuch like: This word was ſought for (certainly,) and made choice of (ſaith the Greek Scholiaſt: And he can beſt tell us, It is no common word, and tell us alſo what it weigheth:) Δηλοῖ δὲ (ſaith he) ὅτι ἡμεῖς ἐφθάσαμεν, ἔδει καταλαβεῖν, καὶ δραμεῖν ἐφθάσαμεν, καὶ φθάσαντες ἐπιλάβεται: This word ſuppoſeth a flight of the one party, and a purſuit of the other: A purſuit eager, and ſo long, till he overtake; and when he hath overtaken, ἐπιλαμβανόμενος, apprehendens, laying faſt hold, and ſeizing ſurely on him. So two things it ſuppoſeth; 1 a flight of the one, and 2 a hot purſuit of the other. I. In apprehendit, He took. Oecumen. in locum.

It may well ſuppoſe a flight. For, of the * Angels there were that fled, that kept not their original, but forſook and fell away from their firſt eſtate. And Man fell, and fled too; and hid himſelf in the thick trees, from the preſence of GOD. And this is the firſt iſſue. Upon the Angels flight, He ſtirred not; ſate ſtill; never vouchſafed to follow them: Let them go whither they would; as if they had not been worth the while. Nay, He never aſſumed ought, by way of promiſe, for them: No promiſe in the Old, to be born and to ſuffer; No Goſpel, in the New Teſtament, neither was born nor ſuffered, for them. I. * Jude v. 6. Gen. 3. 8.

But, when Man fell, He did all. Made after him preſently, with Ubi es, ſought to reclaim him, What have you done? Why have you done ſo? Proteſted enmity to him, that had drawn him thus away: Made his aſſumpſit of the Womans ſeed. Gen. 3. 9.

And (which is more,) when that would not ſerve, ſent after him ſtill, by the hand of His Prophets, to ſollicit his return.

And (which is yet more,) when that would not ſerve neither; went after him (Himſelf) in perſon: left His ninety and nine in the fold, and got Him after the loſt ſheep: Never left, till He found him, laid him on His ſhoulders, and brought him home again. Luk. 15. 5.

It was much, even but to look after us; to reſpect us, ſo far, who were not worth the caſt of His eye: Much, to call us back, or vouchſafe us an Ubi es.

But more, when we came not for all that, to ſend after us. For, if He had but only been content to give us leave, to come to Him again; but given us leave to lay hold on Him, to touch but the hem of His garment; (Himself sitting still, and never calling to us, nor sending after us;) it had been favour enough: far above that we were worth. But not only to send by others, but to come Psal. 40. 7. Himself after us; to say, Corpus aptâ mihi, Ecce venio; Get Me a body, I will My self after him: this was exceeding much. That we fled, and He followed us flying.

2. But yet, this is not all; this is but to follow. He not only followed, but did it so, with such eagerness, with such earnestness, as, that is worthy a second consideration. To follow, is what; yet that may be done faintly, and afar off: but to follow thorow thick and thin; to follow hard, and not to give over; never to give over, till he overtake: that is it.

And, He gave not over His pursuit, though it were long and laborious, and He full weary; though
1 Pet. 2. 4. it cast Him into a sweat, a sweat of blood. Angelis suis non pepercit (saith St. Peter,) The Angels offending, He spared not them: Man offending, He spared him; and to spare him (saith St. Paul) He spared not His own Son: Nor His own Son spared not Himself; but followed His pursuit, through danger, distress, yea, through death it self. Followed, and so followed, as nothing made Him leave following, till He overtook.

3. And when He had overtaken (for those two are but presupposed, the more kindly to bring in the word ἐπιλάβετο:) When (I say) he had overtaken them, cometh in fitly and properly, ἐπιλαμβάνεται. Which is not every taking; not suscipere, or assumere: But, manum injicere, arripere, apprehendere; to seize upon it with great vehemency, to lay hold on it with both hands, as upon a thing we are glad we have got, and will be loath to let go again. We know, assumpsit, and apprehendit, both, take; but apprehendit, with far more fervour and zeal than the other. Assumpsit, any common ordinary thing; apprehendit, a thing of price, which we hold dear, and much esteem of.

Now, to the former comparison, of what they, and what we, (but specially, what we,) add this threefold consideration: 1. That He denied it the Angels, οὐ: denied it peremptorily, οὐκ ἀν; Neither looked, nor called, nor sent, nor went after them: Neither took hold of them, nor suffered them to take hold of Him, or any promise from Him: Denied it them, and denied it them thus. 2. But, granted it us; and granted it, how? That He followed us first; and that, with paine: and seized on us, after; and that with great desire: We flying, and not worth the following: and lying, and not worth the taking up. 3 That He gave not leave for us to come to Him: or, sate still, and suffered us to return, and take hold: (yet, this He did.) 3 That He did not look after us, not call after us, nor send after us only: (yet, all this He did, too.) 3 But, Himself rose out of His place, and came after us; and with hand and foot, made after us: Followed us, with His feet; and seized on us, with His hands; and that per viam, non assumptionis, sed apprehensionis, (the manner, more than the thing it self.) All these, if we lay together, and, when we have done, weigh them well, it is able to work with us. Surely, it must needs demonstrate to us, the care, the love, the affection, He had to us, we know no cause why, being but
Gen. 18. 25. 32, 10. (as Abraham was) dust, and, (as Abrahams seed (Jacob) saith) less; and not worthy of any one of these: no, not of the meanest of his mercies. Especially, when the same thing so graciously granted us, was denied to no less persons than the Angels, far more worthy than we. Sure, He would not have done it for us, and not for them: if He had not esteemed of us, made more account of us, than of them.

2. And yet, behold a far greater than all these: Which is, apprehendit semen. He took not the per-
In apprehendit Semen. son, but He took the seed, (that is) the Nature of man. Many there be, that can be content to take upon them the persons, and to represent them, whose natures, nothing could hire them once to take upon them. But, the seed is the Nature; yea, (as the Philosopher saith) natura intimum, the very internal essence of nature is the seed. The Apostle sheweth, what his meaning is, of this taking the Verse 14. seed, when (the verse next afore, save one) he saith, that Forasmuch as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, He also would take part with them, by taking the same. To take the flesh and blood, He must needs take the seed: for, from the seed, the flesh and blood doth proceed: which is nothing else but the blessed apprehension of our Nature, by this daies Nativity. Whereby, He, and we, become not only one
Eph. 5. 28, 29. flesh; (as man and wife do, by conjugal union:) but, even one blood too, (as brethren, by natural union:) Per omnia similis (saith the Apostle, in the next verse after again) sin only set aside: Alike and suitable to us in all things: flesh, and blood, and nature, and all. So taking the seed of Abraham, as that He became Verse 17. (Himself) the seed of Abraham: So was, and so is truly termed, in the Scriptures. Which is it, that doth consummate, and knit up all this point, and is the head of all. For, in all other apprehensions, we may let go, and lay down, when we will; but, this taking on the seed, the nature of man, can never be put off. It is an Assumption, without a deposition. One we are, He and we, and so we must be; One, as this Day, so for ever.

And, emergent, or issuing from this, are all those other apprehendings, or seisures of the persons of men, (by which, GOD layeth hold on them, and bringeth them back from errour to truth, and from sin to grace,) that have been, from the beginning, or shall be to the end of the world. That, of Abra-
Gen. 15. 7. ham himself, whom GOD laid hold of, and brought from out of Ur of the Chaldeans, and the Idols, Acts. he there worshipped. That of our Apostle St. Paul, that was apprehended in the way to Damascus.
Luk. 22. 62, 63. That, of St. Peter; that in the very act of sin, was seized on with bitter remorse for it. All those: and all these, whereby men daily are laid hold of in spirit, and taken from the by-paths of sin, and errour, and reduced into the right way; and so their persons recovered to God, and seized to His use. All these apprehensions (of the branches,) come from this apprehension (of the Seed:) they all have their beginning and their being, from this daies taking, even Semen apprehendit. Our receiving His Spirit, for His taking our flesh. This seed, wherewith Abraham is made the Son of GOD, from the seed, where-with CHRIST is made the son of Abraham.

And,

And, the end, why He thus took upon Him the ſeed of Abraham, was, becauſe He took upon Him to deliver the ſeed of Abraham. Deliver them He could not, except He deſtroyed death, and the Lord of death, the Devil. Them He could not deſtroy, unleſs He Died: Die He could not, except He were Mortal: Mortal He could not be, except He took our Nature upon Him, that is, the ſeed of Abraham. But taking it, He became mortal, died, deſtroyed death, delivered us; was (Himſelf) apprehended, that we might be let go. Verſe 14.

One thing more then, out of this word Apprehendit. The former toucheth His love, whereby He ſo laid hold of us, as of a thing very precious to Him: This (now) toucheth our danger; whereby, He ſo caught us, as, if He had not, it had been a great venture, but we had ſunk and periſhed. One and the ſame word [Apprehendit] ſetteth well, to expreſs both His affection, whereby He did it; and our great peril, whereby we needed it. We had been (before) laid hold of, and apprehended, by one, mentioned in the 14. verſe, he that hath power of Death, even the Devil: We were in danger to be ſwallowed up by him; we needed one to lay hold on us faſt, and to pluck us out of his jaws. So He did. And I would have you to mark: It is the ſame word that it uſed to St. Peter, in like danger, (Mat. 14. 13.) when, being ready to ſink, ἐπελάβετο, CHRIST caught him by the hand, and ſaved him. The ſame here, in the Greek; that, in the Hebrew, is uſed (Gen. 19. 16.) to Lot and his daughters, in the like danger, when the Angels caught him, and by ſtrong hand plucked him out of Sodom. One delivered, from the water; the other, from the fire.

And it may truly be ſaid, (inaſmuch as all GOD'S promiſes, as well touching temporal, as eternal deliverances; and as well corporal, as ſpiritual; be in CHRIST yea and Amen: Yea, in the giving forth; Amen, in the performing) that even our temporal delivery, from the dangers that daily compaſs us about; even from this laſt, ſo great, and ſo fearful, as the like was never imagined before; all have their ground from this Great apprehenſion: are fruits of this Seed, here, this bleſſed Seed, for whoſe ſake, and for whoſe truths ſake, that we (though unworthily) profeſs, we were by Him caught hold of, and ſo plucked out of it: And, but for which Seed, facti eſſemus ſicut Sodoma, We had been even as Sodom, and periſhed in the fire; and the powder there laid had even blown us up all. 1 Cor. 1. 20. Rom. 9 29.

And may not I add to this [apprehendit, ut liberaret,] the other (in the eighth Chapter following) apprehendit, ut manu duceret: to this [of taking us by the hand, to deliver us.] that, [of taking us by the hand, to guide us:] and ſo, out of one word, preſent Him to you, not only as our Deliverer, but as our Guide too? Our Deliverer, to rid us from him, that hath power of death; Our Guide, to Him, that hath power of life. To lead us, even by the way of truth, to the path of life; by the ſtations of well-doing, to the manſions of His Fathers houſe. Seeing, He hath ſignified, it is His pleaſure not to let go our hands, but to hold us ſtill, till He have brought us, that, where He is, we may alſo be. This alſo is incident to apprehendit; but, becauſe it is out of the compaſs of the Text, I touch it only, and paſs it. Heb. 8. 9. Joh. 14. 2. Joh. 14 3.

And, can we now paſs by this, but we muſt ask the queſtion, that St. John Baptiſts Mother ſometime asked, on the like occaſion? * Unde mihi hoc? (ſaith ſhe:) Unde nobis hoc? (may we ſay:) Not, quod mater Domini; but, quod Dominus ipſe venit ad nos; Whence cometh this unto us, that the LORD Himſelf thus came unto us, and took us, letting the Angels go? Angels are better than the beſt of us; and, reaſon would, ever, the better ſhould be taken: how then were we taken, that were not the better? The reaſons of this apprehendit. * Luk. 1. 43.

Sure, not without good ground, (ſay the Fathers,) who have adventured to ſearch out the Theologie of this point; ſuch reaſons, as might ſerve for inducements, to Him, that is, pronus ad miſerendum, naturally inclined to pity; why, upon us, He would rather have compaſſion. And, divers ſuch I find: I will touch only one or two of them.

1. First, Mans caſe was more to be pitied, than theirs, becauſe man was tempted, by another; had a Tempter. The Angels had none. None, tempted them; None, but themſelves. Et levius eſt alienâ mente peccâſſe, quam propriâ (ſaith St. Auguſtine.) The offence is the leſs, if it grow from another, than if it breed in our ſelves: And, the leſs the offence, the more pardonable.

2. Again, of the Angels, when ſome fell, other ſome ſtood; and ſo, they (all) did not periſh. But, in the firſt man, all men fell; and ſo every mothers child had died, and no fleſh been ſaved; For, all were in Adam; and ſo, in, and with Adam, all had come to nought. Then cometh the Pſalmiſts queſtion; Numquid in vanum, &c? What haſt thou made all men for nought? That cannot be: So great wiſdom cannot do ſo great a work, in vain. But in vain it had been, if God had not ſhewed mercy; And, therefore was mans caſe rather, of the twain, matter of commiſeration. This is Leo. Pſal. 87. 47.

3. And thus have they travelled, and theſe have they found, why He did apprehend us rather than them. It may be, not amiſs. But, we will content our ſelves, for our Unde nobis hoc? Whence cometh this to us, with the anſwer of the Scriptures: Whence, but from the tender mercies of our God, whereby this day hath viſited us? Zelus Domini (ſaith Eſay) The zeal of the Lord of Hoſts ſhall bring it to paſs: propter nimiam charitatem (ſaith the Apoſtle) Sic Deus dilexit ſaith He, He, Himſelf;) And we (taught by him) ſay, Even ſo Lord, for, ſo it was thy good pleaſure thus to do. Luk. 1. 78. Eſay 9 7. Epheſ. 2. 4. Joh. 3. 16. Luk. 10. 21.

III. The CHOICE why Abrahams Seed.

All this while are we about taking the ſeed: the ſeed in general. But now, why Abrahams ſeed? Since it is Angels, in the firſt part, why not Men, in the ſecond, but ſeed? Or, if ſeed to expreſs our nature; why not the ſeed of the Woman, but the ſeed of Abraham? It may be thought, becauſe he wrote to the Hebrews, he rather uſed this terme of Abrahams ſeed, becauſe ſo they were, and ſo loved to be ſtiled, and he would pleaſe them. But, I find, the ancient Fathers go further; further; and out of it, raise matter, both of comfort, and of direction: and that, for us too.

2. 1. Of Comfort, first; with reference to our Saviour, who taking on him Abrahams seed, must withall take on him the signature of Abrahams seed, and be, as he was, circumcised. There is a great matter dependeth even on that. For, being circumcised, he became a debtor to keep the whole Law of God: which bond we had broken, and forfeited, and incurred the curse annexed, and were ready to be apprehended, and committed for it. That so, he, keeping the Law, might recover back the chirographum contra nos, the hand-writing that was against us; and so, set us free of the debt. This Bond did not relate, to the seed of the Woman; it pertained (properly) to the seed of Abraham: therefore, that term fitteth us better. Without faile, two distinct benefits they are: [1] Factus homo, and [2] Factus sub lege; and, so doth St. Paul recount them. Made man; that is, the seed of the Woman: and, made under the Law; that is, the seed of Abraham. To little purpose, he should have taken the one, if he had not also undertaken the other, and as the seed of Abraham, entred bonds for us, and taken our debt upon him. This first.

For our comfort.
Gal. 5. 3.
Col. 2. 14.
Gal. 4. 4.

2. And, besides this, there is yet another; referring it to the Nation, or People, whom he took upon him. It is sure, they were, of all other people, the most untoward; both, of the hardest hearts, and of the stiffest necks; and (as the Heathen man noteth them) of the worst natures. GOD himself telleth them so; it was, for no vertue of theirs; or for any pure naturals in them, that he took them to him, for they were that way, the worst of the whole earth. And so then, the taking of Abrahams seed amounteth to as much, as that of St. Paul, (no less true than worthy of all men to be received;) that he came into the world to save sinners; and that, chief sinners, (it is certain) they were; even the seed of Abraham, of all the seed of Adam.

2. But, not for comfort only, but for direction too, doth he use Abrahams name here. Even to entaile the benefit coming by it, to his seed; that is to such as he was. For, for his sake were all Nations blessed. And Christ though he took the seed of the Woman, yet doth not benefit any but the seed of Abraham; even those that follow the steps of his faith. For, by faith Abraham took hold of him, by whom, he was in mercy taken hold of: Et tu mitte fidem & tenuisti (saith St. Augustine.) That faith of his, to him, was accounted for righteousness. To him was, and to us shall be (saith the Apostle) if we be in like sort apprehensive of him. Either, as Abraham; or, as the true seed of Abraham (Jacob) was, that took such hold on him, as he said plainly, Non dimittam te; nisi benedixeris mihi; without a blessing, he would not let him go. Surely, not the Hebrews alone; nay, not the Hebrews at all, for all their carnal propagation: They only are Abrahams seed, that lay hold of the word of promise. And, the Galathians so doing, though they were meer heathen men, (as we be,) yet he telleth them, they are Abrahams seed, and shall be blessed together with him.

But, that is not all; there goeth more to the making us Abrahams seed, (as Christ Himself, the true seed, teacheth both them and us.) Saith he; if ye be Abrahams sons, then must ye do the works of Abraham. Which the Apostle well calleth, the steps, or impressions of Abrahams faith; Or, we may call them, the fruits of this seed, here. So reasoneth our Saviour: Hoc non fecit Abraham; This did not he; if ye do it, ye are not his seed: This did he; do ye the like, and his seed ye are. So, here is a double apprehension: [1] one of St. Paul; [2] the other of St. James; Work, for both hands to apprehend. Both, [1] Charitas; quæ ex fide; and [2] fides quæ per charitatem operatur. By which we shall be able (saith S. Paul) to lay hold of eternal life; and so, be Abrahams seed here, at the first; and come to Abrahams bosome there, at the last. So have we a brief of Semen Abrahæ.

The use of the Text.
1 For meditation.
[2] Psal. 8. 4.

Now what is to be commended to us out of this Text, for us to lay hold of? Verily first, to take us to our meditation; the meditation, which the [2] Psalmist hath, and which the Apostle (in this Chapter,) voucheth out of him (at the sixth verse;) When I consider (saith he) the Heavens, (say we, the Angels of Heaven) and see those Glorious Spirits passed by, and man taken, even to sigh with him, and say, Lord, what is man, (either Adam, or Abraham) that thou shouldst be thus mindful of him, or the seed, or sons of either, that thou shouldest make this do about him? The case is here far otherwise, far more worth our consideration. There, Thou hast made him a little lower: Here, thou hast made him a great deal higher, than the Angels. For they, this day first, and ever since, daily have, and do adore our Nature, in the personal Union with the DEITY. Look you (saith the Apostle) when He brought His only begotten Son into the World, this He proclaimed before Him, Let all the Angels worship Him: and so they did. And upon this very daies taking the seed, hath ensued (as the Fathers note) a great alteration. Before in the Old Testament, they suffered David to sit upon his knees before them: Since (in the New) they endure not, St. John should fall down to them, but acknowledge, the case is altered, now; and no more superiority, but all fellow-servants. And even in this one part, two things present themselves unto us: [1] His humility, Qui non est confusus (as, in the eleventh verse, the Apostle speaketh) who was not confounded, thus to take out Nature. [2] And withall, the Honour and happiness of Abrahams seed, ut digni haberentur, that were counted worthy to be taken, so near unto him.

1 Chro. 21. 16.
Apoc. 22. 9.
Luk. 21. 35.

2 For resolution
Joh. 8. 56.

The next point: That, after we have well considered it, we be affected with it; and that, no otherwise, than Abraham was. Abraham saw it, even this day, and but afar off, and He rejoyced at it: And so shall we, on it, if we be his true seed. It brought forth a Benedictus, and a Magnificat, from the true seed of Abraham; If it do not the like, from us, certainly it but flotes in our brains; we but warble about it: But we believe it not, and therefore, neither do we rightly understand it. Sure I am, if the Angels had such a feast to keep, if he had done the like for them, they would hold it with all joy and jubilee. They rejoyce of our good; but, if they had one of their own, they must needs do it after another manner; far more effectually. If we do not, as they would do, (were the case theirs,) it is because because we are short, in conceiving the excellency of the benefit. It would have (surely) due observation, if it had his due and serious meditation.

Further, we are to understand this: That to whom much is given, of them will much be required; Luk.12.48. and (as Gregory well saith) Cum crescunt dona, crescit & ratio donorum. All together to grow the accounts too: Therefore, that by this new dignity befall us, Necessitas quædam nobis imposita est (saith St. Augustine,) there is a certain necessity laid upon us, to become, in some measure, humble unto it; in that we stand, one flesh, and one blood, with the Son of God. Being thus in honour, we ought to understand our estate, and not fall into the Psalmists case, that we become like the beasts that perish. Psal.49.13. For, if we do (indeed) think, our Nature is ennobled by this so high a conjunction, we shall henceforth hold our selves more dear, and at a higher rate, than to prostitute our selves to sin, for every base, trifling, and transitory pleasure. For tell me, men that are taken to this degree, shall any of them prove a Devil (as Christ said of Judas:) or ever (as these with us, of late) have to do with any devillish or Judasly fact? Shall any man after this assumption, be as Horse, or Mule, that have no understanding; and, in a Christian profession, live a bruitish life? Nay then, Sr. Paul tells us further, that if we Joh.6.70. Psal.32.9. henceforth walke like men, like but even carnal and natural men, it is a fault in us. Somewhat must 1 Cor.3.3. appear, in us, more than in ordinary men, who are so touchsafed so extraordinary a favour. Somewhat more, than common, would come from us, if it were but for this Daies sake.

To conclude, not only thus to frame meditations and resolutions, but even some practice too out of this act of apprehension. It is very agreeable to reason, saith the Apostle, that we endeavor and make a proffer, if we may by any means to apprehend Him, in His, by whom we are thus, in our Nature, apprehended, or, as he termeth it, comprehended, even CHRIST JESUS; and be united to Him, this day, as he was to us, this day, by a mutual and reciprocal apprehension. We may so, and we are bound so: verè dignum & justum est. And we do so, so oft, as we do, with St. James, lay hold of, apprehend, or receive insitum verbum, the word which is daily grafted into us. Jam.1.21. For, the Word he is, and, in the Word, he is received by us. But, that is not the proper of this day, unless there be another joyned unto it. This day, verbum caro factum est; and so must be apprehended, in Joh.1.14. both. But especially in his flesh, as this day giveth it, as this day would have us. Now, the bread which we break, is it not the partaking of the body, of the flesh, of JESUS CHRIST? It is surely; and by it, and by no thing more, are we made partakers of this blessed union. A little before, he said, because the children were partakers of flesh and blood, he also would take part with them; May not we say the same? 1 Cor.10.16. Because he hath so done, taken ours of us, we also ensuing his steps, will participate with him, and with his flesh which he hath taken of us. It is most kindly, so to take part with him, in that, which he Verse 14. took part in, with us; and that to no other end, but that he might make the receiving of it by us a means, whereby he might dwell in us and we in Him, He taking our flesh, and we receiving His Spirit; by his flesh, which he took of us, receiving his Spirit, which he imparteth to us; That, as he, by ours, became consors humanæ naturæ; so we, by his, might become consortes divinæ naturæ, partakers of the Divine nature. Verily, it is the most streight and perfect taking hold that is. No union so knitteth, 2 Pet.1.4. as it. Not consanguinity; Brethren fall out: Not marriage; Man and Wife are severed. But, that which is nourished, and the nourishment, wherewith, they never are, never can be severed; but remain one for ever. With this Act then of mutual taking, taking of his flesh, as he hath taken ours, let us seal our duty to him, this day, for taking not Angels, but the seed of Abraham. Almighty God grant, &c.

A SERMON

A SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Majesty

At WHITE-HALL, on Wenesday the XXV. of Decem.
Anno Domini, MDCVI. being
CHRIST MAS Day.

ESA. Chap. IX. Ver. VI.

For unto us a Child is born, and unto us a Son is given; and the Government is upon His shoulder; and He shall call His Name WONDERFUL, COUNSELLER, THE MIGHTY GOD, THE EVERLASTING FATHER, THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

THE words are out of Esay: and if we had not heard him named, might well have been thought, out of one of the Evangelists, as more like a Story than a Prophesie. Is born, is given, sound, as if they had been written at, or since the birth of Christ: yet were they written more than six hundred years before.

There is no one thing so great a stay to our Faith, as that we find the things, we beleeve, so plainly fore-told, so many years before. Is born, is given? Nay, shall be; speak like a Prophet: Nay, is; loquens de futuro per modum præteriti; speaking of things to come, as if they were already past. This cannot be, that GOD, who calleth things that are not, as if they were, and challengeth any other, to do the like. It is true; miracles move much: but yet even in Scripture, we read of lying miracles: and the possibility of false dealing leaveth place of doubt, even in those that be true. But, for one, six hundred years before He is born, to cause Propheſies, plain direct propheſies to be written of Him: that passeth all conceit; cannot be imagined, how possibly it may be, but by God alone. Therefore Mahomet, and all false Prophets came, (at least boasted to come) in signs. But challenge them, at this; not a word, no mention of them in the world, till they were born. True therefore, that St. John saith: The Testimony (that is, the great principal testimony) of JESUS, is the spirit of Propheſie. It made St. Peter, when he had recounted what he himself had heard, in the Mount, (yet, as if there might be, even in that, deceptio sensus) to add, Habemus etiam firmiorem sermonem propheticum: We have a word of Propheſie, besides; and that firmiorem: the surer of the twain.

Rom. 4. 17. Esay 41. 23. 2 Thes. 2. 9.

Apoc. 19. 10. 1 Per. 1. 19.

This propheſie is of a certain Child. And if we ask, of this place, (as the Eunuch did, of another, in this Prophet) Of whom speaketh the Prophet this? We must make the answer that there Philip doth; of Christ; and the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of Propheſie. The ancient Jews make the same. It is but a fond ſhift, to draw it (as the latter Jews do) to Ezechias: it will not cleave. It was ſpoken to Ahaz, Ezechias father, now King: and that after the great overthrow he had, by the King of Syria and Iſrael, in the fourth of his raign. But, it is deduced, by plain ſupputation, out of 2 King. 18. Ezechias was nine years old, before Ahaz his Father came to the Crown. It was by that time, too late to tell it for tidings, (then) that he was born; he then, being thirteen years of age.

Beſide, how ſenſeleſs is it, to apply, to Ezechias, that in the next verſe; that, of his government and peace there ſhould be none end, that his throne ſhould be eſtabliſhed from henceforth for ever: whereas his peace and government (both) had an end within few years? Verſe 7.

To us it is ſufficient, that the fore-part of the Chapter is, by St. Matthew, expreſly applyed to our Saviour: and that, this verſe doth inſeparably depend on that, and is alledged as the reaſon of it; For, unto us. Of Him therefore, we take it, and to Him apply it, that cannot be taken, of any, or applyed to any other, but Him. Mat. 4. 15.

But, how came Eſay to ſpeak of Chriſt to Ahaz? Thus: Ahaz was then in very great diſtreſs; he had loſt in one day eighty thouſand of his people; and two hundred thouſand of them (more) carried away captives. And now, the two Kings were raiſing new power againſt him: The times grew very much overcaſt. And, this you ſhall obſerve: The chiefeſt prophecies of Chriſt came ever, in ſuch times: That St. Peter did well, to reſemble the word of prophecy to a candle, in loco caliginoſo, a dark room. Jacobs of Shilo, in Egypt, a dark place: Daniel's of Meſſias in Babylon; a place as dark, as Egypt: This of Eſay, when the ten Tribes were on the point of carrying away, under Hoſhea. That of Jeremy (A Woman ſhall incloſe a man) when Juda, in the ſame caſe, under Jechonias. Ever, in dark times, who therefore needed moſt the light of comfort. The occaſion of this Propheſie. 2 Pet 1. 19. Gen. 49. 10. Dan. 9 24, 25. Jer. 31, 22.

But, what's this to Ahaz caſe? He looked for another meſſage from him; How to eſcape his enemies. A cold comfort might he think it, to be preached to of Immanuel. Indeed, he ſo thought it; and therefore he gave over Eſay, and betook him to Shebna, who wiſhed him to ſeek to the King of Aſſur for help, and let Immanuel go. Yet for all that, even then to ſpeak of Chriſt, being looked into, it is neither impertinent, nor out of ſeaſon. With all the Prophets it is uſual, in the calamities of this people, to have recourſe ſtill, to the fundamental promiſe of the Meſſias. For that, till He were come, they might be ſure they could not be rooted out; but muſt be preſerved, if it were but for this Childs ſake, till He were born. And yet, if they could believe on Him, otherwiſe it is no match: Niſi crediderit is. Then, thus the Prophets argue: He will not deny you this favour, for He will grant you a far greater than this, even His own Son; and by Him a far greater deliverance; and, if He can deliver you from the devouring fire of Hell, much more, from them: and if give you peace with God, much more with them. So, teaching thoſe that will learn, the only right way to compaſs their own ſafety, is by making ſure work of Immanuel, God with us. To the true regard of whom, GOD hath annexed the promiſes as well of this, as of the other life. All are, as lines drawn from this center; all in Him, yea and Amen. Which all ſerve, to raiſe Ahaz up, and his people, to receive this Child, and to rejoice in His day, as their Father Abraham did. Eſay 7. 9. 1 Tim. 4. 8. 2 Cor. 1. 20. John 8. 56.

Thus, the Occaſion you have heard. The parts, ad oculum evidently, are two, [1] a Child-birth: and a [2] Baptiſm: [1] The Child-birth, in theſe: For unto you, &c. [2] The Baptiſm, in theſe: His name, &c. The diviſion.

In the former; 1. Firſt, of the main points, The Natures, Perſon, and Office; [1] Natures, in theſe: Child and Son. [2] Perſon, in theſe: His ſhoulders, His name. [3] Office, in theſe: His Government. 2. Then of the deriving of an intereſt to us, in theſe [To us,] two times. And that is of two ſorts: [1] By being born; a right, by his birth. [2] By being given: a right, by a deed of gift. I. 1. 2.

In the latter, of His Baptiſm, is ſet down His ſtile conſiſting of five peeces, containing five uſes, for which He was thus given: each to be conſidered in his order. II.

IT is ever our firſt care, to begin with, and to ſettle the main point of the myſtery; [1] Nature, [2] Perſon, [3] Office: and after, to look to our own benefit by them. To begin with the Natures, of GOD and Man: They be * ſuper hanc petram: upon them lyeth the weight of all the reſt; they are the two ſhoulders whereon this Government doth reſt. I. The child-birth. 1 The maine points. 1 His Natures. * Mat. 16. 18.

We have two words, Child, and Son: neither, waſt. But, if no more in the ſecond, than in the firſt, the firſt, had been enough: if the firſt enough, the ſecond ſuperfluous. But in this Book, nothing is ſuperfluous. So then, two diverſe things they import. As Man. As God.

Weigh the words: Child is not ſaid, but in humanis, among men. Son may be in divinis: from heaven, God ſpake it, This is my Son: May; and muſt be, here. Mat. 17. 5.

Weigh the other two; [1] born, and [2] given. That, which is born, beginneth then (firſt) to have His being. That, which is given preſuppoſeth a former being: for, be it muſt, that it may be given.

Again, when we ſay born; Of whom? Of the Virgin His Mother: when we ſay Given; By whom? By GOD, His Father.

Eſay promiſed, the ſign, we ſhould have, ſhould be from the deep here beneath, and ſhould be from the height above: both, a Child, from beneath; and a Son, from above. To conclude: it is an expoſition decreed by the Fathers aſſembled in the Council of Sezil: who, upon theſe grounds, expound this very place ſo: The Child, to import His Humane; The Son, His Divine Nature. Eſay 7. 11. Cant. 2. 13.

All along His life, you ſhall ſee theſe two. At His birth: A Cratch for the Child; a Star for the Son: A company of Shepherds viewing the Child; A Quire of Angels celebrating the Son. In His life: Hungry Himſelf, to ſhew the nature of the Child: yet feeding five thouſand, to ſhew the power of the Son. At His death: dying on the Croſs, as the Son of Adam; at the ſame time diſpoſing of Paradiſe, as the Son of God.

If you ask, why both theſe? For that, in vain had been the one, without the other, Somewhat there muſt be born (by this mention of Shoulders:) meet it is every one ſhould bear his own burden. The nature, that ſinned, bear his own ſin; not, Ziba make the fault, and Mephiboſheth bear the puniſhment. Our nature had ſinned, that therefore ought to ſuffer: The reaſon, why a Child. But that which our nature ſhould, our nature could not bear; not the weight of Gods wrath due to our ſin: But, the Son could: the reaſon why a Son. The one ought, but could not: the other could, but ought not. Therefore either alone would not ſerve; they muſt be joyned, Child and Son. But that He was a Child, He could not have ſuffered. But that He was a Son, He had ſunk in His ſuffering, and not gone through with it. God had no Shoulders; Man had; but, too weak, to ſuſtain ſuch a weight. Therefore, that He might be lyable, He was a Child; that He might be able, he was a Son: that He might be both, He was both.

2. His Perſon. This, why God. But why this perſon, the Son? Behold, Adam would have become one of us; the fault: Behold, one of us will become Adam, is the ſatisfaction. Which of us would He have become?
Gen. 3 22. Sicut Dii, ſcientes; the perſon of knowledge. He therefore ſhall become Adam: A Son ſhall be given.
Gen. 3. 5. Deſire of knowledge, our attainder; He, in whom all the treaſures of knowledge, our reſtoring. Fleſh, would
Col. 2. 3. have been the Word, as wiſe as the Word; the cauſe of our ruine: meet then, the Word become fleſh,
John 1. 4. that ſo, our ruine repaired. There is a touch given, in the name COUNSELLOR, to note out unto us, which perſon; as well, the SON.

3. One more; if theſe joyned, why is not the Son firſt, and then the Child; but, the Child is firſt, and
Cha. 7. 14. then the Son. The Son is far the worthier, and therefore to have the place. And thus too it was, in
Luk. 3. 31. 38. His other name Immanuel, (Chap. 7.) It is not Elimanu; not Deus Nobiſcum; but, Nobiſcum Deus, Verſe 7. We, in His name, ſtand before God. It is ſo in the Goſpel: the Son of Dauid, firſt; the Son of God after. It is but this ſtill, zelus Domini Exercituum fecit hoc: but to ſhew His zeal, how dear He holdeth us, that He preferreth, and ſetteth us before Himſelf; and in His very name, gives us the precedence.

The Perſon, briefly. The Child and the Son: theſe two make but one Perſon, clearly, for both theſe have but one name, His name ſhall be called: and both theſe have but one pair of ſhoulders,
Eph. 2. 14. Upon his Shoulders. Therefore, though two natures, yet but one Perſon, in both. A meet perſon, to make a Mediator of God and Man, as ſymbolizing with either God and Man. A meet perſon, if there be diviſion between them (as there was, and great thoughts of heart for it) to make an union: Ex utroque unum, ſeeing He was unum ex utroque. Not man only; there lacked a ſhoulder of power: Not God only; there lacked the ſhoulder of juſtice: But, both together. And ſo have ye the two Supporters of all, 'Juſtice, and 'Power. A meet perſon, to ceaſe hoſtility, as having taken pledges of both heaven and earth; the chief nature in heaven, and the chief on earth: To ſet forward commerce between hea-

John 1. 12. to other: Himſelf, by His birth, being become the Son of man, by our New birth giving us a capacity, to become the Sons of God.

3. His Office. His Office: The Kingdom on his ſhoulders. For, He ſaw, when the Child was born, it ſhould ſo poorly be born, as (leſt we ſhould conceive of Him too meanly) He tells us, He cometh cum Principatu, with a Principality; is born a Prince: and beautifieth Him with ſuch names, as make amends for the Manger? That he is not only Puer, a Child; and Filius, a Son, but Princeps, a Prince.

Truth is, other Offices we find beſides. But this you ſhall obſerve, that the Prophets ſpeaking of CHRIST, in good congruity ever apply themſelves, to the ſtate of them they ſpeak to; and uſe that Office and Name, which beſt agree to the matter in hand. Here that which was ſought, by Ahaz, was protection: that, we know, is for a King: As a King therefore he ſpeaketh of him. Elſe-where He is brought forth by Dauid, as a Prieſt: and again elſe-where by Moſes, as a Prophet. If it be matter
Pſal. 110 4. of ſin, for which ſacrifice to be offered, He is a Prieſt for ever after the order of MELCHIZEDEK.
Deut. 18. 28. If the Will of GOD, if His great counſel to be revealed, A Prophet will the Lord raiſe, &c. Hear Him. But here is matter of delivery (only in hand: here therefore, he repreſented Him, Cum Principatu, with a Principality.

A Principality not of this world. Herod need not fear it, nor envy it. If it had, His Officers, as they would have ſeen Him better defended at His Death, ſo would they have ſeen Him better lodged at His Luke 2. 7. Birth, than in a ſtable with beaſts: for, if the Inne were full, the ſtable (we may be ſure) was not empty. Of what world then? Of that, He is Father; Futuri ſæculi. Of that He is Father; and He is a Prince of the government, that guideth us thither.

Yet, a Prince He is, and ſo He is ſtyled; born, and given, to eſtabliſh a government: That none imagine, they ſhall live like Libertines under Him: every man believe, and live, as he liſt. It is CHRIST, not Belial, that is born to day: He bringeth a government with Him: they, that be His, muſt live in ſubjection under a government: elſe neither in Child, nor Son; in Birth, nor Gift, have they any intereſt.

And this Government is by name a Principality: Wherein, neither the popular confuſion of many; nor the factious ambition, of a few, bear all the ſway; but, where one is Soveraign. Such is the government of heaven: ſuch is CHRISTS government.

With a Principality, or Government; and that upon His ſhoulders: Somewhat a ſtrange ſituation. It is wiſdom that governs: that is, in the head; and there is a Crown worn: What have the ſhoulders to do with it? Certainly, somewhat by this Description. The Shoulder (as we know) is the bearing member: and unless it be for heavy things we use it not. Ordinary things we carry in our hands, or lift at the arms end: It must be very heavy, if we must put shoulders and all to it. Belike; Governments have their weight; be heavy; And so they Be: they need not only a good head, but good shoulders that sustain them. But that not so much, while they be in good tune and temper; then they need no great carriage: but when they grow unweildy, (be it weakness or waywardness of the governed;) in that case they need: And in that case, there is no Governour, but, at one time or other, he bears his government upon his shoulders. It is a moral, they give, of Aarons Apparel: He carved the twelve Tribes in his Brest-plate, next his heart; to shew, that in care he was to bear them: But he had them also engraven in two Onyx Stones, and those set upon his very shoulders; to shew, he must other-while bear them in patience too. And it is not Aarons case alone; it was so with Moses too. He bare His government as a Nurse doth her child, as He saith, Numb. XI. that is, full tenderly. But, when they fell a murmuring (as they did often) he bare them upon his shoulders, in great patience, and long suffering. Yea, he complained, Non possum portare; I am not able to bear all this people, &c.

Exod 28.29. Exo. 28.12, &c. Num. 11.12. Num. 11.11.

It were, sure, to be wished, that they, that are in place, might never be put to it. Bear their people only in their arms, by love; and in their brests by care. Yet if need be, they must follow CHRISTS example and patience, here, and even that way, bear them, not only bear with them; but even bear them also.

Yet is not this CHRISTS bearing, though this he did too: There is yet a further thing, He hath a patience paramount, beyond all the rest. Two differences I find between him and others. 1. The faults and errours of their government, others do bear and suffer, indeed, suffer them; but, suffer not for them. He did both: endured them, and endured, for them, heavy things: A strange superhumeral, the print whereof was to be seen on his shoulders. The Chaldee Paraphrast translateth it thus, The Law was upon his shoulders. (And so it was too:) A burthen, saith St. Peter, neither He, nor the Apostles, nor their Fathers were able to bear. This he did, and bear it so evenly, as he brake, nay bruised not a Commandement. But, there is another sense, when the Law is taken for the punishment due by the Law. It is that which our Prophet meaneth (in the 53. Chap.) when he saith, Posuit super humeros, He hath laid upon His shoulders, the iniquity of us all. And, not against his will: Come (saith he) you that are heavy laden, and I will refresh you, by loding my self; take it from your necks, and lay it on mine own. Which his suffering, though it grew so heavy, as it wrung from him plenty of tears, a strong cry, a sweat of blood, (such was the weight of it;) yet would he not cast it off, but, there held it still, till it made him bow down his head, and give up the Ghost. If he had discharged it, it must have light upon us; (it was the yoke of our burden, as in the fourth verse he termeth it:) If it had light upon us, it had pressed us down to Hell; so insupportable was it. Rather than so, he did it still, and bare it; and did that which never Prince did, died for his Government. It was not for nothing, we see, that, of the Child born, no part but the shoulders is mentioned: for, that, we see, in this Child, is a part of special employment.

Esay 53.4. Mat. 11.28. Luke 22.24. John 19.30.

The other point of difference between him and other Governours. When we say, [On His shoulders] this we say; on no other shoulders, but His. For, others, (by Moses example, upon Jethroes advice, and Gods own allowance,) may, and do lay off, and translate their burthen, (if it be too heavy) upon others, and so ease it, in part: Not so, he: it could not be so in his. He, and He alone: He, and none but he: Upon His own shoulders, and none but his own, bare he all. He trod the wine-press, and bare the burthen Solus, alone; Et vir de Gentibus, and, of all the Nations there was not a man with him. Upon His only shoulders did the burthen only rest.

Exod. 18.23. Esay 63.3.

Now from these two doth the Prophet argue to a third: to the point (here) so principal intendment. That if, for his government sake, he will bear so great things; bear their weaknesses, as the lost Sheep; bear their sins, as the Scape-goat: He will, over the government it self, as in Deut. 32. he maketh the Simile, stretch forth his wings as the Eagle over her young ones, and take them, and bear them between his Pinions; bear them, and bear them through. They need take no thought: No man shall take them out of his hands; no man reach them off his shoulders. He had begun so to carry them; and thorow he would still carry them: at least-wise, till this Child Immanuel were born. Till then, he would: and not wax weary, nor cast them off. And (like the Scape-goat) bear their sins; and (like the Eagle) bear up their estate, till the fulness of time came, and he, in it, with the fulness of all grace and blessing. And this point I hold so material; as Puer natus, nothing, and Filius datus, as much, without Princeps oneratus: For, that is all in all, and, of the three the chief.

Mat. 18.13, 14. Lev. 16.8, 9. Deut. 32.11. Joh. 10.28. Gal. 4.4.

AND now, what is all this to us? Yes; to us, it is; and that, twice over, for failing. We come now to look another while into our interest to it, and our benefit by it. Nobis is acquisitivè positus: We get by it; we are gainers by all this.

II. The second main point. The benefit, To us.

To us; not to himself. For a far more noble Nativity had he, before all worlds, and needed no more birth. Not to be born at all; specially, not thus basely to be born. Not to him therefore; but to us, and our behoof.

Heb. 2.16.

To us, as in bar of himself, so likewise of his Angels. Nusquam Angelos, not to the Angels was he born, or given; but, to us he was both. Not an Angel in heaven can say Nobis, Vobis they can: The Angels said it twice, Nobis natus or datus, they cannot; but we can, both.

Nobis exclusivè, and Nobis inclusivè. Esay speaks not of himself only, but taketh in Ahaz. Both are in Nobis; Esay an holy Prophet, and Ahaz, a worse than whom you shall hardly read of. Esay includeth himself, as having need, though a Saint; and excludeth not Ahaz, from having part, though a

Luke 2.25. 1 Tim.1.15. sinner. Not only Simeon the Just; but Paul the sinner, of the Quorum, and the first of the Quorum.

Inclusivè: not only of Esay, and his Country-men the Jewes; It is of a larger extent. The Angel Luk.2.12. so interpreteth it, this day, to the Shepheards: Gaudium quod erit omni populo, Joy that shall be to all people, Not the people of the Jews; or the people of the Gentiles; but simply to all people. His name is Mar.14 36. JESUS CHRIST, half Hebrew, half Greek: Jesus, Hebrew; Christ, Greek; So sorted, of purpose, Rom.8.15. to shew, Jews and Greeks have equal interest in Him. And now, so is His Fathers name too, Abba Father; To shew the benefit equally intended by Him, to them, that call Him Abba, that is, the Jews; to us, that call Him Father, that is, the Gentiles.

Rom.3.22. But yet, it is inclusivè of none, but those that include themselves; that believe, and therefore say, Nobis, to us He is born, to us He is given. Which excludes all those, that include not themselves. S. Ambrose saith well: Facit multorum infidelitas, ut non omnibus nasceretur, qui omnibus natus est: Want of faith makes, that He, that is born to all, is not born to all though. The Turks and Jews can say, Puer natus est: The Devil can say, Filius natus est, too: But neither say, Nobis; but, Quid nobis & tibi? They have not to do with Him; and for lack of it, of this, neither Child, nor Son, birth nor gift doth availe them: We must make much of this word, and hold it fast; for, thereby our tenure and interest groweth. Which interest groweth by a double right, (and therefore is Nobis twice repeated:) [1] The one, of His birth, natus; [2] the other, by a deed of gift, Datus. Of which, the one (His Birth) referreth to Eph.5.2. Himself: the other (the gift) to His Father: To shew the joynt consent and concurrence, in both, Joh.1.11. For our good. So Christ loved us, that He was given: So God loved us, that He gave His Son.

By His very birth there groweth to us an interest in Him, thereby partaker of our nature, our flesh, and our blood. That which is de nobis, He took of us, is ours: flesh and blood is our own; and, to that is our own, we have good right.

His Humanity is clearly ours; good right to that. But, no right to His Deity. Therefore His Fa- 1 Joh.3.16. ther (who had best right to dispose of Him,) hath passed over that by a deed of gift. So that, what by Gal 4.4. participation of our nature, what by good conveyance, both are ours. Whether a Child, He is ours: or whether a Son, He is ours. We gave Him the one; His Father gave us the other. So, both ours: and He ours, so far as both these can make Him. Thus, God, willing more abundantly to shew to the heirs of Heb.6.17. promise the stableness of His Counsel, took both courses; that, by two strong titles, which it is impossible should be defeated, we might have strong consolation, and ride (as it were) at a double Anchor.

I want time, to tell of the benefit which the Prophet, Verse 3.) calleth the harvest, or booty of His Heb.1.2. Nativity. This it is in a word: If the tree be ours, the fruit is: If he be ours, his Birth is ours; his Life Joh.3.35. is ours; his Death is ours; his satisfaction, his merit, all he did, all he suffered is ours. Further, all that Mat.21.18. the Father hath is his, he is heire of all; then, all that is ours too. St. Paul hath cast up our account: Ha- 1 Cor.3.22,23. ving given him, there is nothing; but he will give us with him: So that, by this Deed, we have title to all, Rom.8.32. that His Father, or he is worth.

Our Duty. And now, shall we bring forth nothing for Him that was thus born? No Quid retribuam, no gi- Psal.116.12. ving back, for him that gave him us? And to the Son, for be- Col.1.12. ing willing so to be born, and so to be burthened as he was. All great, and very great: But, that is greater, is behind. Puer Natus, much; Princeps oneratus, much more: That which He bare for us: For, greater is Mors crucis, than Nativitas præsepis: Phil.2.8. Worse to drink vinegar and gall, than to eat butter and honey; worse, to endure an infamous death, than to be content with an inglorious birth.

Luk.1.68,46. 2.14. Let us therefore sing to the Father (with Zachary) Benedictus: and to the Son (with the blessed Virgin) Magnificat: and (with all the Angels) Gloria in excelsis, To the Prince with His government on his shoulders.

Nothing but thanks? Yes; by way of duty to, to render, unto the Child, confidence; Puer est, ne metuas: To the Son, reverence; Filius est, ne spernas: To the Prince, obedience Princeps est, ne offendas. And again; to Natus; is He born? then cherish Him. (I speak of His Spiritual birth, wherein Mat.12 49,50 we by hearing and doing His word, are (as Himself saith) His Mothers. To Datus; is He given? then keep Him. To Oneratus, is He burthened? favour Him; lay no more on, than needs you must.

This is good moral counsel. But, S. Bernard gives us politick advice; to look to our interest, to think of making our best benefit by Him, De nobis nato & dato faciamus id, ad quod natus est & datus; utamur nostro, in utilitatem nostram; de servatore nostro, salutem operemur: With this born and given Child, let us then do that for which He was born and given us: Seeing He is ours, let us use that, that is ours, to our best behoof; and even work out our salvation, out of this our Saviour. His counsel is to make our use of Him: but, that is not to do with Him what we list; but, to imploy Him to those ends, for which He was bestowed. Those are four:

1. He is given, (saith St. Peter) ὑπογραμμὸν for an example, to follow. In all; but (that which is 1 Pet.2.21. proper to this day,) to do it, in humility. It is that, which the Angel set up, for a sign and sample, upon this very day. It is the vertue appropriate to His birth. As faith, to His conception, (Beata quæ credidit;) so humility to his birth, (& hoc erit signum:) Fieri voluit in vitâ primum, quod exhibuit in ortu vitæ, it is Cyprian; That, he would have us to express in our life, that he first shewed us, in the very entry of our life. And to commend to us this vertue the more, Placuit Deo majora pro nobis operari, it hath pleased Him to do greater things for us, in this estate, then ever He did, in the high degree of His Majestie: as, (we know) the work of Redemption passeth that of Creation, by much.

He is is given us in pretium, for a price. A price, either of ransome, to bring us out de loco caliginoso: or a price, of purchase, of (that, where, without it, we have no interest,) the kingdom of heaven. For, both he is given; offer we Him for both. We speak of Quid retribuam; We can never retribute the like thing. He was given us to that end, we might give him back. We wanted, we had nothing valuable; that we might have, this He gave us, as a thing of greatest price, to offer for that, which needed a great price, our sins, so many in number, and so foul in quality. We had nothing worthy GOD; this he gave us, that is worthy him, which cannot be but accepted, offer we it never so often. Let us then offer Him; and, in the act of offering, ask of him what is meet: for we shall find him no less bounteous, than Herod, to grant what is duely asked upon his birth-day. 2. 2 Pet. 1. 19. Mat. 7. 7, 8. Mat. 14. 6, 7.

He is given us (as himself saith) as the living bread from Heaven: which bread is his flesh, born this day, and after given for the life of the world. For look how we do give back that he gave us, even so doth he give back to us that which we gave him, that which he had of us. This he gave for us, in Sacrifice; and this he giveth us, in the Sacrament; that the Sacrifice may, by the Sacrament, be truly applied to us. And let me commend this to you; he never bade, Accipite, (plainly, take,) but in this only: and that, because the effect of this Daies union is no waies more lively represented, no way more effectually wrought, than by this use, 3. Joh. 6. 53. Mat. 26. 26. 1 Cor. 11. 24.

And lastly, He is given us in præmium: (Not now to be seen, only in hope;) but hereafter, by his blessed fruition, to be our final reward; when, where he is, we shall be; and what he is, we shall be; In the same place, and in the same state of glory, joy, and bliss, to endure for evermore. 4.

At his first coming, you see, what he had on his shoulders. At his second, he shall not come empty, Ecce venio, &c. Lo I come, and my reward with me; that is, a kingdom on His shoulders. And it is no light matter; but as St. Paul calleth it, διάνιον βάρος an everlasting weight of glory, Glory, not (like hers here) feather-glory; But, true; that hath weight and substance in it: And that not transitory, and soon gone; but everlasting, to continue to all eternity, never to have end. This is our state in expectancy. St. Augustine put all four together, so will I, and conclude: Sequamur [1] exemplum; offeramus [2] pretium; sumamus [3] viaticum; expectemus [4] præmium: let us follow him for our pattern, offer him for our price, receive him for our sacramental food, and wait for him as our endless and exceeding great reward, &c. Apoc. 22. 12. 2. Cor. 4. 17.

A SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Majesty

At WHITE-HALL, on Thursday the xxv. of Decem. Anno Domini, MDCVII. being CHRISTMAS Day.

I TIM. Chap. III. Ver. XVI.

And without controversie great is the Mystery of Godliness, which is, GOD is manifested in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of Angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, and received up in glory.

THE Mystery (here mentioned) is the mystery of this Feast; And this Feast, the Feast of this Mystery: for, as at this Feast, GOD was manifested in the flesh. In that it is a great Mystery, it maketh the Feast great. In that it is a Mystery of Godliness, it should make it likewise a Feast of Godliness. Great, we grant, and godly too, we trust: Would GOD, as godly, as great; and no more controversie of one, than of the other.

The manifestation of God in the flesh, the Evangelists set down by way of an History: the Apostle goeth further, and findeth a deep mystery in it; and for a mystery, commends it unto us. Now there is difference between these two; Many: This, for one; that a man may hear a Story, and never wash his hands; but a mystery requireth both the hands, and heart to be clean, that shall deal with it.

The Division I. SPeaking of it then, as a mystery, the Apostle doth here propound two things: [1] First, that it is one: Without controversie, &c. [2] Then, what it is: God manifested, &c. [3] And out of these, a third will grow necessarily; (Because Mysteries will admit a fellowship,) how to order the matter, that we may have our fellowship in this mystery. Eph. 3. 9.

In the first part, four things he affirmeth: [1] That it is a Mystery: [2] A Mystery of Godliness: [3] That it is a great one: [4] A great one, without controversie.

II. Then doth He (as it were) rend the veil in sunder, and shew us, what it is: [1] GOD, manifested: [2] Manifested in the flesh.

III. Which Mystery, how it may concern us, will be our third, and last consideration. And that two waies: [1] by the Operation of it, in us: [2] by the Initiation of us, into it.

I. A Mystery it is. A Mystery it is: presented to us in that terme, by the Apostle, to stir up our attention. Omnes homines naturâ scire desiderant. All men, even by nature, love to be knowing. The Philosopher hath made it his ground, and set it in the front of his Metaphysicks. So saith Philosophy.

And even to this day (saith Divinity,) doth the Tree of knowledge still work in the sons of Eve; we still reckon the attaining of knowledge, a thing to be desired, and, be it good, or evill, we love to be knowing, all the sort of us. Knowing, but what? Not, such things as every one knoweth, that goeth by the way; vulgar, and trivial. Tush, Those are nothing. But, Metaphysicks, that are the Arcana of Philosophy; Gen. 3. 6.

Mysteries,

Myſteries, that are the Secrets of Divinity; ſuch as few beſides are admitted to: Thoſe be the things we deſire to know. We ſee it in the Bethſhemites; they longed to be prying into the Ark of GOD; They were Heathen. We ſee it in the People of GOD too; they preſſed too near the Mount: Railes were fain to be ſet, to keep them back. It is, becauſe it is held a point of a deep wit, to ſearch out ſecrets: as in Joſeph. At leaſt of ſpecial favour, to be received ſo far, as Vobis datum eſt, noſſe Myſteria. All deſire to be in credit. The mention of Myſteries will make us ſtand attentive: why then, if our nature like ſo well of Myſteries, Ecce oſtendo vobis Myſterium, Behold I ſhew you a Myſtery (ſaith the Apoſtle.)

1 Sam. 6. 19. Exod. 19. 12. Gen. 41. 45. Luke 8. 10. 1 Cor. 15. 51.

A Myſtery of Godlineſs. The World hath her Myſteries in all Arts, and Trades, (yea, Mechanical, pertaining to this life;) which are imparted to none, but ſuch as are filii ſcientiæ, apprentices to them. Theſe have their Myſteries: have them, nay, are nothing but Myſteries. So they delight to ſtile themſelves by the name of ſuch and ſuch a Myſtery. Now, Pietas eſt quæſtus, (Chap. 6. Ver. 6.) and (in the next Chap.) ad omnia utilis, a Trade of good return; to be in requeſt with us; whether we look to this life preſent (ſaith he) or to that to come. Therefore to be allowed her Myſteries: at leaſt, as all other Trades are. The rather, for that there is Myſterium iniquitatis: And, it were ſomewhat hard, that there ſhould not be Myſterium pietatis, to encounter and to match it: That Babylon ſhould be allowed the name of a Myſtery, and Sion, not. It were an evident Non ſequitur, that there ſhould be profunda Satanæ, deep things of Sathans; and there ſhould not be deep and profound things of God and godlineſs, for the Spirit to ſearch out. But, ſuch there be; Myſteries of Godlineſs. And we will (I truſt) ſtand affected, as in all other Trades, ſo in this, to be acquainted with theſe; and (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) to pierce ad interiora Velaminis, to that which is within the veile; to the very Myſtery of Godlineſs.

A Myſtery of godlineſs.
Verſe 8.
2 Theſ. 2. 7. Apoc. 17. 5. 2. 24.
1 Cor. 2. 10. H. b. 6. 19.

It is not only a Myſtery of Godlineſs; but a Great one. The Apoſtle (where he ſaith, * If I knew all myſteries) giveth us to underſtand, there be more than one; there is a plurality of them. And, (here in this place) telleth us; they be not all of one ſcantling; there is magis and minus in them: ſome little, ſome great. ' Some great; (if you ſtill) according to all the dimenſions, length and breadth, &c. ' Or, great, Virtute, non mole, of greater value, more precious than other: ' Or great, a third way, that is, gravida Myſteriis; one Myſtery, but hath many Myſteries with it. That ſuch there are, and that this here is one of them: Great. Now that which leadeth us to make account of Myſteries, will likewiſe lead us to make Great account, of Great Myſteries; ſuch, as this is.

A great Myſtery.
* 1 Cor. 13. 2. Eph 3. 18. 2 Pet. 1. 4.

Yet have we not all, one point further. It is a great one; a great one, Without controverſie. For, even of thoſe Myſteries, that are great, all are not great alike. Many great there are; yet is not the greatneſs of all generally acknowledged, in confeſſo. Doubts are made, queſtions ariſe about them: all are not manifeſtè magna. We ſee, in our daies how men languiſh about ſome points, which they would have thought to be great; and great controverſies there be, and great books of controverſies about them. Well, howſoever it is with other, it is not ſo with this. This is ὁμολογουμένως, taken pro confeſſo, Great; Great without controverſie: the manifeſting of GOD in the fleſh, is a myſtery manifeſtly great. Being then one of the Myſteries of Religion; a great one among them; ſo great, as though queſtions grow about the greatneſs of others, none may about this: I hope there will be no more queſtion, or controverſie of our account; and our great account of it, than there is of the Myſtery it ſelf, and the Greatneſs of it.

But, before we go any further, to remove the veile, and ſhew what it is, let us pauſe here a while, till we have rendred thanks to God, and ſaid with Nazianzene, Χάρις τῷ μεγάλῳ ΘΕΩ, &c. Now yet, bleſſed be GOD, that among divers other Myſteries, about which there are ſo many miſts and clouds of controverſies raiſed in all Ages, and even in this of ours, hath yet left us ſome clear, and without controverſie; manifeſt, and yet great; and again, great, and yet manifeſt. So great, as no exception to be taken: ſo manifeſt, as no queſtion to be made about them.

Withall, to reform our judgements in this point. For a falſe conceit is crept into the minds of men, to think the points of Religion, that be manifeſt, to be certain petty points, ſcarce worth the hearing: Thoſe, yea, thoſe be great, and none but thoſe, that have great Diſputes about them. It is not ſo: Τὰ μὲν ἀναγκαῖα, &c. Thoſe that are neceſſary He hath made plain: thoſe, that not plain, not neceſſary. What better proof, than this here? This here, a Myſtery, a great one, (Religion hath no greater,) yet Manifeſt, and in confeſſo, with all Chriſtians. Zacharies Propheſie, and promiſe, touching CHRIST, wherewith he concludeth his Benedictus, (we hear it every day,) ſhall not deceive us, for this Myſtery: He came to guide our feet into the way of peace. A way of peace then, there ſhall be, whereof all parts ſhall agree, even in the midſt of a world of controverſies. That, there need not ſuch ado in complaining, if men did not delight, rather to be treading mazes, than to walk in the waies of peace. For, even ſtill, ſuch a way there is, which lyeth fair enough, and would lead us ſure enough to ſalvation; if leaving thoſe other rough labyrinths, we would but be ſhod with the preparation of the Goſpel of peace.

Luk. 1. 79. Eph. 6. 15.

Yea further, the Apoſtle doth aſſure us, that if, whereunto we are come, and wherein we all agree, we would conſtantly proceed, by the Rule, thoſe things, wherein we are otherwiſe minded, even them would GOD reveal unto us. That is, He maketh no controverſie, but controverſies would ceaſe, if conſcience were made of the practice, of that which is out of controverſie. And I would to GOD it were ſo; and that this here, and ſuch other manifeſtè magna were in account. With the Apoſtle himſelf it was ſo. He ſheweth plainly, what reckoning he made of this plain Myſtery; in that, having been raviſhed in ſpirit up to the third heavens, and there heard wonderful high Myſteries, paſt mans utterance; yet reckoned he all thoſe nothing, in compariſon of this plain Myſtery here, nay, eſteemed himſelf not to know any thing at all, but this.

Phil. 3. 15. 2 Cor. 12. 2.

And as he eſteemed it himſelf, ſo would he have us. It is his expreſs charge, we ſee (in the Verſe next before) where he tells his Biſhop Timothy, how he would have him his Prieſts and Deacons occupy themſelves; themſelves, in his abſence: This he commends to them; wils them to be doing with this Myſtery. That you may know what to do (ſaith he,) What? do but deal with this point; throughly, deal with it. Howſoever it is manifeſt, it is great: Great regard to be had of it, great pains to be beſtowed about it. And, even ſo then let us do, and ſee now another while, this Myſtery, what it is.

1 Cor. 3. 3.

II. What this Myſtery is, God is manifeſted in the fleſh, &c.

1. GOD.

* Rom. 1. 20. Heb. 1. 3.

GOD is manifeſted in the fleſh. Being one of the Myſteries of Godlineſs, it cannot be, but God muſt be a part, and a chief part of it. And, Gods being a part maketh it great. For great muſt that needs be, whereof He is a part, of whoſe greatneſs there is no end. And, mark firſt, that it is not aliquid Dei, but Deus; not any thing divine, or of God, but God himſelf. Divers things, divers inviſible things of God had been formerly made manifeſt: * His eternal Power, Wiſdom, Providence; in, and ſince the Creation. They be no myſteries: But, this is; that, not the things of God, but Gods own ſelf: not the ἀπαυγάσματα, the beams of His brightneſs; but, the very Character of His ſubſtance, the very Nature and Perſon of God. This is a great Myſtery.

2. God manifeſted.

1 Tim. 16. Exod. 33. 1.

Of God, the Prophet Eſay ſaith (Chap. 45. Ver. 15.) Verè Deus abſconditus es tu: God is, of himſelf, a Myſtery, and hidden; and (that which is ſtrange) hidden with light, which will make any eyes paſt looking on Him. But, a hidden GOD our nature did not endure. Will you hear them ſpeak it plainly? Fac nobis Deos, Make us viſible Gods, who may go before us, and we ſee them. Myſtical, inviſible Gods we cannot skill of. This we would have God to be manifeſted. Why then, God is manifeſted.

3. Manifeſted in the fleſh.

Gen. 18 27. Eſay 40. 6. 1 Cor. 15. 54. Luke 16. 26. Zach. 2 23.

Manifeſted; Wherein? Sure, if GOD will condeſcend to be manifeſted, there is none but will think, it is meet to be, and it would be, in the moſt glorious Creature, that is under or above the Sun: None, good enough. Yea, in what thing ſoever, be it never ſo excellent, for God to manifeſt himſelf in, is a diſparagement too. What ſay you to fleſh? Is it meet GOD be manifeſted therein? Without controverſie it is not. Why, what is fleſh? It is no Myſtery to tell what it is: It is duſt (ſaith the Patriarch Abraham.) It is graſs (ſaith the Prophet Eſay;) Fanum, graſs cut down, and withering: It is corruption, not corruptible, but even corruption it ſelfe, (ſaith the Apoſtle Paul.) There being then (as Abraham ſaid to him, Luke 16.) χάσμα μέγα, ſo great a gulf, ſo huge a ſpace ſo infinite a diſtance between thoſe two, between GOD, and duſt; GOD and hay; GOD and corruption; as no coming of one at the other; fileat omnis caro, talk not of fleſh. Were it not a proud deſire, and full of preſumption, to wiſh things ſo remote to come together? To wiſh, that the Deity, in the fleſh, may be made manifeſt? Yet we ſee, wiſhed it was, by one in a place (Cant. 8.) in reaſonable expreſs terms: O that thou wert as my brother, that ſucked the breaſts of my mother! That is, O that I might be manifeſt in the fleſh. O that He might be! and ſo He was, not only manifeſt at all; (that is great:) but manifeſt in the fleſh; (that is greater.) For, if gold mixed, though it be with ſilver, is abaſed by it; what if it be mixed with the ruſt of Iron or droſs of Lead? This muſt needs be great, in it ſelf: But greater, with us: With us eſpecially, that make ſuch a doe at any, though never ſo little diſparagement; and that, if any, (though not much our inferiour) be ranked with us, take our ſelves mightily wronged. We cannot chooſe, but hold this Myſtery for Great: and ſay (with St. Auguſtine,) Deus: quid glorioſius? Caro: quid vilius? Deus in carne: quid mirabilius? GOD: what more glorious? Fleſh: what more baſe? Then, GOD in the fleſh: What more marvellous?

But, I ask further: manifeſted in the fleſh; what fleſh? Or, how manifeſted? In what fleſh? What, in the pride and beauty of our Nature? No: but in the moſt diſgraceful eſtate of it that might be. And, how manifeſted? Ad gloriam, for His credit or glory? No: but ad ignominiam, to His great contempt and ſhame. So to have been manifeſted, as in the holy Mount, (His face as the Sun, His garments as lightning, between Moſes and Elias, in all glory, and glorious manner:) This had not been ſo great an impeachment. Was that the manner? no: But how? In clouts, in a ſtable, in a manger. The GOD, whom the heavens, and the heaven of heavens cannot containe, in a little Childs fleſh not a ſpan long: and that fleſh of a Child not very well conditioned, as you may read in the 16 of Ezekiel.

Eze. 16. 4, 5, &c

So, to day: but after, much worſe. To day in the fleſh of a poor Babe crying in the Cratch, in medio animalium: after in the rent and torn fleſh of a condemned perſon, hanging on the Croſs, in medio latronum, in the midſt of other manner perſons, than Moſes and Elias; That, men even hide their faces at Him; not, for the brightneſs of His glory, but for ſorrow and ſhame. Call you this manifeſting? Nay, well doth the Apoſtle call it, the Veile of his fleſh; as whereby He was rather obſcured, than any way ſet forth; yea, eclipſed, in all the darkeſt points of it. Verily, the condition of the fleſh, was more than the fleſh it ſelfe: and the manner of the manifeſtation, far more, than the manifeſtation it ſelf was. Both ſtill make the Myſtery greater and greater.

As a condemned perſon.

Heb. 10. 20.

The manner of this Manifeſtation.

And now, to weigh the word manifeſted, another while; becauſe, that may ſeem to be terminus diminuens, a qualified terme, rather abating than any way tending to make great the Myſtery; In that, a thing may be manifeſted, and not be that, for which it is manifeſted; be manifeſted for one thing, and be another. Would to GOD, we had not too plain examples of theſe, even in that we are about, in godlineſs it ſelf: That there were not, that manifeſted themſelves ἐν μορφώσει, in the viſor, or maſk of godlineſs, but be nothing leſs. Well, this, how or howſoever it may be with men, with GOD it is not: He is not like to us: And howſoever, not herein this. For firſt, it is not in the ſhadow, ſhew, or ſhape of fleſh: but, in very fleſh it ſelf. Then, it is not (ſaith the Greek Scholiaſt) Φανεὶς, but, Φανερωθεὶς, Φανθεὶς, which importeth but an apparition, tranſitory, for a ſeaſon, and then vaniſheth again; Φανερωθεὶς, a manifeſtation; ſuch, as is (ſay they) permanent, which paſſeth not, but laſteth for ever. And to put all out of queſtion, (that here is nihil perſonatum, but even perſona,) He that here is ſaid to be GOD manifeſted in the fleſh, is, in another place, ſaid to be Verbum caro factum, the Word made fleſh. So manifested, that made: ſo taking our nature, as his, and it are grown into one perſon, never to be ſevered, or taken in ſunder any more. And in ſign thereof, that fleſh wherein he is manifeſted, (in the beginning of the Verſe; in the end of the Verſe,) in the very ſame fleſh, he is received up into glory; And in the ſame, ſhall appear again, at his ſecond manifeſtation.

manifeſted

And yet, to go further; I ſay, that this word [manifeſted] is ſo far from being Terminus diminuens, that it doth greatly ampliate and enlarge the Myſtery yet ſtill. To be, manifeſted; Eſſe, and videri; Dici de, and eſſe in, Are two things. And, as, in ſome caſes, it is more to be, than to be manifeſted; ſo, in ſome other, it is more to be manifeſted, than to be: And namely in this here. More, for GOD to be manifeſted, than to be in the fleſh. It is well known when a great high Perſon doth fall into low eſtate, he careth not ſo much for being ſo, as for appearing ſuch: Manifeſt him not, and you do him a pleaſure. More it is for Him, to be made known, than to be, that, He is. O it is naturally given us, to hide our abaſing, what we can. Our miſery muſt be kept in a myſtery, and that myſtery is not manifeſted in any wiſe. Blow a Trumpet in Sion, if any good come to us, But, whiſt, let it not be heard in Gath, nor in Aſcalon, if any evill fall upon us. Not ſo much as Naomi (we ſee;) but when ſhe was fallen into poverty, ſhe could not endure to be called by that name: No, her name was Mara; as if ſhe had been ſome other party: So loth ſhe was, to have her miſery made manifeſt. Humility intrinſecal is not ſo much: it is the manifeſting our humility that poſeth us. That David ſhould have been humble in heart before GOD and his Arke; that Michael could have born well enough: This was the grief; that David ſhould make it manifeſt, uncover himſelf, wear an Ephod, and thereby (as ſhe thought) mightily diſgrace, and make himſelf vile in the eyes of his ſervants. That was it, ſhe took ſo ill: Not, to be, ſo much; as, to be manifeſt: That ſame manifeſting marred all. And, why would Nicodemus come to CHRIST, but not by Candle light; but that to be ſeen manifeſtly to come, was (with him) a far greater matter, than to come. By all which it appeareth, that in caſe of abaſement, to ſeem, is more than to be; dici de, than eſſe in: And ſo (here) noſci, more than naſci. And I make no queſtion, but we may reckon theſe two, as two diſtinct degrees: ' He abhorred not to become fleſh: " He abhorred not to have it manifeſtly known. It was not done (this) in a corner, in an out-corner of Galilee; but, in the City of David. His poor clouts manifeſted, by a Star: His ſhameful death publiſhed by a great Eclipſe: Yea, that it might be manifeſt indeed, (as it followeth after in the Verſe) he would have it preached over all the world.

1 Sam. 1. 20. Ruth. 1. 20. 2 Sam. 6. 20. Joh. 19. 39. Acts 6. 26. Luk. 2 4.

But, when we have done and ſaid all that ever we can, if we had all Myſteries, and no love, the Apoſtle tells us, it is nothing. We can have no Myſtery, except Love be manifeſt. So is it. Two ſeveral times doth the Apoſtle tell us. ' (Tit. II.) apparuit gratia: " (Tit. III.) apparuit Amor erga homines: At the opening of this myſtery, there appeared the ' Grace of God, and the " Love of God toward mankind. Velatio Deitatis, revelatio charitatis: As manifeſt as GOD was in the fleſh, ſo manifeſt was his love unto fleſh. And then, becauſe great love, a great myſtery, Dilexit goeth never alone, but with Sic; (ſo, CHRIST:) Ecce quantam charitatem; (ſo, St. John.) Sure, how great and apparent Humility, ſo great and apparent love. And his humility was too apparent. So, we have GOD manifeſted in the fleſh, Deus charitas: for, if ever he were Love, or ſhewed it; in this, he was it, and ſhewed it both. GOD, (that is Love,) was manifeſted in the fleſh.

1 Cor. 13. 1. Tit. 2. 11. 3. 4. John 3. 16. 1 John 3. 1. 1 John 4. 8.

To make an end, one queſtion more. To what end? Cui bono? Who is the better for all this? GOD, that is manifeſted; or the fleſh, wherein he is manifeſted? Not GOD: To him, there groweth nothing out of this manifeſtation. It is for the good of the fleſh, that GOD was manifeſted in the fleſh. 1. For the good preſent: for, we let go that of the Pſalmiſt, now, [Thou that heareſt the prayer, to thee ſhall all fleſh come;] and much better and more properly ſay; Thou that art manifeſt in the fleſh, to Thee ſhall all fleſh come: With boldneſs entring into the holy place, by the new and living way prepared for us, through the veile, that is, his fleſh. 2. And, for the good to come; For we are put in hope, that the end of this manifeſting God in the fleſh, will be the manifeſting of the fleſh in him, even as he is: And, that which is the end of the verſe, be the end of all, The receiving us up into his glory. To this haven ariveth this Myſtery, of the Manifeſtation of it.

The End of this manifeſtation. Pſal. 65. 2. Heb. 10, 19, 20

III. How this myſtery concerneth us.

The end of this Second part is but the beginning of the third. For, hearing that it is ſo great, and of ſo great avail riſing by it, that it is quæſtus multo uberrimus, a trade ſo beneficial; it makes us ſeek, how to incorporate our ſelves (as in the " III. of the Epheſians he ſpeaketh;) how to have our part and fellowſhip, in this Trade, or Myſtery. And that may we do (ſaith he, in the ſame place) * ſi operetur in nobis, (that is) if it prove to us, as it is in it ſelf, a Myſtery. I know, it were a thing very eaſie, for a ſpeculative Divine, to lead you along, and let you ſee, that this Myſtery is the Subſtance of all the Ceremonies, and the fulfilling of all Prophecies: That all Moſes veiles, and all the Prophets viſions, are recapitulate in it. But it is a point of ſpeculation; We hear thoſe points too often, and love them too well: Points of practice are leſs pleaſing, but more profitable for us; namely, how we may get into the partnerſhip of this Myſtery.

1 By the Operation of it in us. * Eph. 3. 6, 9. * Eph. 3. 7.

There is this difference, between a Ceremony and a Myſtery: A Ceremony repreſents and ſignifies, but, works nothing: A Myſtery doth both. Beſides that it ſignifieth, it hath his operation; and, work it doth; elſe, Myſtery is it none. You may ſee it, by the Myſtery of iniquity; That doth operari; was at work in the Apoſtles time; and it is no way to be admitted, but that the Myſtery of godlineſs ſhould have like operative force.

2 Theſ. 2. 7.

If you ask, what it is, to work? It is to do, as all other Agents; Ut aſſimulet ſibi paſſum, to make that, it works on, like it ſelf; to bring forth in it the very ſame quality. This, the rather, for that, this day being a Birth day, and the Myſtery of it, a Birth, or generation; in that, (we know) the natural and most proper work is, Sui simile procreare, to beget and bring forth the very like to it self. And what should the Mystery of godliness beget in us, but godliness? What, the Mystery of Godliness (in this Chapter,) but the Exercise of godliness (in the next?) To shew, we must make St. Basil's Ἀσκητὸν of it: For, his Ἀσκητὸν, and St. Paul's Γυμνάσιον, I take to be all one.

Within; the Mystery. 2 Pet. 3. 11. Jam. 1. 27.

First, Within, (after the manner of a Mystery,) by entring into our selves, and saying (with S. Peter) Seeing then, GOD hath dealt so with us, what manner of persons ought we to be, in all holy conversation and godliness? How ought we to esteem him, that so esteemed us? How to esteem our selves, whom he hath so esteemed? How, without soil, or spot, to keep that flesh, wherein GOD hath manifested himself, that nothing come from it but such as may become that flesh, which is now all one with the flesh of the SON of GOD.

Without; the manifestation. Gal. 5. 19. Jam. 2. 18. 2 Cor. 4. 10, 11

Provided, that it be not all Within: For, we deal not with a Mystery alone, but with a Manifestation too. That therefore our godliness be not only mystical, but manifest, as GOD was. As the Mystery, so the Godliness of it; Great, and conspicuous both. For, that is the complaint; that, in our godliness, now adaies, we go very mystically to work indeed; we keep it under a veil; and nothing manifest, but opera Carnis. Which maketh St. James cry, Ostende mihi, shew it me: and St. Paul tells us, that the life of JESUS must not only be had in our spirit, but manifest in our flesh. For, Godliness is not only Faith, which referreth to the Mystery (as we have it directly, at the IX. Verse, the Mystery of Faith:) But, it is Love too; which referreth to the Manifestation. For, in hoc cognoscimus (saith St. John,) By this, we know, our selves; and, in hoc cognoscent omnes (saith CHRIST,) By this shall all men know, that we are His. And, if Faith work by Love, the Mystery will be so manifest in us, as we shall need no prospective glasses, or other optick instruments, to make it visible; all men shall take notice of it.

1 John 3. 14. 4. 13. John. 13. 35.

By the Initiation of us into it.

1 Cor 4. 1.

And yet remaineth there one point; than which, there is not one more peculiar to a Mystery. That which the Apostle (Heb. 10. 20.) calleth Initiating: whereby we grow into the fellowship of this, and what Mysteries soever. For, this we are to understand, that Mysteries go not all, by hearing; no, they be dispensed also: And men are to esteem of us (saith he) not only, as of the Unfolders, but, as of the Stewards (or Dispensers) of the mysteries of GOD. Operari Mysteriis, is a phrase well known to the very Heathen themselves: That Mysteries, as they work, so they are to be wrought. That they are to be handled, and that our hands are to be clean washed, yere we offer to touch them.

By which, I understand the Mystery of godliness, or Exercise of godliness (call it whether ye will,) which we call the Sacrament: the Greek hath no other word for it, but Μυστήριον:) whereby the Church offereth to initiate us into the fellowship of this daies Mystery. Nothing forteth better than these two Mysteries one with the other; the Dispensation of a Mystery, with the Mystery of Dispensation. It doth manifestly represent; it doth mystically impart what it representeth. There is in it, even by the very institution, both a Manifestation, and that visibly to set before us this flesh; and a mystical Communication, to infeoffe us in it, or make us partakers of it. For the Elements: What can be more properly fit, to represent unto us the union with our Nature, than things that do unite themselves to our Nature? And, if we be to dispense the Mysteries in due season; what season more due than that His flesh and blood be set before us, that time, that He was manifest in flesh and blood for us. Thus we shall be initiate.

Apoc. 10. 7.

You look to hear of a Consummation of it too; and consummate it shall be, but not yet: not till the daies of the voice of the Seventh Angel. Then shall the Mystery of GOD be finished. So we find it directly, but not before. When, He that was, this day manifested in the flesh, shall manifest, to the flesh, the fulness of this Mystery, His eternity, glory, and bliss. So, still it remaineth a mystery in part; a part thereof there still remaineth behind, to be manifested. What He is, appeareth; what we shall be, doth not yet appear; but shall, at the second appearing. Two veiles we read of: 1 The veile of His flesh, (Heb. 10. 20.) 2 And the veile where our hope hath cast anchor, even within the veile, meaning heaven it self. The first is rent; these mysteries are remembrances of it. The second also shall be, as we also with it; and as he, (in the end of the Verse) so we, with Him, in the end, shall be received up into glory. To the consummation of which great Mystery, even that Great Manifestation, He vouchsafe to bring us all, that was, this day, for us all, manifested in the flesh, Jesus Christ the Righteous, &c.

A SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Majesty

At WHITE-HALL, on Munday the xxv. of Decem. Anno Domini, MDCIX. being CHRISTMAS Day.

GAL. Chap. III. Ver. IV, V.

When the fulneſs of time was come, God ſent His Son, made of a woman, made under the Law. That He might redeem them that were under the Law, that we might receive the Adoption of Sons.

IF, when the fulneſs of time cometh, God ſent His Son: then, when God ſent His Son, is the fulneſs of time come. And at this day, God ſent His Son. This day therefore (ſo oft as by the revolution of the year it cometh about) is to us a yearly repreſentation of the fulneſs of time. So it is: and a ſpecial honour it is to the Feaſt, that ſo it is. And we our ſelves ſeem ſo to eſteem of it. For we allow for every month a day, (look how many months, ſo many daies,) to this Feaſt, as if it were, and we ſo thought it to be, the full recapitulation of the whole year.

This honour it hath, from Chriſt, who is the ſubſtance of this, and all other Solemnities. Peculiarly, à Chriſti miſſa, from Chriſts ſending. (For, they that read the ancient Writers of the Latine Church (Tertullian, and Cyprian) know, that Miſſa, and Miſſio, and Remiſſa, and Remiſſio, with them, are taken for one. So that, Chriſti miſſa, is the ſending of Chriſt.) And when then hath this Text place ſo fit, as Now? Or what time ſo ſeaſonable to intreat of it, as This? Of the ſending of his Son; as when God ſent his Son: Of the fulneſs of time; as, on the yearly return and memorial of it.

To intreat of it then. The Heads are two: 1. Of the fulneſs of time. 2. And of that, wherewith it is filled. 1. Times fulneſs, in theſe, When the fulneſs of time came. 2. Times filling, in the reſt, GOD ſent His Son, made of a woman, made under the Law, &c. The Diviſion

In the former, (Quando venit plenitudo temporis,) there be four Points: 1. Plenitudo temporis: That, time hath a fulneſs; or, that there is a fulneſs of time. 2. Venit plenitudo: That that fulneſs cometh, by ſteps and degrees; not all at once. 3. Quando venit: That, it hath a Quando, (that is,) there is a time, when time thus cometh to this fulneſs. 4. And when that When is? And that is, When God ſent His Son. And ſo paſs we over to the other part, in the ſame Verſe, Miſit DEUS; GOD ſent His Son. I.

For the other part (touching the filling of time.) There be Texts, the right way to conſider of them, is to take them in pieces. And this is of that kind. And if we take it in ſunder, we ſhall ſee, as it is of fulneſs, ſo a kind of fulneſs there is in it: every word, more full than other: every word, a ſtep in it, whereby it riſeth ſtill higher, till by ſeven ſeveral degrees it cometh to the top, and ſo the meaſure is full. 1. GOD ſent, the firſt. 2. Sent his Son, the ſecond. 3. His Son made, the third. 4. And that twice made, Made of a woman, the fourth. 5. Made under the Law, the fifth; every one fuller than other, ſtill. II.

And all this, for ſome Perſons, and ſome Purpoſe; The Perſons, Ut nos, that we. The purpoſe, Reciperemus, that we might receive. Nay, (if you mark it) there be two Ut's, [1] Utille, [2] Ut nos, that He might, and, that We might. He might redeem; and We might receive: that is, He, pay for it, and, We reap the benefit. 6. A double benefit; of [1] Redemption (firſt) from the ſtate of perſons caſt and condemned, under the Law, which is the ſixth. 7. And then, of [2] Tranſlation into the ſtate of adopted children of God, (which is the ſeventh, and the very filling up of the meaſure.

III. All which, we may reduce to a double fulneſs. Gods, as much as He can ſend. Ours, as much as we can deſire. GODS, in the five firſt. 1. God ſent. 2. Sent his Son. 3. His Son made. 4. Made of a Woman. 5. Made under the Law. And Ours in the two latter; 6. We are redeemed, the ſixth. 7. We receive adoption, the ſeventh.

In that of Gods, every point is full. The thing ſent, full. The ſending, and the manner of ſending, full. The making, and the two manners of making, ' Of a woman, and ' under the Law, both full. And our fulneſs in the two latter, (the effects of theſe two Acts; or makings, ' of a woman, ' under the Law,) Redemption and Adoption, which make up all. That when we were ſtrangers from the Adoption; and not that only, but lay under the Law, as men whom ſentence had paſſed on: From this latter, we are redeemed, (He under the Law, that we from under the Law,) That, (being ſo redeemed) we might further receive the adoption of children, (and as He the Son of man: ſo we might be made the Sons of God.) Which two are as much as we can wiſh. And this is Our fulneſs.

IV. And to theſe; I will crave leave to add another fulneſs of Ours, riſing out of theſe, and to make a motion for it. That, as it is the time, when we from GOD, receive the fulneſs of His Bounty: ſo it might be the time alſo, when He from us, may likewiſe receive the fulneſs of our Duty. The time of His Bountifulneſs, and the time, of our Thankfulneſs: that it may be Plenitudo temporis, quà ad illum, quà ad nos; downward and upward; from Him to us, and from us to Him again: and ſo be, both waies, The fulneſs of time.

Quando venit plenitudo temporis.

1. Plenitudo temporis. Sap. 11. 17. Eph. 4. 13. FIrſt, there is a fulneſs in time. The Terme, [Fulneſs,] carrieth our conceit to Meaſure, ſtreight, from whence it is borrowed: which is then ſaid to be full, when it hath as much as it can hold. Now, God hath made all things in Meaſure: and if all things, then Time. Yea, Time it ſelf is by the Apoſtle called, Menſura temporis, the Meaſure of Time. As then, all other Meaſures have theirs; ſo the meaſure of time alſo hath his fulneſs, when it receiveth ſo much, as the capacity will contain no more. So, time is a meaſure: it hath a capacity: that hath a fulneſs. That, there is ſuch a thing as the fulneſs of time.

2. Venit plenitudo Alcuin. But, nothing is full at firſt: no more is time by and by. Venit plenitudo, it cometh, not at once, or ſtraightwaies, but by ſteps and paces, nearer and nearer: Fils, firſt a quarter, and then half, till at laſt it come to the brim. And degrees there be, by which it cometh. Ecce palmares poſuiſti dies meos, (Pſal. 39. 6.) From which word [palmares] it is an obſervation of one of the Fathers, a man may read his time: In his own hand, viſibly, there is an aſcent, the fingers riſe ſtill, till they come to the top of the middle finger; and when they be come thither, down again by like deſcent, till they come to the little, which is the loweſt of all. So is it in our time. It riſeth ſtill by degrees, till we come to the full pitch of our Age, and then declineth again, till we grow to the lower end of our daies. But howſoever it may be (as it oft fals out) the deſcent is ſudden, we go down headlong without degrees, go away in a moment; yet ever this holdeth; to our fulneſs we come not but by degrees.

3. Quando venit. a John 7. 6. b Joh. 12. 23. Now thirdly, this coming hath a Quando venit, a time, when it cometh thither. As a time there is a great while, when we may ſay, (a) Nondum venit hora, the time is not yet come, while the meaſure is yet but in filling: So at the laſt, a time too, that we may ſay, (b) Venit hora, the time is now come, when the meaſure is full: that is, a time there is, when time cometh to the full. As in the day, when the Sun cometh to the Meridian Line: in the month, when it cometh to the point of oppoſition with the Moon: in the year, when to the Solſtice: In man, when he cometh to his full years: for that is the fulneſs of time the Apoſtle alledgeth in three verſes before.

And when is that When, that time thus cometh to his fulneſs? Quando miſit Deus, when GOD ſends it: for time receives his filling from GOD. Of it ſelf, time is but an empty meaſure, hath nothing in it: Many daies and months run over our heads, Dies inanes, (ſaith the Pſalmiſt:) Menſes vacui, (ſaith Job:) Empty daies, Pſal. 78. Ver. 33. Void months, without any thing to fill them, Job 7. ver. 3.

4. Quando. That which filleth time, is ſome memorable thing of Gods powring into it, or (as it is in the Text) of His ſending, to fill it withal. Miſit Deus is it: and ſo cometh time to be more or leſs full; thereafter as that is, which God ſends to fill it.

Now, many memorably miſſions did God make before this here; whereby in ſome meaſure, He filled up certain times of the year under Moſes, and the Prophets: all which may well be termed, The implements of time.

But for all them, the meaſure was not yet full: filled perhaps to a certain degree, but not full to the brim: full it was not (ſeeing it might be ſtill fuller) till God ſent That, than which a more full could not be ſent.

And, That He ſent, when He ſent His Son, a fuller than whom He could not ſend, nor time could not receive. Therefore, with the ſending Him, when that was, Time was at the top, that was the Quando venit, then it was, plenitudo temporis, indeed.

1. Col. 1. 9. John 3. 34. John 1. 14. John 1. 16. And, well might that time be called the fulneſs of time. For when He was ſent into the world, in whom the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelt bodily: in whom the Spirit was not by meaſure: in whom was the fulneſs of grace and truth: of whoſe fulneſs we all receive: when He was ſent, that was thus full, then was time at the full.

2. And well alſo might it be called the fulneſs of time, in another regard. For till then, all was but in promiſe, in ſhadows, and figures, and propheſies only, which fill not, God knows. But when the Performance of thoſe promiſes, the body of thoſe ſhadows, the ſubſtance of thoſe figures, the fulfilling, or filling full of all thoſe propheſies came, then came the fulneſs of time, truly ſo called. Till then it came not: then it came.

3. And, well might it be called the fulneſs of time, in a third reſpect. For then the Heir, (that is, the World)was come to his full age: and ſo that the fitteſt time for Him to be ſent. For to that, compareth the Apoſtle their eſtate then; that the former times under Moſes and the Prophets were as the Non-age of the world; ſub Pædagogo, in the third Chapter, Verſ. 24. ὑπὸ παιδαγωγὸν, as their A.B.C. or rudiments, (as in the very laſt words before theſe.)Their eſtate then,as of Children in their minority, little differing from ſervants. For all this while, nondum venit, the fulneſs of time was not yet come. But a time there was, as for man, ſo for mankind to come to his full years: that time came with Chriſts coming, and Chriſts coming with it,and never till then was the fulneſs of time; but then it was.

And let this be enough for this point; more there is not in the Text. But if any ſhall farther ask, why then,at that age of the World,the World was at his full age, juſt then,and neither ſooner nor latter? I know many heads have been full of devices,to ſatisfie mens curioſity in that point.But I hold it ſafeſt to reſt with the Apoſtle (in the ſecond verſe)on GODS προθεσμία. Let that content us. Then was the time,for that was Tempus præfinitum à Patre, the time appointed of the Father. For, even among men,though (the Father being dead)the Law ſetteth a time, for the Son to come to His heritage: yet the Father living, no time can be prefixed, but only when it liketh Him to appoint; and the Father here liveth; and therefore let this προθεσμία ſtay us. The times and ſeaſons He hath put in His own power. It is not for us to know them. This is for us to know,that with His appointment, we muſt come to a full point.So doth the Apoſtle,and ſo let us, and not buſie our ſelves much with it,time is but the meaſure or caſk,that wherewith it is filled,doth more concern us.To that therefore let us come. Act. 1. 7.

The degrees are ſeven(as I ſaid.)To take them as they riſe.Miſit Deus,God ſent.That ſtandeth firſt; and at it,let our firſt ſtay be. That will fall out to make the firſt degree. For,even this, that GOD ſent at all,Ipſum mittere Dei,this very ſending it ſelf,is a degree. It is ſo; and ſo we would reckon of it,if we knew the Sender,and who He is; the Majeſty of His preſence how great it is, and how glorious, how far ſurpaſſing all we can ſee on earth. 2. God ſent. 1.

For Him,for ſuch an one as He, to condeſcend, but to ſend; is ſure a degree. For enough it had been,and more than enough for Him,to be ſent to; and not to ſend Himſelf. To have ſit ſtill, and been content,that we might ſend to Him,and have our meſſage and petition admitted,and not He ſend to us. That had been as much as we could look for,and well,if we might have been vouchſafed but that.But it was He that ſent: not we to Him firſt,nay,not we to Him at all,but He to us.

He to us? And what were we,that He to us? Us, (as elſewhere He termeth us) meer Aliens from Him,and His houſhold: Not that only,but us,in caſe of men, whom the Law had paſſed upon (ſo is our eſtate deſcribed in the end of the Text.) For Him,to ſend to us,ſo great as He,to ſuch as we; to think us, tanti,ſo much worth,as to make any miſſion,or motion,or to diſpence any about us; This may well be the firſt. Be it then ſo; that to us,or for us,or concerning us, GOD would trouble Himſelf to make any ſending: A fulneſs there is in this. Full He was,a fulneſs there was in Him,(even the fulneſs of compaſſion in His bowels over our eſtate) elſe ſuch a Sender would never once have ſent. Eph. 2. 12.

GOD ſent,Sent,and ſent His Son: That,(I make no queſtion,) will bear a ſecond. Others He might have ſent; and whoſoever it had been He had ſent, it might well have ſerved our turns. If ſent by the hand of any His Servants,any Patriarch,Prophet,any ordinary meſſenger,it had been enough. So,hitherto had been His ſending, So,and no otherwiſe,ever till now. 2. His Son.

Then if to ſend by any may ſeem ſufficient; to ſend His SON,muſt needs ſeem full. For ever the more excellent the Perſon ſent,the more honourable the ſending: the greater He,the fuller it.Now,greater there is not than His Son,His firſt,His only begotten Son,in whom the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelt; In ſending Him,He ſent the greateſt,the beſt, the fulleſt thing He had. Col. 2. 9.

To heap the meaſure up yet more, with the cauſe of His ſending, in the word ἐξαπέστειλε It was voluntary.He ſent Him not for need: but for meer love to us,and nothing elſe.There was no abſolute neceſſity that He ſhould have ſent Him. He might have done what He intended, by the means and miniſtry of ſome beſides. GOD could have enabled a Creature; a Creature enabled by GOD, and the power of His might,could ſoon have trod down Sathan under our feet. But if it had been any other He had ſent, His love and regard to us had not ſhewed ſo full. It had been, Oſtendit Deus charitatem, but not, Ecce quantam charitatem oſtendit Deus.Whomſoever He had ſent beſides,His love had not been full: at leaſt, not ſo full as it ſhould have been,if he had ſent his Son.That therefore it might be full,and ſo appear to us for full,Miſit Deus filium ſuum. Enough it was,in compaſſion of our eſtate,to have relieved us by any: Men that are in need to be relieved, care not who they be that do it. Enough then for compaſſion: but not enough to manifeſt the fulneſs of His love,unleſs to relieve us,He ſent His own Son. 1 Joh. 3. 1.

This is full one would think: Yet,the manner of his ſending him,is fuller ſtill, Miſit filium; Filium factum.Sent his Son; His Son made.Sent him,and ſent him made: This is a third,For if he would have ſent him,he ſhould not have ſent him made: but as he was, neither made nor created, but like himſelf in his own eſtate,as was meet for the Son of God,to be ſent. To make him any thing,is to mar him,be it what it will be.To ſend him made,is to ſend him marred,and no better. Therefore I make no doubt, Chriſts ſending is one degree,his making is another: So to ſend,as withall to make,are two diſtinct meaſures of this filling. As he is,he is a Maker,a Creator: If GOD make him any thing,He muſt be a thing made,a Creature; and that is a great diſparagement. So that, howſoever the time is the fuller, for this; He is the emptier: πλήρωμα χρόνου, κένωσις Χριστοῦ, the fulneſs of time, is his emptineſs; the exalting of that, his abaſing: And this very Exinanivit ſeipſum, emptying himſelf, for our ſake, is a preſſing down the meaſure: and ſo,even by that,ſtill the meaſure is more full. 3. Made. Phil. 2. 7.

Yea,the very manner of this making,hath his increaſe too,addeth to it ſtill. In the word χρώμενον: which is not every making, but making it his Nature. To have made Him a body, and taken it upon him

Him for a time, till He had performed His Embassage, and then laid it off again, that had been much: But so to be made, as once made, and ever made; so to take it, as never lay it off more, but continue so still γεγόνω, it to become His very Nature; so to be made, is to make the union full. And to make the union with us full, He was content, not to be sent alone, but to be made; and that γενόμενον, to be made so, as never unmade more. Our Manhood becoming His Nature, no less than the Godhead it self. This is Filium Factum indeed.

Made, and twice made, (for so it is in the Verse) 'Factum ex, and 'Factum sub; made of, and made under: Of a Woman, under the Law. So, two makings there be; either of them, of it self, a filling to the measure, but both of them maketh it perfectly full.

4. Made of a woman. John 1.14. Heb.2.10. Psal.144 3.

Made first of a woman: that, I take clearly to be one. For, if He, if the Son of God must be made a Creature: it were meet he should be made the best Creature of all. And if made of any thing, (if any one thing better than another) of that: made some glorious Spirit, some of the orders of the Angels. Nay, made, but made no Spirit; Verbum caro factum est, the Word became flesh: made, but made no Angel; Nusquam Angelos, he in no wise took Angels nature upon him.

But made man. First, I will ask with David, Domine, quid est homo? Lord, what is man? And then, tell you his answer: Homo quasi res nihili, Man is like a thing of nought. And this he was made, this he became, made man, made of a woman: did not abhor the Virgins womb, (as we sing daily, to the high praise of the fulness of his humility, to which His love brought Him for our sakes.) For, whatsoever else He had been made, it would have done us no good. In this then was the fulness of His Love, as before of His Fathers, that He would be made, and was made, not what was fittest for Him, but what was best for us: not, what was most for His glory, but what was most for our benefit and behoof.

Made of a woman. For, Man He might have been made, and yet have had a body framed for Him in Heaven, and not made of a Woman. But when He saith, Factum ex muliere, it is evident, He passed not thorow her, as water thorow a Conduit Pipe, (as fondly dreameth the Anabaptist.) Made of, Factum ex: Ex dicit materiam. Made of her; She ministred the matter, Flesh of her flesh. Semen mulieris, the seed; and Semen intimum substantiæ, that is, the principal and very inward chief part of the substance. Made of that, made of her very substance.

And so have we here now in one, both twain His Nature. God sent His Son, there His Divine: Made of a woman, here His humane Nature. That, from the bosome of His Father, before all worlds; this from the womb of his mother, in the world. So that, as from eternity, GOD His Father might say that verse of the Psalm, Filius meus es tu, hodie genui te, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee: So, in the fulness of time, might the Virgin his mother, no less truly, Filius meus es tu, hodie peperi te, Thou art my Son, this day have I brought thee into the world.

Psal.2.7.

And here now, at this word, made of a woman, He beginneth to concern us somewhat. There groweth an alliance between us: For, we also are made of a woman. And our hope is, as, He will not be confounded, to be counted inter natos mulierum; no more will He be, (saith the Apostle) to say, in medio fratrum; to acknowledge us his Brethren. And so by this time he groweth somewhat near us.

Heb.1.11. Rom.8.19.

5. Made under the Law.

This now is full for the union with our nature, to be made of a woman. But so to be made of a woman, without he be also made under the Law, is not near enough yet. For, if He be out of the compass of the Law, that the Law cannot take hold of Him, Factum ex muliere will do us small pleasure. And He was so born, so made of a woman; as the verity of His conception, is in this factum ex muliere: So the purity is in this, that it is but ex muliere, and no more; of the Virgin alone, by the power of the Holy Ghost, without mixture of fleshly generation. By vertue whereof, no original soil was in Him. Just born He was, and Justo non est lex posita, no law for the just, no law could touch Him. And so we, never the better, for factum ex muliere.

1 Tim.1.9.

For if one be in debt and danger of the Law, to have a Brother, of the same bloud, made of the same woman; both (as we say) lying in one belly, will little avail him, except he will also come under the Law, that is, become his Surety, and undertake for him. And such was our estate. As Debtors we were, by vertue of Chirographum contra nos, the hand-writing that was against us. Which was our Bond, and we had forfeited it, And so, factus ex muliere, to us, without factus sub lege, would have been to small purpose.

Col.2.14.

No remedy therefore, He must be new made; made again once more. And so He was, cast in a new mould; and at his second making, made under the Law; under which if he had not been made, we had been marred; even quite undone for ever, if this had not been done for us too. Therefore, he became bound for us also, entred bond anew, took on him, not only our Nature, but our Debt; our Nature, and Condition both. Nature, as men; Condition, as sinful men; expressed in the words following, [Them that were under the Law:] for that was our Condition. There had indeed been no capacity in him, to do this, if the former had not gone before, factum ex muliere; if he had not been, as we, made of a Woman: But the former was for this; Made of a Woman he was, that he might be made under the Law: being ex muliere, he might then become sub Lege, which before he could not, but then he might, and did: And so this still is the fuller.

And when did he this? When was He made under the Law? Even then, when he was circumcised. For this doth S. Paul testifie, in the third of the next Chap. Behold, I Paul testifie unto you, whosoever is circumcised, Factus est debitor, universæ Legis, He becomes a debtor to the whole Law. At his Circumcision then, he entred Bond anew with us; and in sign that so he did, he shed then a few drops of his bloud, whereby he signed the Bond (as it were) and gave those few drops then, tanquam arrham universi sanguinis effundendi, as a pledge or earnest, that when the fulness of time came, he would be ready to shed all the rest; as he did. For I would not have you mistake, though we speak of this, [sub Lege] being under the Law, in the the terms of a Debt ſometimes: yet the truth is, this debt of ours was no money debt; we were not ſub lege pecuniariâ, but Capituli: and the debt of a Capital Law is Death: and under that, under Death He went, and that the worſt death Law had to inflict, even the death of the Croſs, the moſt bitter, reproachful, curſed death of the Croſs. So that upon the matter, factus ſub lege, and factus in Cruce, come both to one; one amounts to as much as the other. Well, this he did undertake for us at his Circumciſion: and therefore then, and not till then, he had his name given him, the Name of Jeſus a Saviour. For then took he on him the Obligation to ſave us. And look what then at his Circumciſion he undertook, at his Paſſion he paid even to the full: and having paid it, delevit Chirographum, cancelled the ſentence of the Law, that till then was of record, and ſtood in full force againſt us. Luk. 2. 21. Col. 2. 14.

Howbeit, all this was but one part of the Law; but he was made ſub lege univerſa, under the whole Law; and that not by his death only, but by his life too. The one half of the Law, (that is, the Directive part,) he was made under that, and ſatisfied it, by the Innocency of his Life, without breaking ſo much as one jot or tittle of the Law: and ſo anſwered that part (as it might be the Principal.) The other half of the Law, which is the Penalty: he was under that part alſo, and ſatisfied it, by ſuffering a wrongful death, no way deſerved, or due by him; and ſo anſwered that (as it might be the forfeiture.) So he was made under both, under the whole Law. Satisfying the Principal, there was no reaſon he ſhould be liable to the forfeiture and penalty: yet, under that He was alſo. And all, that the whole Law might be ſatisfied fully, by His being under both parts; and ſo no part of it light upon us.

Theſe two then, (Made of a Woman, made under the Law,) ye ſee, are two ſeveral makings, and both very requiſite. Therefore, either hath a ſeveral Feaſt, they divide this Solemnity between them: ſix daies apiece, to either; as the ſeveral moities of this fulneſs of time. This day, Verbum caro factum, the Word made fleſh: that day, Him that knew no ſin, He made ſin, (that is) made him undertake to be handled as a ſinner, to be under the Law, and to endure what the Law could lay upon him. And ſo now, the thing ſent is full: and fully ſent, becauſe made: and fully made, becauſe made once and twice over: fully made ours, becauſe fully united to us. Made of a Woman as well as we: Made under the Law as deep as we: both ex muliere, and ſub Lege. So of our nature (of a woman,) that of our condition alſo (under the Law.) So, fully united to us in nature, and condition both. John 1. 14. 2 Cor 5. 21.

And ſo we are come to the full Meaſure of his ſending. And, that we are come to the full, ye ſhall plainly ſee, by the overflowing, by that which we receive from this fulneſs; which is the latter part of the verſe, and is our fulneſs, even the fulneſs of all that we can deſire. For, if we come now to aſk, for whom is all this ado, this ſending, this making, over and over again It is for us. So is the concluſion, ut nos, that we might from this fulneſs, receive the full of our wiſh. For in theſe two behind, [a] Redemption, and [b] Adoption; to be redeemed, and to be adopted, are the full of all we can wiſh our ſelves. Verſe 5.

The tranſcendent Diviſion, of Good and Evill, is it, th it comprehendeth all. And here it is. Our deſire can extend it ſelf no farther than to be rid of all evill, and to attain all that good is. By theſe two, (being redeemed, and being adopted) we are made partakers of them both: To be redeemed from under the Law, is to be quit of all Evill. To receive the adoption of children, is to be ſtated in all that is Good. For, all Evill is, in being under the Law, from whence we are redeemed; and, all Good, in being inveſted in the heavenly Inheritance, whereunto we are adopted. Thus ſtood the caſe with us: Aliens we were from GOD, His Covenant, and His Kingdom: More than that, Priſoners we were, faſt layed up under the Law. From this latter we are freed: of the former we are ſeized: and what would we more? Eph. 2. 12.

Only, this you ſhall obſerve, that in the Idiom of the Scriptures it is uſuall; two points being ſet down, when they are reſumed again, to begin with the latter, and ſo end with the former. So is it here, at the firſt, made of a woman, made under the Law. At the reſuming, he begins with the latter, made under the Law, that he might redeem them that were under the Law. And then comes to the former, made of a woman, made the Son of man, that we by adoption might be made the Sons of GOD. But, this we are to mark, it is He that is at all the coſt and pain: and we, that have the benefit by it. At the redeeming it is, Ille ille: at the receiving it is, Ille nos.

Briefly of either: and firſt, of our Redeming. Redeeming (as the word giveth it) is a ſecond buying, or buying back of a thing, before aliened or ſold. Ever, a former ſale is preſuppoſed before it. And ſuch a thing there had gone before. A kind of alienation had formerly been, whereby we had made away our ſelves, (for, a ſale I cannot call it, it was for ſuch a trifle:) Our Nature aliened in Adam, for the forbidden fruit; a matter of no moment. Our Perſons likewiſe; dayly we our ſelves alien them, for ſome trifling pleaſure, or profit; matters not much more worth. And, when we have thus paſſed our ſelves away, by this ſelling our ſelves under ſin, the Law ſeizeth on us, and under it we are συγκεκλεισμένοι, (Chap. 3. v. 23.) even lock'd up, as it were, in a Dungeon, tied faſt with the cords of our ſins, (Prov. 5. 22.) The ſentence paſſeth on us, and we waiting but for execution. What evill is there not, in this eſtate, and on every ſoule that is in it? Well then, the firſt Ut, the firſt end is, to get us rid from under this eſtate. 6. That He redeem them that were under the Law. Rom. 7. 14.

He did it: not by way of entreaty, ſtep in and beg our pardon: that would not ſerve. Sold we were, and bought we muſt be, a price muſt be laid down for us. To get us from under the Law, it was not a matter of Interceſſion, to ſue for it, and have it. No, he muſt purchaſe it, and pay for it. It was a matter of Redemption. And, in Redemption or a Purchaſe, we look to the Price. For if it be at an eaſie rate, it is ſo much the better. But with a high price, he purchaſed us; it coſt him dear to bring it about. Non auro, nec argento; Neither of them would ſerve; At an higher rate it was, even Pretioſo ſanguine. His precious bloud was the price we ſtood Him in. Which He payed, when He gave His life a ranſome for many. 1 Per. 1. 18, 19. Mat. 20. 28.

It ſtood thus between Him and us, in this point of Redemption. Here are certain malefactors under the Law,

Law, to ſuffer, to be executed: What ſay you to them? Why, I will become under the Law, ſuffer that they ſhould, take upon me their execution, upon condition, they may be quit. In effect ſo much, at His Paſſion, He ſaid, Si ergo me quæritis, (Joh. 18.6.) If you lay hold on me, if I muſt diſcharge all, Sine hos abire, Let thoſe go their way, Let the price I pay be their Redemption: and ſo it was. And ſo we come to be redeemed from under the Law.

And this is to be marked, that them that were under the Law, and We that are to receive, are but one, one and the ſame perſons both: but being ſo redeemed, then we are our ſelves. Till then, the Apoſtle ſpeaks of us, in the third perſon, (Them that were under the Law,) as of ſome ſtrangers, as of men of another world, none of our own. But now being redeemed, the ſtile changeth. He ſpeaketh of us in the firſt perſon, ut Nos, that We: For, till now, we were not our own, we were not our ſelves; but now we are: Till this, it was the old year ſtill with us; but with the new year cometh our new eſtate.

7. That we might receive the Adoption of Children.

Being thus redeemed, we are got from under the Law: and that is much. Till a party come to be once under it, and feel the weight of it, he ſhall never underſtand this aright; but then he ſhall. And if any have been under it, he knows what it is, and how great a benefit to be got thence. But is this all? No, He leaves us not here; but to make the meaſure compleat, yea, even to flow over, He gives us not over, when He had rid us out of this wretched eſtate, till He have brought us to an eſtate, as good as he himſelf is in. After our Redemption, we ſtood but as Priſoners inlarged; that was all: But ſtill we were as ſtrangers; no part nor portion in God, or His Kingdom: nor no reaſon, we ſhould hope for any, He now goeth one ſtep further, which is the higheſt and furtheſt ſtep of all. For further than it he cannot go.

That we might receive the adoption, (that is) from the eſtate of Priſoners condemned, be tranſlated into the eſtate of Children adopted. Of Adopted: for, of natural, we could not: That is His peculiar alone, and He therein only above us, but elſe, fully to the joynt fruition of all that He hath, which is fully as much as we could deſire. And this is our Fieri out of His Factum ex muliere. We made the Sons of God, as He the Son of Man; We made partakers of His Divine, as He of our Humane nature. To purchaſe our pardon, to free us from death, and the Laws ſentence, this ſeemed a ſmall thing to Him: yet this is Lex hominis. Mans goodneſs goeth no farther; and gracious is the Prince that doth but ſo much. For, who ever heard of a condemned man, adopted afterward; or that thought it not enough and enough, if he did but eſcape with his life? So far then to exalt His bounty, to that fulneſs; as pardon and adopt both. Non eſt Lex hominis hæc; no ſuch meaſure amongſt men; Zelus Domini exercituum, The zeal of the Lord of Hoſts, was to perform this: The fulneſs of the Godhead dwelt in Him, that brought this to paſs.

2 Pet. 1. 4.
2 Sam. 7. 19.
Eſay 9 7.

For, (to ſpeak of adopting:) We ſee it daily, no father adopts, unleſs he be Orbe, have no child; or if he have one, for ſome deep diſlike have caſt him off. But GOD had a Son, The brightneſs of His glory; The true Character of His ſubſtance. And no diſpleaſure there was: No, In quo complacitum eſt, In whom He was abſolutely well pleaſed: yet would He, by adoption, for all that, bring many Sons to Glory. Is not this full on His part?

Heb. 1. 3.
Mat. 17. 5.
Heb. 2. 10.

We ſee again, no Heir will endure to hear of Adoption, nay, not divide his Inheritance, no, not with his natural Brethren. Then, that the Heir of all things, ſhould admit joynt Heirs to the Kingdom He was born to; and that admit them not out of ſuch, as were near Him, but from ſuch as were ſtrangers, yea, ſuch as had been condemned men under the Law; Is not this full on His part? To purchaſe us, and to purchaſe for us, both at once? And not to do this for us alone, but to aſſure it to us: For as his Father, in this Verſe, ſends Him; So, in the next Verſe, He ſends the Spirit of his Son, to give us ſeiſin of this our Adoption: whereby we now call Him, the Jews Abba, the Gentiles Pater, as Children all, and He our Father, which is the priviledge of the Adoption, we here receive.

Heb. 1. 3.
Rom. 8. 17.

And now we are come to the fulneſs indeed. For this Adoption, is the fulneſs of our option: we cannot extend; we, our wiſh; or He, His love and goodneſs any further. For, what can we ask, or He give more, ſeeing in giving this, He giveth all he is worth? By this time, it is full Sea: All the banks are filled: It is now as Ezekiels waters that he ſaw flow from under the threſhold of the Temple: that took him to the anckles firſt, then to the knees, after to the loynes; at laſt ſo high riſen, there was no more paſſage.

1. From the fulneſs of his Compaſſion, he ſent to releaſe us: 2. From the fulneſs of his Love, He ſent his Son: 3. In the fulneſs of Humility, He ſent him made: 4. Made of a Woman, to make a full union with our Nature: 5. Made under the Law, to make the union yet more perfectly full with our ſinful condition: 6. That we might obtain a full deliverance, from all Evill, by being redeemed: 7. And a full eſtate of the joy and glory of his heavenly inheritance, by being adopted. So, there is fulneſs of all hands, and ſo much for the fulneſs of the benefit, we receive.

Now, for the fulneſs of the Duty, we are to perform this day. For, in the fulneſs of time, all things are to be full. Plenitudo temporis, tempus plenitudinis. And ſeeing God hath ſuffered us to live, to ſee the year run about, to this plenitudo temporis: if it be ſo on Gods part; meet alſo, it be ſo on ours: and that we be not empty, in this fulneſs of time. It is not fit, if He be at the brink, that we be at the bottom. But that we be willing, to yield him of ours again; of our duty (I mean:) that it, to Him, in a meaſure and proportion be like full, as his Bounty hath been full above meaſure toward us. That ſo from us, and on our parts, it may be plenitudo temporis, or tempus plenitudinis, the fulneſs of time, or time of fulneſs, chuſe you whether.

1. And a time of fulneſs it will be, I know, in a ſenſe: of fulneſs of bread, of fulneſs of bravery, of fulneſs of ſport and paſtime: and this it may be. And it hath been ever a joyful time in appearance, for it ſhould be ſo. With the joy, (ſaith Eſay, a verſe or two before, Puer natus eſt nobis, unto us a child is born) that men rejoyce with in harveſt: Not to go from our Text here, With the joy of men that are come out of priſon, have eſcaped the Law; with the joy of men that have got the reverſion of a goodly heritage, Only, that we forget not the principal; that this outward joy eat not up, evacuate not our ſpiritual joy, proper to the Feaſt: that we have in mind, in the midſt of our mirth, the cauſe of it, Chriſts ſending, and the benefits that come thereby. And it ſhall be a good ſign unto us, if we can thus rejoyce, if this our joy can be full, if we can make a ſpiritual bleſſing the object of our mirth. Beatus populus, qui ſcit jubilationem, Bleſſed is the people, that can rejoyce on this manner. Pſal. 89. 15.

2. And after our joyfulneſs, or fulneſs of joy, our fulneſs of thanks, or thankfulneſs, is to enſue: For with that fulneſs, we are to celebrate it likewiſe. Our minds firſt, and then our mouths, to be filled with bleſſing, and praiſe, and thanks to Him that hath made our times not to fall into thoſe empty ages of the world, but to fall within this fulneſs of time, which ſo many Kings and Prophets deſired to have lived in, but fell ſhort of; and lived then when the times were full of ſhadows, and promiſes, and nothing elſe. How inſtantly they longed to have held ſuch a Feaſt, to have kept a Chriſtmas, it is evident by David's Inclina Cælos, by Eſay's Utinam diſrumpas Cœlos, Bow the heavens, and break the heavens: How much (I ſay) they longed for it; And therefore, that we make not light account of it. Luk. 10. 2. Pſal. 144. 5. Eſay 64. 1.

To render our thanks then, and to remember to do it fully, To forget none: To him that was ſent, and to him that Sent; Sent his Son, in this, the Spirit of his Son, in the next verſe. To begin with oſculamini Filium, it is the firſt duty enjoyned us this day, to kiſs the babe new born, that when his Father would ſend him, ſaid, Ecce venio, ſo readily: and when he would make him, was content with, Corpus aptaſti mihi, to have a body made him, meet for him to ſuffer in: who willingly yielded to be our Shilo; to this ἀπόστολον here; yea, to be not only Chriſt, but an Apoſtle for us, Heb. 3. 1. even the Apoſtle of our profeſſion. Pſal. 2. 12. Pſal. 40. 7. Gen. 49. 10.

And not to him that was ſent and made alone, but to the Father that ſent him, and to the Holy Ghoſt that made him, (as by whom he was conceived.) To the Father, for his miſſion; the Son, for his redemption; The Holy Ghoſt, for his adoption; For, by him it is wrought. He that made him the Son of man, doth likewiſe regenerate us, to the ſtate of the Sons of God. And this for our thankfulneſs.

3. And to theſe two, (to make the meaſure full) to joyn, the fulneſs of duty, even whatſoever dutiful minded perſons may yield to a bountiful minded, and a bountiful handed Benefactor. And with this to begin, to conſecrate this firſt day of this fulneſs of time: even with our ſervice to him at the full; which is then at the full, when no part is miſſing: when all our duties of preaching, and praying, of hymns, of offering, of Sacrament; and all, meet together. No fulneſs there is of our Liturgy, or publike ſolemn Service without a Sacrament. Some part, yea, the chief part is wanting, if that be wanting. But our thanks are ſurely not full, without the holy Euchariſt, which is by interpretation, Thankſgiving it ſelf. Fully we cannot ſay, Quid retribuam Domino? But we muſt anſwer, Calicem ſalutaris accipiam, we will take the cup of Salvation, and with it in our hands give thanks to him, render him our true Euchariſt, or reall thankſgiving indeed. In which Cup is the Blood, not only of our redemption, of the Covenant, that freeth us from the Law, and maketh the Deſtroyer paſs over us: but of our Adoption, of the New Teſtament alſo, which entitles us, and conveyes unto us (Teſtament-wiſe, or by way of Legacy) the eſtate we have in the joy and bliſs of his heavenly Kingdom, whereto we are adopted. We are then made partakers of him, and with him of both theſe his benefits. We there are made to drink of the Spirit, by which we are ſealed to the day of our redemption and adoption both. So that, our freeing from under the Law, our inveſtiture into our new adopted ſtate, are not fully conſummate without it. Pſa. 116. 12, 13 Mat. 26. 28. 1 Cor. 12. 13. Eph. 4. 30.

And what? Shall this be all? No, when this is done; there is allowance of twelve daies more, for this fulneſs of time: that we ſhrink not up our duty into this day alone, but in the reſt alſo remember, to redeem ſome part of the day, to adopt ſome hour at the leaſt, to bethink our ſelves of the duty, the Time calleth to us for: that ſo, we have not Jobs dies vacuos, no day quite empty in this fulneſs of time. Hereof aſſuring our ſelves, that what we do in this fulneſs of time, will have full acceptance at his hands. It is the time of his Birth, which is ever a time, as accepted, ſo of accepting; wherein, what is done, will be acceptably taken to the full: Fully accepted, and fully rewarded by him, of whoſe fulneſs we all receive: With this condition, of grace for grace, ever, one grace for another. 2 Cor. 6. 2. Joh. 1. 16.

And ſo, growing from grace to grace, finally, from this fulneſs, we ſhall come to be partakers of another yet behind, to which we aſpire, For, all this is but the fulneſs of time: But that, the fulneſs of eternity, when time ſhall be run out, and his glaſs empty, Et tempus non erit amplius; which is, at his next ſending. For yet once more ſhall God ſend him, and he come again. At which coming, we ſhall then indeed receive the fulneſs of our redemption, not from the Law (that we have already) but from Corruption, to which our bodies are yet ſubject; and receive the full fruition of the Inheritance, whereto we are here but adopted. And then it will be perfect, compleat, abſolute fulneſs indeed, when we ſhall all be filled with the fulneſs of him that filleth all in all. For ſo ſhall all be, when nothing ſhall be wanting in any: for God ſhall be all in all. Not as here he is, ſomething (and, but ſomething,) in every one; but then omnia in omnibus. And then, the meaſure ſhall be ſo full, as it cannot enter into us, we cannot hold it: We muſt enter into it; Intra in gaudium Domini tui. Apoc. 10. 6. Eph. 1. 23. 1 Cor. 15. 28. Mat. 25. 21.

To this we aſpire, and to this, in the fulneſs appointed of every one of our times, Almighty God bring us, by Him, and for His ſake, that in this fulneſs of time, was ſent to work it for us, in His perſon: and work it in us, by the operation of His Bleſſed SPIRIT. To whom, &c.

D A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Majesty

At WHITE-HALL, on Tuesday the xxv. of Decem. Anno Domini, MDCX. being CHRISTMAS Day.

LUKE Chap. II. Ver. X, XI.

The Angel said unto them, Be not afraid, for behold, I bring you good tydings, of great joy which shall be to all people.

That, there is born, unto you, this day, a SAVIOUR, which is CHRIST, the LORD, in the City of David.

THere is a Word in this Text, and it is hodiè, by vertue whereof this Day, may seem to challenge a special property in this Text, and this Text in this Day. CHRIST was born, is true any day: but this day CHRIST was born, never, but to day only. For, of no day in the year can it be said, Hodiè natus, but of this. By which word, the HOLY GHOST may seem to have marked it out, and make it the peculiar Text of the day.

Heb. 3. 13. Then, it will not be amiss, Donec cognominatur hodiè, (as the Apostle speaketh) while it is called, to day, to hear it. To morrow, the word hodie will be lost: This day, and not any day else, it is in season. Let us then hear it this day, which we can hear no day besides.

IT is then the first report, the very first news, that came (as this day) of that, which maketh this day, so high a Feast; the birth of Christ.

1. Dixit Angelus. It came by an Angel then: No Man was meet to be the messenger of it. And look how it came then, so it should come still; and none but an Angel bring it: as, more fit for the tongues of Angels than of men. Yet since, GOD hath allowed sinful men, to be the Reporters of it at the second hand; and the news never the worse; for that good news is good news and welcome, by any, though the person be but even a foul Leper that brings it. Yet that the meanness of the messenger offend us not, ever we are to remember this; Be the party who he will, that brings it, the news of CHRISTS birth, is a message for an Angel.

2 Reg. 7. 9.

2. Dixit illis. This had been news for the best Prince on the Earth. That these Illis here, these parties were Shepheards, that this Message came to them, needs not seem strange: It found none else (at the time) to come to: The Angel was glad to find any to tell it to; even to tell it the first he could meet withal: None were then awake, none in case to receive it, but a sort of poor Shepheards; and to them he told it.

John 1. 29. Esay 16. 1. Ezec. 34. 23. Yet, it fell not out amiss, that Shepheards they were; the news fitted them well. It well agreed, to tell Shepheards of the yeaning of a strange Lamb: such a Lamb, as should take away the sins of the World: such a Lamb, as they might send to the Ruler of the World for a Present, Mitte Agnum Dominatori terræ: Esay's Lamb. Or (if you will) to tell Shepheards, of the birth of a Shepheard; Ezechiels Shepheard;

Ecce

Ecce ſuſcitabo vobis Paſtorem; Behold, I will raiſe you a Shepheard: the (a) Chief Shepheard, the (b) Great Shepheard, and the (c) Good Shepheard that gave his life for his flock. And ſo it was not unfit news, for the Perſons to whom it came.

a 1 Pet. 5. 4.
b Heb. 13. 20.
c John 10. 11.

For the Manner: the Angel delivereth it Evangelizando, Church-wiſe, (and that was a ſign this place ſhould ever be the Exchange for this news:) Churchwiſe (I ſay) for he doth it by a Sermon: here at this Verſe: and then by Hymn or Antheme after, at the 14. v. A Sermon: the Angel himſelf calls it ſo, Evangelizo vobis, I come to Evangelize, to preach you a Goſpel: that firſt. And preſently after he had done his Sermon, there is the Hymn, Gloria in excelſis, taken up by the Quire of Heaven. An Angel makes the one: A multitude of Angels ſing the other. The whole ſervice of this day, the Sermon, the Antheme, by Angels, all.

3. Dixit Evangelizo.

Now, the end of both Sermon and Antheme, and of the Angels, in publiſhing it, and of the Shepheards, and us, in hearing it, is gaudium, joy, for the Benefit, and Honour; Gaudium magnum, great joy, for the great Benefit, and great Honour vouchſafed our Nature, and us this day. Joy is in the Text, and if joy be in the time, it is no harm: We keep the Text, if we hold the Time with Joy. For ſo the Angel doth warrant us to hold it.

4. Evangelizo gaudium magnum.

Of this Angelical, or Evangelical meſſage, or (as not I, but the Angel calleth it) Sermon; theſe two Verſes, I have read, are a part. Whereof the former is but an Ecce, exciting them to hear it, by magnifying the meſſage, as well worth their hearing, Be not afraid, for behold I bring you good tydings of great joy, which ſhall be to all people. The latter, is the very meſſage it ſelf, That, there is born unto you, this day a SAVIOUR, which is CHRIST the LORD, in the City of David.

The Diviſion 1. 2.

In the former, are theſe points: 1. Fear not. (It is no ill News I bring you) 2. Nay, it is good news. 3. God, for it is news of joy. 4. Joy, and that no ordinary, but great joy. 5. Not to ſome few, but to the whole people. 6. And not toti populo, to all one people, but omni populo, to all people whatſoever. 7. And them, not for the preſent, but Quod erit omni populo, that is, and ſo ſhall be, to all, as long as there ſhall be any people, upon earth. And, by vertue of this [Quod erit] to us, here this day. Ecce, Behold, ſuch is the news I bring.

In the latter, the Meſſage it ſelf. (The ſum whereof is) the birth of a Child, A Child is born. Three things are propoſed of Him. 1. This Child is a SAVIOUR. 2. A Saviour which is CHRIST. 3. Chriſt the Lord, Chriſtus Dominus. For every Saviour is not CHRIST, nor every Chriſt, Chriſtus Dominus, CHRIST the LORD, or the LORD CHRIST. He is all three.

2. The meſſage it ſelf.

Then have we beſides, three circumſtances, of the [1] Perſons, [2] Time, and [3] Place. 1. The Perſons, for whom all this is: twice repeated; [1] Evangelizo vobis, in the firſt Verſe, [2] Natus vobis is the ſecond. But this, I make ſome doubt of, whether it be a Circumſtance or no: I rather hold it a principal part of the Subſtance, as, the word of conveyance, whereby it paſſeth to us. And ſure, there is no joy either in Evangelizo, the Meſſage; or Natus, the Birth, without it; without Vobis. But, if the Meſſage, and the Birth it ſelf both, be ours; then it is Gaudium magnum indeed. Specially, if we adde (2.) the Time when, not many daies hence, but even this very day. And (3.) the Place where, that it is in no remote Region far hence, but in the City of David, even here hard by.

1. The Names.
2. The circumſtances.
1. The Perſons.
2. The Time.
3. The Place.

And then laſtly in a word; what our parts are to perform, to theſe two parts, [1] this daies Meſſage, and [2] this daies Birth of our SAVIOUR, CHRIST, the LORD.

3. Our duty reciprocal.

Be not afraid.

HEre is a ſtop, that the Meſſage cannot proceed: For the ſight of the Meſſenger, hath almoſt marred the hearing of the Meſſage. The parties to whom it comes: be in ſuch fear, as they be not in caſe to receive it. They were afraid, and that ſore afraid (as is ſaid in the Verſe before) at the ſight of the Angel, that came with the news.

They were afraid.

And this was not the caſe of theſe poor men only: Others, and other manner of people were ſo, as well as they. This Goſpel of S. Luke is ſcarce begun; we are yet but a little way in the ſecond Chapter; and we have already, three Noli timere's in it: and all, as here, at the coming of an Angel. [1] Fear not Zachary, (Chap. 1. 13.) So, he was afraid. [2] Fear not Mary, (Chap. 1. 30.) So, ſhe was afraid. [3] And now, Fear not theſe here, That it ſeems to be general, to fear, at an Angels appearing.

So were others

What was it? It was not the fear of an evill conſcience: They were about no harm. Zachary was at Church at his Office; The bleſſed Virgin (I doubt not) bleſſedly imployed. Theſe here, doing their duty; Watching over their flocks by night: Yet feared, all. What ſhould the matter be? It is a plain ſign, our nature is fallen from her original: Heaven, and we are not in the terms, we ſhould be: not the beſt of us all.

Of what not. Of what.

Angels are the meſſengers of Heaven. Meſſengers ever come with tydings; but whether good or bad we cannot tell. Here comes an Angel with newes from heaven: what news he brings, we know not, and therefore we fear, becauſe we know not. Which ſhews, all is not well between Heaven and us; that upon every coming of an Angel, we promiſe our ſelves no better news from thence; but ſtill are afraid of the meſſages, and meſſengers that come from that place.

Why of the Angel.

That the meſſage then may proceed, this fear muſt be removed. In a troubled water, no face will well be ſeen: nor, by a troubled mind, no meſſage received, till it be ſetled. To ſettle them then for it; no other way, no other word to begin with, but Nolite timere, fear not, and that is ever the Angels beginning. Such is our infirmity, ever he muſt begin with theſe two words, Noli timere, fear not: And ſo he doth ſeven times in this Goſpel.

1. For, no ill tydings. Psal. 53. 5.

But, fear will not be cast out with a couple of words, till they see some reasons to quiet them. And no better reason, than to shew they have no reason to fear. For, fear is the expectation of evill, and there is no evill toward them: and so they have no reason to fear; quod trepidaverunt timore, ubi non erat timor. As if he should say; Angels have come with weeping news, as Jud. 2. v. 5. If I were such an one, if I came with sad tidings, ye had reason, ye might fear. But now your terrour, groweth out of errour. You are mistaken in me, I am no such Angel; I am Angelus Evangelizans, an Angel with a Gospel, one that comes with no bad news. Fear not then. There is no evil toward.

2. But, good tydings. Gen. 45. 17. Psal. 51. 8. Prov. 13. 17.

No evill: and that were enough for fear not. But here is a further matter; Not only privativè, I bring no ill; but positivè, I bring you good news. And good news, is, Nolite timere, and somewhat besides, (that is,) Fear not, but be of good cheer. They be two degrees plainly, though one be inferred of the other. Fear no ill, there is none to fear; there is no ill, nay, there is good towards. For, good news is good, in that it represents the good it self to us before it come. It is but words: true: But such words made Jacob revive again, when he was more than half dead, even the good news of Josephs welfare. If I might but hear good tydings (saith David, when his bones were broken) it would make me well again: That Solomon said well, A good messenger is a good medicine.

2 Cor. 2. 15. Prov. 16. 24. Esay 52. 7. Col. 1. 20. 1 Joh. 14. 18.

Specially, this here which is so good, as it carrieth away the name from the rest, to be called The Gospel, or, the glad tydings, as if none so glad, nay, none glad at all without it. It is (saith the Apostle) odor suavitatis, a comfortable sweet savour. It is (saith the wise man) dulcedo animæ, & sanitas ossium, the sweetness of the soul, the very health of the bones. It is such (saith the Prophet) as the lips are precious, and the feet beautiful, of them that bring it, that a Saviour is born, as by whom, things in heaven, and things in earth, Men and Angels (which were in fear one of another) are set at peace and love: and Love casteth out fear, giveth the true Nolite timere.

3. Tydings of joy Rom. 13. 13. John 16. 24. Gal. 4. 4. Prov. 13. 12.

Good news of joy: For, of good news, there are more sorts than one. Good news it had been, if it had been but Evangelizo vobis spem. News of good hope: that had been enough, for Nolite timere. This is more, it is of joy. I wot well, there is a joy in hope; Spe gaudentes, saith the Apostle: But that joy is not full, till the fulness of time come. Nor it is not perfect, for it is allayed somewhat, with an unpleasing mixture, which is spes differtur, and that (as the wise man saith) affligit animam: Hope deferred afflicteth the soul. Gaudium Spei is nothing to Gaudium rei: the hope de futuro, of a thing to come hereafter, nothing to the actual fruition of a thing present.

And indeed, this daies news, it was ever Evangelium spei: ever in the future tense, before. Even the very last before this, to the blessed Virgin, Ecce concipies, Thou shalt conceive: Shalt. So it was yet to come. This is the first in the present tense: Not, is to be born, is to be sent, is to come, but, Natus est, Missus est, Venit, is born, is sent, is come, Hodiè, even to day, takes no time: In the City of David, not far hence, but even hard by. This is Evangelizo gaudium: This is joy indeed.

4. Of great joy.

But even in Joy, there be divers degrees: all are not of one size: Some there are lesser; some (as this here) Gaudium magnum. The size is, as the fuell is; and the joy is as the matter is. There is not like joy to a Shepheard, when his Ewe brings him a Lamb, as when his Wife brings him a Son; (yet that of a Lamb, is a joy, such as it is.) But then, if that Son should prove to be Princeps Pastorum, the Chief Shepheard in all the Land, that were somewhat more: But then, if he should prove to be a Cyrus, or a David, a Prince, then certainly it were another manner of joy, Gaudium magnum indeed. As the matter is, so is the joy. If great the Benefit, great the Person, then great the joy. And here the Benefit is great; none greater, as much as the saving of us all, as much as all our lives and soules are worth; therefore great. And the Person great, none so great: (it is the LORD Himself) therefore primæ magnitudinis, great even as He is. Indeed so great it is, that the Prophet bids us plainly, remember no more former things, nor regard matters of old: This passeth them all, the joy of it puts them all down: so that none of them shall once be mentioned with it. Therefore well said the Angel, Evangelizo gaudium magnum.

Esay 45. 18.

And great, it may be intensivè, in the parties themselves: yet not great extensivè, nor extend it self so many, not be gaudium magnum Populo. Yes, even that way also it is great; it is publike joy, it is joy to the people. And, well fare that joy where it is merry withall. It is added purposely, this, that they might not mistake, when he said, Evangelizo vobis, he brought them good news; That though he brought it them; yet not them only, it was not appropriate to them, it was common to others: They had their parts in it, but so should others have no less than they. And every good Shepheard, will like it the better for that; will be pro grege, and still prefer the joy of the whole flock.

5. Joy to the people.

Esay 9. 3.

In other joys, it fals out as Esay tells, Multiply the Nation, and ye shall not encrease their joy; for, that which one winns, another loses: But, this joy, the joy of Puer natus est nobis, in it, they shall all rejoyce before Thee, as men make merry in harvest, and be joyful as men that divide the spoyle. In harvest; And a good Harvest all the Country is the better for. At a spoyle; wherein every one hath his share. That is gaudium populi, and such is this. Well figured, in the place of His birth, an Inne, which is domus populi, open to all Passengers that will take it up; juris publici, wherein every one hath right. Yea, and the most common part of the Inne. For, though they sort themselves, and have every one their several Chambers; in the stable all have interest; that is common. And as the Place publike, so is the benefit, and so is the joy publike of His Birth: Christmas joy right; All fare the better for this day. Salus populi is the best; and so is Gaudium populi too; and every good mind will like it so much the better, that All the people have their part in it.

Luke 2. 7.

6. Joy to all people

And this were much, toti populo, to the whole people, if it were but one: but it is omni populo (say Theophylact and Beda) that is to all people; which is a larger extent by far. And if ye speak of great joy that is great indeed, for it is universal, it is as great as the world is great: when, not the Jew only, but the the Gentile, not the Gentile, but the Jew, not one people, but all, kept a Feast, and at this word, omni populo, Nec vox hominem sonat. It is not man that speaketh now, whose good commonly, when it is at the greatest, extendeth no further but to one Nation: But with GOD it is never great, till it come to omnis populo. It is but a small thing (saith he by Esay) to raise the Tribes of Jacob, or to restore the decaies of Israel: I will give thee a light to the Gentiles, and a salvation to the end of the World. Esay 49.6.

As we said of the Inne, even now, the place of His Birth: So say we here, of the time of it, it is well set down by S. Luke, to have been at the Description of the whole World; for, that was a meet time for the SAVIOUR of the whole world to be born: The dew of whose birth is of the womb of the morning, (the Psalmist in passion of joy misplacing his words,) the meaning is, His birth from the womb, is as the morning dew, which watereth and refresheth the face of the whole earth: Not Gideon's fleece, alone, but the whole earth. Not one part, not the Jews only: No partition now, but (a) utraque unum, one of two: Nay, one of all: (b) all recapitulate in Himself, and from Him as a Center, lines of joy drawn to all, and every part of the Circle. Jud. 6.37. a Eph.2.14. b 1.10.

And we may not pass by Quod erit, which shall be; which not only is, but shall be. For by this word, we hold; it is our best tenure. Not only to All that then were; (then had we been out:) but that were, or ever should be, to the worlds end. Omni populo, all people is the latitude or extent: Quod erit, that shall be, in the longitude of continuance of the joy, Quod erit, that it shall be a Feast of joy, so long as any people shall be, to hold a feast on the face of the earth. In a word, That same Evangelium æternum, that S. John saw in the Angels hand, we now hear from the Angels mouth, to be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, that be, or shall be, while the world endureth. 7. To all people that shall be. Apoc. 14. 6.

So, if we read Quod erit, with omni populo. But some read gaudium, with quod erit: gaudium quod erit; and make a note of that: The joy, quod erit, that is, and shall be. For commonly, all our earthly joy is gaudium quod est, & non erit, that is, for the present, but continueth not; is, but shall not be: like the blaze of a brush faggot, all of a flame, and out again suddenly; in a moment. Gaudium quod erit, the joy that so is, as it shall be still; is grounded upon the joy of this day, CHRIST, and His Birth. Without which, our joy is as the joy of men in prison, merry for a while, but within a while, sentence of death to pass upon them. Without which, Extrema gaudii luctus occupat, the end of all our mirth, will be but mourning. All joy else is, but shall not be within a while: At leastwise erit, quando non erit, A time shall be when it shall not be. Sed gaudium Meum nemo tollet à vobis; But my joy, mine, grounded on Me, none shall ever take from you; not death it self. Other it shall, this it shall not; but now ye shall, this Day, and evermore ye shall rejoyce in the holy comfort of it. 2. Joy that shall be Eccle.7.8. Prov.14.13. John 16.22.

And this is the magnifying of the Message. 1. No evill news, Fear not. 2. Nay, good, Be of good cheer. 3. Good news of joy. 4. Of great joy. 5. Publike joy, toti populo. 6. Universal joy, omni populo. 7. Joy to all, that are or shall be; And again joy, which now is, and shall be so for ever.

Now, upon all these He setteth an Ecce, and well He may, And, that is never set by the Holy Ghost, but super res magnæ emitatis, upon matters of great moment. But upon this hill, upon the top of it, that hath so many ascents, a Beacon would do well. For look, how many Ecce's in the Scripture, so many Beacons; and between them, as between these, ye shall observe a good correspondence still. This Ecce here, to the last (a) Ecce concipies of the blessed Virgin; That, to Esay's, (b) Ecce concipiet Virgo; That, to Davids, (c) Ecce de fructu ventris tui; That, to Abrahams, (d) Ecce in semine tuo; and so up, till ye come to * Semen mulieris. There they first begin, and take light one from another, till they come to the Ecce natus est hodiè, the Ecce of all Ecce's, the last and highest of them all. And as a Beacon serveth to call and stir up men to have regard, so is this here to excite them (and in them, us all) with good attention to hear, and to heed these so great good tydings. And indeed, who is not excited with it? whose eye is not turned to behold this Ecce? whose ear standeth not attent, to hear this Evangelizo? whose heart doth not muse, what manner of message this should be? a Chap.1.31. b Esay 7.14. c Psal.132.11. d Gen.22.18. * 3.15. Chap.1.29.

This it is then, Quod natus est. The birth of a Child: that there is one born this day, the cause of all this joy.

There is a joy at every birth. Sorrow in the travel (saith our SAVIOUR;) but after the delivery, the anguish is no more remembred, for joy that a man is born into the world. 2. That there is born.

But the greater he is that is born, and the more beneficial his birth, the greater ado is made. And among men, because there are none greater than Princes, and great things are looked for at their hands, their Births are ever used to be kept with great triumph. Pharaohs, in the Old; Herods, in the New: both their Natus est's, daies of feasting. Gen.40.20. Mar.6.21.

Now of Him, that is born here, it may truly be said, Ecce major hic, Behold a greater is born here, One, whose Birth is good news, even from the poorest Shepheard, to the richest Prince upon the earth. Mat.12.34.

Who is it? Three things are said of this Child by the Angel. 1. He is a SAVIOUR. 2. Which is CHRIST. 3. CHRIST the LORD. Three of His Titles, well and orderly inferred one of another by good consequence. We cannot miss one of them; they be necessary all. Our method, on earth, is to begin with great: In Heaven, they begin with good first.

First then a SAVIOUR, that is his Name: JESUS, Soter; and in that name, His benefit, Salus, saving health, or Salvation. Such a name as the great Orator himself saith of it, Soter, hoc quantum est? Ita magnum est, ut latino uno verbo exprimi non possit. The name SAVIOUR is so great, as no one word can express the force of it. A SAVIOUR. In Verrem. IV.

But we are not so much to regard the Ecce, how great it is, as gaudium, what joy is in it; that is the point we are to speak to. And for that; men may take what they will, but, sure, there is no joy in the world, world, to the joy of a man saved: no joy so great, no news so welcome, as to one ready to perish, in case of a lost man to hear of one that will save him. In danger of perishing by sickness, to hear of one will make him well again. By sentence of the Law, of one with a pardon to save his life. By enemies, of one that will rescue and set him in safety. Tell any of these, assure them but of a Saviour, it is the best news he ever heard in his life. There is joy in the name of a Saviour. And even this way, this Child is a SAVIOUR too. Potest hoc facere, sed hoc non est opus ejus, This He can do, but this is not his work: a further matter there is, a greater Salvation He came for. And it may be, we need not any of these; we are not presently sick, in no fear of the Law, in no danger of enemies, and it may be if we were, we phansie to our selves to be relieved some other way. But that which he came for, that saving we need all; and none but He can help us to it. We have therefore (all) cause to be glad for the birth of this SAVIOUR.

I know not how, but when we hear of saving, or mention of a Saviour, presently our mind is carried to the saving of our skin, of our temporal state, of our bodily life, and further saving we think not of. But, there is another life, not to be forgotten; and, greater the danger; and the destruction there, more to be feared than of this here; and it would be well, sometimes we were remembred of it. Besides our skin and flesh, a soul we have, and it is our better part by far; that also hath need of a Saviour; that hath her destruction, out of which; that hath her destroyer, from which she would be saved; and those would be thought on. Indeed our chief thought and care would be for that; how to escape the wrath, how to be saved from the destruction to come, whither our sins will certainly bring us.

Sin it is, will destroy us all. And (to speak of a Saviour) there is no person on earth hath so much need of a Saviour as hath a sinner. Nothing so dangerous, so deadly unto us, as is the sin in our bosome, nothing from which we have so much need to be saved, whatsoever account we make of it. From it cometh upon us all the evill of this life: and from it all the evill of the life to come: in comparison whereof, these here are not worth the speaking of. Above all then we need a Saviour, for our soules, and from our sins; and from the everlasting destruction, which sin will bring upon us in the other life, not far from us, not from him of us, that thinketh it farthest off.

Then if it be good tydings to hear of a Saviour, where it is but a matter of the loss of earth, or of this life here: how then, when it cometh to the loss of Heaven; to the danger of Hell, when our soul is at the stake, and the well-doing or undoing of it for ever? He that could save our souls from that destroyer, were not the birth of such an one good news trow? Is not such a Saviour worth the hearkning after? Is he not? It is then because we have not that sense of our souls, and the dangers of them, that we have of our bodies: nor that fear of our ghostly enemies, nor that lively apprehension of the eternal torments of that place, and how near we are to it, (nothing being betwixt us and it, but this poor puffe of breath which is in our nosthrils:) Our carnal part is quick, and sensible: our spiritual is dead and dull.
Jer. 30. 24. We have not the feeling of our sins, that we have of our sickness: if we had, we would hear this news with greater chearfulness, and hold this Day of the Birth of such a Saviour, with joy indeed. We cannot conceive it yet, this destruction is not neer enough to affect us. But, in novissimo intelligetis plane, in the end, when the Destroyer shall come, and we shall find the want of a Saviour, we shall plainly understand this, and value this benefit and the joy of it, as we ought; and find, there is no joy in the earth to the joy of a Saviour.

2. Which is Christ. There is born a Saviour, is the first. The Angel addeth further, A Saviour which is Christ. For many Saviours had been born, many had God sent them, that diverse times had set them free from divers dangers of their enemies; Moses, from the Egyptians; Joshua, from the Canaanites; Gideon, from the Madianites; Jeptha, from the Ammonites; Sampson, from the Philistims. And indeed, the whole story of the Bible is nothing else, but a Calender of Saviours; that God from time to time still stirred them up.

But these all were but petty Saviours; there was one yet behind, that was worth them all. One, that
Mat. 1. 21. should save His people from their sins; save, not their bodies for a time, but their souls for ever, which none
John 4. 25. of those Saviours could do. One therefore much spoken of, wished for, and waited for, a SAVIOUR which was CHRIST: when He came they looked for great matters, as said the woman at the Wells-side: for He was the most famous and greatest Saviour of all. And this is He, A Saviour which is Christ. He, of whom all the Promises made mention, and He the performance of them all: of whom all the Types under the Law were shadows, and He the substance of them all: Of whom all the Prophesies ran, and He the fulfilling of them all: He, of whom all those inferiour Saviours were the figures and fore-runners, and He the accomplishment of them all, that in them was wanting. This is He: Jacobs (a) Shilo, Esay's (b) Immanuel, Jeremies (c) Branch, Daniels (d) Messias, Zacharies (e) Oriens ab alto, Aggies (f) Desideratus cunctis Gentibus. The desire of all the Nations, then; and now the joy of all Nations, A Saviour which is CHRIST.

* John 6. 27.

And what is meant by this term CHRIST? A Saviour Anointed, or, (as in another place it is said, more agreeable to our phrase of speaking) a * Saviour sealed, a Saviour under Gods Great Seal. That is, not as those other were, Saviours raised up of a sudden, upon some occasion; to serve the turn for the present, and never heard of till they came? but a Saviour in GODS fore-counsel resolved on, and given forth, from the beginning; promised and foretold, and now signed and sent, with absolute commission and fulness of power, to be the perfect and compleat SAVIOUR of all.

And to be it, ex officio; His Office, His very profession; to be one, that all may have right to repair unto Him, and find it at His hands. Not a Saviour incidently, as it fell out: but one, ex professo, anointed to that end, and by vertue of His Anointing appointed, set forth and sent into the world, to exercise this function of a Saviour: Not for a time, but for ever, not to the Iews (as did the rest) but even to all the ends of the earth. So runs His Bill, (a) Venite ad me omnes, Come all: and (b) Qui ad me venerit non ejiciam foras, of them that come to me, I will cast none out. (c) Servator omnium hominum, the Saviour of all men (and as the Samaritans said of Him, (d) Servator mundi, The Saviour of the world,) of Samaritans, Jews, Gentiles: of Kings, of Shepheards and all.

a Mat. 11.28. b John 6.37. c 1 Tim. 4.10. d John 4.42.

And yet there is more particularity in this word CHRIST: Three Offices did GOD from the beginning erect to save His people by, and that by three acts, (The very Heathen took notice of them,) ' Purgare, ' Illuminare, ' Perficere. ' Priests, to purge or expiate: ' Prophets, to illuminate or direct them; ' Kings, to set all right, and keep all right, in that perfection, which this world admitteth. And all these three had their several Anointings. Aaron the Priest, Lev. 8.12. Elisha the Prophet, 1 Reg. 19.16. Saul the King, 1 Sam. 10.1. In the Saviour which is Christ, his will was, all should meet, that nothing in him might want to the perfecting of this work, that he might be a perfect Saviour of all, He was all. A Priest after the order of Melchizedek, Psal. 110.4. A Prophet to be heard when Moses should hold his peace, Deut. 18.18. A King to save His people, whose name should be JEHOVAH Justitia nostra, Ier. 23.6. Davids Priest, Moses Prophet, Ieremies King.

And these formerly had met double, two of them in some other; Melchisedek, King and Priest; Samuel, Priest and Prophet; David, Prophet and King. Never all three, but in Him alone; and so, no perfect Christ but He: but He all, and so perfect. By His Priesthood, to purge, expiate, and save us from our sins, being a propitiation to God for them: By His Prophesie, to illuminate, and save us from the by-paths of errour, guiding our feet in the way of peace. By His Kingdom, protecting and conducting us thorow the miseries of this life, till He perfect us eternally by Himself in the joyes of His heavenly Kingdom. Rightly then, a Saviour which is Christ.

Now, as in the Name Saviour there was, so is there likewise joy in this Name Christ; and that, many waies: 1. First, that we shall hang no more in expectation, We shall be no longer Vinctis spei, Hopes prisoners. He that should come, is come. The promised Saviour, The Saviour which is Christ, is now born, and when spes becomes res, then our joy is full. 2. That now, there is a saving Office erected; one Anointed to that end, a professed Saviour, to whom all may resort. We shall not be to seek; there is a Name given under Heaven, whereby we may be sure of salvation, the Name of Christ. 3. That to this our saving we have the joynt consent and good will of all parties; in this name Christ. Christ (that is Anointed,) what person is He? The Son, the second Person. Anointed, by whom? By the Father: Quem unxisti, (Act. 4.27.) the first Person. Anointed, with what? With the Holy Ghost; Acts 10.38. the third Person. So a concurrence of all Persons in this Name; all willing and well-pleased, with the work of our salvation. 4. If we would be saved, we would be saved unctione, by Oile, not by Vineger. Et unguentum effusum, Nomen, Ejus: And His Name is Christ, one that saveth by anointing. 5. And if by Oyle, (there be not Oyles) with a gentle Lenitive Oyle. And the Oyle which He useth, wherewith He is anointed, is the Oyle of gladness. Gladness therefore must needs go with this Name. Which Oyle of gladness is not for Himself, but for us: not for His use, but for ours. So He saith Himself in His first Sermon at Nazareth, upon His text out of Esay 61.2. The anointing (this oyle of gladness) was upon Him to bestow it upon us, and of us: Upon them especially, that through a wounded conscience, were troubled with the spirit of heaviness, to turn their heaviness into joy. Glad then; that He is come, that by His Office is to save: and come with the good liking of all: to save us by Oyle, and that the Oyle of gladness.

Cant. 1.2.

And yet to make our joy more full, the Angel addeth the third, A Saviour which is Christ; Christ the Lord. For neither is this all. He is not Christ only. We must not stay there. For the name Christ will agree, hath been, and may be imparted to others besides. Many a King in Scripture, hath had the honour to carry the Name of Christ; But with a difference. The King, Christus Domini, the Lords Christ; He Christus Dominus, the Lord Christ, or Christ the Lord. Consider then how great this Child is, whose anointed, Kings themselves are. For if they be Christi Domini, the Lords Anointed; His they are, for He is the Lord. The Lord absolute without any addition; ye may put it to what ye will, Lord of men and Angels, Lord of Heaven and Earth, and all the Host of them, Dominus Christorum, and Dominus Dominorum, LORD paramount over all.

3. Christ the Lord.

Heb. 7.4.

But why the Lord? Because this Name of Christ will sort with men. Nay, as He is Christ (that is Anointed) He is Man only. It is His name as Man, for God cannot be anointed. But He that should save us would be more than Man, and so more than Christ. Indeed, Christ cannot save us: He that must save us must be the Lord. For, such a Saviour it behooveth us to have, as might not begin the work of our Salvation, and leave it in the midst, but go through with it, and make an end too; which the former Saviours could not do. Formerly, ever their complaint was, that their Saviours, their Christs died still, and left them to seek: their Kings and Priests and Prophets dropt away still; for they were not suffered to endure by reason of death. But this Saviour, this Christ, because He is the Lord, endureth for ever, hath an everlasting Priesthood, Kingdom and Prophesie, and so is able perfectly to save them, that come to God by Him. This is one reason, why, hither we must come at the last to Christ the Lord, and till we be at it, we be, not where we should. Else, our Saviours will die, and leave us destitute.

Heb. 7.28. Heb. 7.23, 24.

But the main reason is set down by Esay, Ego sum, Ego sum, (saith God Himself) & praeter me, non est servator: It is I, I that am the Saviour, I am, and besides Me there is no Saviour. None indeed, no true Saviour, but the Lord. All other are short, Vana salus hominis, saith the Psalm, Mans salvation is vain, any salvation is vain, if it be not the Lords. 1. Those Christs, that were not the Lord, could not save but the body, and not one of them quicken his own soul: Christ, that is the Lord, can save souls and bodies, His own and others both. 2. Those Christs, that were not the Lord, could save but from carnal enemies, with arms of flesh: He from our ghostly enemies, even spiritual wickednesses in heavenly places, from Abaddon the great destroyer destroyer of the bottomless pit. 3. They, that were not the Lord, could save but from worldly calamities; could but prune and take off the twigs, (as it were:) He, from sin it self, and so plucked it up by the roots.

Heb. 5. 9. 4. They, that were not the Lord, put it off but for a time, & after it came again, temporal only. He for ever, once for all: and is become Author of eternal salvation, to all that depend on Him. And mark that word

Verse 20. John 1. [eternal:] For none but the Lord can work eternal salvation. 5. They all had need of a Saviour themselvs, and of this Saviour: He needs none, receives of none, imparts to all; as being not a Saviour only, but Salus ipsa in abstracto, Salvation it self, (as Simion calleth Him) of whose fulness we all receive. To save, may agree to man: To be salvation, can agree to none but to Christ the Lord. To begin and to end; to save soule and body, from the bodily and ghostly enemies; from sin the root, and misery the branches; for a time, and for ever; to be a Saviour, and to be Salvation it self, Christ the Lord is all this, and can do all this. Now then we are right, and never till now. A Saviour which is Christ the Lord.

But the name [Lord] goeth yet further: not only to save us, and set us free from danger, to deliver us from evill; but to state us in as good and better condition, than we forfeited by our fall; or else though we were saved, we should not save by the match. To make us then savers, and not savers only, but gainers, and that great gainers by our salvation, He doth further impart also the estate annexed of this last title, even whatsoever He is Lord of Himself. And He is Lord of life, (saith S. Peter, Acts 3. 15.) Life then He imparts. And He is Lord of glory, (saith S. Paul, 1 Cor. 2. 8.) Glory then He imparts, And He is Lord of joy, (Intra in gaudium Domini, Enter into the joy of the Lord, Mat. 25. 21.) Joy then He imparts. Life, and Glory, and Joy, and makes us Lords of them, and of whatsoever is within the Name, and title of Lord. For having thereto a double right, 'by Inheritance, as the Son, (Heb. 12.) 'And by Purchase, as a Redeemer (for, therefore He died, and rose again, that He might be Lord of all, Rom. 14. 9.) contenting himself with the former; He is well pleased to set over the latter to us, and admit us with Himself into His estate of joynt purchase of Heaven, or whatsoever he is owner of; that, in right of it, we may enter into the Life, Glory, and Joy of our Lord, and so be saved, and be savers, and more than savers every way. This also, is in the word Lord: this benefit further we have by it.

And now if we will put together, Natus and Servator, Servator and Christus, Christus and Dominus, Dominus and Natus: Born and Saviour, Saviour and Christ, Christ and the Lord, the Lord and Born: take them which way you will in combination, any of the four, then have we his two Natures in one person. In Servator, his Godhead, None but God is a Saviour. In Christus, his Manhood: God cannot be Anointed, Man may. In Dominus, his Divine again, the Lord from heaven. In Natus, his humane Nature, direct-

Mat. 1. 1. Mar. 1. 1. ly, born of a woman: Both (ever) carefully joyned and to be joyned together. When S. Matthew had begun his Gospel thus: The Book of the generation of Iesus Christ the Son of David, one Nature, his humanity; S. Mark was careful to begin his thus; The beginning of the Gospel of Iesus Christ the Son of God, the John 1. 14. other Nature his Divinity. But S. Iohn, he joynes them, Verbum caro factum est, the Word became flesh. Verbum, the Word, there is Dominus; and Caro the flesh, that is, Natus.

And even this very conjunction is a new Joy. For, that such an one, that the Lord would condescend to be born, besides the benefit there is also matter of Honour. Even that he, so great a Person, would become such as we are, would so esteem our Nature, as to take it upon him; This certainly it is a great dignity and exaltation of our nature; And it is a matter of new joy: That he would so highly value it, as to assume, associate, and unite it into one Person, with the Son of God. By this we see, why a Saviour, why Christ: why the Lord. A Saviour, his name of benefit, whereby he is to deliver us. Christ, his name of Office, whereby he is bound to undertake it. The Lord, his name of Power whereby he is able to effect it. We see also why Man, and why God: First, So it should be; for of right none was to make satisfaction for man, but man, And in very deed, none was able to give satisfaction to God, but God. So that being to satisfie God for Man, He was to be God and Man. Secondly, So we would wish it our selves: If we would be saved, we would be saved by one of our nature; not by any stranger. He is born, and so one of our own nature. Again, if we would be saved, we would be saved by no inferiour, but by the best: he is the Lord, and so the very best of all, And so, our desire is satisfied every way.

This blessed Birth of this Saviour, which is Christ the Lord, thus furnished in every point, to save us throughly, body and soul, from sin, the destruction, and Satan the destroyer of both, and that both here, and for ever; this blessed, and thrice blessed Birth is the substance of this Daies solemnity, of the Angels Message, and of our joy.

The Circumstance of the persons to whom.

And now to the Circumstances: and first of the Persons, vobis, I bring, you good tydings: That to you is born, &c.

We find not any word through all, but there is joy in it: and yet all is suspended, till we come to this one word [vobis:] this makes us all. This word therefore we shall do well ever to look for, and when we find it, to make much of it. Nothing passeth without it; it is the word of application. But for it, all the Mat. 8. 29. rest are loose; this girds it on, this fattens it to us, and makes it ours. But for it, we are but in their case, Quid nobis & tibi, what have we to do with thee? This Saviour Christ the Lord, in this good time and fit place, quid ad nos? what are we the better? Omni populo, is somewhat too general, and the hundreth part of them shall not be benefited by him. We would hear it in more particularity. Why, vobis, for you it is, Born for you; Yea, now ye say somewhat.

Evangelizo vobis and Natus vobis. And twice it is repeated for failing, in every verse once. Evangelizo vobis, and natus vobis, that ye may know the Message is yours, and the birth is yours; therefore the message is sent to you, because the birth concerneth you. But yours they be, both.

The use we have of it. May we then be bold to change the person, and utter it in the first, which he doth in the second, and say say Nobis? We may sure, Puer natus est nobis; * Esay hath said it before us. And thereby, lyeth a mystery: the Angels they say, Vobis; The Prophets were men: men say, Nobis. Bid the Angel say, Nobis, he cannot, neither sing nor say it; Angelis he cannot, to Angels, Nusquam Angelos: but Hominibus unto men, he can and doth. And this is a special high prerogative; that which the Angels can neither sing nor say, we can do both. * Esay 9.6. Heb 2.16. Verse 14.

If then He be born to us, it is to some end. Esay tells us, what it is, when he expoundeth Natus, by Datus, born to us, by given us. Born, to be bestowed upon us. And if given us, bestowed upon us, then He is ours. Ours His benefit, His Office, His Power: His benefit, to save us; His Office, to undertake us, His power, to assure us. Ours His salvation, as Jesus; His anointing, as Christ; His Dominion, as the Lord. And if He be ours, then all His are ours: Omnia Ejus nostra sunt: His Birth ours, and if His Birth, all that follow His Birth, ours too. Luk. 15.31.

Now then, seeing He and they be ours, will it not be well done, to make our entry, to take seisin of Him and them, and dispose them to our best benefit? And how can we do that better, Than as God hath offered Him to us this day, that He was born for us: so we reciprocally this day, that He is born, offer Him again to God, as the best pleasing Oblation that we can offer Him. To day, as in the Temple alive, for our morning Oblation: And when the time cometh of His death, offer him as on the Cross, slain for our evening Sacrifice. So shall we, as Bernard wisheth us, uti nostro, in utilitatem nostram, & de Salvatore salutem operari, Imploy or make use of Him for our best behoof: draw His proper extract from him, and work salvation out of this our Saviour.

Now, a word only, what is to be done on our parts, and that respectively to these two points, what we are to return to them; what to this Message, and what to this Birth. Our duty reciprocal.

To the Message, Evangelizo vobis, this we are to return, this is due to a message, to hear it. And that we do, and that is all: we come to the Sermon, we hear it, and little we do besides. But we hear it but heavily, with a faint affection (God knoweth:) we hear it not as an Ecce, as matter of high admiration: we hear it not as Gaudium magnum, with that alacrity and cheerfulness we should. We hear it not as nobis, as if it nearly touched us, but as a matter that little concerned us, it skilled not much whether we heard it or no. Many meaner things affect us more, but this should be the joyfullest hearing that we ever heard. 1 To hear the Message.

And shall we not likewise perform some duty to Natus est? yes, even to that also. And not hear of Him, and let Him alone: hear his tydings, and let Himself go. 2 To receive him.

He was born for us, and given us, Natus nobis, and, Donatus nobis (both go together in the Prophet.) To a gift the duty that belongeth properly, is to receive it. If He be Natus nobis, and Donatus nobis, I trust we will take order, He be Acceptus à nobis. If born for us, and given Us, it is our part then, we can do no less than receive him. We evacuate the gift, disgrace both the Giver and it, if we vouchsafe not to accept of it.

How is that? how shall we receive Him? who shall give him us? That shall one, that will say unto us within a while, Accipe, Take, This is my body, by the offering whereof ye are sanctified. Take, this is my Blood, by the shedding wherof ye are saved. Both, in the holy Mysteries ordained by God, as pledges to assure us, and as Conduit-pipes to conveigh into us, this; and all other the benefits, that come by this our Saviour. Heb. 10.10.

Verily, upon His memorable daies, (of which this is the first) we are bound to do something in memory, or remembrance of Him; What is that? Will ye know what it is? Hoc facite, Do this in remembrance of me.

Something would be thought on, to return Him for all His benefits, and this day for this first, the fountain of all the rest; His Birth. Some thanks would be rendred him for it. And how can we do that better, than as we are taught by him, that studied the point of Quid retribuam, and resolved it thus, no way so well, as by Accipiam Calicem: I will take the cup of salvation. And so do it: So, with it taken into our hands, give thanks to the name of the Lord. And when better, than to day; Hodiè, as we are here directed. What better day than on this day? the very day He was bestowed on us. To defer Him no longer, than He did us. He deferred not us at all, but as soon as He was born, sent us word the same instant: and shall we defer Him to hear of us another time; and not be as ready on our part to receive him instantly, as he was on his, to bestow Himself, even presently, as soon as He was born? Sure, somewhat would be done more than ordinary, this day of His Birth; the day it self is more than ordinary. Psal. 116.12.

And let this move us. If ever there be a day of salvation, Ecce hic est dies salutis, Behold this is it, when a Saviour is born unto us. If ever an accepted time, Ecce tempus acceptum, Behold, now it is, this is that time. The Birth-day hath ever been a time accepted. Then, one King forgave the trespass of his Servant, and received him to Grace. Another, being pleased, was ready in his bounty to have given away the one half of his kingdom. Our Saviour Christ, Our Lord, on His Birth-day, will be no worse than they. His bounty, then, less than theirs. Gen. 40.21. Mar. 6.23.

Let us then [illegible] this so accepted a time in it self, twice acceptable, by our accepting: which, he will acceptably take at our hands. Let us honour this day, with our receiving: which he hath honoured by his first giving: Yielding him evermore, (but this day, the day of it, chiefly,) our unfained hearty thanksgiving for this so good news; for this so great a Gift; both of them this day vouchsafed us: in Him and for Him, who was himself the gift, our Saviour, Christ, the Lord. To whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost, three Persons One Immortal, Everliving, Invisible, only Wise God; be all honour, glory, blessing, praise, and thanksgiving, this day and for ever.

A SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Majesty

At WHITE-HALL, on Wednesday the XXV. of Decem. Anno Domini, MDCXI. being CHRISTMAS Day.

JOHN Chap. I. Ver. XIV.

And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we saw the Glory thereof, as the Glory of the Only begotten SON of the FATHER*) full of Grace and Truth.*

Ezek.10.14. Apoc.4.6,7.

Here is, in the Old Testament (in the tenth of Ezekiel) and in the New (in the 4. of the Revelation,) a Vision of four sundry shapes, A Man, a Lion, an Oxe, and an Eagle. It hath been usually received, to apply these four to the four Evangelists, and of them, the Eagle, to S. John. The nature of the Eagle is, by GOD himself, described (Job 39.) by two properties; [1] Elevare ad ardua, no fowl under heaven towreth so high: [2] and ubicunque fuerit cadaver, statim adest; None so soon or so suddenly down upon the body, as he. Both these do lively express themselves in S. John: and no where more lively than in this Gospel. Wherein, as an Eagle in the Clouds, he first mounteth wonderfully high, beyond Moses and his In principio, with an higher In principio than it; beyond Genesis and the Worlds Creation: That the Word was then with GOD, and was GOD. This may well be termed the Eagles flight; so exceeding high, as the cleerest eye hath much ado, to follow him. Yet so far as they can follow him, the very Philosophers have been driven to admire the penning of this Gospel. But after this, as an Eagle again, (Ubi corpus, ibi Aquila,) down he cometh directly from the height of heaven, and lights upon the body of his flesh, the mystery of his Incarnation: and tells us, that he that in the beginning, was apud Deum, and Deus, He, in the fulness of time, was apud homines, and Homo. He dwelt not long aloft; he knew, it was not to purpose: Verbum Deus is far above our reach. Verbum caro, that concerns us. No time, but it concerns us: but, this time, above others. This Feast is held, this Assembly met, for no other end, but to celebrate the contents of the Text, that the Word, being made flesh, this day, came to dwel among us.

Job 39.30,33. Mat.24.28. Gen.1.1. Verse 1. Luke 17.37.

The Division

I. 1.2.3.

II. 1 Joh.1.2.

Two parts there be in the Text, sensibly parted by a Parenthesis. [1] That without the Parenthesis, is, that he would have us believe, Verbum caro, &c. [2] That, within, is the Affidavit, Vidimus, &c. In the former, three things are affirmed of the Word. [1] Factum è nobis; [2] habitavit in nobis; [3] plenum pro nobis: [1] That the Word was made flesh of us; [2] dwelt with us; [3] was full for us.

Then followeth the Affidavit of these. That S. John (and other more, besides,) saw; and so spake no more than they knew; nor testifie no more, than they had seen. The best Proof that can be. They saw (though, not the Word himself, yet) His glory: We saw His glory. And that glory such, as would suit with none but him; and so, every way sufficient, to demonstrate him, the only Son of GOD.

And

And, after all this, one more there is, without which, his Making, Dwelling, and Seeing were to little purpose: That is, that as he came not obscurely, but was seen; so he came not empty, but full of grace and truth. This fulness was not for himself, but for us: Et de plenitudine Ejus omnes accepimus. Verse 16.

There is not any thing, that concerneth this Mystery, but is within this Text. His two Natures, The Word, and Flesh: [1] Word, Divine; [2] Flesh, Humane. The Union of them in factum est; union into a Person, in Habitavit: Habitare, est Personæ. [3] Then, his Office also, Ἐσκήνωσεν, which is not only habitavit, but castrametavit in nobis: not only, took a house, but pitched a pavilion in us; Not only, factus Incola, made our Neighbour; but, made a Champion, for us, to undertake our quarrel, and to fight a combate. [4] And last, the Benefit: Made, that he might Dwell; and Dwell, that he might impart to us, (and we derive from him) that, whereof he was full, and we were empty; we had need, and he had store; grace and truth.

All reducible to these three: [1] Quod Verbum, caro: [2] Quid Verbum, Carni: [3] Quid Caro, Verbo. I. II. III.
[1] That the Word became flesh; the Mystery: [2] What the Word did for flesh; the Benefit: [3] And, what flesh is to do to the Word again; the duty.

We are in a deep point, and a dangerous. It will not be amiss to pause a little on the three termes, Verbum Caro, and factum est. The Word. [1] There be, that take this name to be given him, as who should say: He, of whom so many excellent words are spoken, all along this Book; so many words of promise, and prophesie, and all of Him: So, the word Objectivè. [2] Others: for that he discloseth to us all GODS counsel, even as the word openeth the mind of man; by whom as his Word we know whatsoever we know of the Fathers mind, So the word Effectivè. [3] A third; for that he cometh, not only as JESUS, to save us; but, as the Word, to teach us: We, as to honour him; so learn his Word, as the way to our Salvation. So, the word, Præceptivè. I. Quod Verbum caro. Verbum, The Word. 1. 2. 3.

4. These are all well, and true all: but, all short. We may have use of them; but there is a farther matter than all these. This Word (as we find, in the Affidavit) is the only begotten of the Father. These two are one, and the same; but need to be set in two termes, that what is wanting in the one, may be supplied by the other: (So high is the Divine Nature above our reach, as no one terme is able to expres it: It is well, if divers will do it.) In this they agree: as the Son is, to the Father; so is the Word to the Mind. The Son, Proles Parentis; the Word, Proles mentis: They proceed, both: the Son, from the Father; the Word, from the mind: and so note out unto us, a Party proceeding, a second Person, from the first: from him that begetteth, the Son; from him that speaketh, the Word; Against Sabellius. 4. The Word, and the only begotten of the Father. To shew his proceeding.

The Son referreth to a living nature: The Word addeth farther an intellectual nature: Generare est viventium, Loqui intelligentium: That, there is in him, not only the Nature, and Life, but the Wisdom of the Father.

Both Proceed. The Word sheweth the Manner; the Son, the truth of his proceeding. With us the Son is not begot, but by flesh, by propagation: The Word therefore requisite, to shew, his proceeding was after no carnal manner; but, as the word from the mind. A better terme could not be devised. For, there is not in all the World, a more pure, simple, inconcrete procreation, than that, whereby the mind conceiveth the word within it, by dixit in corde. For, in it self, and of it self doth the mind produce it, without help of any mixture of ought, without any passion stirring or agitation at all. Such was the issue of the word eternal. But then, lest we might imagine Gods Word to be, to him, no other than ours is to us, not of our substance; He makes amends for that, and tells us, He is the only begotten, and so of the substance of his Father, (very God, of very God,) as all begotten sons be. The Word, to shew his proceeding pure, and meerly spiritual: the Son, to shew, that for all that, it is true and substantial. Truly consubstantial with the Father, as the Son; but in all clean and pure manner conceived, as the word.

The Son, though he be consubstantial; yet the person of his Father may have a being long before him. The Word makes amends for that. For, the minds conceiving, and the mind cannot be severed a moment; if one be eternal, both are. So then, as the Son, he is consubstantial: as the Word, he is coeternal.

But he begins with the Word. His care being, first to tell us of the pureness of his generation, before of his generation it self: but after, by little and little, unfoldeth himself, and tells, he is so the Word, as the Son also. Indeed, it was best beginning with the Word. That terme the Heathen Wise-men, the Philosophers would never stumble at, but brook it well enough: As (indeed) they did, not with approbation only, (but with high admiration) read and magnifie the beginning of this Gospel. Witness Tert. in Apol. Eus. in præpar. August de Civit. 10. and Theodoret. It was conform to their reason: Quod Deus ab æterno intelligit, and that Νοῦς and Λόγος, the conceiving of the mind, and the mind must needs be coeternal: the mind never without it: as the Prophet saith, Egressus ejus à diebus æternitatis. This for the Word, of much more that might be said of it. Mica 5. 2.

[1] As the Word, and the Only begotten refer to one: so doth Caro, and in nobis, Flesh, and in us; that is, such flesh as is in us, Humane flesh. 1. To expres the Union fully, a better word could not be chosen. It is a part, for the whole; and the worser part, for the whole, of purpose. For, in this case, our nature is best set out, by the worser part. For, this we know; if the worse be taken, the better will not be left behind. If he abhor not the flesh, of the Spirit there will be no question. More forcible it is, to say, He was made flesh, than he was made man, though both be true. He vouchsafed to become man, Became flesh, 1. Caro. 1.

nothing ſo much, as to become fleſh, the very loweſt and baſeſt part of man.

2. Beſides, from the Fleſh (as from Eve) came the beginning of tranſgreſſion, longing after the forbidden fruit, refuſed the Word quite; ſo of all other, leaſt likely to be taken. The Word not refuſing it, the reſt have good hope.

3. But, there is a kind of neceſſity, to uſe the terme fleſh. If he had ſaid Man, man may be taken for a Perſon. He took no Perſon, but our Nature He took: Fleſh, is no Perſon, but Nature only; and ſo beſt expreſſeth it. And if ſoul, it might have been taken, as if he took not the fleſh, but mediante animâ; but, ſo he did not, but as immediately, and as ſoon, the fleſh, as the ſoul: in one inſtant both.

4. Yet one more. It will not be amiſs to tell you; The word, that is Hebrew for fleſh, the ſame is alſo Hebrew for good tydings, (as we call it, the Goſpel:) Sure, not without the Holy Ghoſt ſo diſpenſing it. There could be no other meaning; but that, ſome Incarnation, or Making fleſh, ſhould be generally good news for the whole World. To let us know, this good tidings is come to paſs, he tells us, the Word is now become fleſh.

בשר בשר in Piel

2 Verbum Caro. The Word became Fleſh.

Thus, why fleſh: now, why the Word, fleſh. Caro Verbum was our bane; fleſh would be the Word; nay, wiſer than the Word, and know what was evill, better than it. If Caro Verbum, our bane; then, Verbum Caro, our remedy.

2. Surely, if the Word would become fleſh, it were (ſo) moſt kindly. The Word, was pars læſa, the party that was moſt offended. If he would undertake it; if he, againſt whom the offence was, would be Author of the reconciliation, there were none to that: it were (ſo) moſt proper.

3. Verſe 3. Col. 1. 16, 17. But, in another reſpect, he were fit too. He had ſaid above: All things were made by him: a kind of meetneſs there were, ut per quem facta omnia, per eundem reſtituta, he that firſt made them, ſhould reſtore them; he that built, repair; So is beſt, ever.

4. John 3, 15. And indeed, Sic oportet implere omnem juſtitiam, that were the way to fulfill all juſtice; if the Word would take fleſh, he might make full amends for the fleſhes fault, in rejecting the Word. So is juſtice; that fleſh for fleſh; and, not the fleſh of oxen and ſheep; but even that fleſh, that ſinneth, (our fleſh) ſhould ſuffer for it, and ſo ſuffering make ſatisfaction to Juſtice.

3. 1 Factum eſt caro. Was made. Luke 3. 6. Why then, factum eſt caro, the Word is made fleſh: This makes up all. For, factum eſt, ergo, eſt, he is made fleſh, therefore, is fleſh: Fieri terminatur ad eſſe, the end of making is being. And per modum naturæ: (ſo is ἐγένετο, the Greek word:) this being is natural, Et nativitas eſt via ad naturam, and nativity is the way to nature. So, to be born: as, this day, he was: Venit per carnem, ſanat per verbum, that all fleſh may ſee the Salvation of GOD. Made it was; againſt Manichæus, holding that he had no true body: as if factum had been fictum, or making were mocking. Made it was: but, how made? Not Convertendo, the Word converted into fleſh, (as Cerinthus;) or fleſh converted into the Word, Verbum caro facta eſt (as Valentinus:) for, the Deity cannot be changed into any thing; nor any thing, into it. Nor made conciliando, (as friends are made,) ſo as, they continue two ſeveral perſons ſtill: and while the fleſh ſuffered, the Word ſtood by and looked on, (as Neſtorius.) That is cum carne, not caro, made with fleſh, not fleſh: And, never was one perſon ſaid to be made another. Nor made, by compounding; and ſo, a third thing produced of both (as Eutiches:) For ſo, he ſhould be neither of both, Word nor fleſh, neither GOD, nor man.

Heb. 2. 16. But, made he was; St. Paul tells us, how: aſſumendo, by taking the ſeed of Abraham (Heb. 11.) his generation eternal, (as Verbum Deus) is, as the enditing the Word, within the heart. His generation in time (verbum caro) is, as the uttering it forth with the voice. The inward motion of the mind taketh unto it a natural body of ayre, and ſo becometh vocall; it is not changed into it, the Word remaineth ſtill, as it was; yet they two become one voice. Take a ſimilitude from our ſelves. Our ſoul is not turned into, nor compounded with the body: yet, they two, though diſtinct in natures, grow into one man: So, into the Godhead, was the man-hood taken; the Natures preſerved, without confuſion; the Perſon entire, without diviſion. Take the definition of the fourth General Council: Sic factum eſt caro, ut maneret verbum: non immutando, quod erat, ſed ſuſcipiendo, quod non erat: noſtra auxit; ſua non minuit; nec Sacramentum pietatis, Detrimentum Deitatis: he was ſo made fleſh, that he ceaſed not to be the Word; never changing that he was, but taking that he was not: We were the better, he was never the worſe; the Myſtery of Godlineſs was no detriment to the Godhead, nor the honour of the Creature wrong to the CREATOR.

And now, being paſt theſe points of belief, I come to that, which I had much rather ſtand on, (and ſo it is beſt for us;) that which may ſtir up our love to him, that thus became fleſh for us.

1. Firſt, comparing Factum with Dictum. For, if we were ſo much beholden for verbum dictum, the word ſpoken, the Promiſe; how much more for verbum factum, the Performance? If, for factum carni, the Word that came to fleſh; how then for factum caro, became fleſh?

2. Verſe 3. Then, taking factum abſolutely. The Word, by whom all things were made, to come to be made it ſelf. It is more for him, fieri, to be made any thing, than facere, to make another World, yea, many Worlds more. There is more a great deal, in this factum eſt, than in omnia per Ipſum facta ſunt: in He made, than in All things by Him were made.

3. John 4. 24. Pſal 8. 4. Heb. 2. 7. Factum eſt, with What he was made. For, if made; made the moſt compleat thing of all, that ever he had made: Made a Spirit, for God is a Spirit; ſome degree of nearneſs between them: But what is man, that he ſhould be made Him, or the Son of man, that he ſhould take his Nature upon him!

If man, yet the more noble part, the immortal part, the ſoul: What elſe? There are ſome points of His Image in that: it underſtandeth, it loveth, hath a kind of capacity of the Word. So hath not the fleſh: it is res bruta, common to them with us; neither able to underſtand, or love, or in any degree capable ble of it. Make it the Soule, the precious soul (so calleth it Solomon;) not the body, the vile body (so the Apostle calleth it.) Of the Word he said ever, vidimus gloriam Ejus, we saw the glory of it: of the flesh we may say, vidimus sordes ejus, we daily see that comes from it, as non est vilius sterquilinium, on the dung-hill, worse is not to be seen. Set not so precious a stone in so base metal. Prov. 6. 26. Phil. 3. 21.

But this is not all. If he must be made, for love of GOD, make him something wherein is some good: For, in our flesh (St. Paul saith) there dwelleth no good: Yea, the very wisdom of the flesh at flat defiance with the Word. Make it somewhat else. For there is not only a huge distance, but main repugnancy between them. Yet, for all this, non potest solvi Scriptura: the Word was made flesh. 5. Rom. 7. 18. Rom. 8. 7. John 10. 35.

I add yet further: what flesh? The flesh of an Infant. What, Verbum infans, the Word an Infant? The Word, and not be able to speak a word? How evill agreeth this? This he put up. How born, how entertained? In a stately Palace, Cradle of Ivory, Robes of estate? No: but a Stable for his Palace; a manger for his Cradle; poor clouts for his array. This was his beginning. Follow him farther, if any better afterwards, what flesh afterward? Sudans & algens, in cold and heat; hungry and thirsty; faint and weary. Is his end any better, (that maketh up all:) what flesh then? Cujus livore sanati; black and blew; bloody and swoln; rent and torn; the thorns, and nayles sticking in his flesh: And such flesh he was made. A great factum certainly, and much to be made of. To have been made caput Angelorum, had been an abasement: To be (a) minoratus Angelis, is more: But, to be (b) novissimus Virorum, in worst case of all men, nay, (c) a worme and no man: So to be born, so arrayed, and so housed, and so handled; there is not the meanest flesh but is better. So to be made, and so unmade; to take it on, and lay it off, with so great indignity; weigh it, and wonder at it, that ever he would endure to be made flesh, and to be made it on this manner. What was it made the Word thus to be made flesh? Non est lex hominis ista, flesh would never have been brought to it. It was GOD, and in GOD, nothing but Love: Dilexit, with Sic, Charitas, with an Ecce: Fecit amor, ut Verbum caro fieret: Zelus Domini exercituum fecit hoc. Love only did it. Quid fit, possit, debeat, non recipit jus amoris: That only cares not for any exinanivit, any humiliavit se, any emptying, humbling, loss of reputation: Love respects it not, cares not, what flesh he be made, so the flesh be made by it. a Heb. 2. 7. b Esay 53. 3. c Psal. 22. 6. Joh. 3. 16. 1 John 3. 1. 2 Reg. 19. 31.

And dwelt. Factum est is the Word of Nature; Habitavit, of Person: Habitare est Personæ. And, two there are not. It is not Habitaverunt: therefore, but one Person. 2. Habitavit, and dwelt.

And, habitavit is a Word of continuance: that which was begun in factum, is continued in habitavit. Not only made, but made stay, made his abode with us: Not appeared, and was gone again straight; but, for a time took up his dwelling; Factus caro, Factus incola. And this word concerns this day properly. This is the day, the first day of habitavit in nobis. Incarnate he was in the Virgins womb; his taking flesh could not be seen, but this draweth after it a vidimus; dwelt and was seen visibly. 1. 2.

And this leadeth us to a third: conversatus est. Factum, and factum familiare: that he withdrew not himself into some solitary place, but was verbum prope nos, near us, near neighbours to us. Habitu inventus ut homo, In his habit, and in his habitation, found as a man. One might ask him (as they, at Ver. 38.) ubi habitas, Sir, where dwell you? And he invited them to come and see. 3. Rom. 10. 8. Phil. 2. 7.

And σκήνωσις is not every dwelling, but a dwelling in, σκῆνη, a tent, that is, but for a time. Not a house, to stand for ever; but a tent, to be taken down again. Which, as it sheweth his Tabernacle, of the nature of ours, mortal; so withal, that he came but of an errand, to sojourn till he had done it: A work he had for which he was sent; that being done, he laid his Tabernacle off again. 4. ἐσκήνωσεν, dwelt, as in a Tent.

And, even that work it self, is in σκηνοῦσθαι: For, it is a word militare: Souldiers dwell in tents: As if he were now factus caro, incola, miles; as if some battel were toward. And (indeed) from the beginning, (the very third of Genesis,) there was war proclaimed between the Womans seed, and the Serpents. An enemy we had, strong and mighty; had, and have still: not one, but many, a whole camp of them. They had prevailed, and led us away captive under the Law of sin. Dux nobis opus est. A Champion we stood in need of, to rescue us. And here we have one now, even Dux Messias, as Daniel calleth him. He, as this day, came into the campe, set up his pavilion among us. The Tabernacle of GOD was with men. He might not stay eight daies in the camp; but he must take Sacramentum militare: So he did. And the ceremony of it was to be stricken, and to bleed some small quantity: So he was, at his Circumcision: And after, he performed the battel at his Passion. Where, though it cost him his life, yet the victory fell on his side, Captivity was led captive, and we were delivered. His Tent was but a forerunner of his combate. This for his dwelling. Now the Affidavit. 5. ἐσκήνωσεν, pitched his tent as a Souldier. Gen. 3. 15. Rom. 7. 23. Dan. 9. 25. Eph. 4. 8.

As the word Habitavit pointeth us to this first day of the Feast; and his Tent, to the middle day; when he undertook our quarrel: So vidimus (now) is proper to the last day, the day of Manifestation, or Epiphany. He dwelt; and not invisibly, or obscurely, but so, as he might be (and was) seen. Even, this very first day, vidimus, might the Shepheards say, we saw his Angels, and heard them sing, and then went to Bethlem and saw himself. Vidimus, might the Wise-men say, we saw His star in the East, and we are come to see himself. This they might say, and truly: for, these things were not done in obscuro. But (as we said) this clause is the Affidavit, it is inferred, as a proof. You tell us of his making, and his dwelling: Quomodo constat? How shall it appear? Vidimus is the best proof that can be; he saw it; was an eye-witness of what he testified. The Affidavit Vidimus, We saw. Mat. 2. 2. Acts 26. 26. Joh. 19. 35.

And it is not vidi, but vidimus; more eyes than one: Not he alone, others more saw it, besides him. In the mouth (a) of two or three witnesses: Peter, James, and he, (vidimus) were in the Holy Mount 2. Vidimus, not vidi, We saw. a Mat. 17.

1 Joh 1.3. Mount together, and saw him transfigured. Nay, a whole (b) cloud of witnesses (CXX.) saw him taken up
b Act. 1.9. into Heaven, out of their sight, in the Mount of Olives. Well might he say, vidimus.
Heb. 12.1. And that not per transennam, at a blush, passing by; but had a full sight, looked well upon him, at
3. leisure; did it throughly for a good time together. It is not ἔδεσθε but θεάσασθαι, (the word, whence a Theatre is derived:) As men with good heed behold things there: so did we, intentively, all the Acts and ἐθεασάμεθα, Saw it intentively. scenes of his life.
4. But I ask: What saw they? The flesh peradventure: The Word, they could not see. He is God;
Saw his glory. and God hath no man ever seen. True: that, they could not; yet his glory they might, and did. Which Verse 18. glory was an infallible demonstration of his presence, there. Thorow the veile of his flesh, such beams
Heb. 10.20. he cast, as behind those clouds, they might know, there was a Sun; as, that way only, could he be made visible to the eyes of flesh, which otherwise could not behold him.
5. But it may be it was some wrong this, but such, as was seen in Moses, or in Stephen's countenance.
Quasi unigeniti Dei. He answers that, and tells us: It was not, quasi servi, like a Servant; nay, nor quasi Filii, like any adopted sons: but, this glory was every way such, as well might it beseem the Word, or Only Son: but could agree to no creature though never so glorious. To none but him: and so being proprium quarto modo, might be a medius terminus, in a demonstration.
6. And if you ask, what that glory might be? With a word, to say to the wind and storme (a) Obmutesce: and to diseases, (b) Volo mundare: And to Death it self, (c) Tibi dico, surge. His Miracles,
What this glory was. they shewed his glory, is expressly said, (in the next Chap. v. 11.) The Star, at his birth; the Eclipse, at a Mat. 4 39. his death; the glory, at his changing in the Mount: but above all, his glorious Ascension, and receiving up
b Mat. 8.3. into heaven. All which they saw; as being in the Theatre all the while, from the Epitasis to the very c Luke 7.14. Catastrophe: Therefore he tells us here, (and again in his Epistle) he writes nothing, but what he saw
1 Joh. 1.3. and beheld; and even his hands had handled of the Word of Life. We may believe him: He, and his Contestes, suffered many things for the truth of their witness: and the whole world (since) hath believed this their Affidavit. Now are we past the Parenthesis.

The consequence, full of grace and truth But what, is all that a vidimus? Nothing but a mask, to be seen? Came he only to make a glorious shew to them all? No: but as he came not obscure, but was seen: so, he came not empty, but full, and was felt of them, that saw him not. Vidimus is not all: a Verse after there is accepimus; To see his glory, they receive of his fulness: They, and we.

Full of grace and truth both Many are the perfections, whereof he is full: Two only here chosen out, as two streams, 'Grace, and 'Truth. With them he cometh, with the fulness of them: Not of one of them, but of both.
Jam. 1.18. Grace referreth to the Son: Truth to the word. Grace, is to adopt us: Truth, to beget us anew; for, of his own will he hath begotten us, by the word of Truth.

2. And these do very fitly follow after glory. Glory of it self terrifies, and makes stand aloof; Grace invites: And his glory is such, as is full of grace. His Mercy, as great as his Majesty full out. A blessed thing it is, when these two meet; and they that are in glory are full of grace too. It is not so with every one, that is in glory: But, though there be Grace, unless there be Truth too, all is nothing. For Grace, because it is plausible, and pleaseth the people, it is affected: there is a taking on grace in face and phrase, but when all is done, it wanteth sound truth. That is right grace, that hath truth joyned to it. Verbum gratiæ, and Verbum charitatis both, and it is both. Yea, verbum caro, his word is not wind, it hath flesh on it: his Truth is (as it were) the flesh of his Grace. Thus may be the consequence.

3. But of these two choice is made, as of those, our nature stood most in need of. Out of grace we were; and without grace, as Sinners and in errours, wandring up and down; as even the best of our nature did at his coming into the flesh. This is the state he found us in, when he came among us.

Eph. 1.6. Against the first, gratificavit nos in Dilecto, he brought us in grace again, through his beloved Verse 16. Son: Gratiam pro gratiâ (he saith after straight,) for the grace his Son had with him, he received us to grace.

Against the later, he brought us truth, to set us in the right way. Via, Veritas, & Vita; Veritas,
Joh. 14.6. between both: Via & Veritas, or veritas via, the true way: Vita & veritas, or veritas vita, the true life (that is) Life eternal: We cannot be without either.

4. This for our need. But, within a verse after, I find these two set in opposition to the Law,
Verse 17. and the Law to them: as if S. John pointed us whereto we should refer them. The Law full of rigour, many threats, and curses in it: Christ bringeth the word of grace, opposeth to that. The Law
Col 2.17. full of empty shadows, and Ceremonies; which Truth is set against: Corpus autem Christus, Christ the
Heb. 10.1. very body, to Lex habens umbram: So requisite to quit us of the Law; The Law, the word, that married flesh.

The bringing of these two together is a great matter; and together they must be. Grace, take it from truth, and it is fallax, but a vizour, but a meer illusion: Truth, sever it from grace, and it is ingrata, but an unpleasing thing. Grace and truth kept in sunder, and never met before: But, when the word and flesh met, then did they meet and Kiss each other (saith the Prophet, and doth with a whole Psal. 85.10. Psalm celebrate this meeting.)

5. They must meet, and Grace be first; as here. We shall never endure the severity of his Truth,
Grace first, then Truth. unless Grace come before, and allay it. But, when Grace hath brought us to Him, Truth will hold us with Him. By Grace we shall accomplish, what Truth requireth at our hands; that so, receiving

Grace,

Grace, and walking in Truth, we may come to the third, the reward of both, Glory.

Full of them; and the word would not be passed. We find others full of grace, as his blessed Mother, and as S. Stephen. Theirs reacheth not to us: None of them have more than serves for themselves. For, the Spirit is given them, but, by measure; but plenitudo vasis, in them, the fulness of a Vessel; if ye take any thing out, to poure into another, it is the less for it. But, his is plenitudo fontis, the fulness of a fountain, which is never drawn dry: qui implet abyssum, & non minoratur, fills a great pool, and it self never the less. Of which fulness they all received, and he never the emptier. We shall not need to go to any other store-house, or help to supply, or fill up Christ with any other, as if He were but half full. He is full, full of both. Our care is to be, to make our selves fit Vessels, and there is all. 6. Full of both. Luk. 1. 28. Acts 7. 55. Joh. 3. 34.

Thus far Quod verbum factum caro. Now, Quid verbum carni, the benefit; and (that which the benefit ever draweth with it) the Duty, Quid caro verbo? 1. Factus caro benefaciet carni, being made flesh He will be a benefactor to it. No man ever hated his flesh, and no more can He us, who are flesh of his flesh, or rather, He of ours. He seeth us daily in Himself; He cannot look upon His flesh, but he must think upon us. And GOD the Father cannot now hate the flesh, which the word is made; which is now taken into one person with His only Son, and united to the Deity it self. If he love the word, he must love it too, for the word is become it; either love both, or hate both. But, love it certainly: for, as this day, when he brought his Son cloathed with it, into the world, he gave express commandment, all his Angels should worship him so cloathed, and our flesh in him: A new dignity which is this day accrued to our Nature, to be adored of the blessed Angels. Our Nature questionless is set in high favour with GOD; GOD send our persons so too, and all shall be well. II. Quid verbum carni, The Benefit. Eph. 5. 29. Heb. 1. 6.

Besides, good hope we now have, that he being now flesh, All flesh may come to him, to present him with their requests. Time was, when they fled from him; but ad factum carnem jam venient omnis caro. For, since he dwelt amongst us, all may resort unto him: Yea, even Sinners; and of them it is said, hic recipit peccatores, & comedit cum eis, he receiveth them, receiveth them even to his Table. 1. Psal. 65. 2. Luke 15. 2.

A second hope, that seeing he hath made our flesh his Tabernacle, he will not suffer this of ours, the same with that of his, to fall down quite and come to nothing; the same, he dwelleth in himself, not to perish utterly; but repair it again, and raise it out of the dust. So that insuper Caro nostra requiescet in spe, our very body may rest in hope to be restored again, and made like to his glorious body. 2. Psal. 16. 9. Phil. 3. 21.

A third; that where it was, flesh and bloud shall not inherit the Kingdom of God; it is reversed; flesh and bloud shall; for flesh and bloud already doth. It is that S. John is about, to infer the former verse out of this, viz. To them gave he power to be made the Sons of God: For, Ex quo hoc verum est, Filium Dei, Filium hominis fieri potuisse, non est incredibile, &c. Since, sure it is, that the Son of God, is made the Son of man, it is not incredible, but that the Sons of men may be made the Sons of God. Not incredible, nay, Securitas nobis data est, a kind of bond is entred, security given; Seeing this verse is true, so is the last, Dedit potestatem, he gave power; and well might. Why? For the word is made flesh, and therefore flesh may have reciprocal hope to be regenerate by the word, and adopted through grace, and so exalted to the glorious dignity of the Sons of God. 3. 1 Cor. 15. 50. Verse 1, 2.

And because Grace and Truth do this, we shall fail of neither of them. He is full; and not for himself; he needs them not. He hath them for us, and hath sufficient. Neither shall be wanting, if we be not wanting to our selves. His grace shall prevent us, and his truth follow us, all the daies of our life. Psal. 23. 6.

So we see Quid verbum carni, what he hath done for us: Now our Duty reciprocal, Quid caro verbo, what we for him again. If the word become flesh, we to take order, that flesh of ours, that the word hath taken, we take it not, and make it una caro with you know whom, or may read (1 Cor. 6.) God forbid: Know you not, the word is become flesh? That flesh is then so to be preserved, that, as he saith, we saw the Glory; so may we, we saw his flesh, as the flesh of the only begotten Son of God. Kept with such care, and in such cleanness, as it might beseem his flesh to be kept. And as much may be said, for habitavit: the house would be somewhat handsome; as handsome as we could, that is to receive him; we blame them, that this day received him in a stable; take heed we do not worse our selves. III. Quid caro verbo. Our Duty. 1 Cor. 6. 16.

But the Fathers press a further matter yet, out of verbum caro factum: that we also are (after our manner) verbum carnem facere, to incarnate the word. We have a word, we may do it too, which is the type or abstract of the very Word, or wisdome on GOD, and that is the Word which is preached unto us. That Word we may, and are to incarnate, according to this daies pattern. That we so do. That Word is then incarnate, quando verbum in opus, Scripturas in operas convertimus, when we do what is spoken, or written; and turn the Vocal Word, into a real Work. The word with us, turneth to nothing but wind: To give it S. Johns flesh, and S. James Vidimus, make it both be felt and seen. Especially, since our Saviour Himself saith, He reckoneth of this as His second birth; and of every one that so doth, esteemeth as his Mother. That is the duty properly belonging to this Day, the Day of His Birth. Joh. 12. 48, 49. Jam. 1. 18.

And to look also to habitavit; as well as factum est. Fit sometimes, sometimes somewhat is done; but non habitavit, it vanisheth again, it hath no state in us, it continueth not in us, nor we in it. That it be not only; but remain. By Faith factum est; Dwell, by perseverance, the true free-hold indeed. 3.

4. And that this we may, to provide for the fourth: To use means, to draw from Him that, whereof He hath such plenty, grace and truth. The brests, that are full, have as great pleasure in being drawn, as the Child that draweth them. Assure our selves, it is so here. There is majus desiderium deplendi in Him, than replendi in us: more, in Him, to part with, than in us to receive. And what means are those? To go to the Word and flesh together. The Word it self doth well; and, of the twain, the Word hath less cause to complain; But, this, at other times. But, at this now, we are not to content our selves with one alone; but, since He offereth to communicate Himself both waies, never restrain Him to one. The word we hear, is the abstract of Verbum: The Sacrament, is the antitype to Caro, His flesh. What better way, than where these are actually joyned, actually to partake them both? Not, either
Joh. 6. 56. alone, the word or flesh: but, the word and flesh both, for they are both? If we regard habitavit, this is a sure way, we have a plain text for it; Qui manducat carnem, in me manet & ego in illo, He abides in me, and I in Him. If it be grace and truth we respect; how may we better establish our hearts with grace, or settle our minds in the truth of His Promise, than by partaking these the Conduit pipes of His grace, and seals of His Truth unto us, Grace and Truth (now) proceeding, not from the word alone, but even from the flesh thereto united; the fountain of the word flowing into the cistern of His flesh, and from thence deriving down, to us, this Grace and Truth, to them that partake Him aright.

But setting them aside, the day, the word was made flesh, it is most kindly, that a memorial be kept, as well of the flesh as the word. On the Feast of their union; they would be united: The day, they were joyned by Him, they would not be sundred, by any: but we to celebrate both, in honour of both. For, judge with your selves how inconvenient it is, to keep a Feast in honour of His taking flesh, and even that day abandon His flesh, and never once take it. Verbum & caro (if ever) to be joyned, this day, the day of their joyning. Accordingly then, as well by the act, to testifie and represent the Words making flesh; as to procure He may dwell in us; and dwelling replenish us with His Grace and Truth. And lastly, that we may hold this Feast aright, and do the duty that properly belongs to it, let us by both do honour to both, that from both we may receive the fruit of both, Grace to enable us; Truth,
1 Joh. 3. 1. to guide us, to the hope of glory. Not to that, in the Parentheses; that is but vidimus quasi: but, to the other, videbimus sicut est, to see Him as He is, and by seeing, to be transformed into the same Image of Glory.

A

SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Maiesty

At WHITE-HALL on Friday, the xxv. of Decem. Anno Domini, MDCXII, being CHRISTMAS Day.

HEB. Chap. I. Ver. I, II, III.

1. At ſundry times and in divers manners, God ſpake in the old time to our Fathers, by the Prophets:
2. In theſe laſt daies, He hath ſpoken to us by His Son, whom He hath made Heir of all things; by whom alſo He made the worlds;
3. Who being the brightneſs of His glory, and the ingraved form of His Perſon, and bearing up all things by His mighty word, hath by Himſelf purged our ſins, and ſitteth at the right hand of the Majeſtie in the higheſt places.

ERunt noviſſimi, primi (ſaith our Saviour,) And the laſt ſhall be firſt. And this Text tells us of a great Prerogative, of theſe laſt daies, above the firſt. Of which laſt daies, this is the firſt day; the day of CHRISTS Birth. For, make a partition of the two times, Olim, and Dies noviſſimi; and this day will be found to end Olim, and to begin Dies noviſſimi; to be the firſt day of theſe laſt daies; the very Kalends of Chriſtianity, from whence, we begin our Æra, or Chriſtian computation. Mat. 19 30.

The Dignity of this day, (and ours in it) is here ſet out two waies: Firſt, by a caſe of compariſon: of compariſon, between the times paſt, and theſe now; between the Fathers and Us. The point, wherein, is Gods ſpeaking, ſpeaking, to both: but, in a more excellent manner, and by a far more excellent perſon, to us, than to them. The end: that ſo we might The Sum and diviſion. I.

know, know and acknowledge, quæ à Deo data sunt nobis, what God hath done for us, and done for us this day. For all the difference is, in this Day: all the dignity we have above them, is by it: that so we may be highly thankful to God for it, and hold the day it self as an high Feast.

GOD is the same in both; He that speaketh to both: [1] of old, to them: [2] of late, to Us. Thus far, even; they and we. One GOD, one speaker, to both. The odds: Both spoken to; but not both spoken to, alike: Not alike in three Points: [1] Not in the Matter, or Parts, of which: [2] Not in the Form, or Manner, after which: [3] Not in the Persons, by whom. [1] To the Fathers, He spake πολυμέρως, by many pieces; not entirely. [2] To them, πολυτρόπως, after sundry fashions; not uniformly. [3] To them, by His Servants, the Prophets; not by His Son.

But, when the Apostle cometh to rejoyn upon these three, he repeateth not the two first, but pitcheth only on the Person: That He; that, the Person, by whom, is without all comparison, more honourable, and excellent, than the Prophets, His Servants: (He will do as much, to the Angels by and by after:) that look how much a Son is better than a Servant, so much, our estate above theirs.

II. This, for the Comparative, But then, fearing, it might be, we would not conceive high enough, of this Son, or weigh Him, as He is worthy; He goeth to it, Positivè; and (as it were) sets up his Arms, consisting of eight several Coats; or proclaimeth His stile, of as many several Titles. Which we may reduce, to four several combinations. [1] Son and Heir; [2] the Brightness and Character: [3] Maker and
1. Supporter of all things: [4] That purgeth our sins, and, that is set down in the throne. And these again may be
2. abridged to these two: [1] What He is, in Himself; [2] and, what, to us. In Himself, all the rest: 2. To us, [1] made Heir: [2] purgeth our sins, and so cleanseth our Nature; that being so cleansed, He may exalt it. For, it is for us, and not for Himself, He taketh up the place mentioned, at the right hand on high.

III. Then, our duty: Bona si sua norint, If we can skill of our own good, to find our estate greatly dignified by it; and, to honour this day, the beginning of this dignity to us; wherein, God gave His Son, to speak, vivâ voce unto us: to purge our sins; and to exalt us to His throne on high.

I. The comparative part and difference.

GOD in times past spake to the Fathers; and His speech was πολυμερῶς, of many several parcels; to several persons; at several times; some at one time, some at another. And as the time grew, so grew their knowledge (piece and piece) of the great mystery, this day manifested.

God in times past, &c. in many parts, spake, concerning His Person. First, one piece: Man, He should be; (a) of the Womans seed; that, should bruize the Serpents head; and there was all: *Gen.*3. Then another piece: Of what Nation he should be; (b) of the seed of Abraham, (*Gen.*22.) Then, another yet: Of what Tribe, (c) of the Tribe of Juda: (*Gen.*49.) 2. Then again, a fourth piece, of what Family; (d) of the house of David: (*Psal.*132.)

So likewise GOD, in times past spake of His Offices. To Moses, one piece, He should be (e) A Prophet: (*Deut.*18.) To David another; He should be (f) A Priest: (*Psal.*110.) To Ieremy, a third, He should be (g) A King, and his Name, JEHOVA justitia nostra: (*Ier.*23.)

And, (not to hold you long in this) GOD, in times past, in sundry parts, spake concerning this Daies work: That, came by pieces, too. One parcel, to (h) Esay, of His Birth: (Esay 9.) To (i) Micæ, the Place of it: (Mica 5.) To (k) Daniel, the Time of it, by weeks: (*Dan.*9.) So you see, it was by pieces, and by many pieces, they had it. Well said the (l) Apostle, that, Prophecying is in part: One may now, in a few houres come to as much, as came to them in many hundred years. This for the Matter.

2. In the Manner.

Now, for the Manner. It was multiformis. GOD, &c. Many manner waies.

One manner, by dreams in the night, (Iob 33.) Another manner, by visions, And those again of two manners. [1] Either presented to the outward sense, as Esay 6. [2] Or, in an extasie, represented to the inward; as *Dan.*10. Another yet, by Urim, in the breast of your Priest. And yet another, by a small still voice, in the ears of the Prophet, 1 *Reg.*19. And sometime, by an Angel, speaking in him, (*Zach.*1.) But, most-what, by His Spirit. And, (to trouble you no more) very sure it is; that as, for the matter, in many broken pieces: so, for the Manner, in many divers fashions, spake He to them.

But then, if, in πολυτρόπως, you understand Tropos, figures; then were they yet many more. The Paschall Lamb: (m) (*Exod.*12.) the Scape-goat: (n) (*Lev.*16.) The Red Cow: (o) (*Numb.*19.) and, I know not how many, even a world of them. Many they were; and tropes they were; shadowed out darkly, rather than clearly expressed. Theirs, was but candle-light, to our day-light; but Vespertina cognitio, in comparison of ours, whom the Day hath visited, sprung from on high. This, for the Matter and Manner: Now, for the Men.

3. In the Men.

GOD, in times past spake by Prophets: and but by Prophets, He spake not, from Moses, to John Baptist (who was the Horizon of the Law and Gospel.) I will not stand to run through them all. And now, the Apostle, when he is come to us in the last daies; when he should oppose three more, to match the former three, he doth not; but passeth by the two first, the Parts, and the Manner; leaveth out πολυμέρως and πολυτρόπως, and so insinuates thereby thus much; that, He hath spoken to us entirely; without reserva ion; and uniformly, without variation. But, those two he waveth, and insisteth only on this last, (as the fairest mark of difference) the Prophets, and His Son.

The

The Prophets were holy men; but, men. And there is a nature more perfect, than that of man; even the nature of GOD. And, in the House of God, they were faithful Servants; but yet, servants: and that (we know) is but an imperfect condition, in comparison of a SON. To us in the last daies is given, that what we have, we have not from any Prophet, though never so excellent; but from the Lord of the Prophets: Not from any Servant, though in never so great place; but, from the SON: And, not from any of the Sons of men: but, from His own Son, the SON of GOD. From His mouth we have received notice of GODS will: He Himself ore tenus, imparted it to us.

2 Pet. 1. 21. Heb. 3. 6. Mat. 21. 35. Mat. 21. 38.

But then, If any ask: Seeing, GOD, in times past, and God, in these last daies, is the same God; He that spake to the Fathers, and He, that, to us, but one Speaker: why not, by His Son, at first? I will give a reason fit for this place. A Decorum was to be kept, and some kind of correspondence with State. That as, at the proceeding of a great Prince, before He Himself cometh in sight, many there be, that go before Him, and those, of divers degrees; and at last, Himself doth appear: So, this Prince, that sits in the Throne, should not start out at the first, and shew Himself; but be allowed His train of Patriarchs, and Prophets, to be His Anteambulones; and, in the fulness of time, Himself should come with the fulness of grace and truth, and establish one entire uniform way, to continue for ever.

Gal. 4. 4. Joh. 1. 14, 16.

From this comparison, these are the points, we learn: We must ferri ad perfectionem. And, these, are notes of imperfection: There be too many parts, and too many manners, in that, to be a perfect, State. If the matter were full, no more would be added: If the manner were perfect, it would no more be altered. Never then, to rest in these. Moses himself pointeth us, to one after him, by his Ipsum audite, (Deut. 18.) Who is that? God Himself, in the Mount, tells us by His Ipsum audite. And, when God said it, Moses and Elias was there in the Mount, and resigned up both their several audiences: Moses, for himself; and Elias, as well in his own name, as in the name of all the Prophets.

Deut. 18. 18. Mat. 17. 5.

This, against the Iewes; that will, no further than Moses: that will rest in the Law. For, nihil ad perfectum adduxit Lex; the Law brings nothing to perfection: But Finis legis, CHRISTUS. And, all Prophesie hangs in suspence (as imperfect,) till the fulfilling of it; which was done by Christ, to whom they all gave witness. Now, when that, is perfect, is come, that, that is imperfect, must away. Not to rest, in them, then: But to CHRIST; and never rest, till we come to Him.

Rom. 10. 4. 1 Cor. 13. 10.

And, as never to rest, till we come to him: So, there to rest, when we are come to Him: As soon as His voice hath sounded in our ears, that they itch no more after any new revelations. For, in, Him, are all the treasures of wisdom, and knowledge.

Col 2. 3.

God spake once and twice: A third time, He will not speak. This, is His last time: He will speak no more. Look for no more peeces, nor phansie no more fashions: Consummatum est, there are no more to look for. He is the truth: and, he that hath found the truth, and seeks further, no remedy, he must needs find a lie: he can find nothing else. To get us therefore to Christ; and never be got from him; but, there, hold us.

Psal. 62. 12. John 19. 20.

We cannot follow a better pattern, than the Apostle here: We see, what hast he makes. For, (as if he were upon thornes, till he were with Christ,) without any Exordium, or preamble, here, in the beginning of his Epistle, he hits on the Point streight; as if all time were lost, till he were there. Yea, having named the parts, and manners of the times past, for very haste to be at him, he forgets both parts and manners, only for desire to be with him, the sooner.

And (so with him) I haste to pass to the second Positive part. VVherein being careful, we should take perfect notice of him; and fearing we would not weigh these words [by His Son] as were meet, but hear them slightly, and pass them lightly over; the rest of the Text he spends, in making a commentary of this word Son: that we may consider, how great this Party is; and consequently, how much it imports us, to regard his speech, and to esteem of His Feast with no mean accompt. And (to say truth) it was more than needful, considering the means of his birth to day: that he should thus proclaim his stile of eight titles, and over the place of it, stick them up, as so many scutcheons, to give us true notice of the greatness of the Party.

II. The Positive part.

But withall, his meaning was to describe Christ at all points: as (indeed) these eight contain a perfect description, of his Natures, his Person, his Offices, his Agency.

His Natures, in the very beginning: Quem fecit, is Man; Per quem fecit, is GOD. Not, quem only, Man alone, but, Per quem secula, GOD also. But, for His Divine Nature, he is more full yet; That, He is His Son, the Splendor of His Glory, the Character of his Substance, the Maker and Upholder of the world, and all in it. 1.

His Person: in this word semetipso; He did it Himself, (that is,) in his own person. Himself, is ever said of a Person. 2.

His Offices: In his speaking, his Prophesie; by which, he unfoldeth the Mysteries of GOD. In his purging our sins, is his Priesthood: And, his Kingdom, in the throne of Majesty, wherein he sits. 3.

His Agency, (or quid ad nos,) In locutus est nobis. To us, he speaketh: and, purgans peccata nostra, Our sins he purgeth. Nobis, and nostra: To us, and for us, he is, that he is. All his speaking, and doing, propter nos homines, & propter salutem nostram, for us men, and for our salvation; and, our part, in him, and his. 4.

VVe reduced all these eight, to two. 1 VVhat in himself; 2 and what, referendo to us. In himself: what by Nature; Son and heir: VVhat by excellency; Splendor and Character: VVhat by power; Maker and Upholder of all. To us; VVhat in love already performed; he hath purged our sins: In hope 5. What Christ is in Himself.

yet expected; he is set, and in possession of the throne of glory; which is, in our names, and to our behoof, and not his own.

In his Divine Nature.

His Divine Nature hath no less than three, to express it: [1] Son, [2] Brightness, and [3] Character: and two, to prove it, the [4] making and [5] supporting of all.

I have heretofore remembred you, that the high perfections of that nature are such and so many, as no one terme will suffice, to set it forth: we are glad to borrow from many to do it; and yet, but brokenly, too. And that though there be not any resemblance translated from the creatures, (though never so excellent,) that will hold full assay, yet withall, this we are to think, that, since the Holy Ghost, hath made choice of these termes, they are no idle speculations, that are drawn from them.

1 Son.

Of these three then: [1] Son. [2] Brightness, [3] Character. [1] In Son, there is a true identity of Nature: upon it is grounded, ὁμοούσιον, being of one substance; even as the Son is with the Father. [2] But the Son cometh after the Father, in time, and that a good time: Amends is made for that, in the next terme,

2 Brightness.

(Brightness.) For, it is not to be imagined, that there ever was, or could be a light body, but in the very same instant there must stream from it, a brightness. So, upon this [2] is grounded Coeternal.

3 Character.

[3] But then, there is some inequality, between the light body it self, and the beam of brightness of it: The beam not full out so clear. This, is the imperfection in the terme Brightness. But, that is supplied, by the next, Character: For, that, is (ever) just equall; neither bigger, nor lesser than the type, or stamp, that made it. Upon this (then) is grounded Coequal, and like per omnia ὁμοούσιον: So like, as, Shew us the Father (saith Philip:) why, He that sees the Character, never desires to see the stamp; if ye see the one, ye see the other: He that seeth me, seeth the Father, whose express form I am.

Joh. 14. 8. Verse 9.

Agreeable to these three, we beleeve of him, that he is consubstantial, as the SON; Coeternal, as the Brightness; Coequal, as the Character: Against the new heads of the old Hydra sprung up again in our daies.

This term (SON of GOD) is sometimes communicated to Saints, sometime to Magistrates. Lest we might understand it, as we do in Saints, or as we do in Magistrates, he addeth two words; [1] the one, Glory; [2] the other, Substance. Of which, Glory is imparted to others: Substance to none but him. His Glory on earth he imparteth to Magistrates; and they are called the Sons of the most High. His heavenly Grace, (which is Glory inchoate) he imparteth to his Saints; and, to them, gave he power to be Sons of GOD.

Psal 82. 6. Joh. 1. 12.

But, his substance is in neither. For, the first (Magistrates) are, by Ego dixi: but he, by Ego genui. And, the second (Saints,) to them he giveth priviledge or prerogative so to be. So, they, κατ' ὁμοίωσιν: but he, κατ' οὐσίαν: Per praestantiam, they; Per substantiam, He.

Psal. 2. 7.

He, the brightness of his Glory, and Character of his substance: that is, not in glory only, which may be imparted to another; but even, in his very substance (too) it self.

And again: not in substance of the Deity alone, but (in that, which belongeth to it,) the glory also. Substance is Dei, Glory is Dei. All, that he is, and all, that he hath; Substance and Glory both.

The brightness of his Glory: He was such a Son, as did no way eclipse his Fathers glory; but (as a beam) made it shine more bright. The Character, the true stamp of his substance: Nor, he rendred not a broken image, as if the stamp had been set on, or driven awry: but, was his very true express form.

John 15. 28.

Another mystery, yet, These three note a proceeding: The Son, from the Father: the Brightness, from a Light: the Character, from the Type: And so, a second person. I proceeded, and came from the Father, (he saith it himself.)

First, a true and natural proceeding from him, as the Son. Secondly, (to take away all conceit of gross or carnal generation,) by a pure and clean proceeding, as De luce, lux; in which there is nothing but pure, and undefiled. Thirdly, Character-wise, from his hypostasis, (it is the word in the Text, mark it well:) Not, from his οὐσία, (that is) not from his substance at large; but, from his determinate Personal essence; (for, so is hypostasis, properly:) That is, not from the Deity, or essence of it, (which neither begets, nor is begotten;) but, from a Person in the Deity.

Now these three, if we refer them to Olim, the times past; Then, as the Son he is opposed, to his servants (that is) the Prophets. As he is a Beam of light, to the many parts (as it were many sparks:) That, was all the light before. As the Character (or firm impression) to the many vanishing shadows under the Law.

But if, to the present, we refer them: As he is the Son: we shall find no estate but servitude; no adoption, but in him. As the brightness: no clear light of knowledge, nothing but mists and darkness, but by him. And, as the Character: no true soundness, or sound truth, but figures and flirting shadows, without him. From him, as the Son, receive we grace, whereby we are adopted: As the Beam, the clearness of faith, whereby lightned: As the Character, the true signature of charity, whereby stamped, to know (our selves) and be known of others, that we have heard him aright, and are his true Disciples.

Eph. 1. 5. Joh. 1. 9.

The two to prove it.

These three express his Divine Nature: Two more, to prove it. In them, his excellency: in these, his Power. Which is set out two waies: [1] In the Creation: Omnia per Ipsum facta, & sine Ipso nihil, all made by him; nothing without him. [2] And again in the Preservation, (by vertue of his Et ego usque operor,) which is his work to this day; to continue and uphold in their being, all that he hath made to be. One, by his word spoken; So, made: the other, by his Law given: So made fast to continue. In a word:

John 1. 3. John 5. 17. Psal. 148. 5, 6.

all had been nothing, but for him: and all would fall to nothing, without him.

Now, in that he thus made all, and makes all to last, the meerest person, he was, to make all new; to restore that he had made. And, it was a convenience, that he should; and it was an inducement, that he would undertake the business, and go through with it.

All this he is, in Himself: Yet not so, but, in all his splendor and glory, he mindeth us. And that so, as he is desirous to bring us, to the joynt partaking of his inheritance, as Son; of his glory, as the brightness; yea, of the very Divine nature, as the Character of his substance. The ground whereof is laid, in [quem fecit hæredem,] whom he made heir; and that was, as man: For, per quem fecit (we said) is God; quem fecit, is man. 2. What Christ is to us.

Made him heir.] Heirs, are either born, or made: So born, by nature; or, so made, by purchase. He was his Son; and, his only Son: and so born his heir. He was born; and yet he would be made. There is a mystery, in this: we are to look to it; It will fall out, to concern us. Heir born he was; and so claimeth all, as his inheritance, by due of birth-right. But, it is further (here) said, he was made: What means this? Quem fecit? Nay, quem genuit. That, is true: But, quem fecit is true likewise, Fecit hæredem, qui prius fuit hæres: So born, and so made, too; Hæres natus, and hæres factus. So cometh he to a double right, two titles. How so? He needed but one: He would have two. To what end? Not, for himself; for himself, one was enough. Belike his meaning was to have two, that he might set over one to some body else; there, is the point. He was born heir, for himself: but, made heir, for us, Hæres natus, that serveth him; that he retains to himself; Hæres factus, that he disposeth of, to us. By this, we hold; even by Quem fecit: that, is our tenure, and best hope. He is, and ever was, in the bosome of his Father, as hæres natus: he now is, but on our behalf, and to our behoof, at the right hand of his Father, as Hæres factus. And now followeth, he purged our sins. 1 He is made Heir.

For, he could not bring us to sit with him in his throne, (thus purchased) being so spotted and foul, as we were, by means of the pollution of our sins. He was then to purge and make clean our Nature first, that he might exalt it to partake his purchase, being so cleansed. Where first our case is set down, wherein he found us, and wherein we are, without him. A sinners case (how gloriously soever he or she glister in the eyes of men) being in GODS eyes, as the case of a foul diseased person: And we thereby taught so to conceive of sins, as, of foul spots without; or, of such humours (within) as go from us by purging. Inquinamenta carnis & Spiritus (as St. Paul terms them right) defiling both flesh and Spirit: which unless they be purged, there is no entring into the heavenly Jerusalem (where, the throne is,) into which, nihil inquinatum, no polluted thing shall ever enter. 2 He purgeth our sins. 2 Cor. 7 1. Apoc. 21, 27.

Exalt us he could not, being in that plight: for love or pity therefore, purge us he would. And here now, is the top, or highest point of elevation, in this Text. Who being the brightness (or, though he were the Brightness) that is, a Party so excellent in Nature, Glory, Person, and Power; Nature as Son, Glory as brightness, Person as Character; Power as maker and supporter of all: who, though he were all this, did not abhor to come, and visite us, being in that foul and wretched case. This will teach us, Domine quid est homo? What is man that thou shouldst visit him? Visite him; not as the day-spring from an high doth the earth; but visit him, as if a great Prince should go into an Hospital, to visit and look on a foul diseased creature. Psal. 8. 4. Luk. 1. 78.

2. And not only visit him; but not refuse the base office, to look to his purging from that his uncleanness.

3. And thirdly, not cause it to be done by another; but to come and do it in Semet ipso, by his own self, in person.

4. And fourthly, in doing, not to stand by, and prescribe; but himself to minister and make the medicine.

5. And fifthly, to make it himself, and make it of himself; in semetipso, and de semetipso; to make the medicine, and be the medicine.

6. And how, or of what? Spots will out with water; Some will not, with any thing but with blood: Without shedding of blood there is no taking away sin; as Chap. 9. ver. 22. And not every bloud will serve; but, it must be Lambs blood: And a Lamb without spot. And not every Lamb neither; but the Lamb of God: or (to speak plainly) a Lamb, that is God: His bloud, and nothing else will serve to do this. 1 Pet. 1. 19. John 1, 29.

7. And seventhly, not any bloud of his; not of a vein, (one may live still, for all that:) but, his best, most precious, his heart-bloud, which bringeth certain death with it. With that bloud he was to make the medicine. Die he must: and his side be opened, that there might issue both the water and the blood, that was to be the ingredients of it. By himself, his own self; and by himself slain: by his death, and by his bloud-shedding, and by no other means: Quis audivit talia? The Physitian slain; and of his flesh and bloud, a receipt made, that the patient might recover!

And now we may be at our choice, whether we will conceive of sin, as of some outward soil, in the soul; And then the purging of it, to be per viam haluei, needs a bath, with some cleansing ingredients, as the Prophet speaks, of the herb Borith: And, this way purged he us; made a bath of the water that came out of his side, to that end opened, that from thence might flow a fountain for sin, and for uncleanness, (Zach. 13. 1.) Water, and mixed with his bloud; as forcible, to take out the stains of the soul, as any herb Borith in the world, to take away the soil of the skin. Jer. 2. 22. Zach. 13. 1.

Or, whether we will conceive of sin, as of some inward pestilent humour, in the soul and conscience, casting us into perill of mortal (or rather, immortal) death: Then, the purging of us, to be by way of some Electuary, or Potion: (And so, he purgeth our sins too. To that end he hath made an Electu-

Mat.16.26,27. Heb.9.14. Electuary of his own body [Take, eat it:] and tempered a cup with his own bloud, [Drink ye all of it:] which by the operation of his eternal Spirit in it, is able effectually to purge the conscience from dead works (or actual sins) and from the deadly effect of them: No balsome, or medicine in the world like it.

The Sum of all is: There be two defiling sins, and two waies he purgeth them. Clean we are, from the first, as washed from the original uncleanness of our Nature, and that by the Laver of regeneration. And whole we are, as purged within, from the actual sins of our persons; and that, by the Cup of the New Testament, which we bless in his Name, And the bloud of JESUS CHRIST purgeth us from our sins. By both, he purgeth us from both. And this, for his Purging.

Tit.3.5. 1 Cor.10.16. 1 Joh.1.7.

3 And sitteth at the right hand, &c.

And is set down.] Of which, we are not to conceive, as of a thing meerly touching him; (that, his labour being done, he took his rest; and there is all:) But, that this his sitting down is, a taking possession of that his dear made purchase: And that, not in his own Name. He had it before; he was in glory;* and in the self-same glory with his Father, before ever the world was.

This Hæres factus pertaineth to us, as, done for us; not, for himself, who needed it not, nor could have any use of it.

These two (between them) comprehend all, even all we can wish: [1] To be purged of the one; [2] and, to be seized of the other. They follow well: For, to what end purged he us? To leave us, there? No, but for some further matter: which though it be last in execution, was first in intention. Having so cleansed us, not content with that, it was his purpose further, to bring us to glory; that is, to no less matter, than to sit on his throne with him, purchased by him for no other end.

And these two, Purging, and Sitting down in the throne, as the Alpha and Omega, the first and the last of that he doth for us, And so, in them, is all well represented; Purging our sins, the first; Sitting in the throne, the last. To purge our sins, he began, this day, the first day, the day of his birth: wherein he purified, and sanctified, by his holy Nativity, the original uncleanness of ours. And, Sit in the throne, was his last work, on the last day of his Ascension: Then took he possession, in our names, ὡς πρόδρομος (saith the Apostle) as forerunner for us.

The degrees of this exaltation be these: [1] First, a throne it is: and that is not every seat; but, a special, and chief, and honourable seat. [2] And secondly, of thrones, there be some inferiour, as the thrones of Justice: This is the highest, for it is a throne of Majesty. [3] Thirdly, It is in excelsis; and that maketh up all. For the thrones here below (even of Majesty) sooner or later, they that sit in them, must come down from them. But the throne on high, Thy seat O God, is for ever and ever: Not fading, and transitory, as ours here. [4] Fourthly, in this throne, set he is: and sitting is the site or position of rest; that is, rest in glory. Here, where most glory, least rest. [5] And fifthly, on the right hand, which is, on the throne, the best, and next place to God himself. And, by this, are we above the Angels: For, to which of them (as the Apostle after deduceth) said he at any time, sit on my right hand: No, but stand before me, as ministring spirits, all. Or; when they rest, it is on the other hand: the right hand is kept for us, and possessed already by one in our Nature, who in this seat will not sit alone, Sed consedere nos secum fecit in cœlestibus, (Eph.2.6.) Even now, we sit there, in him; and shall there sit with him in the end. So he promiseth, in express terms (*Apoc.*3.21.) that we shall sit with him in his throne, as he doth in his Fathers. And so not in the throne, will He be above us, but only, that, he, in the midst, and we, on his right hand.

Psal.45.7. Verse 13. Verse 14.

III. Our duty to Christ.

Our duty then is, for his excellency, to honour him; for his power, to fear Him; for his love shewed, reciprocally to love him again; for his hope promised, truly to serve him. GOD, for his part, would have his Servants the Prophets well used: but however they, in times past, were regarded by them, this he makes full account of, If he send his Son, we will not fail, but reverence him. Specially such a Son; of such glory, such power, and above all, of such love towards us, to provoke ours again. And again, of such ability, to reward with eternal glory, as he will even buy our service, at Who gives more: and pay us for it to the full, with no less wages than a throne of glory.

Mat.21.37.

1. As a Prophet speaking.

This in general. More particular: in three termes, he is set out to us (here) in the Text: [1] Speaking, [2] Purging, [3] Sitting: as a Prophet, he speaks; as a Priest, purges; as a King, sits speaking; our duty is to hear him, to lay up his sayings in our heart. Two marks his word hath here, [1] fecit, [2] sustinet; made and makes continue; Let it have the same, in us. In the Sermon time something is begun to be made in us, but, it continueth not: which sheweth, it is not verbum virtutis, to us. Again, let it not be, as a Brightness, only to be seen by us; but as a Character too, to leave a mark behind it, to be seen on us; and then it is right.

Now, Hodie si vocem, To day if ye will hear his voice, ye can hear none but vagitum infantis, such a voice as useth to come from a new born babe. And even so, he speaks to us, if we can understand. For, even this Verbum to be infans, and Tonans to be vagiens; he, to send forth such a voyce; it speaketh humility, (I am sure) and great love, that so would humble it self; if we have ears to hear it. When he, that was the brightness of his Fathers glory, should be so eclipsed: he that sits on the throne, thus be thrown in a Manger.

2. As a Priest purging.

Prophets spake; but purged not. Purging was ever the Priests office. It is true: the word he speaks, hath a mundifying vertue: Jam mundi estis, Now ye are clean. It cleanseth then. But, not that only only, nor principally. For, the medicine which purgeth ex proprietate, his flesh and blood go to it. By which will we are sanctified even by the offering of the body of Jesus. That bloud of Jesus Christ, cleanseth us from all sin, (1 *Joh.*1.7.) These, the true ingredients into this medicine. But better yet, if both go together. And, this day, they first came together, the Word, and Flesh: therefore, (of all daies,) this day they would not be parted. For, will you sever the Flesh from the Word, that day, on which GOD joyned them? GOD forbid. There is a correspondency, between the Word, and his Brightness; and between the Sacrament, and his Character. The Word giveth a light, and his brightness sheweth in it ad horam, and not much longer. The parts of the Sacrament, they are permanent, and stick by us: they are a remembrance of the Characters made in his skin and flesh. And, if ye seek to be rid of your sins, this was broken for you, and this was shed for you, for that very end, for the remission of sins. And so, ye receive his Person; even Semetipsum: And, in Semetipso, in his Person it was, he purged our sins. And so, that, a sure way. Cor.10.10.

Lastly, for sitting: that, is his Kingdom; that is kept for dies novissimorum novissimus, the last day indeed. That, is yet in hope only. The same flesh that cleansed our sins, the same now sitteth on the throne: and so, hath both vertues: for the present, a power to purge; for the future, a power likewise to exalt. The same bloud, is the bloud of sacrifice for remission of sins; and, the bloud of the New Testament, for the passing to us the bequest, which is, the right of his Purchase, for which, he was made Heir. And the very Angels, who (this day) adored him in our flesh; and it, in him; thereby shewed plainly, not the purging only, but the exalting of it also, by this daies work. And that, to day, wherein they sang aloud in the sky, we have cause, to make much of, and to rejoyce in it; the Day of the greatest glory to God, peace to the earth, and good will towards men, that ever rose upon the World. 3. As a King sitting, &c. Luk.2.13,14.

GOD grant, that we may so hold this first feast with Christian joy, as we may hold that last, with like joy: and be found as cheerful in it.

A SERMON

A SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Majesty

At WHITE-HALL, on Saturday the xxv. of Decem. Anno Domini, MDCXIII. being CHRIST MAS Day.

JOHN Chap. VIII. Ver. LVI.

ABRAHAM Pater vester exultavit ut videret Diem meum: & vidit, & gavisus est.

Your Father Abraham rejoyced to see my Day: and he saw it, and was glad.

HEre is joy, joy at a sight, at the sight of a Day, and that day Christs. It is CHRIST that calleth it, here, Diem meum, his day: And, no day, so properly his, as his Birth day. So, the Text comes full upon the day.

But, to reduce it point by point.

First, CHRIST hath a Day, proper to him, which in expres terms, he calleth (here) diem meum, my day.

Secondly, This Day, to be seen, is a day of Joy. Double joy; [1] Exultavit, and [2] Gavisus est: both, in the Text.

And, thirdly, (which is somewhat strange.) It was so, to the Patriarch Abraham. Him we find (here) doing that, which we now are about; Seeing, and rejoycing, at the sight of CHRISTS Day: taking notice of it; and taking joy in it.

Lastly, all this nothing displeasing to our Saviour Christ: for it is spoken by him, to the praise of Abraham that did it; and, to the dislike of the Jews, that did it not. To them is this speech: Christ tells them of Abrahams doing it: and blames them, for not doing the like.

And, what are we (now) disposing our selves to do, but even the very same, that is in the Text here, to rejoyce, to see CHRISTS Day?

And a threefold warrant we have, in this verse, to do, as we do. 1. The Patriarchs doing it. 2. Christs allowance of the doing of it. 3. And his dislike of the Iews for not doing it.

VVe have Abraham for our example; we do but as he did. In his time, Christs Day was a Day of joy; and a Day of joy is a Feast, and so holden by him, we see. VVhich falls out much to our content. For, the same Feasts, the same Religion. So, we find by this, that he and we are of one Religion. One, in substance, which is Christ: One in circumstance, which is his Day. Christ himself, Abrahams joy; Nay, his Day Abrahams joy too. The same meum; that is Christ: the same Diem; that is, Christmas.

Then

Then (which is another degree) Abrahams example approved of, by Chriſt; and that, after ſomewhat a ſtrange manner: For, it is not here (if you mark it) Exultavit, ut videret Me; but, ut videret Diem meum. He makes His Day the object of all this exultation and joy. His day (I ſay,) and not Himſelf: commends him, that he rejoyced at the ſight, not of Himſelf, but of it. Verily, this ſpeech of His is much to the honour of His Day; and the very ſolemnity of the Feaſt, and all the joy and gladneſs thereon, may well be thought to have been founded upon this ſpeech of His. Always, if Exultavit ut videret, were a praiſe to Him; we may be ſure, Exultavit cum videret, can be no diſpraiſe to us.

Add thirdly: Abrahams example approved by CHRIST. Not ſo approved, as he leaves it at liberty: They that will, may do the like. But that, He reproves them that do it not. For, He blames the Iews here, for not doing herein as Abraham: Your father Abraham did it, you do it not. Which is againſt them that have a ſpleen at this Feaſt: that think they can joy in Him well enough, and ſet His Day by; nay, and abrogate it quite: and in ſo doing, they joy in Him all the better. Nay, love Him love His feaſt, joy not in it, nor in Him neither.

You ſhall ſee, how they are miſtaken. Therefore they do ſo (they tell us,) leſt obſerving days and times, they ſhould ſeem to Iudaize. It falls out quite contrary. For, who are they whom Chriſt here blameth? are they not Iews? And, wherefore blameth He them? for not doing as Abraham: And, what did Abraham? Rejoyce on his Day. So, upon the point, it will fall out, that, not to rejoyce on His day, that, is indeed to Iudaize, and they little better than theſe Iews, that follow them in it. Gal. 4. 10.

Nay, here is another thing yet, will grieve them more: Iews they ſhall be; but none of Abrahams Children; no more, than theſe were. Obſerve it well. It is the Occaſion of this ſpeech, the very iſſue Chriſt takes with them: Pater noſter Abraham, was ſtill in their mouths (in the 33, 39, 53. Verſes:) If (ſaith Chriſt) you were his Children (mark that If,) ye would patriſſare, deſire what he deſired, and joy what he joyed in. Now, My Day he ſo highly eſteemed, as glad he was that he might ſee it: And you, that would ſo fain father your ſelves, upon him, are ſo far from that, as what he deſired abſent, ye deſpiſe preſent: what he would have been the better to ſee; ye are the worſe, that ye ſee it. Now then, how are theſe Abrahams Children, that have nothing of Abraham in them? Before, (at the 40. Ver.) Ye ſeek to kill me, for telling the truth. This did not Abraham, and ye do it. Here now again: He rejoyced in my day; and ye do it not. Do that, he did not; do not that, he did: How can theſe be Abrahams ſons? Verily, as it is in Eſay 63. Abraham neſcivit nos: Abraham would never know them, for his. None of His Sons, theſe. Thoſe are his ſons, that do, as he did. And, here now, come in we. They Iews, but not Abrahams Children; we Abrahams Children, but not Iews: For, as he did, ſo do we. There is joy with us, at the ſight of His Day: we renew our joy, ſo oft, as by the Revolution of the year, it cometh about. And, for this very point, we find our ſelves the nearer to Abraham; Even for the joy of His day. Always, ſure we are, ſince [1] Abraham did it, and [2] CHRIST allowed it, and [3] diſallowed the contrary: by theſe three, we have good warrant to do, as we do: To make it a time of joy. And ſo, a time of joy, God make it to us. Eſay 63. 16.

Thus it ſtands, for the Order. There be in the Text, three acts ſpecified from one, iſſuing; from Abraham all: All directed to one mark; falling all upon one Object. That Object is Diem meum, My Day: Of that then firſt. The three Acts be, [1] Exultavit ut videret: [2] Vidit: and [3] gaviſus eſt. [1] Firſt, would be glad, ut videret, that He might ſee; that is, was deſirous to ſee it: [2] Then, had his deſire, did ſee it: [3] And laſtly, ſeeing it, took joy of his ſight. The Diviſion.

Of which three, the firſt and the laſt, Deſiderium and gaudium, deſire and joy are two affections attending upon Love; and are ever ſure ſigns of it. Deſire, when we want and have not, what we love. And joy, when we now poſſeſs, or (as the term is) enjoy it. The middle, which is Sight, that pertains to faith: Faiths light it was he ſaw it by. So, here is fides per Charitatem operans: Abrahams faith right. I. II. Gal. 5. 6.

But I keep the order in the Text, I change it not, it cannot be mended. All goes by a right line. [1] Deſire firſt, that is the way to ſee. [2] Seeing next; that brings joy. [3] And joy is the end; and a good end it is to end in joy.

Theſe three with reference, firſt to Abraham; and then after, to our ſelves.

TO find our mark firſt, that all this deſire is, to ſee; all this joy when it is ſeen; It is Diem meum Chriſts Day. Chriſt is God and Man; Son to both: His day, as the Son of God, or as the ſon of Man. Which of theſe? I. The Object. Diem meum, My Day.

Not as the Son of God; As the Son of God, He hath no day. Day and night are parts of time; And Egreſſus Ejus, His goings out are from all eternity. 2. If we would improperly call it a day; no day, to be ſeen: The light of it is inacceſſible, not to be approached to; it would ſtrike any man blind to behold it. 3. If we could ſee it, and Him, in His Deity; yet there is ſmall joy, to ſee Chriſt ſo: Small joy to ſee Him, but by the light of this Day. All the deſire was, that He might be; all the joy, that He was to be ſeen, as the Son of man. As the Son of Man, then: His Day ſo. 1. Not, as the Son of God. Mic. 5. 3. 1 Tim. 1. 16.

But as the Son of man he hath more days than one: So He ſaith, (Luk. 17.) They ſhall deſire to ſee one day of the Son of man: one, of many; any one of them. But this (here) notes ſome one eminent Day, above the reſt: It is a day, with a double raticle; τὴν ἡμέραν, τὴν ἐμὴν, That day, that ſame day; That, if any one day mine, more than other, I would, by ſpecial prerogative call; τὴν ἐμὴν, Mine indeed. Now, there be but two ſuch eminent days, to ſtand for this: [1] The firſt, and the [2] laſt. Firſt, of His 2. But, as the ſon of Man. Luke 17. 22.

Geneſis; or laſt, of His Exodus. Geneſis, His coming into the world; or Exodus, His going out. That is, the firſt, of His Nativity: or the laſt, of His Paſſion. VVhich of theſe?

Not the day of His Paſſion. Luke 22. 53.

Not of His Paſſion. Firſt: that, was none of His. For, He ſaith to them that took Him: Hæc eſt hora veſtra, Yours. So, theirs it was; not, His. Secondly, It was not His Day; Nay, it was no day, neither but Tenebrarum, as he there addeth: So, night rather than day. But thirdly, without all queſtion, no day of Joy. The Heavens are darkned; the Earth quaking; the ſtones renting; every one going their ways beating their breaſts, for ſorrow: That was no ſight to rejoyce at; that no day to rejoyce in.

But of His Birth. Luke 2. 11:

Then is it, of neceſſity, to be His Birth day. That was a Day; the Angel calls it To day, To day is born: And His Day it was: for every man claims a kind of propriety, in His birth day. Men, in the day of the begining of their life: As Kings, in the day of the begining of their Reigns: As Cities, their Palilia, when the trench is firſt caſt: As Churches their Encænia, when they are firſt dedicate: So

Luke 2. 14. Men their γενέσια, when they firſt come into the world. It is too plain, this. His day then: And ſure, a day of Joy, withall. Joy in Heaven, Joy in Earth. In Heaven, for a day of Glory to God on

Luke 2. 10. high. In Earth: for a day of Peace here below, and for good will towards men; as ever, nay more than Luke 2. 11. ever, was any. The Angel ſo proclaimed it. Gaudium omni populo, A day, of joy to all people: And proclaimed it, why? Quia hodiè natus eſt. And, this omni populo (as appears now, by this text) was not onely all people, then, in being, or after to be: but, (as Leo well expreſſeth it) in præteritas ſe refudit ætates, the joy of it went back, up to the ages paſt; up even to Abraham's time, two thouſand years and more, before ever it came. I know well, this day may be taken for the whole time of His life: but it muſt be by a figure then. And, no man but ſeeth, that a day doth more literally and properly ſignifie a day, than the time of ones whole life, at large. Yet, that time too had his begining, on a day: And, that day, even for that very begining, may well challenge a better right, and nearer property in this word [day] than any longer time whatſoever. As, the very day, whereon He was firſt ſeen, firſt ſhewed to the world, as the Son of man; As the very day, whereon the firſt fruits of all the joy then, and ever ſince: ſure I am, the Fathers fix it all upon one day, and upon this day by name. So [a] Irenæus, [b] Auguſtine, [c] Cyrel ſet it down; that this day it was. This day then be it: the day of His birth. So have ye the Object.

II.

The Acts of Abraham.

Now to the three Acts: And firſt of deſire. Exultavit ut: that [Ut] is deſire. Glad and faign, Ut, that, he might ſee; that is, he deſired, he longed much, to ſee it. Gaudere ut, and vellem ut, expound one another. This day then, is dies deſiderii, or deſiderabilis. To be deſired, even of Abraham; and, if of him, of all. Of the Cauſe firſt, why: and then of the Manner, How, he deſired it.

1 His Deſire: Exultavit ut.

The Cauſe why ſhould Abraham ſo deſire to ſee this day, two thouſand years and more, after his days were at an end, and he in his grave? What was it to him? how was he concerned in it? We ſay, Omnia bona appetunt: what good had he by it? we ſay again, Indigentia deſiderii parens: what need had he of it, that he ſhould ſo deſire it? Yes: Chriſts birth he needed; he had good by; and conſequently, His Birth-day.

The cauſe of it.

Ye remember Job's Eaſter; that in all his heavineſs, this was his ſpes in ſinu, his onely comfort and joy, That well yet, his Redeemer ſhould riſe again one day. The joy of Jobs Eaſter, the ſame is the joy of Abraham's Chriſtmas: Even, that a day ſhould come, wherein his Redeemer ſhould come into the world. For, Abrahams caſe was not ſuch, but that, a Redeemer he ſtood in need of. One he ſtood in need of, and one he had: you may read it totidem verbis (Eſay 29. 22.) Thus ſaith He that Redeems Abraham. That party; Him, he needed, and Him he deſired: And deſired His day, for His ſake: diem for meum; the day for Him that was born on the day.

Will ye hear it from his own mouth? Thus he ſetteth down his own caſe, Gen. 18. (that very time, when he had this day firſt ſhewed him, the firſt glimpſe of it:) Thus complains he there, of his need, (and complaining, implies his deſire:) Et ecce ego pulvis & cinis: And lo I am but duſt and aſhes. Duſt,

Gen. 18. 27. Gen. 3. 19. is plain: it refers us to Pulvis es & in pulverem: He was that by nature, by his very creation. But, why aſhes? how come they in? aſhes he was not made of? that is not natural; that (ſure) refers to ſomewhat elſe. Aſhes (we know) come of fire, without it they are not made; ever preſuppoſe a fire precedent. So that beſides death to reſolve him into duſt, he ſaw a fire to turn him into aſhes. He ſaw

Gen. 15. 17. it in his viſion, Gen. 15. when the ſun was down, and it was night; and a great fear or horrour fell upon him; he ſaw Clibanum fumantem, a fiery furnace. Blame him not, if after ſuch a night, he deſired to ſee day, and this day; dies contra noctem, a day to viſit him from on high, after ſo fearfull a

Luke 1. 78. night as this. But this was but a viſion of the night: But, when all days and nights ſhould be at an end he ſaw, there was yet a day to ſucceed that day, which Enoch taught the world, wherein the Lord ſhould

Jud. 14. 15. come with thouſands of his Saints to execute judgment upon ſinners. VVhich day (it ſeems) Abraham took notice of. For ſpeaking to God (in the ſame Chap.) He calleth Him by this Title, Judg of the

Gen. 18. 25. world. Of which day a viſible ſign he had, before his eyes, waking, in the conſuming of the five Cities immediately after. No marvail then, though he deſired dies contra diem, a day that ſhould quit him, of the fear of that day. Inaſmuch then as duſt he was, and aſhes he was to be; duſt by creation, aſhes by condemnation; (and both theſe he confeſſes himſelf lyable unto:) he needed one, as to reſtore the ruines of the firſt, ſo to prevent the danger of the ſecond. Being in need, he deſired; deſiring, he was glad to hear of; but more glad would be, to ſee that day, that ſhould bring Him into the world: And, O when ſhall that day be! And ſure, the ſun muſt go down with us too, and what fear we ſhall then be in, or whether we ſhall ſee the fornace, I know not: but, ſure I am, that joyfull it will be then, to have a comfortable ſight and apprehenſion of the benefit and begining of this day: when the world ſhall bid us good-night, then (as S. Auguſtine expreſſeth it) videre in nocte ſæculi, diem CHRISTI.

This,

This, for the cauſe, why Abraham himſelf ſhould deſire this Ut; to ſee this day: Why, but for this day, Abraham had been but aſhes of the fornace. VVhich ſheweth, it is a benefit to ſee this day: And as a benefit, deſired by him, and as a benefit, and no ſmall benefit, vouchſafed him, (the ſight of this day.) Now, for his Manner how, how greatly he deſired it. We may take meaſure of the greatneſs of the day, by the greatneſs of his deſire. It was no day of ſmall things; for, Exultavit ut is no ſmall deſire: there is vigour, there is both paſſion and action in it. The nature of the word [Exultavit] is, He did even fetch a ſpring for joy that he ſhould ſee it. And it is not exiliit neither, but exultavit. And that is a frequentative, and ſo he did it more than once. To give a ſpring, and not once, but often; this was much, if all be well conſidered. For one to do it, one in years, faſt upon an hundred, as Abraham then was; for ſuch an one to do it, it was very much. 2 The manner of it.

1. Much. Firſt, that he ſhould not contain his affection, nor keep it in; but out it muſt, even break forth into an external act, into a bodily geſture, that all that ſtood by muſt ſee him do it.

2. Into a bodily geſture (I ſay:) But then again, that into ſuch a bodily geſture; a geſture on this faſhion. It muſt needs be he was greatly, yea ſtrangely affected with it, that it made him forget his gravity, and put a kind of Indecorum upon his age, at thoſe years to fall on ſpringing. All men will eaſily know, that (ſuch as he was) ſtayed, diſcreet, grave men will never be ſo exceeding moved, as to be brought to fetch a ſpring, but upon ſome very exceeding great occaſion.

3. Thirdly, to do all this but onely in deſire, and nothing but deſire, is yet more ſtrange than the reſt. In the fruition to joy is kindly; but in the deſire, altogether unuſual. Exultavit, cum videret may well be underſtood: Exultavit, ut videret, not ſo well. For deſire of it ſelf is a reſtleſs thing, unquiet and complaining: but a very affliction of the ſoul, it makes men, yea the very creature it ſelf (ſaith the Apoſtle) ingemiſcere (which is far from exultare) to grone for grief, not to ſpring for joy; Sad rather than glad, in that they want their deſire, Judg then, how great good is the good of this Day; that, not in the enjoying, but even in the deſiring; and that againſt the nature of deſire, did put old father Abraham into this Paſſion; and brought from him this act, the act of exultation, and made him even young again. Rom. 4.22.

But I will tell you yet of another as ſtrange. For, the ſame word, you ſhall obſerve is uſed, of the Baptiſt, while he was yet but an Embrio, and in his mothers belly. That, at the enter-view, and voice of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary, he (then, a babe) gave a ſpring in the womb of Elizabeth his mother. So that we ſee, both old and young, Abraham and Iohn Baptiſt, from the eldeſt in years, to the child unborn; it concerns all; all need it: all are bound to be glad of it: All is for the joy and honour of this day. Luke 1. 44.

And this for the firſt act, and firſt joy, joy of deſire, for there be two. There is another in the laſt word ἔχαρη. As there be two ſights; [1] Ut videret, and [2] Et vidit: ſo, two joys anſwerable, either hath his joy. And, this firſt is but Iohn Baptiſts forerunner, to the ſecond. For, all this is but the Apoſtles ſpe gaudentes, yet; but, the joy of hope onely, anticipating the other, before it come; and joying (as it were) that it ſhall joy, when that joyfull time ſhall be. Rom. 12. 12.

And, with this, we muſt begin; even with deſire, and ſeek to poſſeſs our ſouls of it. This carrieth the next, the eye: for, where the deſire is, there will the eye be alſo, and, where it is not, no proſpect thitherward; no window open, that way. Therefore, ſet that (as the needle point) right, and all the reſt will follow. For, the truth is, therefore we joy not, becauſe we ſee not; and therefore we ſee not, becauſe we deſire not. True it is, and pitie it is, Millions there be, never have true ſight of Him: Why? they have no deſire to Him. We muſt then begin there, with deſire, with ut videret, or we ſhall never come to & vidit. And, for our comfort, the very deſire of this day, or of any other good thing elſe, (if it be true and uncounterfeit,) a firſt degree it is, and it is not lightly to be accompted of. It is not nothing; to ſay, (if one can ſay, and ſay it true) exultarem ut viderem. For, of this deſire, Exultarem ut is (among other) one Character. Three there be beſides; (and lightly they go together,) and they be Succedanea (as we call them) to any good thing, which we have not, but wiſh that we had, or that we might have. As, if we cannot repent, cannot abſtain, cannot beleive, or live as we ought, theſe come in place, and expreſs yet, how we ſtand inwardly affected toward them: Even theſe four: [4] Exultarem, or gauderem ſi: [2] vellem ut: [3] metuo ne: [4] doleo quòd non. Gauderem ſi, Glad I would be, if it were: Vellem ut, and I heartily wiſh, that it were: Metuo ne, but ſure I doubt, it be not: and Doleo quòd non, ſorry I am, that it is not. Characters they be all: and if they be hearty and true, a ſign it is, the flax ſmoaketh yet: Et lignum fumigans (ſo gracious he is) the flax, if it do but ſmoke, He will not quench it. But, of all the reſt, ſpecially if it be this. For there is vigour and vehemencie, in exultarem ut. It is a fervent deſire, a kind of hunger and thirſt, a deſiderio deſideravi, this. Exultarem ut, I would do any thing, I would give any thing, to have a ſight of it. And ſuch a deſire ſhall never be fruſtrate: It ſhall ſee certainly. Eſay 42. 3.

Of Exultare ut videas, the reward ſhall be videre ut exultes: of deſiring that, we ſee not, to ſee that, we deſire. We have Abraham, the Father, in the Text; take Zachee, the ſon; for an example of it, too. He, out of a deſire to ſee Chriſt, at his coming to Iericho, and could not for the preaſs, exultavit, gave a ſpring, got him up into a tree, to have a ſight of Him. It was ſo well taken, this very deſire, as, he not onely ſaw Him, but received Him to his houſe. And our Saviour pronounceth, this Text was fulfilled in him: He was even thereby become the Son of Abraham. For, howſoever in things temporal, it may be, and is oft defeated; In things pertaining to Chriſt, and His ſight, Exultavit ut videret ſhall ever end (as here it doth) in Et vidit. And ſo we paſs to the next point of Et vidit. Luke 19. Verſe 3. Verſe 4. Luke 19. 9.

II. Abrahams second act. Et vidit. And he saw it. * Heb. 11. 13. * 1 Cor. 13. 12.

It is here (first) directly avouched, the Patriarchs, (and Abraham by name) they did not onely desire to see this day, but see it they did. See it, though they did but see it and salute it πόρρω afar off; or ἐξ ἐυτυχίας, as in a perspective glass; yet see it they did. It is but Vidit; Vidit, in genere. Any sight, any descrying will serve to verifie the Text. I say, they did not precisely know the very day of the month; I would not so be understood. But this they did: they knew and saw in genere such a day there should come, and then, come when it would; or what day of the year it would; all Joy they wished to that day, for the joy it was to bring them. This was enough for them in their estate: And more particular notice had they had, of the Month and day, this I am sure, they would never have scraped it out of their Kalendar.

How he saw it.

He saw it. But then if you ask, how he saw it? Sure, (not as they were mistaken in the Text) as if Abraham could not see His day; unless CHRIST had been in the flesh in the days of Abraham: That is one kind of seeing indeed. For so Simeon saw: (For mine eyes have seen.) But this Text must be true: vidit Abraham. Then, another there is beside. This is sure, what Simeon saw, the same saw Abraham: what Simeon saw, (I say) but not, as Simeon saw. The same Christ, both; and the same Day: though not both in the same manner.

Luke 2. 30.

But let me tell you, this of Abrahams was the better. And if Simeon had not seen him, in the same manner Abraham did, for all his viderunt oculi, he had been never the nearer. No more than were the Jews here, that hurled stones at him, and so saw him, but to no benefit, no matter of Exultation at all; of condemnation rather.

Then, if not with his eyes, how? Yes, with his eyes too, though not of the body. Which to conceive, we are to take notice, that there is in every man of us, two men: (Plato had seen so much and set it down, and (it is thought) the Apostle took it from him:) [1] An outward, and [2] an inward man: (Rom. 7. 22. 2 Cor. 4. 6.) Now, if there be an inward man, we must allow him senses as a man; he must have eyes. So he hath: (Eph. 1. 18) Having the eyes of your understanding lightned. Here are eyes; by them did Abraham; and even by them (and by no other) do we see Him.

Those eyes many have beside, but see him not for want of light. By what light saw he? He was a Prophet, and as a Prophet he might be in the spirit, and have the vision clearly represented before him, in luce prophetiæ. But without all question, a faithful man he was, and so, certain it is, he saw it in lumine fidei, the light of faith, which faith is the clearness or evidence of things not seen, (Ye know the place.) Not seen: nay even of things invisible. In the 27 verse of the same Chapter, it is said, Moses was as if he had seen the invisible. By faith, that was: and in Abraham the Father of the faithful, the same faith was. Both saw by the same light, and by it Christ was as verily present unto them, as if they had seen him, this day, in the manger with the Shepherds; or with Simeon, had had him in their arms, and beheld him. Thus he, and thus we. For it is all the light he had, or we have, to see him by.

Gal. 3. 9. Heb. 11. 1. Rom. 4. 11.

But where was this, and when? The text is enough, so it was, if we rest not in that, but would know what the Fathers have conceived of the place and time; this they hold: That he saw his Birth, at the valley of Mamre, (Gen. 18.) And he saw his Passion in the Mount of Moria, (Gen. 22.) but, this Day he saw at Mamre. (Gen. 18.) Then was Christ in person there, one of the three; then made Abraham the confession we before spoke of. Then is twice mention of the time of life: which is this time, if ever any. Then Isaac was delivered as a gage; and then was his first feast of joy, down went his fat heifer: So all met at the time just.

Gen. 17. 19. 18. 10.

Gen. 24. 2.

And, so certainly he then saw it there, as after (we see) he sware his servant on his thigh: his thigh became Ad sanctæ Dei Evangelia: He bad his servant lay his hand on his thigh, and swear by the God of heaven. Et quid vult Deus cœli ad femur Abrahæ? What hath the God of Heaven to do with Abrahams thigh? (saith S. Augustine) and his answer is, Nisi quia, But onely because he saw (certainly) the Son of God was from thence to take flesh: Semen Abrahæ de femore Abrahæ: and so to make us this blessed day. And this of Christ's visus: And now of Abraham's gavisus, the end of his sight and desire both.

3 Abrahams third act, Et gavisus est. Prov. 13. 12. Gen. 2. 9.

He that was glad he should see it, must needs be glad when he did see it. If Exultavit ut videret, then Ut vidit, ut exultavit? when he saw how glad a man was he, now his desire was accomplished. And the desire accomplished (saith Salomon) is a tree of life, and the tree of life (we know) is in the midst, is the very center of all the joys of Paradise. Now we cannot possibly take a view of these his joys better, than out of the promise; which was the very list (or brief) of all he was either to see, or to joy in.

Gen. 26. 4.

We begin with the blessed joy of Benedicentur omnes gentes in semine tuo: Benedicentur, shall be blessed. And that is of two sorts: [1] Blessed from: and [2] Blessed with: and either hath his joys.

1, 2. Psal. 16 9.

Blessed from: from pulvis & cinis; dust of the grave, and ashes of the furnace. His soul blessed from the Clibanus fumans, which he saw. Moreover also his flesh should rest in hope; hope of rising again from the dust. Else how could God be called the God of Abraham? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. Abraham then being dead, should live again, and then Nunc dimittis may he say, no less than Simeon. These two joys first. And these two fit well the words of Joy in the Verse: [1] Exultavit that is a motion of the body; for the bodies deliverance from dust: [2] Gavisus, that is a fruit of the spirit, for the spirits redemption from the furnace. These are his two first joys.

Mat. 22. 32. Luke 2.

3, 4. Heb. 11. 13.

Then two more, in blessed with or concerning. Concerning first his two gages, Isaac and Canaan: Isaac, of Christ; Canaan, of the Kingdom of Heaven. And this Joy was surely great: and if the joy of the Pledg (or Gage) were great, far greater was the joy of the Inheritance it self which he so greatly desired.

deſired. For, both he was, (ſaith the Apoſtle) and he bare himſelf like a ſtranger here upon earth; ſhewing thereby that he ſought for another, a better, an abiding City, whoſe builder is God, and that in Heaven. For that it was no earthly thing which was the object of his Joy, nothing but heaven; thence it may appear, that when God promiſed him, his ſeed ſhould be as the duſt of the earth, (Gen. 13.) It never moved him; it was no object, that of his faith or deſire: not ſo much as a Credidit follows upon it. But after, (in the 15. Chap.) when God bade him look up and told him, they ſhould be as the ſtars of heaven: then preſently follows, Credidit Abraham Deo, he caught hold of that; believed that, ſtraight; and it was counted to him for righteouſneſs: even that his faith, touching (no duſt of the earth, but touching) heaven, and heavenly bleſſings. And theſe are the two next Joys, of bleſſed with: And theſe two anſwer the two ſights, Ut videret, the Pledg: and Et vidit, the Inheritance.

Gen. 15. 5. Verſe 6.

Now theſe four, had they been granted to himſelf and to his own houſe, well might it have been gaviſus with him: how much more then that it ſhould, by him, have his extent, and ſtretch to Omnes familiæ, Omnes gentes, all kindreds, all nations of the earth: be gaudium omni populo, be a day of Joy to both Hemiſpheres; the joy of generality; that all the world ſhould be the better for him? And this his fifth, the joy of Omnes gentes. 5

Gen. 26. 4.

And glad might he have been to have received all theſe, by whomſoever: yea, though a meer ſtranger. That all theſe then ſhould come to him, not by any ſtrange party, but by one to come out of his own bowels; that his ſeed ſhould be his Saviour, and out of his root ſhould riſe his Redeemer; All this Joy ſhould grow from the fruit of his own body: That he, that Nuſquam Angelos, in no wiſe them; would take on him the ſeed of Abraham: This may (I doubt not) be reckoned for the ſixth, even the joy of in ſemine tuo. 6

Heb. 2, 16.

Now, to in ſemine Abrahæ, add in ſinu Abrahæ, and ſo have we ſeven complete; That his boſom ſhould be the receptacle of all that ſhould enter into bliſs: Whoſoever there entertained, in ſinu Abrahæ it is to be. This is the laſt; that ſemen Abrahæ ſhall bring us to ſinus Abrahæ; and make us partakers of his heavenly joys there. But we muſt begin with in ſemine to day; that after, in his good time, in ſinu may follow. And this for Gaviſus eſt, and for Abraham. 7.

Now to our ſelves. And the firſt point is, whether we will be out with the Jews, or in with Abraham, in the fellowſhip of this days joy. In with Abraham, we ſure. If all be well weighed, we have greater cauſe to deſire the day, than he; we have more need of it (I am ſure:) Duſt, as he; but more in danger to be made aſhes than he, by Manaſſe's argument in his prayer. The benefit of his Day, and the like, they do nothing ſo much concern the Juſt, (ſuch as Abraham) as they do ſinful Manaſſes, and ſuch as he. And ſuch are we: and ever, the more ſinner, the more it imports him to love the dawning of this day. Greater cauſe we have than he. The Reference to us. 1 Our deſire.

And for our ſight, we have that clearer than he by much. For, though we ſee, as he; and he, as we; both by the light of Faith: yet he in the faith of Propheſie, yet to come; we in the faith of Miſtery, now paſt: and there is great odds between theſe two. We have the record of humane Writers, many; but of Divine, all: that this day is come and gone: Even of ſuch as ſaw him with the eyes, both of the inward and outward man. 2 Our ſight.

The greater cauſe, and the better ſight: Then is our joy alſo to abound, and be above his. So it ſhould (ſure.) And we would ſeem as if it ſo were; we multiply the days, and where he had but one, we hold twelve together, as if we would exceed him twelve to one in this joy. Being then ſo bound, Joy agreeth well with us at this time. The Text invites us to it, the whole ſtrain from the firſt word to the laſt. It begins with Exultavit, and ends in Gaviſus ſum. 3 Our Joy.

Only that from whence we take our joy, from thence we take the rules of it: which be three. [1] One of the two parts, Exltavit and Gaviſus eſt: [2] One of the end, Diem meum: And [3] the laſt of our pattern, ſicut Abraham pater noſter, to expreſs it as he did.

Here be two ſorts: [1] One, Exultation a motion of the body: [2] the other, Joy a fruit of the ſpirit: I am for both. I ſpeak not againſt Exultavit, let the body have his part. Reaſon would, the body and the fleſh ſhould be allowed their parts, ſince all the joy is for Corpus aptâſti mihi, and that Verbum caro factum eſt, the Word is become fleſh: that Chriſt hath gotten him a body. But let not Exultavit be all whole and ſole: then we joy but by halves: we loſe half our joy, and the better half: for the joy of the ſpirit is the better part when all is done. The fleſh fades daily, ſo do the joys of it: the ſpirit is the better part, that ſhall not be taken from us. That of the ſpirit ſhould exceed the joy of the outward man, as far as Et vidit (to which it is joyned) doth exceed ut videret. It ſhould ſo: Well, in the mean while I would they might but part equally: At leaſt not to ſtay ſo long, not to make ſo large allowance of time and coſt for the fleſh, as we leave little or nothing for the ſpirit's part. Sure ſomewhat would be done; ſome ſpecial uſe of this Feaſt, that may tarry by us, when theſe of the fleſh, we ſhall either have forgotten, or remember but with ſmall joy. Time will come, that one leſſon in this kind, learned this day, and laid up well, will do us more pleaſure, than all the ſports we ſhall ſee the whole twelve days after: That we come not behind Abraham half in half. 1 The firſt rule of it. That Exultavit exceed not Gaviſus eſt. Luke 10. 42.

Our next Caveat would be, that we look this our joy be for Diem meum, and that our joy in Diem, be for Meum. For Meum is here the Subſtantive, it is Chriſt: and Diem, but an accident, or adjective to it. That is, that we joy in it as it is His, (Chriſts.) As His, do we not ſo? As whoſe elſe? To ſpeak plainly, the common ſort, generally all (ſome few except) wiſh for it, and joy in it; not as it is Chriſts; but as it is ſomewhat elſe: That is, as it is a time of chear and feaſting, as it is a time of ſports and revelling. Exultavit ut videret, what? Why, that we ſhall now fare well: look you, that 2 The ſecond: that it be for Diem meum.

II. Abrahams second act. Et vidit. And he saw it. * Heb. 11. 13. * 1 Cor. 13. 12.

It is here (first) directly avouched, the Patriarchs, (and Abraham by name) they did not onely desire to see this day, but see it they did. See it, though they did but see it and salute it πόρρω afar off; or ὡς ἐν κατόπτρῳ, as in a perspective glass; yet see it they did. It is but Vidit; Vidit, in genere. Any sight, any descrying will serve to verifie the Text. I say, they did not precisely know the very day of the month; I would not so be understood. But this they did: they knew and saw in genere such a day there should come, and then, come when it would; or what day of the year it would; all Joy they wished to that day, for the joy it was to bring them. This was enough for them in their estate: And more particular notice had they had, of the Month and day, this I am sure, they would never have scraped it out of their Kalendar.

How he saw it. Luke 2. 30.

He saw it. But then if you ask, how he saw it? Sure, (not as they were mistaken in the Text) as if Abraham could not see His day; unless CHRIST had been in the flesh in the days of Abraham: That is one kind of seeing indeed. For so Simeon saw: (For mine eyes have seen.) But this Text must be true: vidit Abraham. Then, another there is beside. This is sure, what Simeon saw, the same saw Abraham: what Simeon saw, (I say) but not, as Simeon saw. The same Christ, both; and the same Day: though not both in the same manner.

Verse 59.

But let me tell you, this of Abrahams was the better. And if Simeon had not seen him, in the same manner Abraham did, for all his viderunt oculi, he had been never the nearer. No more than were the Jews here, that hurled stones at him, and so saw him, but to no benefit, no matter of Exultation at all; of condemnation rather.

Then, if not with his eyes, how? Yes, with his eyes too, though not of the body. Which to conceive, we are to take notice, that there is in every man of us, two men: (Plato had seen so much and set it down, and (it is thought) the Apostle took it from him:) [1] An outward, and [2] an inward man: (Rom. 7. 22. 2 Cor. 4. 6.) Now, if there be an inward man, we must allow him senses as a man; he must have eyes. So he hath: (Eph. 1. 18) Having the eyes of your understanding lightned. Here are eyes; by them did Abraham; and even by them (and by no other) do we see Him.

Gal. 3. 9. Heb. 11. 1.

Those eyes many have beside, but see him not for want of light. By what light saw he? He was a Prophet, and as a Prophet he might be in the spirit, and have the vision clearly represented before him, in luce prophetiæ. But without all question, a faithful man he was, and so, certain it is, he saw it in lumine fidei, the light of faith, which faith is the clearness or evidence of things not seen, (Ye know the place.) Not seen: nay even of things invisible. In the 27 verse of the same Chapter, it is said, Moses Rom. 4. 11. was as if he had seen the invisible. By faith, that was: and in Abraham the Father of the faithful, the same faith was. Both saw by the same light, and by it Christ was as verily present unto them, as if they had seen him, this day, in the manger with the Shepherds; or with Simeon, had had him in their arms, and beheld him. Thus he, and thus we. For it is all the light he had, or we have, to see him by.

Gen. 17. 19. 18. 10.

But where was this, and when? The text is enough, so it was, if we rest not in that, but would know what the Fathers have conceived of the place and time; this they hold: That he saw his Birth, at the valley of Mamre, (Gen. 18.) And he saw his Passion in the Mount of Moria, (Gen. 22.) but, this Day he saw at Mamre. (Gen. 18.) Then was Christ in person there, one of the three; then made Abraham the confession we before spoke of. Then is twice mention of the time of life: which is this time, if ever any. Then Isaac was delivered as a gage; and then was his first feast of joy, down went his fat heifer: So all met at the time just.

Gen. 24. 2.

And, so certainly he then saw it there, as after (we see) he sware his servant on his thigh: his thigh became Ad sanctæ Dei Evangelia: He bad his servant lay his hand on his thigh, and swear by the God of heaven. Et quid vult Deus cœli ad femur Abrahæ? What hath the God of Heaven to do with Abrahams thigh? (saith S. Augustine) and his answer is, Nisi quia, But onely because he saw (certainly) the Son of God was from thence to take flesh: Semen Abrahæ de femore Abrahæ: and so to make us this blessed day. And this of Christ's visus: And now of Abraham's gavisus, the end of his sight and desire both.

3 Abrahams third act, Et gavisus est. Prov. 13. 12. Gen. 2. 9.

He that was glad he should see it, must needs be glad when he did see it. If Exultavit ut videret, then Ut vidit, ut exultavit? when he saw how glad a man was he, now his desire was accomplished. And the desire accomplished (saith Salomon) is a tree of life, and the tree of life (we know) is in the midst, is the very center of all the joys of Paradise. Now we cannot possibly take a view of these his joys better, than out of the promise; which was the very list (or brief) of all he was either to see, or to joy in.

Gen. 26. 4.

We begin with the blessed joy of Benedicentur omnes gentes in semine tuo: Benedicentur, shall be blessed. And that is of two sorts: [1] Blessed from: and [2] Blessed with: and either hath his joys.

1, 2. Psal. 16 9.

Blessed from: from pulvis & cinis; dust of the grave, and ashes of the fornace. His soul blessed from the Clibanus fumans, which he saw. Moreover also his flesh should rest in hope; hope of rising again from the dust. Else how could God be called the God of Abraham? God is not the God of the Mat. 22. 32. dead, but of the living. Abraham then being dead, should live again, and then Nunc dimittis may Luke 2. he say, no less than Simeon. These two joys first. And these two fit well the words of Joy in the Verse: [1] Exultavit that is a motion of the body; for the bodies deliverance from dust: [2] Gavisus, that is a fruit of the spirit, for the spirits redemption from the fornace. These are his two first joys.

3, 4. Heb. 11. 13.

Then two more, in blessed with or concerning. Concerning first his two gages, Isaac and Canaan: Isaac, of Christ; Canaan, of the Kingdom of Heaven. And this Joy was surely great: and if the joy of the Pledg (or Gage) were great, far greater was the joy of the Inheritance it self which he so greatly desired.

desired. For, both he was, (saith the Apostle) and he bare himself like a stranger here upon earth; shewing thereby that he sought for another, a better, an abiding City, whose builder is God, and that in Heaven. For that it was no earthly thing which was the object of his Joy, nothing but heaven; thence it may appear, that when God promised him, his seed should be as the dust of the earth, (Gen. 13.) It never moved him; it was no object, that of his faith or desire: not so much as a Credidit follows upon it. But after, (in the 15. Chap.) when God bade him look up and told him, they should be as the stars of heaven: then presently follows, Credidit Abraham Deo, he caught hold of that; believed that, straight; and it was counted to him for righteousness: even that his faith, touching (no dust of the earth, but touching) heaven, and heavenly blessings. And these are the two next Joys, of blessed with: And these two answer the two sights, Ut videret, the Pledg: and Et vidit, the Inheritance. Gen 13.16. Gen. 15. 5. Verse 6.

Now these four, had they been granted to himself and to his own house, well might it have been gavisus with him: how much more then that it should, by him, have his extent, and stretch to Omnes familiæ, Omnes gentes, all kindreds, all nations of the earth: be gaudium omni populo, be a day of Joy to both Hemispheres; the joy of generality; that all the world should be the better for him? And this his fifth, the joy of Omnes gentes. 5 Gen. 26. 4.

And glad might he have been to have received all these, by whomsoever: yea, though a meer stranger. That all these then should come to him, not by any strange party, but by one to come out of his own bowels; that his seed should be his Saviour, and out of his root should rise his Redeemer; All this Joy should grow from the fruit of his own body: That he, that Nusquam Angelos, in no wise them; would take on him the seed of Abraham: This may (I doubt not) be reckoned for the sixth, even the joy of in semine tuo. 6 Heb. 2, 16.

Now, to in semine Abrahæ, add in sinu Abrahæ, and so have we seven complete; That his bosom should be the receptacle of all that should enter into bliss: Whosoever there entertained, in sinu Abrahæ it is to be. This is the last; that semen Abrahæ shall bring us to sinus Abrahæ; and make us partakers of his heavenly joys there. But we must begin with in semine to day; that after, in his good time, in sinu may follow. And this for Gavisus est, and for Abraham. 7. Luke 16. 23.

Now to our selves. And the first point is, whether we will be out with the Jews, or in with Abraham, in the fellowship of this days joy. In with Abraham, we sure. If all be well weighed, we have greater cause to desire the day, than he; we have more need of it (I am sure:) Dust, as he; but more in danger to be made ashes than he, by Manasse's argument in his prayer. The benefit of his Day, and the like, they do nothing so much concern the Just, (such as Abraham) as they do sinful Manasses, and such as he. And such are we: and ever, the more sinner, the more it imports him to love the dawning of this day. Greater cause we have than he. The Reference to us. 1 Our desire.

And for our sight, we have that clearer than he by much. For, though we see, as he; and he, as we; both by the light of Faith: yet he in the faith of Prophesie, yet to come; we in the faith of History, now past: and there is great odds between these two. We have the record of humane Writers, many; but of Divine, all: that this day is come and gone: Even of such as saw him with the eyes, both of the inward and outward man. 2 Our sight.

The greater cause, and the better sight: Then is our joy also to abound, and be above his. So it should (sure.) And we would seem as if it so were; we multiply the days, and where he had but one, we hold twelve together, as if we would exceed him twelve to one in this joy. Being then so bound, Joy agreeth well with us at this time. The Text invites us to it, the whole strain from the first word to the last. It begins with Exultavit, and ends in Gavisus sum. 3 Our Joy.

Only that from whence we take our joy, from thence we take the rules of it: which be three. [1] One of the two parts, Exltavit and Gavisus est: [2] One of the end, Diem meum: And [3] the last of our pattern, sicut Abraham pater noster, to express it as he did.

Here be two sorts: [1] One, Exultation a motion of the body: [2] the other, Joy a fruit of the spirit: I am for both. I speak not against Exultavit, let the body have his part. Reason would, the body and the flesh should be allowed their parts, since all the joy is for Corpus aptâsti mihi, and that Verbum caro factum est, the Word is become flesh: that Christ hath gotten him a body. But let not Exultavit be all whole and sole: then we joy but by halves: we lose half our joy, and the better half: for the joy of the spirit is the better part when all is done. The flesh fades daily, so do the joys of it: the spirit is the better part, that shall not be taken from us. That of the spirit should exceed the joy of the outward man, as far as Et vidit (to which it is joyned) doth exceed ut videret. It should so: Well, in the mean while I would they might but part equally: At least not to stay so long, not to make so large allowance of time and cost for the flesh, as we leave little or nothing for the spirit's part. Sure somewhat would be done; some special use of this Feast, that may tarry by us, when these of the flesh, we shall either have forgotten, or remember but with small joy. Time will come, that one lesson in this kind, learned this day, and laid up well, will do us more pleasure, than all the sports we shall see the whole twelve days after: That we come not behind Abraham half in half. 1 The first rule of it. That Exultavit exceed not Gavisus est. Luke 10. 42.

Our next Caveat would be, that we look this our joy be for Diem meum, and that our joy in Diem, be for Meum. For Meum is here the Substantive, it is Christ: and Diem, but an accident, or adjective to it. That is, that we joy in it as it is His, (Christs.) As His, do we not so? As whose else? To speak plainly, the common sort, generally all (some few except) wish for it, and joy in it; not as it is Christs; but as it is somewhat else: That is, as it is a time of chear and feasting, as it is a time of sports and revelling. Exultavit ut videret, what? Why, that we shall now fare well: look you, that 2 The second: that it be for Diem meum.

is it: As it is dies epuli, not Christi. What farther? that we shall now see pastimes: that is, as it is dies ludi, not Christi. Put both together, down they sate to feast, up they rose to play: so have you the Golden Calves Holy-day right. As it is dies vituli, not Christi. This is not diem, for meum: In very deed, this is to desire Him for the Day, not the Day for Him. Christs day is not desired for Christ, Christ is the least part of His own Feast. If it be but matter of the belly, the Jews here could have been intreated to have kept this day, so as dies Epuli. For, before (at the 6. Chap.) when their bellies were filled, then (and never but then) This is the Prophet, this is he that should come into the world. This was all they then made; all that many now do make, of Christs coming into the world: That they may fill their bellies. Never care for Benedicentur, no more than Esau: but for bene vescentur; and if bene vestientur too, then all is well.

Exod. 32. 6.

Or, if it be but shews and matter of sight, Herod he was glad to see Christ, too: and it is the same word, which is here, glad, and very glad, λίαν ἐχάρη: But why was it? Because he hoped to have seen him done some strange feats. This pertaineth rather to Sara's laughter, than Abrahams joy: There is a difference between Sara's laughter, and Abrahams joy. Take heed that we change not Abrahams joy into Sara's laughter.

Luke 22. 8.

The III Rule: Sicut Abraham

Now last, sicut Abraham. He is propounded here to us, as our pattern we to express our joy, as he did his, upon the day of his sight, at the plain of Mamre. So we shall begin right. Two things he did: First, he got them (the three) to turn in to him. The same would Christ do to us, this day. That our joy may be suitable, to turn in hither: The begining of the joy of His day, would be in his House, So the place and the time would agree well. So He saith Himself, Latificabo eos in domo mea, the first thing I will do, I will make them joyfull in mine House. There first to satisfie us with the pleasures of Her house, wherewith (God He knows) we are soon satisfied. Well, this is done; here we are, (and much adoe too, and long it is first) but, here we are.

1 Gen. 18. 3. Esay 56. 7.

2 Gen. 18. 5.

The next was, when they were turned in, Abraham said, Let me set somewhat before you, Ideo enim declinâstis. For, even for this, are ye turned in hither: and so made his Feast. There is indeed no solemn entertainment or Joy, without a Feast. Christ will be, in all respects, as courteous as Abraham. He saith, Let me set something before you too, for therefore are you turned in hither, He invites us to His Feast, (His Church (so) doth in His name:) Even this day, prepares and sets Christs Feast before us, wherein He offers Himself to us. Not as the object of one sense onely, (of sight) as to Abraham in the Text: but as the object of two, Sight and Taste; Gustate & videte, both. And we may not take the one, and leave the other; but, since both be offered, receive both. For, we are come hither for this cause: Here then shew your Joy, in His Feast day, by partaking His Feast, on His Day, the onely Feast of all the rest, for which the soul is the better. Thus shall we with joy keep this day aright.

Psalm 34. 8.

And here now one day calls another: this day of His calls to mind another day of His, called so in twenty places (His Day:) And called [That day] in plain reference to this. So to joy this day, as, that day, we may joy also. As this, His day, because it is the day of His first coming: so that, His likewise, because it is the day of His coming again. A day (howsoever we do with this) which we must all see: Abraham, the Iews, we and all. Onely, that we see that Day with joy: that we so demean our selves, in this, as that also may prove a Festival with us, even the last and greatest day of the Feast, now begun in this. All will be, how to make that a Day of joy to us, when we see it: To have that day rise clear and chearfull to us, will be the joy of all joys. For here, first as we see but in part, so we can joy but in part: as our sight, so our joy imperfect. But there, we shall see as we are seen; our sight being perfect, so shall our joy be: Perfect sight, and perfect joy. And besides, that is another manner of day than this, or any day here: a day that shall never go down: No more shall the joy of it. And it shall not endure for twelve days, or be a feast of a fortnight; but shall be from month to month, from Iubile to Iubile, or ever and ever. To the joy of which Feast; or to the Feast of which joy, by, &c.

2 Cor. 13. 12.

A SER-

A SERMON

Preached before the

Kings Maiesty,

At WHITE-HAL, on Sunday the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXIV. Being Christmas Day.

ESAY Chap. VIII. Verse XIV.

Ecce, Virgo concipiet, & pariet filium, & vocabitur nomen Ejus IMMANUEL.

Behold, a Virgin ſhall conceive, and bear a Son; and She ſhall call His Name IMMANUEL.

OF all the VVriters of the Old Teſtament, the Prophet Eſay hath the honour, to be the firſt, that is vouched in the New. And, of all the places, this place, the honor to be firſt the of all; even, in the firſt Evangeliſt, S. Matthew; and in the very firſt Chapter of him. VVe may well think, S. Matthew would be carefull, to make choiſe of a very prime and pregnant place, to ſet it (as it were) in the front of his Goſpel. This is much honour, S. Matthew doth it. Mat. 1. 23.

But, the Angel Gabriel doth it more, (Luke 1.) who takes this verſe, as it ſtands, word for word, and makes it ſtand for His Annuntiation, or Meſſage, to the Bleſſed Virgin without any alteration: not ſo much, as the Ecce left out. Luke 1. 31.

The tenour of it is, all about a Child to be born; a child with an Ecce: in whom, and in whoſe birth, God ſhould be with us: So with us, as never before. On whoſe ſo being with us, depends all our well or evil being, here, and for ever. For, better not be at all, than be without Him: and, having Him, we need nothing elſe: for, in ipſo omnia, in Him is all. Col. 1. 17.

The Eunuch's queſtion falls fitly in, here: Of whom ſpeaks the Prophet this? VVho is His Mother? VVho the Child? S. Matthew will be as good to us, as S. Philip was to him: who, where he enrols it, tells us, who, the Mother, the Bleſſed Virgin: who, the Child, our Bleſſed Saviour. VVho elſe? No Virgin ever bare child, but She: no Child, ever, nobiſcum Deus, (and, ſo Deus) but He. There is none other to lay claim to it, but they. Acts 8. 34.

Ecce hath in it, two Powers, [1] One for the ear; to awaken it to ſome matter more than ordinary. [2] Another, The Diviſion.

I. II. [1] Another, for the eye; to direct it by pointing to ſome certainty: As here; to two certain perſons: the Mother, and the Child. And ſhews us, two ſtrange ſights, in them, Mater, Virgo; and Deus, Homo: A Virgin, to become a Mother; God, to become man. A Virgin, to bear; God, to be born.

1, 2, 3. In both, and in either of them, three points are offered to us. [1] Ecce concipiet: [2] Ecce pariet: [3] Ecce vocabit nomen. Our Saviour Chriſts firſt triplicity: [1] The Myſterie of His Holy Incarnation, in concipiet: [2] His Holy Nativity, in pariet: [3] His Circumciſion, in vocabit nomen. And, every one of theſe three, makes a ſeveral Feaſt. Ecce concipiet, the Annunciation: Et pariet, this Feaſt, of the Birth of our Lord: Et vocabit nomen, New-years day, when His Name was given.

Matth. 1:18. But, we apply it to this Feaſt. So doth S. Matthew, in his Inſpeximus of it; to the Birth of Chriſt. The birth of Chriſt (ſaith he) was on this faſhion: And then, brings in this Record out of Eſay. As if, this Ecce did in particular point at this day. As (in truth) we ſtand not much upon His conceiving, (now He is born ſpecially, as, born He is:) Ecce pariet is the Point. For, then we ſee Him, take Him in our arms; then, He is with us, indeed. And, when was that? Ecce pariet (ſaith the Text:) Ecce peperit, (ſaith the day,) this very day. This is the chief.

But, finding them here all, we will deal with them all. [1] Chriſt, as Embrio, in His Conception: [2] Chriſt as ἀπτιγενητος Χριστος, a new-born babe, but yet ἀνωνυμος without a name: [3] And Chriſt with His full Chriſtendom, as named; and named with this name here in the Text, the Name of Immanuel.

Of which three, ye may reduce the firſt two [conceived, and born] to His Nature: And (to make two, to two) of the later, make two more; Vocabit, and Nomen, His Name, and His Vocation, (For, in His Name, is His Vocation,) To bring God to us; to make God with us: Him to be with us: that we may be with Him for ever. Nobiſcum Deus, the way: Nos cum Deo, the end: which is (and ſo may be) the end of the Text, and of the day, and of us all. Nothing more worth our ſight, than this Birth: nor more worth our hearing, than this Name.

I. Ecce Virgo concipiet.

ECce ſpreads it ſelf over the whole Text, may be repeated, at every point of it: But, it firſt points to Ecce Virgo. There, we may make a ſtay: there, is a block in our way, by the Jews. In no one place, doth that of the Apoſtle's ſpeech appear, that, at the reading of the Propheſies of Chriſt, the vail is laid over their hearts: no where, how true the Proverb is, that Malice will even blind a man, as, here in this. This Verſe ſo dazles them, as, fain would they turn another way, and not ſee, that they do. They ſee no Virgin here: Eſay's word [Alma] ſay they, is but a young woman; and, not a Virgin, properly. But, they ſay againſt their own knowledg, in ſo ſaying. For, firſt: Beſide the nature of the word, the very energie gives as much. For, it is, of Alam, and, that is, to cover: and ſo (properly) is one, that is yet covered, and never yet known: oppoſed to them, that have been uncovered, and known, after the Hebrew phraſe.

2 Gen. 24. 43, 55, 57. Exod. 2. 8. 3 Cant. 2. 2. 4

And, beſide the uſe of the word, for a virgin, in other places. Rebecca (then, a virgin) called by this name, Gen. 24. And Miriam, (then but ſix years old) called by it, likewiſe, Exod. 2.

And, beſide their own taking of the word, they themſelves (the more ancient of them, ſo) in their Targum, this very word Alamoth (Cant. 2.) they gloſs and paraphraſe it by Betuloth, the proper word for virgins: where it ſtands, this day, to be ſeen.

Beſides all this, ſee whither their malice carrieth them, by denying this; even to over-turn Propheſie, Prophet, and all. For, he calls us to ſee a ſign; and that with an Ecce: And, what is that? if it be but a young woman, to conceive, and, no virgin; where is the ſign? what is become of the Ecce? It is no ſign, or wonder, unleſs it be beſide the courſe of Nature: And, is it any whit beſide the courſe of Nature, for a young woman, to be with child? Therefore, take away Virgo: and away with the Ecce; down with the ſign. Thus, rather than to bear witneſs to the truth, ſtickt they not, to expoſe the Word of God (and ſo, God Himſelf) to ſcorn: make the Prophet, or (as S. Matthew well ſaith) God, by the Prophet, to ſpeak idly: give them a ſign, that is no ſign; tell them of a marvel, not to be marvelled at.

Matth. 1. 22. Reject them then, and read confidently, as S. Matthew doth, Behold, a virgin: With Him, reſt hardly, on the skill and integrity of all the Seventy; that more than an hundred years, before it came to paſs, turned it παρθενος (in Greek) that is, a Virgin; who could skill of their own tongue, better than any Kimchi, or Albo, or any Rabbin of them all. This, for Ecce Virgo.

2 2 Ecce concipiet.

And, look what work we had with the Iew, about Ecce Virgo, the like ſhall we have with the Gentile, about Virgo concipiet. To conceive this conceiving; to joyn theſe two, a Virgin, and yet conceive, or bear; or, conceive and bear, and yet be a Virgin. For, before the birth; yea, before the conceiving come, the Virginity is gone. True, in Nature; but this is a ſign, and ſo above nature. And, in Reaſon, ſo: but this, is niſi crediderit is, non intelliget is, to be believed, otherwiſe not to be underſtood, (as, a little before was ſaid.) For, what God can do, Faith can believe; Reaſon cannot comprehend. But, this, it can: that, we do God no great favour (as well ſaith S. Auguſtine) Si Deum fatemur, &c. If we confeſs, God can do ſomewhat, which we confeſs, our reaſon cannot reach.

Luke 1. 34. Luke 1. 35. The Bleſſed Virgin her ſelf, while ſhe ſtood upon a reaſon, upon quia non cognoſco virum, asked, How it might be? But, reſted in the Angels reſolution: and ſo let us. Which was of two ſorts: Firſt, That the Holy Ghoſt ſhould be Agent in it, and the Power of the moſt High bring it to paſs. That, which, of it ſelf, ſeemeth not credible, put the Author to it, put to Ex Spiritu ſancto, and it will ſeem not incredible.

Specially

Specially (and, that is the second;) If we ſet another by it, as unlikely as it, and done, though: As this Ecce of the Virgin, the Angel exemplifies, by another Ecce, of Zacharies, in a manner, as hard; which yet fell out at the ſame time. For, Elizabeth, being barren, firſt by nature, then by age; and ſo wanting power, to conceive: ſhe was (then) gone ſix months with child. Now, the want of power to conceive, is no leſs material, to hinder the conception, every way; than want of the ſoil, no leſs, than the want of ſeed. He that could ſupply that, could alſo this. He, that do, it without one; do it without the other. They were Couſins, (the Bleſſed Virgin, and ſhe:) And their Signs were ſo, too. One of them made credible, by the other. 2 Luke 1. 36.

But, I ask S. Pauls queſtion: Why ſhould it be thought a thing incredible, this to the Gentiles; If (as their Religion taught them) they admitted of Minerva's birth, or Pyrrha's progenie, they need not make ſtrange, at this. If they ſay, the God of Nature is not bound to the rules of Nature: we ſay the ſame. And yet, even in nature, we ſee it made not altogether incredible. The light paſſing thorow a body, the body yet remaining whole: And it is put therefore into the Verſe, to pattern this, Lucè penetratur, &c. The light cometh thorow the glaſs, yet the glaſs is not periſhed. No more, than the light of Heaven, paſſing thorow, breaketh the glaſs: no more, did the God of heaven, by his paſſage, violate any whit, the Virginity of his Mother; if we will allow God the maker of the light, to do as much, as the light he hath made. Acts 26. 8.

But, I hold ever beſt, to let every thing reſt upon his own baſe, or bottom: Natural, upon Reaſon; Supernatural, upon Faith. And, this is Supernatural: In which, tota ratio facti eſt in potentia facientis: the power of the doer is the reaſon of the thing done. God is the Doer; cujus dicere, eſt facere, to whom it is as eaſie to do it, as to ſay it. As the Angel concluded, ſo do I: With GOD is nothing impoſſible: And here are both: and, where they meet, they make no leſs a miracle than Mater and Virgo, or Deus and Homo; Even Fides and Ratio. Luke 1. 37. Mark 9. 23.

And this, for Virgo concipiet.

II.

Now, to the three particulars: and firſt, concipiet. To make him man, it is well known, there wanted not other ways: from the mold, as Adam; from a rib of fleſh, as Eve. No need then of concipiet. Yes, for he was not to be man onely, but to be the Son of man; the name in the Text, Filius, and the name that for the moſt-part, he giveth himſelf, and ſeemeth moſt to delight in. But, Adam was not ſon to the mold; nor Eve, daughter to Adam. And, a Son, no way but by concipiet. And, howſoever, of the body of man, there may engender that which is not of the ſame kind: yet by way of conception there cometh of man nothing but man; nothing but of the ſame nature and ſubſtance, with that he was conceived of. 1 Chriſt an Embrio. Et concipiet.

This we are to hold: To conceive is more than to receive. It is ſo to receive, as we yield ſomewhat of our own alſo. A veſſel is not ſaid to conceive the liquor that is put into it: why? becauſe it yields nothing from it ſelf. The bleſſed Virgin is; and therefore is, becauſe ſhe did: She did both give and take. Give of her own ſubſtance, whereof his body was framed: and take or receive power from the Holy Ghoſt, whereby was ſupplied the office and the efficacie of the maſculine ſeed. This is concipiet.

And this word is the bane of divers hereſies. That of the Manichee; that held he had no true body. That had been, Virgo decipiet, not concipiet: Not conceive him, but deceive us. And that of the Valentinian (revived lately in the Anabaptiſt) that held he had a true body; but made in heaven, and ſent into her. That had been recipiet, but not concipiet: Received him ſhe had; conceived ſhe had not.

From which his Conceiving, we may conceive his great love to us-ward. Love, not onely condeſcending, to take our nature upon him; but to take it by the ſame way, and after the ſame manner that we do; by being conceived. That, and no other better beſeeming way. The womb of the Virgin is (ſurely) no ſuch place, but he might well have abhorred it. He did not: pudorem exordii noſtri non recuſavit (ſaith Hilary,) he refuſed not that our ſelves are aſhamed of: Sed naturæ noſtræ contumelias tranſcurrit; but the very contumelies of our nature (tranſcurrit is too quick a word) he ran thorow them: nay he ſtayed in them; in this firſt, nine months. I ſay, the contumelies of our nature, not to be named, they are ſo mean. So mean (indeed) as it is verily thought, they made thoſe old Heretick (I named) and others moe (who yet yielded him to be man) to run into ſuch phanſies as they did; onely to decline thoſe foul indignities (as they took them) for the great GOD of heaven to undergo. His love, in ſo being.

This therefore, even this, would he have ſet down, in terms terminant, of concipiet and pariet. Truſting we would wiſely judg of them, and love him never the leſs, but the more even for theſe. Μὴ διὰ τοῦτο ἧττον, ὅτι διὰ σπαργάνων: Honour him never the leſs, becauſe he laid down his honour for thy ſake. No: but quantò ille minus debita, antò ego magis debitor: the leſs due he took on him, the more due from me to him. In a word, quanto pro me vilior, tantò mihi charior: The lower for me, the dearer to me. It brings to mind King Davids Vilior adhuc fiam; and how God, even for that, regarded him the more. Concipiet & pariet, to conceive and bring forth in us, love, honour and due regard even for them. It teaches both. Nazianz. Gregor. Bernard. 2 Sam. 6. 22.

This (ſure) is matter of love: But came there any good to us by it? There did. For our conception being the root (as it were) the very groundſil of our nature; that he might go to the root, and repair our nature from the very foundation, thither he went: that what had been there defiled and decayed, Our benefit thereby.

by the first Adam; might, by the second, be cleansed and set aright again. That had our conception been stained by him? Therefore, primum ante omnia to be restored again. He was not idle all the time he was an Embrio, all the nine months he was in the womb; but then and there he even eate out the core of corruption that cleft to our nature and us, and made both us and it an unpleasing object in the sight of God.

Eph. 2. 8. And what came of this? VVe that were abhorred by God, (Filii iræ was our title) were, by this means made beloved in him. He cannot (we may be sure) account evil of that nature, that is now become the nature of his own Son: His now, no less than ours. Nay farther, given this privilege to the children of such as are in him (though but of one parent beleiving) that, they are not, as the seed of two infidels; but are in a degree holy, eo ipso; and have a farther right to the Laver of regeneration, to sanctifie them throughout by the renewing of the Holy Ghost. This honour is to us, by the dishonour of him: This, the good by CHRIST an Embrio.

2 Christ a new-born Babe: Et pariet. * Esay 37. 3. Et pariet: And this, no more than needs. There may be concipiet, and no pariet follow. Venerunt filii ad partum, &c. (saith the Prophet) * The children came to the birth, and no strength to deliver: Pariet makes all sure.

And pariet makes all appear. We could not tell, it was Filium; knew not what it was, or what it would be. Till he came into the world, he was as thesaurus absconditus, though we had it, we had it not. But when he was born, when come into the world, we see him and handle him; then he was with us indeed. With us, not as conceived of the same nature with us; but as born, and now a person among us. That which was potential in concipiet, made actual by pariet.

Psalm 19. 6. Luke 1. 78. So that this is the Οικονομία, when he came forth, as a Bride-groom out of his chamber; or, as the Sun from his tabernacle, to run his race. And it was with a Visitavit ab alto. Thence an Angel cried Ecce, and sounded it on earth: and a Star cried Ecce, and proclaimed it from heaven. Poets in the VVest write of it: and Wise-men in the East, saw it, and came a long journey upon it to see him. And Luke 2. 13. what did this pariet bring forth? No sooner born, but a multitude of heavenly Souldiers sung, Peace on the earth (belike there had been war before, but) peace, now. Nay, more than peace, Εὐδοκία. That God had conceived a good liking, was well-pleased with men. The same term to men, that he useth to Mat. 3. 17. CHRIST himself, In whom I am well pleased: εὐδοκία to both. And what would we more? what lack we now? His Name.

3 Christ christened, Et vocabitur nomen. And now he is born, might we not leave here and go no farther? Rem tenemus: what care we for the Name? Yes, we must: For Christus anonymus will not serve. Therefore Esay, therefore the Angel are careful to bear him to his Baptism, to add his name; the Prophet to intimate it: S. Matthew to interpret it. For though we have said much of Christ an Embrio, and Christ a new-born nameless babe; yet nothing to that that followeth, to the Ecce of his Name.

1 His name given by God. Mat. 1. 22. This name, if it had been of mans giving, I wot well, little heed had been to be taken of it. Men set great titles upon empty boxes. Nay many times, the names given by wise men, fall out quite contrary. Solomon called his son Rehoboam, the Enlarger of people; He enlarged them from ten to two. But, his name (S. Matthew tells us) the Prophet but brought, it was God that sent it. And the names of his imposing, there is no surer place, in Logick, than from them. His nominals be reals: as his dicere, facere; so his dici, fieri: what is said, in them, comes surely to pass.

2 That Name, Immanuel. Gen. 49. 10. Heb. 2. 9. Now there were divers names given him at divers times. To express all his perfections, no one name was enough. There was Jacobs name, Silo; That was in respect of his Father, by whom and for whom he was sent. There was Pauls name, Messias, Christ: that was, regard had to the Holy Ghost, by or wherewith he was anointed. But what were these? Quid ad nos? VVe have no part in them, in this we have: and till this came, all was in nubibus (as they say.) But in this Immanuel, Nobiscum Deus, (here) come we in first. For in Immanu, is Anu; and in Nobiscum, Nos. And this is the first Nobis, and the first Cum, we find in any name of his: and therefore of all other, we are to make much of it. A Virgin to bear; God to be born, matter of wonder, but no benefit at all. But when we hear, It is with us and for us, that Ecce makes us look up to it.

1 Two doubts about it. Before I come to it, I would clear a doubt or two of it. [1] One of the name it self: [2] The other of the interpretation or meaning of the name.

1 How Immanuel, and not Jesus. 1 It will be said, This was not his name in the end, for all this, but Jesus. True: and S. Matthew knew that well enough; for he sets it down so. Yet even in that place he sets it so down, presently he vouches this of Esay, of Immanuel: as if Immanuel and Jesus both came to one, as (indeed) they do; one inferrs the other. Immanuel, God with us: Why? to what end? To save us from our sins, and from perishing by them. If there be any odds, it is in Immanuel, which is of larger compass. God with us, to save us; though that be worth all, yet not that way onely, but with us, other ways besides; and all in Immanuel.

2 How with us, more than the Patriarchs. 2 GOD with us; Why was he not also with the Patriarchs and Prophets, and Esay himself, as well as, with Us? He was, but not, as well. Some Prerogative we must allow this Name, if it be for this Ecce. No Ecce belongs to these. Somewhat more to S. Matthew's Gospel, than to Esay's Propheſie. This name must needs imply a secret Antitheſis to his former being With us. VVe say nothing, in saying, He is now with us, if he be not so with us now, as never before.

With

With them, in types and figures of Himſelf; His ſhadow was with them; but now, He himſelf. With them He was, even thus, in this very Immanu: but how? in the future tenſe, concipiet, pariet; as things to come are made preſent to hope. But now, conceptus eſt, partu eſt; Re, not in ſpe; all is paſt and done. So that, now, Ita nobiſcum, ut, de nobis; Nay, ut ipſi nos: So with us, as even of us now; of the ſame ſubſtance, nature, fleſh, and bone, that we: With us, in concipiet; conceived, as we: With us, in pariet; born, as we. Now true, as never till now: now ſo, as never ſo before.

And, now, to look into the Name. It is compounded, and to be taken in pieces. Firſt, into Immanu and El: of which, El, (the later) is the more principal by far: for, El, is God. Now, for any thing yet ſaid in concipiet and pariet, all is but man with us: not God with us, till now. By the name, we take our firſt notice, that this Child is God: And this is a great addition, and here (lo) is the wonder: For, as for any Child of a Woman, to eat Butter and Honey, (the words that next follow) where is the Ecce? But, for El, for God, to do it; that, is worth an Ecce indeed. The parts of that name. 1 El, Deus. Verſe 15.

El, is God: And, not, God, every way; but (as the force of the word is) God, in his full ſtrength and vertue: God, cum plenitudine poteſtatis (as we ſay) with all that ever he can do: and that is enough, I am ſure.

For the other, Immanu: though El be the more principal, yet I cannot tell, whether it, or Immanu do more concern us. For, as in El, is might: ſo, in Immanu, is our right to his might, and to all he hath, or is worth: By that word, we hold; therefore we to lay hold of it. The very ſtanding of it, thus before; thus, in the firſt place, toucheth us ſomewhat. The firſt thing ever, that we look for, is Nos, Nobis, and Noſter, the Poſſeſſives: For, they do mittere in poſſeſſionem, put us in poſſeſſion. We look for it firſt; and lo, it ſtands here firſt: Nobiſcum, firſt; and then, Deus, after. 2 Immanu, nobiſcum: wherein 1 Anu, nobis.

I ſhall not need to tell you, that, in nobiſcum, there is mecum; in nobiſcum for us all, a mecum for every one of us. Out of this generality, of with us, in groſs, may every one deduce his own particular; with me, and me, and me. For, all put together make but nobiſcum.

The VViſe man (Prov. 30.) out of Immanuel (that is, nobiſcum Deus) doth deduce Itiel, (that is) Mecum Deus, God with me; his own private intereſt. And S. Paul, when he had ſaid to the Epheſians, of Chriſt, Who loved us, and gave Himſelf for us: might with good right, ſay to the Galatians: Who loved me, and gave himſelf for me. Prov. 30. 1. Ephes. 5. 2. Gal. 2. 20.

This Immanu is a compound again: we may take it in ſunder, into Nobis, and cum: And ſo then have we three pieces, [1] El, the mighty God: [2] and Anu, we, poor we; (poor indeed, if we have all the world beſide, if we have not Him to be with us:) [3] And, Im, which is cum, and that cum, in the midſt between nobis and Deus, God and Us; to couple God and Us: thereby to conveigh the things of the one, to the other. (Ours, to God: Alas, they be not worth the ſpeaking of;) Chiefly then, to conveigh to us, the things of God. For, that is worth the while: they are (indeed) worth the conveighing.

This Cum we ſhall never conceive to purpoſe, but carendo: the value of With, no way ſo well, as by Without: by ſtripping of Cum from Nobis. And ſo, let nobis, (us) ſtand by our ſelves, without Him, to ſee, what our caſe is, but for this Immanuel; what if this Virgins Child had not this day been born us: Nobiſcum (after) will be the better eſteemed. For, if this Child be Immanuel, God with us; then without this Child, this Immanuel, we be without God. VVithout him in this world, (ſaith the Apoſtle;) and, if without Him, in this, without Him, in the next: And, if without Him there, if it be not Immanu-el, it will be Immanu-hel; and that, and no other place, will fall (I fear me) to our ſhare. VVithout Him, this we are: VVhat, with Him? Why, if we have Him; and God by Him; we need no more; Immanuel, and Immanu-all. All that we can deſire is, for as to be with Him, with God; and He to be with us: And we, from Him, or He, from us, never to be parted. We were, with Him, once before, and we were well: end when we left Him, and He no longer, with us, then began all our miſery: VVhenſoever we go from Him, ſo ſhall we be; in evil caſe: and never be well, till we be back with Him again. 2 Im, Cum. Ephes. 2. 12.

Then, if this be our caſe, that we cannot be without him; no remedy then, but to get a Cum, by whoſe means, Nobis and Deus may come together, again. And, Chriſt is that Cum, to bring it to paſs. The parties are, God, and VVe: And now, this day, He is both. God, before, eternally; and now, to day, Man: and ſo both, and takes hold of both, and brings both together againe. For, two Natures here are in him: If conceived and born of a woman, then, a Man: If God with us, then, God. So Eſay offered his ſigne, from the height above, or from the depth beneath: Here, it is. From above, El; From beneath, Anu; one of us, now: And ſo His ſigne, from both. And both theſe Natures in the Unity of one Perſon, called by one Name, even this Name Immanuel. CHRIST, that Cum. Verſe 11.

Vocabit nomen: I told you, in His Name, is His Vocation or Office, to be, cum: to come between, (that is) to be a Mediator, to make him, that was contra nos, nobiſcum again. It is his Vocation, to be with us.

A Mediator is not of one, but God is one. God and Man are two; and they were two (as they ſay:) VVere two, and two will be, till he make them one: recapitulate and caſt up both into one ſumme: to knit Anu, (that is, VVe) and, El, (that is, God) with his Im, into one: One word, and one thing, univocè, again. 1 In Nature. Gal. 3. 20.

So, upon the point, in theſe three pieces, there be three Perſons; ſo, a ſecond kind of Trinity: God, VVe, and Chriſt. El, is God: Anu, VVe: for Chriſt, nothing left but Im, that is, Cum, or VVith. For it is he, that maketh the Unity in this Trinity; maketh God with us, and us, with God: and both, in and by him, to our eternal comfort and joy.

2 In Name.

Thus is He with us: And yet all this is but Nature ſtill. But, the nobiſcum of His Name, bodeth yet a farther matter. For (indeed) the With us, of His Name, is more than the With us, of His Nature. If we make a great matter of that (as, great it is, and very great) behold the Ecce of His Name, is far beyond it. With us in His Nature, that is, with us, as Man, that is ſhort: We are more; ſinful men: a wretched condition added to a Nature corrupt: Will He be with us, in that too? Elſe, this (of Nature) will ſmally avail us.

In Sinne as Surety.
* Heb.4.15.
1 Cor.5.21.

VVhat, in ſin? Nay, * in all things, ſin onely except. Yea, that is, in being like us; but not, in being with us. For, in being with us, except ſin, and except all: The ridding us of our ſin, is the onely matter, (ſaith Eſay, after.) Therefore, to be with us, in all things, ſin it ſelf not excepted. S. John's Caro factum eſt, will not ſerve: S. Paul's fuit peccatum, muſt come too. In, with us, there too. I ſay it over again: Unity of Nature is not enough: He is to be with us, in Unity of Perſon likewiſe. So, He was. The Debtor and Surety, make but one perſon, in Law. That, He was: and then, He was cum, with us throughly, as deep in, as we.

Col.2.14.

And this is the proper Immanu, of His Name. And this, the Immanu indeed. And, till He was thus with us, no name He had; He was Chriſtus anonymus, Chriſt unchriſtned (as it were.) For, His name came not, till he became one with us in perſon: Not, till his Circumciſion: Not, till for us, and in our names, He became Debtor of the whole Law; Principal, Forfeiture, and all. To the hand-writing He then ſigned, with the firſt fruits of his blood. And then name the Child, and give him this name, Immanuel. For, thus he was a right Immanuel; truly, with us, With us, as men: with us, as ſinful men: with us, in all things, ſin it ſelf not excepted.

This Name given by His Mother.

May I not adde this: It is ſaid in the Text, She ſhall call: She, that is, his Mother. VVhy, She? To let us underſtand, that She might give him the name, while he undertook this for us. But, his Father, till all was diſcharged, and the hand-writing cancelled; till then, he ſuſpended, he gave it him not. His Mother, She did; when he dropped a little blood, at the ſealing of the Bond. But, he was fain not to drop blood, but to ſweat blood, and to ſhed his blood, every drop of it, yet this With us were full anſwered. And then, his Father did it too; dedit illi nomen ſuper omne nomen: Then, and not before. His Mother, now: His Father, not till then. But, then, he had proved himſelf fully with us, per omnia, when neither VVomb nor Birth, Cratch nor Croſs, Croſs nor curſe could pluck him away from us, or make him not to be with us. Then, vocabit illi nomen, both She and He: Mother, Father, and all.

Pſal.69.21.
Mat.27.48.

With us, to eat Butter and Honey, ſeemeth much: And it is ſo, for God. VVhat ſay ye, to drink vinegar and gall? This is much more, (I am ſure:) yet, that he did: I cannot (here) ſay with us, but for us. Even, drunk of the cup with the dregs of the wrath of God: which paſſed not from him, that it might paſs from us, and we not drink it.

This, this is the great With us: For, of this, follow all the reſt. VVith us, once thus, and then, with us in his oblation on the Altar of the Temple; with us, in his ſacrifice, on the Altar of the Croſs: with us, in all the vertues and merits of his life: with us, in the ſatisfaction and paſſ-paſſion (both) of his death: with us, in his Reſurrection, to raiſe us up from the earth: with us in his Aſcenſion, to exalt us to heaven: with us, even then, when he ſeemed to be taken from us: That day, by his Spirit; as, this day, by his Fleſh. Et ecce vobiſcum, and lo, I am true, Immanuel, VVith you, by the love of my Manhood: VVith you, by the power of my God-head, ſtill to the end of the world.

It is Immanuel and therein we with him.

One more yet, He won it, and he wears this name; and, in it, he wears us. And it is both a comfort to us, and a glory, that ſo he wears us. That, he is not, cannot be named, without us: that when he is named, Et nos una tecum Domine, we alſo are named with him. In Immanu, is anu, and that is we. This is not it; but this; That he hath ſet us in the fore part of it; Immanu before El, Nobiſcum before Deus. This note is not out of place, in this place, where precedence is made a great matter of: That Immanu is before El: That is, We firſt, and God laſt.

Ruth 2.4.

Good manners would, in a name compound of him and us, that he ſhould have ſtood before us, and it have been Elimmanu, (at leaſt) Deus nobiſcum, and Deus before nobiſcum; Not, Immanuel, Nobiſcum, before Deus: He before us; He the priority of the place, in all reaſon: Booz, he placed them ſo, Ruth 2. and ſo ſhould we, (I dare ſay) if it had been of our impoſing, Elimmanu: It had been great arrogancy otherwiſe. But, he giving it himſelf, would have it ſtand thus; Us ſet before Him. There is a meaning in it. And what can it be but this? That, in the very Name we might read, that we are dearer to him than Himſelf; that he ſo preferred us; and that his own name doth præ ſe ferre no leſs, but give out to all the world, the Ecce of S. Johns Goſpel, Ecce quomodo dilexit! The Ecce of his Epiſtle, Ecce quantam charitatem habuit! See, how he loved them! Behold, how great love He bare to them! See it, in his very Name: VVe are a part of it; VVe are the fore part of it, and He the later; He behind, and we, before: Before Himſelf, and that by order from Himſelf: He would have it Immanuel. O, whether was greater, Humility, or Charity in Him! Hard, to ſay whether, but both unſpeakable.

1 Iohn 3.1.

We made it Sine nobis.
Ionas 2.8.

Let us examine this Sine nobis a little. How came God from us? Nay, ask not that: but, how we came from Him? For we went from Him; not He from us: VVe forſook Him, firſt. Jonas tells us, how: By following lying vanities, we forſook our own mercy.

If we went from Him firſt, then ſhould it be (in reaſon) nos cum Deo; Not, Nobiſcum Deus: VVe, to Him, not He to us. Did we ſo? No indeed: VVe ſought not Him, He was fain to ſeek us. Nos cum Deo, that would not be: It muſt be nobiſcum Deus firſt, or Nos cum Deo will never be. This ſecond, then: That, we began the ſeparation; that, long of us: but He begins the reconciliation.

VVho hath the hurt, if God be without us? We, not He. Who gets by Nobiſcum? What gets

God

God by Nobiſcum? Nothing, He. VVhat get we? Multum per omnem modum. VVhy then doth He begin, doth He ſeek to be with us? No reaſon, but Sic dilexit, And no reaſon of that. Rom.3.2.

But, when He ſought and offered to be with us, did we regard it? Nor that neither. You ſee, the Prophet here offers Ahaz a ſign; bids him, ask it: Ahaz would none. And, as he, to the Sign, ſo we to the Signatum, the thing ſignified: Care as little for Him, or, His being with us, as Ahaz did for his ſign. VVe can be content, He in any ſort will ceaſe from us, come not at us ſo long as the world can be with us, or we with it: Care not for His being with us, till world and all forſake us. How He was fain even to force it on him. Verſe 12.

Caſt up theſe then: That, He forſakes not, but being forſaken firſt. That, being forſaken, yet He forſakes not, though. That He, which ſhould be ſought to, ſeeks firſt: And ſeeks us, by whom he ſhall get nothing. Yea, when we neglect Him ſo ſeeking, when Ahaz will no ſign, tells him, He will give him one, whether he ask or ask not: that is, will do us good, not only without our ſeeking, but even in a manner againſt our wills. And tell me, if there be not as much love in Nobiſcum, as in all the reſt. Ver.14. initio.

With us; how, we ſee. Now, with us, why; to what end? To more, than I have now time, to tell you of. Two only I name. One that of the place; To ſave them from their enemies: As them, ſo us. Them from Razin and Romelie's ſon: Us, from the ſon of Romelie, or Romulus, or whomſoever. If He, with us, on our ſide, then will He be againſt them, that are againſt us: and, that, let us never fear: Neither our own weakneſs, nor the enemies ſtrength. For, though we be weak, and they be ſtrong, yet Immanuel (I am ſure) that is with us, is ſtronger than they. The end wherefore nobiſcum, with us. 1 To ſave us from our enemies.

Our fear moſt-what groweth, both in ſin and in danger, that we look upon our ſelves: As if it were only Nobis; as if, never a Cum; or that Cum were not El, the mighty God. As if, with that great E L, all the inferiour Els were not attendant, Micha-el, and Gabri-el; and (if he will) twelve Legions of Angels. Or, as if He alone, with one word of his mouth, one Ego ſum, could not blow them all down, could not make them all, as thoſe in the Text, as the tails of a couple of fire-brands that have ſpent themſelves, ſmoak a little, and there is all. No: if He be with us, we need not fear, what theſe two, nay, not what all the fire-brands of Hell can do againſt us. Mat.26.53. Iohn 18.5.

And (ſure) ſtrange it is, The Saints of God, what courage and confidence they have taken, from the very name Immanuel. Go to (ſaith Eſay in the next Chapter) Take your counſel, it ſhall be brought to nought, Pronounce a Decree, it ſhall not ſtand: VVhy? For, Immanuel, God is with us: nothing but this name. For, as it is a name, ſo, it is a whole Propoſition, if you will. And after (in the 50. Chapter) he ſeeks for enemies, calls them out, who will contend with me? where is my adverſary? let him come near: So little doth he fear them. And, theſe were ghoſtly enemies: And this was, in the point of Juſtification. This, for the Prophet. Eſay 8.10. Eſay 50.8.

Now, for the Apoſtle. Never did Champion, in more courageous manner, caſt his gloye, than doth he to his ghoſtly enemies, to height, to depth, to things preſent, to things to come, to all, that none of them ſhall be able, to ſever him, from this Cum, from His love. And all, in confidence of Si Deus nobiſcum: in whom he makes full account to conquer; Nay, conquer, will not ſerve: more than conquer, he ὑπερνικᾷ. Rom.8.39. Rom.8.37.

The reaſon is ſet down, *Prov.*30. where he betakes himſelf to Ittiel firſt, (which is, but a ſlip of Immanuel) Deus mecum; and then, to Ittiel, ſtraight joyns Ucal, I ſhall prevail; not I, but El with me. Ittiel goeth never alone: Ucal attends it ſtill. Get Ittiel, if Ittiel be with us, Ucal will not be away: For Ittiel and Ucal part not. Prov.30.1.

Is this all? No: there is another in the very body of the word it ſelf: With us, to make us that to God, that He was (this day) made to man. And this (indeed) was the chief End of His being with us; To give us, a poſſe fieri, a capacity, a power to be made the Sons of God, by being born again of water, and of the Spirit: For Originem, quam ſumpſit ex utero Virginis, poſuit in fonte Baptiſmatis, The ſame original that Himſelf took, in the Womb of the Virgin to us-ward; the ſame hath he placed for us in the fountain of Baptiſm, to God-ward. VVell therefore called, the womb of the Church ευς ὶχον to the Virgins womb, with a power given it of concipiet & pariet filios, to God. So, His being conceived, and born the Son of man, doth conceive, and bring forth, (Filiatio, Filiationem,) our being born, our being the Sons of God. His participation of our Humane, our participation of His Divine Nature. 2 To make us the Sons of God. Iohn.1.11.

And, ſhall He be with us, thus many wayes; and ſhall not we be with Him, (as many, I ſay not, but) ſome, as many as we can? VVe, with Him; as, He with us? Specially, ſince upon this iſſue, the Prophet puts King Aſa, The Lord is with you, if you be with him: With you to ſave you, if you with Him to ſerve Him. It holds reciprocè, in all duties of love, (as here was love if ever,) Immanuel, God with us, require Immelanu, Us with God again. Our duty: To be with Him. 2 Chro. 15.2.

He with us, now (I hope:) For, where two or three are gathered together in His name, there is He with them. But, that is in His God-head. And, we are with Him; our Prayers, our Praiſes are with Him: But that is in our ſpirits, whence they come. In prayer, &c. Mat.18.20.

Theſe are well: but theſe are not all we can: And, none of theſe, the proper with Him of the Day, That hath a ſpecial Cum of it ſelf, peculiar to it. Namely, that we be ſo with Him, as He (this day) was with us: that was, in fleſh; not in Spirit only. That fleſh that was conceived and this day born, Corpus aptaſti mihi, that body that was (this day) fitted to Him. And, if we be not with Him, thus; If this his fleſh be not with us; If we partake it not; which way ſoever elſe we be with Him, we come In the Sacrament. Pſal.40.7. Heb.10.7.

ſhort of the Im, of this day. Im, otherwiſe it may be; but not that way, which is proper to this Feaſt.

Eſay 8. 8. Thy land O Immanuel, (ſaith the Prophet in the next Chapter:) and may not I ſay, This thy Feaſt O Immanuel? Sure, no being with Him, ſo kindly, ſo pleaſing to Him, ſo fitting this Feaſt, as to grow into one, with Him: as, upon the ſame day, ſo, the very ſame way, He did with us.

This, as it is moſt proper; ſo, it is the moſt ſtraight and near that can be: the ſureſt being withall, that can be: Nihil tam nobiſcum, tam noſtrum, quàm alimentum noſtrum, nothing ſo with us, ſo ours, as that we eat and drink down; which goeth, and groweth one with us. For, alimentum & alitum do coaleſcere in unum, grow into an union; and that union is unſeparable ever after. This then, I commend to you: Even the being with Him in the Sacrament of His Body: That body, that was conceived and born (as for other ends, ſo) for this ſpecially, to be with you: And, this day, as for other intents, ſo even for this, for the holy Euchariſt. This, as the kindlieſt, for the time; as the ſureſt, for the manner, of being with.

In Heaven. And, this is the furtheſt: And this is all, we can come to hear; near upon earth. But, this is not all: there is a further to come ſtill. For, we are not together: we are parted, He and we. He, in heaven; and we, in earth. But it ſhall not alway ſo be. Beſide this day, Immanuel hath another day: And that day will come; And when it doth come, He will come, and take us to himſelf. That, as he hath been our Immanuel upon earth, So he may be our Immanuel in heaven; He with us, and we with him, there, for ever.

This (of the Sacrament) is a preparative to that; will conceive and bring forth the other. For, immediately, after He had given them the holy Euchariſt, He prayed ſtraight, that they that had ſo been with Him in the Bleſſed Sacrament, Father, my will is, my prayer, my laſt prayer, that where I am,

John 17. 24. they may be alſo.

And He is in Heaven, in the Joy and Glory there: and there He would have us. So nobiſcum Deus in terris, brings us to nos cum Deo in cœlis, even thither. Thither may it bring us; and thither may we come, and there be; He with us, and we with Him for ever. Immanuel is the end of the Verſe: The ſame be our end, that we may be happy and bleſſed without end.

A SER-

A SERMON

Preached before the

Kings Maiesty.

At WHITE-HAL. on Monday the XXV. of December, A. D. MDCXV. Being Christmass Day.

MICA Chap. V. Verse XII.

Et tu Bethlehem Ephrata, parvulus es in millibus Iuda: ex te mihi egredietur qui sit * Dominator in Israel; & egressus Ejus ab initio a diebus æternitatis.

And thou Bethlehem Ephrata art little to be among the thousands of Iuda; yet, out of thee shall He come forth unto me, that shall be the Ruler in Israel: whose goings forth have been from the beginning, and from everlasting.

* Ἡγούμενος.

THE Prophet Esay had the honour to be the first, that is vouched, and whose words are enrolled in the New Testament. The Prophet Mica hath the honour to be the second. That of Esay, Ecce virgo, &c. in the end of the first Chapter. This of Mica, Et tu Bethlehem, &c. in the beginning of the second, of the first of all the Evangelists S. Matthew. Esay.7.14. Mat.1.23,16.

They follow one the other: and they follow well, one on the other. That of Esay, His Birth: This, of Mica, the place of His Birth. Behold a Virgin shall bear (saith Esay) and Bethlehem shall be the place, where she shall do it (saith Mica:) His name (saith Esay) shall be God with us: With us (saith Mica) to be our guide, and conduct us: He, with us, in Bethlehem, in the beginning of the Verse; that we, with Him, in eternity, in the end of it. We have (first) a most sure word and warrant of the Evangelist, that the testimony of Iesus is the spirit of this Prophesie: that, this day, this Scripture was fulfilled, when He, was born at Bethlehem. In St. Matthews steps we tread, when we so apply it: and, so treading alwayes, (sure we are) we tread safely, No ἰδία ἐπιλύσεως, private interpretation of our own head; but, Mica, by Matthew, the Prophet, by the Evangelist: ever the best. Apoc.19.10. Mat.2.1. 2 Pet.1.20.

To say truth, there is no applying it to any, but to Christ: None, to give it away to, from Him.

1. From David, to the Son of David, (that is, to Him.) We read not of any other born at Bethlehem. No Record to be shewed, but of them two.

2. But, whatever become of that, this is sure: none had ever His goings out from everlasting, but He. None, of whom those words can be verified, but of Him only: as who only is the Son of the ever-living God.

3. These

3. These might serve: But, it is yet more clear, this: For howsoever, about Esay's Ecce Virgo, the Jews and we are not of one mind: yet, for this (here) of Mica, the coast is clear: the Jews will not quarrel us, touching it: there is, on all sides, between them and us, good agreement.

Matth. 2. 4. For, upon the coming of the Wise-men, from the East, there was a Synod of the High Priests and Scribes, called at Jerusalem, (the very first, that we read of, in the New Testament:) and called, by the Matth. 2. 5. King; to resolve the point, about the place of Christ's Birth. And, then and there, it was resolved, Conciliariter, that at Bethlehem; And resolved, from this very place, for that these words were a known Propheſie of the Birth of CHRIST.

Upon which so famous an occasion, this resolution grew so notorious, as it did manare in vulgus,
John 7. 49. the very people could tell this: They argue, in the seventh of John, against our Saviour, by it, that He could not be the Christ: for Christ was to come out of Bethlehem (that was taken as granted:) and He came out of Galile (as they, in error, thought.) But, that was plain ignoratio elenchi: For, though He were there brought up, He might be born at Bethlehem: and so He was. But so, Priest and People (both) knew, Bethlehem was Christs natale solum; and that this Propheſie was the evidence for it.

4. Though these be enough: yet have we a greater witness than all these, from heaven: even the Star.
Matth. 2. 9. For, whither this Scripture doth send us, thither the Star doth lead us: to Bethlehem straight. Never Psalm 87. 4. stood still till it came thither: and there it stood directly over the place (as much to say, as) "Lo, there He is born. And, in this will we rest: since Mica and Matthew, Prophet and Apostle, Priest and People, Christians and Jews, Heaven and Earth are all with us; all testifie, this Text pertains to Christs Birth; and so, to this day properly.

It is, of a place: And place and time are held weighty circumstances. (Specially, in matter of fact or Luke 17. 37. story,) Ubi & quando, material questions. The Apostles asked them both: Ubi Domine? Where Lord?
Mark 13. 4. (Luk. 17) Quando, & quod erit signum? When and what shall be the Sign? (Mark 13.)

1 Of the time, when, some other time may give occasion, if it so please God. Now of Ubi Domine? the place where? There we are to day; whereto, this is a direct answer, Bethlehem is the place. That first.

2 But then secondly, this circumstance leads us further, to matter of substance: the place of the Birth, to the Birth it self; and the Birth to the Party born: who is, here set forth as a person: He comes forth once and again, He leads, He feeds; all, acts of a person entire.

3 Thirdly, this person is here said to have two comings forth, [1] Egreditur ex te, one: [2] Egressus Ejus ab æterno, the other. In which two are expressly set down His two Natures. [1] Ex te, from Bethlehem, on earth; thence, He came according to His Man-hood. [2] A diebus æternitatis, from everlasting, or from eternity; thence, He came according to His God-head.

4 And last (to make it a full and compleat Christmas, in Text:) Besides His Place, Person and Na-
Matth. 2. 6. tures (in these two comings forth:) Here is His Office also, to be [1] Ἡγούμενος, [2] ἵτις ποιμανεῖ, (so doth S. Matthew turn רעה the Prophets word; I follow no other; for, sure I am, I cannot follow a better Translator;) Dux, qui pascet. One to [1] lead us, and to [2] feed us, and so, to conduct us from Bethlehem (where, this day, we come first acquainted with Him) to the state of eternity, whence He came out, to bring us in: there to live and reign with Him for ever.

The Division. So: [1] of the Place: [2] Person: [3] Natures: and [4] Office of Christ. I. The Place of His Birth, Bethlehem; with her two Epithetes or twins (as it were) [1] Parvula, little; and [2] Ephrata, fruitfull. II. Then, of His Person, that did come forth. III. After, of both His Natures: [1] As man, from Bethlehem: [2] As God, from everlasting: IV. Last, of His Office. [1] To be our guide to lead us (saith Mica:) [2] Dux, qui pascet; Lead us, and feed us (saith Matthew) both. And, so leading and feeding us, to conduct and bring us, to the joys and joyfull days of eternity: whither, without Him, we can never come: and, Matth. 2. 6. whither till we come, we shall never be, as we would be, that is, truly happy indeed. This is His Office. And, as His Office to lead and to feed us: so, our Duty, to be led, and to be fed by Him. That follows of it self.

The manner of the speech: Et tu Bethlehem.

ET tu Bethlehem: A word of the Character, or manner of the speech. For, this Verse hath no dependance at all, on that, went before. The Prophet breaks off the discourse he was in, and breaks into this of Bethlehem (here,) all of a sudden. This we call an Apostrophe; and, it is one of the figures, that be stirrers of attention.

For, this we find; that, when one goes on still with a tale in a continued tenour of speech, attention grows dull; and, no readier way to wake it, (as the Masters of that Art tell us) than, suddenly to break off the point, we were in hand with, and turn us to quite another matter; which with the strangeness, will affect the hearer, and make him listen afresh, whether he will or no.

The Prophet doth so, in this. He was (but the Verse before,) muttering garrisons and laying Siege to Jerusalem: and, in the midst of his tale, falls from that, and presently is at Bethlehem: tells us, of a new matter; about a Child to be born there. This must needs move attention. Any Apostrophe will do it more or less.

But, of all, none to that, which is framed in the Second Person: as, this is. For, it is not a speech of or concerning Bethlehem, in the Third Person, (as that of Esay, Behold a Virgin; so here, Behold, out of Bethlehem shall come:) Not, Enuntiative. But it is a speech to Bethlehem, in the Second Person: Et tu, and thou Bethlehem, out of thee shall there come: Annuntiative; which hath more vigour in it.

It

If Eſay had ſaid [And thou Virgin ſhalt conceive,] it had been more effectual, than [Behold a Virgin ſhall conceive.] More a great deal.

But more ſpecially yet; if in the ſecond perſon, we turn our ſpeech ad inanimata, to things that can neither hear, nor underſtand. Not, that we hold them capable of that which is ſpoken: but that if in any degree they were ſo, it is ſuch, as ſurely would move them. Such is the Prophets here: turns him to the Town Walls of Bethlehem; makes a ſet ſpeech to them; tells them of all this matter: And thou Bethlehem, to thee be it ſpoken, out of thee, ſhall there come. And this is very forcible, and full of life: For, it intends, that if the very Walls and Stones in them could hear, or could rejoyce, there is good cauſe they ſhould do both: in that there ſhould come, out of them, One, for whom, Jeruſalem and all the Cities of Juda, Nay, all the world ſhould be the better. Weigh it well, and you ſhall find, there is more in this [Et tu] than is, or can be in any Ecce of them all. And this for Et tu, the Manner of the ſpeech. 3

For the Matter: It is an anſwer to the queſtion, (Ubi natus eſt:) of the Wiſe men, Where is He that is born? born He was; (that they knew:) Where born, (that they knew not.) The Star told them one; the Prophet, the other. Et claritas claritatem clarificat, and, a clear ſtar is made more clear, by a Propheſie as clear, or clearer than it. For, very clear it is (the propheſie) without all circuity, noting, naming, (and in a manner) pointing to it: And thou Bethlehem. The matter of it. 1 The Place Bethlehem.

And, becauſe there were two Bethlehems, One in the Tribe of Zebulon, *Joſ.*19. 1. Another of the Tribe of Juda: He ſaith, it was Bethlehem Ephrata, which is that in the Tribe of Juda, as S. Matthew (rather giving the ſenſe, than ſtanding on the words) cites it. There can be no errour: Rachels Sepulcher was there by: Rachel was buried by Ephrata; Ephrata, the ſame is Bethlehem, Moſes tells us, more than a thouſand years before, *Gen.*48.7. As plain (this) as plain may be: No Oracle of Delphos; without any equivocation at all. 2 Bethlehem Ephrata. *Ioſ.*19.13. *Mat.*2.6. *Gen.*35.19. *Gen.*48.7.

We have the Place: Now, what manner place is it? Et tu Bethlehem, parvula: Parvula, this little, doth a little trouble us: VVhy, it is a ſorry poor Village, ſcarce worth an Apoſtrophe; eſpecially, to turn from Ieruſalem, to turn to it. And, as little likelihood, that ſo great a State as the Guide of the whole world ſhould come creeping out of ſuch a corner: Locus & locatum (ever) are equal. That birth is (ſure) too big for this place. The Prophet diſſembles it not; ſaw, what fleſh and blood would except ſtraight: As, (ever) they carry a conceit, againſt ſome Places and Perſons. And, can any great matter come from them? VVhat, from Bethlehem? VVhat, out of Galile? Nay, if ſo great a State, He would come from another manner place, than that. Et tu Ieruſalem, from Ieruſalem, Damaſcus, Ceſarea; from ſome ſtately City, much better beſeeming Him. Theſe are Dicta carnis. Iohn 7.52. 1.46.

Firſt, He denies not, Little it was; and, not ὀλίγος, but ὀλιγιστος, not parva, but parvula; diminutively little. So little (ſaith the Prophet) that it was not be reckoned una de millibus, not one of a thouſand, for the meanneſs of it. And the Evangeliſt makes it rather worſe, than better: for, the Prophets word parvula, he turns ἐλαχίστη, that is, minima, even the very leaſt of all. *Mat.*2.6.

This he confeſſes: but then, joyns this iſſue, that though the Tu be little, the Ex te may be great. Ex te parvâ egredietur non parvus: As little as it is, no little perſon ſhall come out of it. Though it be not una de millibus, for the meanneſs (as ſaith Mica:) Notwithſtanding, He that is to come out of it, may be, and is, electus unus de millibus, One of a thouſand, for his choice, for his excellency. Though it, not worthy to be one of the thouſand of Iuda, it ſhould ſend forth one, that ſhould rule the thouſands of Iuda, and the ten thouſands of Iſrael: And not of Iſrael only, after the fleſh, (but a handful, in compariſon of them, He ſhould lead) but, the Iſrael of God His faithful choſen people, all the world over. Indeed, He had anſwered the objection, before He made it, in Ephrata: that little it was, but fruitful, and not a little fruitful. *Cant.*5.10.

Which two counterpoints make (in ſhew) a conflict, or contradiction between the Prophet and the Evangeliſt. The Prophet ſaith, Thou art the leaſt: The Evangeliſt (citing him) ſaith the clean contrary, Thou art not the leaſt. Bethlehem, minima, & non minima; leaſt, and not leaſt; how may both be? Well enough, both: So, both be not ſaid, regard had to one and the ſame thing.

Leaſt (ſaith Mica, and ſaith true,) for the compaſs of the Territory, leaſt; for the ſmall number of the Inhabitants, leaſt; for the thinneſs and meanneſs of the buildings, (as was ſeen at Chriſts Birth, not able to give lodging to any number:) ſo leaſt. But then again, not leaſt (ſaith S. Matthew, and ſaith truly too:) Not, in regard of any of the three now mentioned; but of another, able (of it ſelf alone) to weigh them all down: in that it ſhould yeild Alumnum tam grandem, ſo great a birth, as the great Meſsias of the world: One, whoſe onely coming forth of it was able to make it, not the leaſt, nay, the greateſt and moſt famous of all the dwellings of Jacob; of the whole Land; nay, of the whole world, then. And thus, not the leaſt. Though minima, for the Tu: non minima, for the ex te: Non minima, if it were but for him, and for nothing elſe. Luke 2.7.

What ſhall we make of this? Nothing but what cometh from it of it ſelfe, without ſtraining. That, with God, it is no new thing; (Nay, very familiar, as even the Heathen have obſerved; ſo familiar, as God ſeems to take delight in it;) to bring Maxima, de minimis; Great, out of little; Chriſt, out of Bethlehem. VVhich is plaine, even in Nature. How huge an Oke, from how ſmall an Acorn! (But, that asks great time:) From how little a grain of Muſtard ſeed (the very Bethlehem minima, the leaſt of all ſeeds) how large a plant! Of how far a ſpread! and that, in little time, a month or two at moſt. *Mat.*13.32.

But, we are not in Nature, now: in this very point (here) of Guides and Rulers, therein (too) it hath been no unusual thing with him, out of small beginnings, to raise mighty States. Then first Guide (Moses,) whence came he? out of a basket of bull-rushes, forlorn and floating among the flags; taken up, even by chance. The great beginner of their Monarchy: and not of theirs alone, but the two beginners of the two mighty Monarchies of the Persians and Romans; (Cyrus and Romulus) from the Shepheards scrip, from the Sheepcote all three. Those great Magnalia, from parva napalia. And, as the Kingdoms of the earth from a Sheepcote: so, his own (of the Church) from a Fisherboat. We may well turn to them, with this Apostrophe: And thou Sheepcote; out of thee have come mighty Monarchs: And thou Fisherboat, out of thee, four of the chief and principal Apostles.

Mat. 4. 18, 21.

Even so Lord (saith our Saviour) for, so is thy pleasure. And, since it is his pleasure so to deal, it is his further pleasure, (and it is our lesson, out of this Bethlehem minima, even this) Ne minima minimi, that we set not little by that which is little, unless we will so set by Bethlehem, and by Christ and all. He will not have little places vilified; little Zoar will save the body: little Bethlehem, the soul. Nor have (saith Zachary) dies parvos, little times despised; unless we will despise this Day, the Feast of Humility: nor have one of these little ones offended; Why? for, Ephrata may make amends for parvula; ex te, for in.

Mat. 11. 26.

Gen. 10. 20. Zach. 4. 10. Mat. 18. 6.

This is on Gods behalfe. On Christs yet further, (to stay a little upon this little:) For though there want not divers other good congruences, why Christ should come from Bethlehem, rather than from another place: [a] For that, it was the Town of David; and he was the Son of David; and so a place not unmeet for him to come from, even in that respect, being sedes avita. Out of thee came David, and (well) therefore, out of thee shall come Davids Son; Davids Son, and Davids Lord both.

John 7. 42.

2. The surname of Ephrata puts me in mind of another; Lo, we heard of it at Ephrata, (saith the Psalm) there, the first news of the Temple: And Lo, we heard of him at Ephrata, (to day by the Angel,) there, the first word of the Lord of the Temple. The Temple was the type of the Church: and that was heard of, at Ephrata first: and, no wayes incongruent, that were the Church; there, the head of the Church; Christ, and Christs Church (both) at one place.

Psal. 132. 6. Luke 2. 11.

3. There is a third in the very name of Bethlehem (that is) the house of Bread. For He that was born there, was Bread, but that will be more proper anon at Qui pascet.

But these though they agree well, yet none of them, so well, as this, that it was minima: the very minimeneß (as I may say) of it. For, in so being, it was a place well suiting with his estate now, (at His egredietur ex te,) which was the state of Humility; eminent in His (if ever in any) Birth. Bethlehem was not so little, but he as little as it. Look, what Apostrophe Micah made to the Town, may we make to him; and that with better reason: And thou Bethlehemite, thou wert as little among the Sons of men: as ever was Bethlehem among the villages of Juda. So, novissimum oppidorum (as Micah calls it) suits well with novissimus virorum, (as Esay calls him.)

Esay 53. 3.

And it was not the Place alone, but, all were little, then. The time, in solstitio brumali, the deep of Winter, when the days are at the shortest and least. And the people, (He came of) little. Amos saith, Who shall raise up Jacob, for he is small? Small, ever: but, never so small, never so low brought, as, at his coming forth. Then, at the lowest, and the very least: as being (then) brought under the bondage of a stranger: and he, one of the children of Edom, that cryed, down with them, down to the ground. One, that made Rachel mourn in her grave (her grave was there hard by) for the slaughter of the poor innocents, within a while after. So, Place, and Time, and People, and all, little: and, He Himself less than all.

Psal. 137. 7. Mat. 2. 18.

For, even in the place, Micah hath not said all: for, He is less yet. If little Bethlehem offended: what could have been said, if he had gone further (and yet not further than S. Luke) And thou, the stable, in the Inne at Bethlehem, And thou, the manger in the stable, Ex te egredietur, out of thee shall He come. These are beyond Bethlehem parva: less yet: yet thence did he come too, at his entrance into the world. And all these nothing, to his going out: Another manner of diminution, there, than all these. Such was his Humility, on this Feast of Humility.

Luke 2. 7.

And O thou little Bethlehem, And O thou little Bethlemite, how do you both (both Place and Person) confound the haughtiness of many, that (yet) would be called Christians, and even near Christ Himself. There is in both of you (if it were, well taken to heart) enough to prick the swelling, and let out the aposthumed matter of pride, from a many of us, whose look, gesture, gate, and swelling words of vanity are too big for Bethlehem: whose whole carriage and course is, as if they were to be saved, by one that came out of the great City Ninive, or Grand Cayre, rather, than out of the little Hamlet of Bethlehem.

But, all this was done to bring that vertue in credit. I find no reason rendred of it, but this: That by what manner of place, he made choice of, to be born at, he would teach us, what manner of spirits, he doth affect, to take up his residence, and to rest in. The High and Excellent, saith Esay, that inhabits Eternity, He also will rest with the lowly; with those, that be no higher than Bethlehem, in their own eyes. [a] To them he looks, [b] gives grace to them, [c] to them He reveales, what He keeps from the great ones of this world. And when he shall sit in all his glory, he shall say, Quod minimis hiis & mihi. Say it forward, affirmative: and say it backward negative, Quod nec minimis hiis, nec mihi: What to these minims, to me: What not to them, not to me neither.

Esay 57. 15. a Esay 66. 2. b Prov. 3. 34. c Mat. 11. 25. Mat. 25. 40. Mat. 25. 45.

To end this point then: For little Bethlehems sake, to love the vertue that is like it. And for the vertues sake, to honour it. Honour it, there is a Star over it, there is a Saviour in it: Honour it, for that which comes out of it; for the fruit it yeilds: More good comes forth out of that poor Town,

Town, (mihi, ſaith the Prophet, to me: nobis, may we ſay, to us all) than from all the great and glorious Cities in the world. What good, Nazianzen tells us: Bethlehem honora parvam, quæ te inducit in Paradiſum, It gives us our introduction, to Paradiſe, (Bethlehem:) it gives us a Guide, to day, if we will follow him, will bring us thither to our original happineſs: Nay, further than ſo, to the days of eternity. And, Him we muſt follow, and it we muſt honour, (even this vertue,) if ever we mean, to come there.

This for the Place. Now for the Perſon, that cometh from this Place. For, being in ſpeech of a Place, He continues in local terms fit for a place, Egreditur ex te. Egredi is to come forth; and that is properly from, or out of a place. And, the rather he doth it, becauſe withal, it is a term that fiteth His Birth well: So, the Scripture ſaith, Naked came I forth, (that is) was I born. The child that firſt comes forth, (that is) the firſt is born. This word is twice repeated: [1] Once, out of Bethlehem: Ex te. [2] Another from everlaſting: ab æterno. Theſe two ſet out to us his two comings forth (that is) his two Nativities; (Nativity is nothing but a coming forth.) Thoſe two, his two Natures: ſince Nativitas eſt ad naturam via, Nativity is but the way that leads to Nature. [1] Egreditur ex te, as the Son of man, as Davids Son: [2] Egreſſus Ejus ab æterno, as the Son of God, as Davids Lord. II. The Perſon. Iob 1.21. Gen.38.28.

Egredietur ex te. Egredietur is the tenſe of the time to come: To come, when Mica wrote this: and in the Future: but come, when * S. Matthew cited it, and in the Preter: When Jeſus was born at Bethlehem. But, future and preter (both) are in time: So, this, his Birth in time. III. His Natures. 1 As Man from Bethlehem. * Mat.2.1.

But, the other hath neither Future nor Preter, neither Mood nor Tenſe; No Verb at all. It is expreſſed by a Subſtantive: to ſhew his ſubſiſtence before all time, from all eternity.

2. Ex, is a place; out of it he came; ſo, in it he was: and this Birth, local, as (before) temporal. So was not his order: that hath no ex: that is ab, ab æterno: For, as eternal, no place contains him; he is every where; fills both heaven and earth.

3. Te; that place is Bethlehem; a place upon earth. According to which it is ſaid, there ſhall come a Root out of Ieſſe (Eſay's term, Chap.11.verſ.1.) and out of it, a Branch, (Ieremie's, Chap.23.v.5.) Thence, Germen, a flower or bloſſom, (Zacharie's, Chap.6.v.12.) and from it this fruit of Ephrata, the fruit of the Virgins womb. Root, Branch, Bloſſom, and Fruit, all of the Earth, earthly. But there came forth, at the ſame time a Star, too: to ſhew he had another more high and heavenly being. Eſay 11.1. Ier.23.4. Zach.6.12. Luke 1.41.

For, this of Bethlehem was not his firſt flight (as we ſay:) the other, though it ſtand behind in the verſe, was before that, by far: Ex utero, ante luciferum: Ante lucifetum, before the Star of his birth; nay, before any morning ſtar came forth, he was come forth. A principio (ſaith Mica.) And it is S. John's In principio, (the two firſt words of his Goſpel,) long before Moſes's In principio (the two firſt words of Geneſis.) But, to leave no place to doubt of his meaning, he gloſſeth his à principio, with, ab æterno, (that is) from everlaſting. By which very words, [from eternity] Arius error (of erat, quando non erat) falls to the ground. For, nunquam erat, quando non erat æternitas. Never was there (call it what you will) when eternity was not. For, as everlaſting, forwards, is, to quando tempus non erit amplius, there ſhall be no more time: So everlaſting, backward, is, to quando tempus non erat adhuc, when there was yet no time at all. 2 As God from everlaſting. Pſal.110.3.

Now let it not trouble you, that this His eternal, is the plural number (outgoings) as if they were more than one: It is but the Hebrew phraſe: They uſe to expreſs the Superlative (ever) by the Subſtantive of the plural number, to call that man משרי bleſſings, whom they mean to be moſt bleſſed. So that, outgoings, which is but one; but ſo high after ſuch a manner, ſo paſt our reach, as Eſay askes, Generationem Ejus quis enarrabit, Who ſhall declare his generation? No one, no ſingular will reach it: and ſo, it is expreſſed plurally. Eſay 53.8.

So uſe they alſo, to note our continuance, And ſo it ſets out to us, the continual emanation, or proceeding of him, from his Father, ἀπαύγασμα (the Apoſtles word) as a beam of brightneſs ſtreaming from him unceſſantly: Never paſt, (his Generation;) but, (as the School-men call it) actus commenſuratus æternitati. For Hodie genui te, is true of every day: yet becauſe it hath co-exiſtence with many revolutions of time (though it be indeed, in it ſelfe, but one drawn out along, yet) according to the many ages it laſteth, it ſeemeth to multiply it ſelf into many: And ſo is expreſſed plurally. 2 Heb.1.3. Pſal.2.7.

Though, (the principal ſenſe alwayes ſaved) we may referre this Plural to both His outgoings; both, as Son of God before all times, and as Son of man in the fulneſs of time. For, this later (though executed in time) had his outgoing (that is, the Decree for it went forth) ab æterno. Even, that out of Bethlehem He ſhould come; be the Son of man; the Saviour of Mankind, and their Guide, to eternity. Even, that way alſo (in a ſenſe) it may be ſaid; As Man, He came forth A principio, A diebus æternitatis: A principio, for the efficacy; ab æterno, for the Decree. From the beginning there there went vertue forth of Him, which wrought, even then, when He was but forthcoming, as we ſay, and yet not come forth. His life, His death, ab origine mundi. So for the efficacy, à principio. As for the Decree; that was gone forth, from before the foundations of the world, from all Eternity. Apoc 13.8. Epheſ.1.4.

So now have we this Party, twice come forth; compound of Bethlehem, and Eternity. And, now we have Him, what ſhall we do to Him? But firſt, what ſhall He do to us? With God, Officium fundatur in beneficio: He firſt doth for us, before He require ought of us. This He ſhall do for us. He ſhall be, to us, מושיא is the word of the Text; S. Matthew turns it Ἡγούμενος. Which, in the firſt and native ſenſe, is a Guide for the way, Dux viæ, to lead us: [2] In a ſecond, is a Captaine, Dux militiæ IIII. His Offices.

militiæ, to guard us. [3] And to these two, by way of paraphrase, S. Matthew addes, 'ἐκ σοῦ γὰρ ἥξει, qui pascet, a Guide that shall feed us. [1] To lead us in the way. [2] To guard us in the way. [3] To feed us in the way. In these three, His Office.

1 A Guide to lead us.

From a place, He came to be our guide, to a place: Still, He holds on with his local terms, he began with. For a guide serves properly to bring one to a place. There is, in that word, both the Office, He to perform to us; and the Benefit, we to receive by Him, (guiding.) And it implieth also our Duty to Him again: for, if He to lead; we to be led by Him: He is become the author of eternal salvation, Heb. 5. (saith the Apostle) to them, as will obey Him, and be guided by Him, and, to none other.

Heb. 5. 9.

VVill ye see (first) the necessity of both those His comings forth, for this Office, to be our Guide? Egredietur ex te, first, He was to be of us, being to guide us: for being of us, He would the better understand our wants, and have the more compassion on them, Heb. 4. 15. Therefore, if a Prophet: A Prophet shall the Lord raise up unto you, from among your brethren: (Moses Egredietur ex te.) If a Prince: Your noble Ruler shall be of your selves, even from the midst of you: (Ieremy: So he, Egredietur ex te.) If a Priest: then, to be taken from men, and be ordained for men, in things pertaining unto God: (the Apostles Egredietur ex te.) To every one of these: And these three be the three great Guides of mankind.

Heb. 4. 15. Deut. 18. 18. Ier. 30. 21. Heb. 5. 1.

And again: As meet, He should come forth from Eternity, if thither He to bring us. None can bring to a place, so well, as he, that hath been there. There he had been; had inhabited eternity (saith Esay:) thence he came; and coming thence, best knows the way thither again. So neither of his outgoings more than needs.

Esay 57. 15.

Now to our Guide. VVhere the terms of Way, and of Walking, and Leading, meet us so thick, are so frequent, all along the Scripture; as plain it is, our very life is held as a Iourney; and we (as the the School-men term us) viatores, in state of wayfaring men, or travellers, all, from our coming into the world, to the going out of it again, still going on, in the way, or out of the way, t'one or t'other if so: In a journey two things we are to look to; [1] our Quo, and [2] our Qua: [1] Quo, our end, whither; [2] Qua, our way by which S. Thomas said well; Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how then can we know the way? Right: for, Ignoranti quem portum petat nullus secundus est ventus, No wind is good for him, that knows not for what port, he is bound: he that knows not, whither he goes, wanders, and is never in his way; is never in it, for he hath none, to be in.

Iohn 14. 5.

First then, Quo; whither? Now, the end of the Verse, is our journeys end, Eternity. VVhere, if we may arrive, happy we: that is agreed on presently. So is not the way thither.

But yet, this (I take) is agreed; that, if it be a ready way, we care the less for a guide; but if hard to hit, then Dux nobis opus, we need one.

And sure, the way is not ready to hit; not so easie, a fool may find it: It is but a foolish imagination so to ween of it. By-wayes there be divers: many cross paths, and turnings in and out; and we like enough to miss it, if we venture on it, without a Guide: If there be not one, to call to us ever and anon, (as Esay 30. 21.) Hæc est via, ambulate in eâ, This is the right way, keep it: if not, you go, you know not whither.

Esay 30. 21.

The first point then is, to find our own want; to think, we are in case, to need a Guide. For, if we need none, this Text is superfluous: And thou Bethlehem, and Thou Christ, ye may both well be spared. If we be able to go the way, without a guide; to be guides to our selves; Nay, to be guides to our guides, then: (the world is come to that, now.)

Acts 8. 31: Mat. 2. 2.

VVell he was a wise man, and a great Counsellor, that said, when time was, How can I, without a Guide? And the Wise men, at this feast, were not so well perswaded of their own skill, but they sought and took directions. Let us follow them.

To get us one then. And, not any one, but one that is skilful in the way: (no one thing need we so to be advised of, as this.) For, strange it is, but true it is; even they, that be blind themselves, will take upon them to be guides to others. You know who said, si cæcus cæcum: that (si) was no vain (si,) no idle supposition: usque hodie, it is done daily. But the end (there) is, in foveam, a place we would not come to; and God keeps us from it.

Mat. 15. 14.

One then, that is skilful: And where shall we have any so skilful, as this; this of ours? He cannot but be so. It is sure; there were no better guide, than the way it self, if the way could speak to us, and tell us when we were right or wrong in it. Now, he, He is the way: the Way and the End both. As God, he is the end: (the fruition of the God-head, the end of our journey.) As man, he is the way: both Way and Guide too. His Doctrine our Guide; His example, in the whole tract of his life, the very way thither.

Iohn 14. 6.

Nothing remaineth, but that we now set forward in this way. For (as we daily sing in the Benedictus) he came, (not to whet our wits, or to file our tongues, but) to guide our feet into the way. And, into what way? Not of questions and controversies, whereof there is no end, about which we languish all our life long: but, into the way of peace, even of those duties about which there is no disagreement. Look but to this Feast, (it is S. Augustines note) didicerunt Magi, & abierunt: docuerunt Scribæ & remanserunt, the Wise men, they learnt the way, and on they went: The Scribes, they taught the way, but they tarried still behind. O do, as did the VVise men, dimittunt Scribas inaniter lectitare, ipsi pergunt fideliter adorare, let the Scribes sit still, and scan and read lectures of the way; On went the Wise men on their way, and performed their worship, the end of their journey: and so let us. This for Dux viæ.

Luke 1. 75.

2 And this, would serve for the way; if there were nothing but the way: if that were all. But, if there be enemies beſet the way, to ſtop our paſſage; then will not dux (a guide) ſerve our turn, we muſt have Dux (a Captain,) then: (the ſecond ſenſe of the word יעמ"ס:) one to guard us, and to make way for us. For, we are not onely to be led ſurely, without error: but ſafely, without danger alſo. Such a Guide we behove to have, as will ſee us ſafe at the place we would be at. And, Bethlehem breeds ſuch. Out of little Bethlehem came he that fetched down great Goliah. And again, out of it, this day, He, that ſhall tread down Satan under our feet: Dux Meſſias, Captain Meſſias, (as the Angel in Dan. 9. 25. calls him.) A Captain to guard us. 1 Sam. 17. 49. Rom. 16. 20. Dan. 9. 25.

3 And, for qui paſcet; we may not miſs that neither. For, ſay, we be guarded from enemies; yet ſhall we go our journey but evil, if we faint by the way for hunger or thirſt, and have not to relieve us. He is not a good Guide, that in that caſe, cannot lead us, where we may be purveyed of neceſſary food, for our relief. It is all one, to periſh out of the way, by errour; and to periſh in the way, by want of needfull refreſhing. S. Matthew therefore, to make Him a compleat Guide, by way of ſupply adds, Qui paſcet: Such an one, as ſhall lead, more Paſtoritio, as a Shepheard doth his flock: not, lead them the way onely: but lead them alſo to good green paſture, beſides the waters of comfort; ſee, they want nothing, Dux qui paſcet, or Paſtor qui ducet, chuſe you whether; for, He is both. 3 A Shepherd to feed us. Pſalm 23. 2.

Of all the three, the name of the Place (He was born in) ſeems to favour this moſt; to be ominous toward qui paſcet. Beth, is a houſe; lehem, bread; and Ephrata, is plenty: Bread, plenty. And there was in Bethlehem, a well of ſuch water, as King David (we read) longed for it, (the beſt in all the Countrey.) Bethlehem then (ſure) a fit place, for Qui paſcet to be born in. And, Qui paſcet as fit a perſon, to be born in Bethlehem. He is not meet to be Ruler (ſaith Eſay) that ſaith, in domo mea non eſt panis. He can never ſay, that Bethlehem is his houſe: and that is domus panis: and in domo mea panis ſemper eſt panis. Never take him without bread his houſe is the houſe of bread, inaſmuch as He himſelf is bread: that, in the houſe, or out of it, whereſoever he is, there is Bethlehem. There can no bread want. 1 Chr. 11. 17. Eſay 3. 7.

Theſe three abilities then, are in Chriſt our Leader: [1] Skill, to be a Guide: [2] Valour, to be a Captain: [3] and for Qui paſcet, Bethlehem, the houſe of bread, is his houſe. Of which, [1] Skill, ſerves for direction; [2] Strength, for defenſe; [3] food, for refreſhing.

1 Luce Sacerdotalis ſcientiæ, by the light of his Prieſtly knowledg; ſo, he guides us: for the Prieſts lips are to preſerve knowledg. Mal. 2. 7.

2 And, brachio Regalis Potentiæ, by the arm of his Royal power; ſo, he guards us: for Power pertains to the Prince principally.

3 And, for qui paſcet, He is Melchiſedek, King and Prieſt; ready to bring forth (as He did) bread and wine. But in another manner far, than he did. The bread and wine, Melchiſedek brought forth, were not His body and blood; Chriſts are: Both qui paſcet, and quo paſcet. As before, Dux, & via, the guide and the way: ſo, now, here, Paſtor, & pabulum, the feeder and the food, both. Gen. 14. 18.

You may ſee all this repreſented, in the ſhadows of the Old Teſtament. There is a book, there, called Exodus, of Iſraels egredietur out of Egypt: therein, they had Moſes for their Guide; and he led them to the borders of the Holy land, and there he left them: to ſhew, the Law brought nothing to perfection. Then comes Joſua (whom the Epiſtle to the Hebrews calls Jeſus,) the figure of ours here, and by his conduct, they were led, and put in poſſeſſion of the Land of promiſe. Heb. 7. 19. Heb. 4. 8.

All this but in type of another Teſtament, after to be made, ſaith Jeremy; and upon better promiſes, ſaith the Apoſtle: Namely, our ſpiritual leading through this vale of vanity, to the true land of promiſe, the heavenly Jeruſalem that is from above; whither this our Jeſus undertakes to bring all thoſe, that will be guided by Him. Jer. 31. 31. Heb. 8. 6. Gal. 4. 26.

Obſerve but the correſpondence, between the type and the truth. Moſes, when he came to lead the people, found them, how? ſcattered over all the land of Egypt, to ſeek ſtubble for brick, to build them a City, that ſought the ruine of them all. Our caſe right the very pattern of it: when our Guide finds us wandring in vanity, picking up ſtraws, things that ſhall not profit us; ſeeking death in the errour of our life, till we be ſo happy, as to light into his guide. R Exod. 5. 12. Sap. 1. 12.

Secondly, Moſes was to them, not onely Dux viæ, a Guide for the way; but, when enemies came forth againſt them, Dux militiæ, a Captain for the war. Chriſt was ſo too: and far beyond Moſes; For, he made us way with the laying down of his life: ſo did neither Moſes, nor Joſua. Would die for it, but, he would open a paſſage to the place, he undertook to bring us to. Was Dux, a Guide, in his life; Dux, a Captain, in his death. 2 Eſay 52. 12.

Thirdly, Moſes when he fainted by the way, obtained, in their hunger, Manna from heaven; and, in their thirſt, water out of the rock for them. Chriſt is (himſelf) the true Mannah, Chriſt; the ſpiritual rock: whom he leads, he feeds: carries Bethlehem about him. 3 John 6. 32. 1 Cor. 10. 4.

Plain, by the ordaining of his laſt Sacrament, as the means to re-eſtabliſh our hearts with grace, and to repair the decays of our ſpiritual ſtrength: even, his own fleſh, the bread of life; and his own bloud, the Cup of ſalvation. Bread made of himſelf the true granum frumenti, wheat corn (Joh. 12. 24.) Wine made of himſelf the true Vine: VVent under the Sickle, Flail, Milſtone, and Oven, even to be made this bread: Trod (or was troden) in the winepreſs alone, to prepare this cup for us. Heb. 13. 9. John 6. 33, 48. Pſalm 116. 13. John 12. 24. 15. 1. Eſay 63. 3.

And in this reſpect, it may well be ſaid, Bethlehem was never Bethlehem right, had never the name truly, till this day, this birth, this bread was born, and brought forth there. Before it was the houſe of bread; but, of the bread that periſheth: but then, of the bread that endureth to everlaſting life. That, it might ſeem (inter alia) to have been one of the ends of his being born there, to make it Bethlehem, vere nominis, Bethlehem truly ſo called. John 9. 27.

And

The manner of his Leading

And this is his Office. Now, all the doubt will be, how he can perform this Office to us; go before us and be our Guide; seeing, he is now in heaven, at his journeys end: and we in Earth, by the way ſtill. No matter for that: He hath left us (firſt) the way traced by the ſteps of his bleſſed life; which we keeping us to, ſure we are, we cannot go amiſs. And then, as before he came in the fleſh, He led them

Pſalm 77.20. by the hand of Moſes and Aaron, (Guides choſen and ſent by him;) So doth he, us, now, by the hands

Heb. 13. 7. 17. 24. of thoſe whom the Apoſtle, (three ſeveral times in one Chapter, Heb. 13.) calleth by this very name Ἡγουμένους, our Guides: by whom he leads us, if he leads us at all: And other leading we are not to look for any. Onely to pray, they may lead us right, and then all is well.

Apoc. 14. 4. And, they cannot but lead us right, ſo long as they but teach us, to follow the Lamb whither he goeth. For their Office is, but to lay forth before us, the way traced by the ſteps that he went. Thoſe ſteps when all is done, are ever our beſt directions. And, I mean to do but ſo now: as here (not to go a ſtep out of the text) there are four or five of theſe ſteps, as many as we ſhall well carry away at once. And theſe they be.

The main point is: It is a place, and ſo to be gone to. We take this from the Shepheards, directed

Luke 2.15. thither by the Angel, to reſolve of Tranſeamus uſque Bethlehem, that we get us to Bethlehem. There is the Rendez-vous, to day: there he will be firſt ſeen, and ſaluted: there he began with us; there we to begin with him: VVhere he ſet forth, there our ſetting forth to be alſo. Indeed, there is no finding him but there, this Feaſt. There the Shepheards found him, this day, the firſt: There, the Wiſe-men, on

Luke 2. 12. Twelfth day, the laſt. But thither they came both; both the Shepheards, directed by the Angel; and

Mat. 2. 9. the Wiſe-men, guided by the ſtar. The Shepheards, in them, the Jews: the Wiſe-men, in them, the Gentiles. The Shepheards, in them, unlettered perſons: the Wiſe-men, in them, the profoundeſt Clerks. The Shepheards, in them, mean men: the Wiſe-men, in them great States. Be what we will be, at Bethlehem to begin all. Thither to go to him; thence to ſet out after him. Tranſeamus uſque Bethlehem.

How ſhall we do that? VVhat, ſhall we go in pilgrimage to the place? VVe learn a ſhorter courſe

Rom. 10.6,8. of the Apoſtle, (Rom. 10.) The righteouſneſs of faith (ſaith he) ſpeaketh on this wiſe: ſay not thou in thy heart, who ſhall go over the ſea for me, that were to bring Chriſt again into earth. But, What ſaith it? The word is near thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart. And, this it is: Bethlehem hath here two twins: an Epithete, a virtue or two. Get but them, get but your ſouls poſſeſſed of them, it will ſave you a journey: you ſhall never ſtir hence, but be at Bethlehem, ſtanding where you do.

1 By Humility, Parvula. Parvula is the firſt: you know, Bethlehem is little. And, look what little and low is in quantity: that is little in our own eyes, and lowly in quality. Get that firſt, (humility:) it is the Bethlehem of virtues; where he, in great humility was found, this day. If we begin not there, we loſe our way, at the firſt ſetting out. For this is ſure, where Eternity is the terminus ad quem, there Humility is the terminus à quo. Humility, in the firſt comma of the ſentence, where Eternity is the period (as in this Verſe it is.) And even here now at the firſt, is CHRIST like to loſe a great part of his train. The Phariſees

Acts 8. 9. are gone; all, too big for Bethlehem, they: and with them, all that are τι μέγα, ſome great matter, in their own ſight. Touching whom we may uſe the Apoſtrophe: And thou Bethlehem art too little for theſe great conceits: None of them will come out of thee, or come at thee, by their will: every one of them is a cunning Guide himſelf; and, no Guide, they, but ſequuntur ſpiritum ſuum, their own bold

Ezek. 13. 3. ſpirit: bid Bethlehem fare-well; at it, they come not. Well, parvula is the firſt.

2 By fruitfulneſs, Ephrata. The next ſtation, is to the next virtue, and that is Ephrata, fruitfulneſs; (ſo it ſignifies:) little it is, but fruitful. Fruitful, firſt, that it brought forth him: for, he hath brought forth, ſeen come of himſelf

Eſay 53. 10. (ſaith Eſay) longævum ſemen, a laſting ſeed: the fruit whereof, to this day, ſhaketh like Libanus, and

Pſalm 72.16. as the green graſs covereth all the earth. I mean, the Chriſtians, that were, are, or ever ſhall be: how great an Ephrata, of how little a begining! It is not onely little, but Ephrata too; and, by that, know it. For indeed, good heed would be taken, that we go not to the wrong Bethlehem: not to Bethlehem Zabulon, that is, Bethlehem on the ſands (ſo lay Zabulon by the ſea,) Bethlehem the barren: But, to Bethlehem Juda, Bethlehem Ephrata, (that is) Bethlehem the fruitful. That is, to Humility to add Fruitfulneſs, (I mean) Plenteouſneſs in all good works. Elſe, it is not Ephrata; not right: not right Repentance, unleſs it be Ephrata, bring forth fruits of Repentance: nor Faith; without the work of

Luke 3. 8. faith: nor Love; without the labour of love: nor any other virtue, without her Ephrata. Ephrata is

1 Theſſ. 1.3. not the Surname of Humility onely, but even of the reſt too: Repentance Ephrata, and Faith Ephrata; & ſic de cæteris, if they be true: Elſe be they but vites frondoſæ, leaves and nothing elſe: Simulachra

Hoſea 10. 1. virtutum, and not virtues indeed: Of Zabulon, not of Juda; and ſo, not the right.

3 In good works, Bethlehem. Fruitful then: and of what fruit? That is in the very name it ſelf, [of Bethlehem.] Not the fruit of

James 5: 7. the lips (a few good words) but the precious fruit of the earth (as S. James calleth it) lehem, good

Rom. 15 28. bread: that fruit. Such fruit, as S. Paul carried to the poor Saints at Jeruſalem, Alms and offerings;

Phil. 4. 18, 19. that is the right fruit: Cùm ſignavero fructum hunc; it hath the Seal on it, for right. Such, as the Philippians ſent him, for ſupply of his want: whereby he knew they were alive again at the root; in that they thus fructified, yielded this fruit, of a ſweet ódour, and wherewith God was highly pleaſed (as there he tells them.)

Pſalm 13. 26. It was not (ſure) without myſterie, that the Temple was firſt heard of at Ephrata, at this fruitful place. No more was it (that which the Fathers obſerve) of the Trees, that were uſed about it: Not a

2 Sam. 18. 25. poſt of the Temple, not a ſpar; nay, not ſo much as a pin, but was made of the wood of a fruit-bearing tree: No barren wood at all, in it. No more was it, that the very Altar of the Temple was founded upon

Matt. 25 35, 36, 42, 43. a threſhing floor (Aravna's) where good corn was threſhed. All, to ſhew, it would be plenteous in feeding, and cloathing, and ſuch other pertaining to this of Ephrata. Which (how-ever they be with us) will be the first, and principal point of inquiry at the day of Doom; even about feeding, and cloathing, and other works of mercy.

Now, if we could bring these two together; make a conjunction of them in Gemini, it were worth all. For, (I know not how, but) if there be in us ought of Ephrata: if we happen to be any thing fruitful, but in any degree; away goes parvula straight: Straight, we cease to be little: We begin to talk of Merit and worth, and I wot not what. Indeed, if we be all barren and bare, it may be, then, (and scarse then neither, but peradventure, then) we grow not high-minded. But so, we fall still upon one extream or other: if fertile, then proud: if humble, then barren. We cannot get, to be humble, yet not fruitless; or to be fruitful, yet keep our humility still: Not Ephrata, and parvula together: But, that is the true Bethlehem, and there was he born. And thus far, (I hope) we have been led right, and are in our way. Psalm 87. 4.

By both joyned, Bethlehem parvula & Ephrata.

But, leading is not all: here is qui pascet too, and we may not pass it. For, to that he leads us also; Dux, qui pascet. We followed a false Guide, at first, that led us to the forbidden fruit, the end whereof was morte moriemini. This (now) will lead us to a food of the nature of the Tree of life, even the bread of life; by eating whereof, we shall have life in our selves, even life immortal. That is his food he leads us to. And if we would forget this, both the Person and the Place (the Person, qui pascit, that shall feed; and the Place, Bethlehem, the house of bread) would serve to put us in remembrance of it; Even of the breaking of bread, which the Church, as this day, ever hath, and still useth, as the Child-house Feast.

His manner of feeding.
By the Sacrament, Bethlehem.
Gen. 3. 6.
John 6. 48.

We speak of Transeamus usque Bethlehem, going thither: that we may, even locally do, and never go out of this Room: inasmuch as here is to be had the true bread of life, that came down from Heaven. Which is, His flesh, this day born, which He gave for the life of the world, (called by Him so, the true bread, the bread of Heaven, the bread of life:) And where that bread is, there is Bethlehem ever. Even stricte loquendo, it may be said, and said truly, the Church, in this sense, is very Bethlehem, no less than the Town it self. For that, the Town it self never had the name rightly, all the while there was but bread made there, bread (panis hominum) the bread of men: Nor, till this bread was born there, which is Panis Angelorum (as the Psalm calleth it) and man did eat Angels food. Then, and never till then, was it Bethlehem: and that is in the Church, as truly as ever in it. And accordingly, the Church takes order, we shall never fail of it: There shall ever be, this day, a Bethlehem to go to: a house, wherein there is bread, and this bread. And shall there be Bethlehem, and so near us, and shall we not go to it? Or shall we go to it, to the House of bread (this bread) and come away without it? Shall we forsake our Guide leading us to a place so much for our benefit?

John 6. 51.
John 6. 32, 41, 31.
Psalm 78. 25.

Ubi Domine, was the Apostles question; and his answer; Ubi corpus, ibi aquila, where the body is, there the Eagles will be. Let it appear, we are so: for here is the body. Luke 17. 37.

Else do we our duty to him, but by halves. For, as our duty to Dux, is to be led: So, our duty to qui pascet, is to be fed by him. To end: And thus, ducendo pascit, and pascendo ducit; leading He feeds us, and feeding He leads us, till He bring us, whither? Even to A principio, back again to where we were at the begining: and at the begining, we were in Paradise. That our begining shall be our end. Thither He will bring us: Nay, to a better estate than so: to that whereunto, even from Paradise, we should have been translated, to the state of eternity, to the joys and joyful days there: even, to glory, joy, and bliss eternal. To which He bring us, even our blessed guide, that this day, was in Bethlehem, born to that end, JESUS CHRIST the Righteous.

ASER-

A SERMON

Preached before the

Kings Maiesty,

At White-Hall, on Wednsday, the XXV. of Decemb. An. Dom. MDCXVI. being Christmas Day.

PSAL. LXXXV. Vers. X, XI.

Misericordia & Veritas obviaverunt sibi: Justitia & Pax osculatæ sunt. (xit.
Veritas de terra orta est: & Justitia de cœlo prospe-

Mercy and Truth shall meet: Righteousnes and Peace shall kiss one another.

Truth shall bud out of the earth; and Righteousnes shall look down from Heaven.

I Have here read you two Verses, out of this Psalm, which is one of the Psalms selected of old, by the Primitive Church, and so still retained by ours, as part of our Office, or service of this day: as being proper and pertinent to the matter of the Feast, and so to the Feast it self. For, the meeting here specified was to be, at the birth of the Messias: So saith Rabbi Moses, and other of the Jews. Was at the birth of our Saviour: so say the Fathers with uniform consent, and eo nomine, have made this a Christmas-day-Psalm.

As his manner is, the Psalmist, in it, under one, compriseth the type, and the truth, both. By those things which befell the people of the Jews, the Church typical shadowing out those things, which were to befall the Antitype of it, Christ and his Church. For, primâ & propriâ intentione, it cannot be denied, but the Psalm was first set, according to the letter, upon the turning back of the captivity of Babel. But, the Prophet knew well, that was not their worst captivity, nor should be their best delivery: there was another yet behind, concerned them more (if they understood their own state aright) which was reserved, to the Messias, to free them from. To that, he points. Even that the Apostle complains of (Rom. 7.) wherein the soul is led away captive under sin and Satan (the very true Babel indeed, as which bringeth with it everlasting confusion:) From which CHRIST (the true Zorobabel) is to set us free: us, and them both.

Rom. 7.23.

There is a Meeting here. A Meeting at a birth. A birth, that did them in Heaven (Righteousnes by name) good to behold. The meeting, in obviaverunt: the birth, in orta est: the pleasure to behold it, in prospexit de cœlo. Prospexit is to see with delight, as when we look into some pleasant object.

A Meeting qualified with the manner. For, they do not meet, and pass by; but meet and salute, as friends, with an osculati sunt: a sign of love begun, or renewed.

This

This meeting is of four. Four, which of themſelves (propriè loquendo) are nothing but Attributes, or Properties, of the Divine Nature. But, are (here) by the Pſalmiſt brought in, and repreſented to us, as ſo many Perſonages. Perſonages (I ſay) inaſmuch as they have here perſonal acts aſcribed to them. For, to meet, to kiſs, to look down, are all of them acts perſonal. And, look how the Pſalmiſt preſents them, ſo we treat of them; in the ſame terms, the Text doth.

At a Birth, at Orta eſt, theſe four meet here: At Orta eſt veritas, the birth of truth; de terrâ, from the earth. For, two Ortus there were: and this, not His anteſæcularis ortus de cœlo, His birth before all worlds, from Heaven; but, His Ortus de terrâ, His temporal birth, from the earth.

Laſtly, the birth of this birth (as I may ſay;) the effect is wrought. Of which, more there are in the neighboring verſes: Here, in theſe (beſides the meeting occaſioned by it) there is but one. That, ſuch a ſpectacle it was, as it drew Righteouſneſs it ſelf from heaven, to look at it. Time was, when Righteouſneſs would not have done ſo much; not have vouchſafed a look hitherward: Therefore reſpexit nos Juſtitia, is good news: That, then, and ever ſince, She hath beheld the earth and the dwellers in it, with a far more favourable regard, than before. And all, for this births ſake.

And when was all this? When He that ſaith of Himſelf, I am the Truth, when He was born upon the earth: For, orta eſt Veritas; and natus eſt Chriſtus will fall out to be one Birth. What day ſoever that was, this meeting was upon it. And that was, this day, of all the days of the year. The meeting, and the Day of this meeting, here, all one: and the Birth of CHRIST, the cauſe of both. So, being this days work; this day, to be dealt with moſt properly. John 14. 16.

Onward we have here four Honours of this Day. Every one of the four giving it a bleſſing. [1] It is the day of ortus Veritatis, Truths birth: [2] And the ſame, the day of occurſus Miſericordiæ, the Meeting here mentioned: [3] And, of oſculum Pacis, the Kiſs here expreſſed: And of proſpectus Juſtitiæ, Righteouſneſſe's gracious reſpect of us. Theſe, from each of them in ſeveral. And generally, the day of reconciling them all.

Holding us to theſe, we are to ſpeak of the [1] Meeting, the [2] Parties, the [3] Birth, and the [4] Effect here ſpecified to come of it. Of this Meeting, in CHRIST: Then, in Chriſtianity, not to be broken off by us, but to be renewed, and ſpecially this day. The Diviſion. I. II.

HEre is a Meeting: And that is no great matter, if it be no more. How many meet we, as we paſs too and fro dayly, and how little do we regard it? But that meeting is caſual. I. 1 The Meeting Not caſual.

Somewhat more there is, in Set Meetings. It was not, by hap: not obviaverunt, ſimply; but, obviaverunt ſibi. Sibi ſheweth, they had an intent; they came forth, on both ſides; Not to meet any fifth perſon, but to meet one another. But of purpoſe

But, not every Set meeting is memorable: This, is. I find a Pſalm (here) made, in remembrance of it. And (lightly) Songs be not made, but de raro contingentibus; not, of ordinary, but of ſome ſpecial great Meetings. And that memorable.

The greatneſs of a Meeting groweth three ways. [1] By the Parties, Who: [2] The Occaſion, Whereon: and [3] the End, VVhereto they meet. All three are in this. The Parties, in the firſt Verſe: the Occaſion, and End, in the ſecond. The Occaſion, a birth; an occaſion oft, of making great Perſons meet: And the End that comes of it, that Righteouſneſs, who is to be our Judg, and to give the laſt ſentence upon us, beholds us with an aſpect, that promiſes favour.

The Occaſion, and the End, we ſhall touch anon: Now of the Parties: If the Parties great, the Meeting great. The conjunction of the Great lights in heaven, The enterview of great States on earth, ever bodes ſome great matter. VVho are the Parties here? Four, as high, as excellent Attributes, as there be any in the God-head, or (to keep the ſtyle of the Text) four, as great States, as any in the Court of Heaven. 2 The Parties, Theſe meet: and in what manner? Great States meet otherwhile, in a pitcht field: Not ſo here, This is an obviaverunt, with an oſculata ſunt: they run not, one, at another, as enemies: they run, one, to another, and Kiſs, as loving friends. And that which makes it memorable indeed, is, that theſe Parties, in this manner thus meet, who (if all were well known) were more like to turn tail, than to meet: one to run from another; Nay, one to run at another, to encounter: rather than to run one to another, to embrace and kiſs. Not meet at all: at leaſt not meet thus, ſtanding in ſuch terms as they did. The Manner of their meeting.

Mercy and Peace if they two had met; or Truth and Righteouſneſs, they two, it had not been ſtrange. But, for thoſe, that ſeem to be in oppoſition, to do it, that is it, that makes this Meeting marvelous in our eyes. Not Mercy and Peace, or Truth and Righteouſneſs:

VVill you ſtay a little, and take a view of the Parties. Four they are: theſe four, [1] Mercy, [2] Truth, [3] Righteouſneſs, and [4] Peace. VVhich quaternion, at the firſt ſight, divides it ſelf into two and two. Mercy and Peace, they two pair well: they be collectaneæ (as Bernard ſaith of them in one place) bedfellows, ſleep together: collactaneæ (as, in another place) ſucked one milk, one breaſt, both. And, as theſe two; ſo, the other two (truth and righteouſneſs) ſeem to be of one complexion and diſpoſition, and commonly take part together. Of theſe, Mercy ſeems to favour us; and Peace, no enemy to us, nor to any: (ſeeing we muſt ſpeak of them as of perſons) mild, and gentle perſons, both. For Righteouſneſs, I know not well what to ſay: Geſtat gladium, and (I fear) non fruſtrà. Nor of Truth, who is vera, and ſevera; ſevere too, otherwhile. Theſe (I doubt) are not like affected. The reaſon of my But Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſs and Peace. Rom. 13. 4.

doubt. Of one of them (Righteouſneſs) is told, here, for great news, that She (but) looked down hitherwards from Heaven. Before then, She would not have done that. A great ſign it is of heart-burning, when one will not do ſo much as look at another; not endure his ſight: We cannot promiſe our ſelves much of her, No, nor of Truth. One was ſo bold, in a place, to ſay, Omnis homo mendax, and feared no challenge for it. By that, it ſeems, all ſtands not well with her, neither. So then; two, for us; two, againſt us.

Their order, Mercy firſt, Peace laſt.

For their order: Mercy is firſt, and Peace laſt. With both ends, we ſhall do well enough: God ſend us to do but ſo with the midſt. Yet, this is not amiſs, that they, which favour us leſs, are in the midſt; hemmed in on both ſides, cloſed about with thoſe that wiſh us well; and, they between us and them. On the one ſide, Mercy before: On the other, Peace, behind.

Their ſorting, Mercy and Truth.

Another; that, in this double meeting, Mercy ſorts not her ſelf, goes not to Righteouſneſs: nor Righteouſneſs, to her, but to Peace. A kind of croſs meeting (as it were) there is: the better hope of accord. Mercy and Righteouſneſs have no Symbolizing quality at all; no hope of them: but, Truth, with Mercy, hath, There is Truth as well, in the Promiſe of Mercy: as, in the threat of Juſtice.

Righteouſneſs and peace. Heb.7.2. 6.20.

And it ſtands yet better, between the other two (Righteouſneſs, and Peace.) Melchiſedeck, which is by interpretation King of Righteouſneſs, the ſame is King of Salem, (that is) of peace. He, that is after the order of Melchiſedeck, King of both, like enough, to ſet accord between them two both of them his lieges. This for the view of the Parties.

The Occaſion.

Theſe meet here: but, what is obviaverunt, without oſculatæ ſunt? Better, let them ſtand in ſunder ſtill, and never meet. There ſeems to be two Meetings implyed. One obviaverunt, without: and another, with oſculatæ ſunt.

Before they met here, they were parted, the one from the other. For, they that meet, come from divers coaſts. Before this meeting they have been in divers quarters, one from the other, and not come together thus a good while.

Their diſtance, in place, grew from their diſtance, in affection eſtranged one from the other. That they meet not, I will not ſay: but that they met not thus, ever before. Elſe, what remarkable thing were there in this meeting, or worth the compoſing of a Pſalm, if it had been familiar with them, thus to meet every other, nay, any other day?

Of their ſevering: Not from themſelves.

How came they then aſunder, that it ſhould be a marvel to ſee them meet? Since (naturally) they are not ſtrangers; all four, in the boſome of God from all Eternity; Attributes (all four) of His undivided eſſence. So, not divided, of themſelves: Not, of themſelves, then. That they were divided, it was about us; the quarrell ours, that made them part company. Thus I gather it: If, at Chriſts birth they met: at Adams fall, they parted. If, when truth was born on earth; they came together: when truth periſhed from the earth, they fell in ſunder. That was, when the firſt lye was told, and believed, (and that was nequaquam moriemini, by Adam) and thereby God much wronged. So that Adams cauſe it was, (and ſo, ours) that firſt divided Heaven: yea, the very Attributes, in God (we ſee) and ſo (in a ſort) God Himſelf. So they parted firſt. It could not be ſaid (by the Apoſtle) that Chriſt pacified all things in Heaven, and in Earth: If there had not, in Heaven, been ſomewhat to be taken up.

Col.1.20.

So their firſt meeting was in oppoſition.

For all this yet, I deny not, but they might and did meet, once before, But it was an obviaverunt, Without an oſculatæ ſunt: Never, both theſe, till now. Out of Chriſt, and before His birth, they met in oppoſition: In Chriſt, and at His birth, did theſe four Lights come to meet, and to be in conjunction, now. They met before; obviaverunt: but, in ſtead of oſculatæ, it was altercatæ ſunt. While Mercy and Peace would have Adams and our caſe relieved, Righteouſneſs and Truth would by no means endure it. The plea is drawn up and reported at large, by Bernard, in his firſt Sermon upon the Annuntiation. Mercy began: (for out of her readineſs to do good, ſhe is, here, ſhe is ever formoſt:) Her inclination is, or rather, ſhe herſelf is an inclination, to pity ſuch, as are in miſery: and, if ſhe can, to relieve them: yea, though they deſerve it not. For (which is the comfort of the miſerable ſinner) ſhe looks not to the party, what he is, or what he hath done, or deſerved; but, what he ſuffers, in how woful and wretched a caſe he is. And her plea is, nunquid in vanum? What hath God made all men for naught? What profit is there in their Blood? It will make Gods enemies rejoyce, Thither it will come, if God caſt them clean off: What then, Will He caſt them off for ever, will He be no more entreated? Hath God forgotten to be gracious? With theſe and ſuch like pia ſuſurri (as he calls them) did ſhe enter into Gods bowels, and make them yerne, and melt into compaſſion. And certainly, if there were none to ſtand againſt us, there were hope Mercy had prevailed.

Pſal.89.47,39. Pſal.74.18. Iſa. 77.7, 8.

Truths reply. John 1.1. Gen.2.17. Ezek.18.20.

But, Truth muſt be heard too, and ſhe layes in juſt matter of exception, Pleads. Deus erat Verbum; What is God but His Word? and His word was, as to ADAM. morte morieris; So, to his ſons, anima quæ peccaverit, the ſoul that ſinneth, that ſoul ſhall die. God may not falſifie His word: His word is the truth: falſifie the truth? that may not be.

Righteouſneſs ſeconding her. Pſal.145.17. Rom.6.23.

And then ſteps up Righteouſneſs, and ſeconds her: that God as He is true in his Word, ſo is He Righteous in all His works: So, to reddere ſuum cuique, to render each his own, to every one, that is his due; and ſo to the ſinner ſtipendium peccati, the wages of ſin, (that is) death. God forbid, the Judge of the world ſhould judge unjuſtly: that were as (before) to make Truth falſe, ſo (here) to do Right wrong.

Nay, it went farther, and they made it their own caſes. What ſhall become of me (ſaid Righteouſneſs?) What uſe of Juſtice, if God will do no juſtice, if He ſpare ſinners? and what uſe of me (ſaith Mercy,) if He ſpare them not? Hard hold there was, in as much as, Perii, niſi homo moriatur (ſaid ſaid Righteouſneſs) I die, If he die not: And Perii, niſi Miſericordiam conſequatur (ſaid Mercy) if he die, I die too. To this it came: and in thoſe terms break up the meeting, and away they went one from the other. Truth went into exile, as a ſtranger upon earth:---- Terras Aſtræa reliquit, ſhe confined her ſelf in Heaven: where ſo aliened ſhe was, as ſhe would not ſo much as look down hither upon us. The firſt meeting broken up.

Mercy, ſhe ſtayed below ſtill: ubi enim Miſericordia eſſet (ſaith Hugo well) ſi cum miſero, non eſſet? Where ſhould Mercy be, if with miſery ſhe ſhould not be?

As for Peace, ſhe went between both, to ſee, if ſhe could make them meet again in better terms. For without ſuch a meeting, no good to be done for us.

For, meet they muſt, and that in other terms, or it will go wrong with us; Our Salvation lies a bleeding, all this while. The Plea hangs, and we ſtand, as the priſoner at the Bar, and know not what ſhall become of us. For though two be for us, there are two againſt us, as ſtrong and more ſtiff than they. So that, much depends upon this ſecond Meeting; upon the compoſing or taking up this difference. For, theſe muſt be at peace between themſelves, before they be at peace with us, or with God. And this is ſure: we ſhall never meet in heaven, if they meet no more.

And many means were made for this meeting, many times; but, it would not be. Where ſtayed it? It was not long of Mercy, ſhe would be eaſily entreated, to give a new meeting: (no queſtion of her.) Oft did ſhe look up to heaven, but Righteouſneſs would not look down: Not, look? not that? ſmall hope, ſhe would be got to meet, that would not look that way-ward.

Indeed, all the queſtion is of her. It is truth, and ſhe, that hold off: but, eſpecially She. Upon the Birth (you ſee) here is no mention of any in particular, but of Her; as much to ſay as, the reſt might be dealt with; ſhe onely it was, that ſtood out. And yet, ſhe muſt be got to meet, or elſe no meeting.

All the hope is, that ſhe doth not refuſe ſimply, never to meet more: but ſtands upon ſatisfaction: Elſe Righteouſneſs ſhould not be righteous. Being ſatisfied; then, ſhe will: remaining unſatisfied; ſo, ſhe will not meet. No meeting till Juſtice ſatisfied.

All ſtands then on her ſatisfying; how to deviſe to give her ſatisfaction to her mind, that ſo ſhe may be content, once more (not to meet and argue, as yer-while, but) to meet, and kiſs; meet in a joint concurrence to ſave us, and ſet us free.

And (indeed) Hoc opus, there lies all: how to ſet a ſong of theſe four parts, in good harmony; how to make theſe meet, at a love-day; how to ſatisfie Juſtice, upon whom all the ſtay is.

And this (ſay I) no Religion in the world doth, or can do, but the Chriſtian. No Quier ſing this Pſalm, but ours: None make Juſtice meet, but it. Conſequently, none quiet the conſcience ſoundly, but it: Conſequently, no Religion but it. Withall Religions elſe, at odds they be; and ſo, as they are faine to leave them ſo: For, means in the world have they none, how to make them meet: Not able for their lives to tender Juſtice a ſatisfaction, that will make her come in. The words next before are, that glory may dwell in our land. This glory doth dwell in our land indeed: And great cauſe have we all highly to bleſs God, that hath made our lot to fall in ſo fair a ground: That we were not born, to inherit a lye; that we were born to keep this Feaſt of this Meeting. For, bid any of them all but ſhew you the way, how to ſatisfie Juſtice ſoundly, and to make her come to this meeting; how Gods Word may be true, and his work juſt, and the Sinner find mercy and be ſaved for all that: They cannot. The Chriſtian only can do it and none elſe. All beſide for lack of this, paſs by the wounded man, and let him lie ſtill and bleed to death. Nor in any but the Chriſtian religion. Verſe 9. Pſal. 16.1. Luke 10.31, 32.

Bid the Turk: All he can ſay, is Mahomets prayer ſhall be upon you. Mahomets prayer, what is that? Say he were (that, he was not) a juſt man, a true Prophet; What can his prayers do, but move Mercy. But, Gods Juſtice, how is that anſwered? Who ſhall ſatisfie that? Not prayers; Juſtice is not moved with them; heares them not; goes on to ſentence, for all them. He can go no further: he cannot make Juſtice meet.

Bid the Heathen; he ſayes better yet, than the Turk. They ſaw, that without ſhedding of blood there was no ſatisfying Juſtice; and ſo, no remiſſion of ſin. To ſatisfie her, ſacrifices they had, of beaſts. But, it is impoſſible, (as the Apoſtle well notes) that the blood of Bulls or Goats ſhould ſatisfie for our ſins: A man ſin, and a beaſt die? Juſtice will none of that. What then, will you go as far as ſome did, the fruit of my body, for the ſin of my ſoul? Nor that neither. For, if it were the firſt born, the firſt born was born in Sin; and Sin, for ſin, can never ſatisfie. This Meeting will not be there. Heb. 9.22. Heb. 10.4. Mich. 6.7.

Bid the Jew, he can but tell you of his Lamb, neither. And, while time was, that was not amiſs; while it ſtood in reference, to S. John Baptiſts Lamb, the LAMB of GOD, this day, yeaned: as having the operation, the working, in the vertue of that. That being now paſt, there is no more in the Jew's, than in the Gentiles ſacrifice. Beaſts both: both, ſhort of ſatisfying. So, for all that theſe can do, or ſay, no meeting will there be had. Ioh. 1.29.

Onely the Chriſtian Religion, that ſhews the true way. There is one, there, thus ſpeaketh to Juſtice: Sacrifice and ſin offerings thou wouldeſt not have; then ſaid I, Lo I come. He, of whom it is written in the volume of the Book, that he ſhould do that feat; Corpus autem aptaſti mihi, Make him a body to do it in, and he will do it. Give him an ortus eſt, let Him be but born, He will make them meet ſtraight; Juſtice, and all. For, all the world ſees, if order could be taken, that He, that the Son of God, the Word and truth Eternal, would ſay, Lo I come; would take our nature upon Him; and, in it, lay down his ſoul, an offering for ſin; there were good hope of contenting Juſtice, and that the meeting would go forward. Deus ſanguine in ſuo, God with his blood; What ſin in the world would not that ſerve for? Pſal. 40.6, &c. Eph. 5. 2.

What Justice, in heaven or earth, would not that satisfie? If ye speak of an expiation, a ransome, an Mat. 16. 26. Iob 32. 13. Ἀντάλλαγμα (CHRISTS own word) a perfect commutation, there it is. This had, Justice will meet, embrace, kiss Mercy, shake hands, join (now) friends; Inveni enim in quo repropitier, I have found that now, wherewith I hold my self fully content and pleased. This way, ye shall make them meet; or else, let it alone for ever.

Verse XI.

Truth shall budde out of the Earth; and Righteousnes shall look down from Heaven.

3 The Birth Veritas orta de terra.

AND this is it, the Christian Religion sets before us: how the Son of the most High God of Heaven and earth took on Him our Nature, that, in our nature, for our nature, He might make to God (even stando in terminis justitiæ suæ, as the School-men speak, standing on the terms of his most exact strict justice) a compleat, full, every way sufficient satisfaction. And this (lo) makes the meeting. This honour hath the Christian Religion above all other; this glory doth dwell in our land; that these four, by CHRISTS Birth, in it, are brought, not only to obviaverunt sibi, but even to & osculatæ sunt.

And, if this be the glory, be not they the shame of Christian profession, that cherish in their bosomes, and entertain with stipends such, as are come to this (phrensie, I will call it) to say; what needs any satisfaction? what care we, whether Justice meet or no? that is (in effect) what needs CHRIST: Cannot GOD forgive offences to Him made, of His free goodnes, of His meer mercy, without putting His SON to all this pain? Fond men! If He would quit His Justice, or wave His Truth, He could: But, His justice and truth are to Him as essential, as intrinsecally essential, as His mercy: of equal regard every way as dear to Him. Justice otherwise remains unsatisfied: and satisfied it must be, either on Him, or on us. For, with beasts, or prayers it will not be: And it will hold off, till it be. If Justice Prov. 7. 2. be not so meet with, it will meet with them: And, they had better meet a She Bare robbed of her whelps, than meet Justice out of CHRISTS presence.

To us, they meet, this day, at the Child-house. For, these great Lights could not thus meet, but they must portend some great matter, as it might be some great Birth toward. The Astrologers make us believe, that in the Horoscope of CHRISTS Nativity there was a great Trigon of (I wot not what) Starres meet together. Whether a Trigon, or no; this Tetragon (I am sure) there was, these were all (then in conjunction, all in the ascendent, all above the Horizon at once, At Orta est the Birth, of Veritas the Truth, de terra from the Earth; The Occasion of drawing these four together.

Christ the Truth. Veritas prima. * Iohn 14. 6.

Veritas will fit CHRIST well, who, of himself said, * Ego sum veritas, I am the truth. So is He: Not that of the former verse, which is but veritas secunda, the truth spoken or uttered forth: He, the Veritas prima, the first truth, within. That depends upon this. Then are the words uttered true, when there is an adæquation between them and the mind. So, the first truth He is.

And Veritas secunda, too, 2 Cor. 1. 2.

The first and last both. For, now, by his coming, he is the adæquation of the Word and the Work, the Promise and the Performance. That way, He is truth too: The truth of all Types, the truth of all Prophesies: for, in Him, are all the Promises, yea and Amen: Yea, in the first truth, Amen, in the last. That actual verifying is the truth, when all is done: and, that He is, by His Birth.

Christ de terra a Gen. 3. 19. b Ier. 22. 39. c Eccles. 10. 9. d Esay 45. 8. Iren. l. 3. 5. Lact. l. 4. c. 12.

And, as the truth fits his Nature, so doth earth, Man. Of whom, GOD; [a] Earth thou art: To whom the Prophet thrice over; [b] Earth hear the word of the Lord: By whom, the VVise man, [c] Quid superbis, VVhy should earth be proud? [d] Germinet terra salvatorem, Let, this earth bring forth a SAVIOUR, be the terra promissionis, the Blessed Virgin, who was, in this, the land of Promise. So was this very place applied by Irenæus in his time, who touched the Apostles times: So, by Lactantius. So, by S. Hierom, and S. Augustine. Those four meet in this sense, as do the four in the Text: Quid est veritas de terra orta? Est Christus de famina natus; Quid est veritas? Filius Dei: Quid terra? Caro nostra: VVhat, the Truth? CHRIST: VVhat, the Earth? Our Flesh: In those words they find this Feast all.

Christs orta est, double. 1 De cœlo. Luke 1. 73. 2 De terra. Zach. 3. 8. Orta de.

For Orta est it is double: Therefore de terra is well added. Another Ortus he had, de cœlo: to wit, His heavenly Divine nature, which, as the day, sprung from on high; and He, in regard of it, called Oriens, by Zachary in the New Testament. But this (here) is de terra; for, the word (properly) signifies, the shooting forth of a sprig out of the ground: and He, in regard of this Ortus, called the Branch, by Zachary in the Old.

2. And, there is more in Orta. For (it is Rabbi Moses note) that is (properly) when it springeth forth of it self, as the field flowers do, without any seed cast in by the hand of man; so (saith he) should the MESSIAS come: Take his Nature not only in, but de, of the Earth. Not bring it with him from heaven (the error of the Brain-sick Anabaptist,) but take it of the earth: be the womans seed, made of a woman, out of the loyns of David: Virga de radice Iesse, the Root of Iesse: Nothing more plain. Gen. 4. 4. Esay 11. 1.

2 Orta est.

3. And yet more from orta est. For, that the truth, while it is yet unaccomplisht, but in promise only, it is but (as the Seed under ground) hid and covered with earth, as if no such thing were: as soon as ever it is actually accomplished (as this day) then doth it spring forth, (as it were) is to be seen above ground; then Orta est de terra, in very deed.

Of

Of the effect, now. Births are and have been, divers times, the ending of great diſſentions: As was this here: For, by this Birth, took end the two great Houſes: An union of them by it. 4 The Effect.

Firſt, by this, Truth is gained; Truth will meet now. That truth will come to this truth, tanquam minus dignum, and magis dignum, as the Abſtract to the Archetype. And, Truth, being now born of our Nature it will never (we may be ſure) be againſt our Nature: being come of the earth, it will be true to his own countrey; being made man, will be for man now, all He can. On Truth: ſhe is gained.

By this means, one of the oppoſites is drawn away, from the other: Got to be on our ſide. It is three to one, now. Righteouſneſs is left all alone; and there is good hope, ſhe will not ſtand out long. For (lo) here is good news; firſt, that reſpexit de cœlo, ſhe yet lookes down from heaven, now.

So as this birth in earth (you ſee) works in heaven; and, by name, upon Righteouſneſs, there. For, (of all) ſhe the leaſt likely: and, if ſhe be wrought on, the reſt there is no doubt of. How can there? they are all won to us already. On Righteouſneſs.

With Righteouſneſs, it works two wayes: Firſt, down ſhe looks. Whether it was, that ſhe miſſed Truth, to ſee what was become of her, and not finding her in heaven, caſt her eye to the earth. But there, when ſhe beheld Verbum caro factum, the word fleſh, the Truth freſhly ſprung there, where it had been a ſtrange plant long time before, Aſpexit and Reſpexit, ſhe looked and looked again at it. For, a Sight it was, to move, to draw the eye; yea, a ſight for Heaven to be a Spectator of; for the Angels, to come down and look at; for Righteouſneſs it ſelf to do ſo too. Ἐγκύπτει is the Angels word (in S. Peter:) Διακύπτει the Septuagim's word here: both mean one thing. The Greek word is to look (as we ſay) wiſhly at it, as if we would look thro, even through it; the Hebrew word, (that) is, as if Righteouſneſs did beat out a window: So deſirous was ſhe, to behold this Sight. 1 She lookes down. Iohn 1.14. 1 Pet. 1. 12.

And no marvel; for, what could Righteouſneſs deſire to ſee, and ſatisfie her ſelf with, that, in Him, was not to be ſeen? A clean birth, an holy life, an innocent death; a Spirit and a mouth without guile; a ſoul and a body without ſinne. In Him, ſhe beheld them all. Then, and whatſoever elſe might yeild her full ſatisfaction: Lay judgement to the rule, and righteouſneſs in the ballance, nothing oblique, will be found in him, nothing but ſtreight for the rule; nothing minus habens, but full weight for the ballance.

Thus, when Truth, from the earth; then, Righteouſneſs, from heaven. Then: but not before. Before, Righteouſneſs had no proſpect, no window open this way. She turned away her face; ſhut her eyes; clapt to the caſement; would not abide ſo much as to look hither, at us a ſort of forlorn ſinners: not vouchſafe us once the caſt of her eye. The caſe is now altered. Upon this ſight, ſhe is not only content, in ſome ſort, to condeſcend to do it, but ſhe breaks a window through, to do it. And then, and ever ſince this [Orta eſt,] ſhe looks upon the earth with a good aſpect; and a good aſpect, in theſe cœleſtial lights, is never without ſome good influence withall.

But then (within a verſe after) not only down ſhe looks, but down ſhe comes. Such a power attractive is there, in this Birth. And, coming, ſhe doth two things: [1] Meets firſt; for, upon the view of this Birth, they all ran firſt, and Kiſſed the Son: [2] And that done Truth ran to Mercy, and embraced her; and Righteouſneſs to Peace, and Kiſſed her. They that had ſo long been parted, and ſtood out in difference, now meet, and are made friends: Howſoever (before) removed, in ortu veritatis, obviaverunt ſibi; howſoever (before) eſtranged, now, oſculatæ ſunt. 2 Down ſhe comes. Verſe 13. 1 To meet. 2 To kiſs. Luke 1.77.

And, at that Birth of His, well met they all, in whom they meet all: The Truth He is; and per viſcera miſericordiæ He came, through the tender mercies of our God; and He is made to us righteouſneſs; and He is our peace. All meet in Him; for indeed, all He is; that, no marvel, they all four meet, where He is, that is all four. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Eph. 2. 14.

And, at this meeting, Righteouſneſs, ſhe was not ſo eff-ward before, but ſhe is now as forward; as forward, as any of the reſt. Mark theſe three.

Let not Peace prevent her (as Mercy did Truth;) but, as Mercy to Truth, firſt; ſo, ſhe (firſt) to Peace: as forward as Mercy every way.

[2] Nay, more forward than Mercy: for Mercy doth but meet Truth, and there is all; but ſhe, (as more affectionate) not onely meets Peace, but Kiſſes her. And (indeed) Righteouſneſs was to do more, (even, to kiſs) that it might be a pledge of forgetting all former unkindneſs; that we may be ſure ſhe is perfectly reconciled now.

[3] And one more yet (to ſhew her the moſt forward of them all,) out of the laſt verſe. At this meeting, ſhe follows not, draws not behind, ſhe will not go with them: She is before, leaves them to come after, and bear the train: She (as David) is before the Ark: puts S. Iohn Baptiſt from his office, for the time; Righteouſneſs is his forerunner: Righteouſneſs ſhall go before, tread the way before Him; the formoſt now of all the company. By all which, ye may know, what a look it was, ſhe looked with from Heaven. Verſe 13

Thus ye ſee CHRIST, by His comming; hath pacified the things in Heaven. A peace of Hoſanna, is pax in cœlis: There cannot be pax in terris, till there it be, firſt. But, no ſooner there it is, but it is peace in earth ſtraight, which (accordingly) was, this day proclaimed by the Angels. So, by the vertue of this birth, heaven is at peace with it ſelf: and heaven, with earth, is now at peace. So is earth too, with it ſelf, and a fulfilling of the Text by this meeting is, there, too. Coloſ. 1. 20. Luke 2. 14.

The Iewes they repreſent truth; to them it belongeth properly. For, Truth was, where were Eloquia Dei, the Oracles of God: and they were with the Iews. The Gentiles they claim by Mercy, that is their vertue: VVhere was Mercy, but where was miſery? and where was miſery, but with them that lay in darkneſs in the ſhadow of death? And, that was the Gentiles caſe, before this orta eſt. But, when Rom. 9. 4. Luke 1. 79.

Luke 1. 79. when the partition wall was broken down, and the two met in one, then alſo (in a ſenſe) Mercy and Truth met together. So, theſe two.

And ſo, the other two likewiſe. For, Righteouſneſs, ſhe was where the Law was, (for, that the rule of Righteouſneſs,) where the Covenant of the Old Teſtament was, do this and live (the very voice of Juſtice:) But, Peace was, where CHRIST was, in the Goſpel, Ipſe eſt Pax noſtra, for He is our Peace, and Peace-maker both, Qui fecit utrunque unum, that hath made the Law and the Goſpell, the Old Teſtament and the New, to be bound together (now) both in one volume.

II. Of this meeting in Chriſtianity.

Thus we have done with CHRIST. I would now apply this meeting to our ſelves another while. For, I ask; did this hold; did theſe meet onely in CHRIST? Do they not in Chriſtianity likewiſe? Yes, there, too. With CHRIST came Chriſtianity: look, what in His Birth, now, in the new birth of every one, that ſhall be the better by it; even the ſame meeting of the very ſame vertues, all.

1 Ioh. 1, 8. Mercy and Truth (firſt) to meet. Truth of confeſſion; confeſſion of our ſins; which if with fig leaves we ſeek to cover, and confeſs not, there is no truth in us. And, ſome truth there is to be (at leaſt this truth) or no meeting with Mercy. But, when this truth cometh forth, Mercy meeteth it ſtraight. Will ye ſee the meeting? Peccavi (ſaid David) there is truth: tranſtulit Dominus peccatum (ſaith Nathan,) there is Mercy: Mercy and truth met together. Homo in terris, per veritatem ſtimulatus, peccaſſe ſe confitebatur; & Deus in cœlis, per miſericordiam flexus, confitentis miſerebatur. Truth pricked man to confeſs his ſinnes; and Mercy moved God to pity him confeſſing, and ſends Mercy to meet Truth.

2 Sam. 12. 13.

VVill ye go on to the other Verſe? It holds there too (this.) For, where a true confeſſion is by man made, Veritas de terra orta eſt, truth is budded out of the earth. And ſo it muſt, yet Righteouſneſs will give us a good look from Heaven. But, will, as ſoon as it is: for when this truth ſprings freely from the earth to our own condemnation; immediately upon it, Righteouſneſs ſhews her ſelf from heaven, to our juſtification. VVill ye ſee this too? Lord be merciful to me a ſinner, (there is truth from the earth;) deſcendit domum ſuam juſtificatus, (there is Righteouſneſs from Heaven.)

Luke 18. 14.

But, (will ye mark:) Here are two truths, and in either Verſe one. This later, is the truth of Veritas orta eſt, of Chriſts Religion. And in this treaty, it was an Article of Imprimis, Mercy not to meet any, but them that profeſs the truth of Chriſts birth from the earth. Both theſe were born together: by and by, upon the birth of Chriſt (the truth,) the other birth alſo, of Chriſtian truth, did flouriſh and ſpread it ſelf all over the earth. The whole world (before) given over, and even grown over, with Idolatry, quite covered with the miſt of errour and ignorance, began then to entertain the Chriſtian profeſſion, (and by it to worſhip God in ſpirit and truth,) the true Religion, which is never true, if it have not this meeting: And this meeting it cannot have, if it have not the means of it, ortus veritatis de terra.

The ſame ſay we likewiſe, for the Righteouſneſs which looked down, and ſhewed her ſelf. It was not that of the Law, (which never came paſt the top of Mount Sinai,) but a new righteouſneſs, caſt in a new mould; a heavenly one, which never ſaw the earth (nor the earth it) before, before this birth, which is, the righteouſneſs of Chriſt revealed in His Goſpel, when that truth ſprang, this righteouſneſs looked down upon it.

Now, as this of mercy and truth enter us; ſo truth (not truth alone, but truth with truth's paire,) with righteouſneſs, carry us forward to God. Truth is not enough; not the truth of Religion, never ſo known, never ſo profeſſed; not without Righteouſneſs. Truth is but the light to guide us; Righteouſneſs is the way, to bring us thither. A light is to ſee by: A way is to go in: So is Righteouſneſs.

Verſe. 13. It follows ſtraight, Ponet greſſus in viâ, Righteouſneſs ſhall ſet us in the way of His ſteps: Steps, that is, the courſe of life. For, Scienti (by knowledge of the truth,) and not Facienti, (by the Iam. 4. 17. practiſe of Righteouſneſs,) peccatum eſt illi (ſaith Saint Iames;) and plagæ multæ, ſaith Saint Iames

Luke 12. 44. his Maſter. Sin; in that man that ſerves theſe two, is leſs pardonable, and more puniſhable, than in any other.

And then turn Righteouſneſs to Peace, and they will not meet barely, but (more than meet) Kiſs, in ſign, there is between them more than ordinary affection. Fac juſtitiam, & habebis pacem, (Saint Pſal. 34. 14. Auguſtine ſtands much on this.) Eſchew evil and do good, ſaith he, (there is Righteouſneſs:) and then, ſeek peace, and ye ſhall not be long in ſeeking it; She will come forth, her ſelf, to meet Righteouſneſs and kiſs her. And this he aſſures us, as a certain ſign, to know on the one ſide, true Righteouſneſs, (for, that tends to peace, not to queſtions and brabbles, whereof there never will be end:) So,

Iud. 15 14. on the other ſide, true peace; that kiſſes righteouſneſs, comes not together (like Sampſons Foxes) by the tailes, by indirect means, but clearly and fairly; Such means, as all the world will confeſs, to be right and good.

Now mark the order, how they ſtand. Mercy leads to truth, and the knowledge of it; and truth

Luke 1. 79. to righteouſneſs, and the practiſe of it; and righteouſneſs to peace, and the wayes of it, Guides our feet (firſt) into the way of peace. And, ſuch a way ſhall there alwayes be (do all the Controverſie-Writers what they can:) a faire way agreed upon of all ſides, queſtioned by none, in which, who ſo orders his ſteps aright, may ſee the ſalvation of our God, euen the way here chalked out before us; To ſhew mercy, and ſpeak truth; do righteouſneſs, and follow peace. And by this rule proceeding in the points whereto we are come already, even thoſe truths, wherein we are otherwiſe minded, would in due time be revealed unto us.

This

This is Zacharies peace; and this of his well followed, in the end will bring us Simeons peace, Nunc dimittis in pace; to be dismissed, to depart hence in peace: and Pax in novissimo, Peace at the later end, is worth all. Peace in the end, is a blessed end; and the beginning of a Peace, which never shall have end. Mercy our beginning, and Peace our end. This for the meeting; as in Christ, so in Christianity, or the course of a Christian mans life. Luke 2. 29.

Now a word, for the continuance of this meeting. For, I ask again: Met they to part? By no means; but, as they be together (now,) so to continue still. We had much adoe to get them together thus: Now we have them so, let us keep them so in any wise. For, as this meeting made Christianity first: So, there is nothing marres it, but the breaking it off again: No greater bane, to it, than the parting of these. The continuance of this meeting.

Let me tell you this: S. Augustine is very earnest upon the point, of the keeping of righteousnes and peace, (upon this Psalm, and this Verse;) and of truth and mercy together, (in the next,) upon misericors and verax, against them that would lay hold on mercy, and let go truth. O (saith he) that will not be: they met together, they will not part now; Either, without either, will not be had. And so, of the two others. There be, that would have Peace, and pass by Righteousnes. Tu fortè unam habere vis, & alteram non vis (saith he) you would gladly have one (Peace;) and for Righteousnes, you could be contented to spare it. Ask any, would you have Peace? With all my heart he will answer. There is no having one without the other, Osculantur hæ, amant hæ; why they kiss, they love together. Si amicam pacis non amaveris, non amabit te pax, if ye love not her friend (that is, Righteousnes) she will none of your love. Take that from S. Augustine.

Set this down then; Christianity is a meeting: One cannot meet: two there must be, and they may. But it is not a meeting of two; but, of two, with two: so no less than four. As CHRIST Himself was not one nature, so neither doth Christianity consist in any one vertue: Not under four. There is a quaternion in Christ. His [1] Essence, and His [2] Person, (Οὐσία, and Hypostasis,) in divinis, His [3] Flesh, and His [4] Reasonable Soul, in humanis. Answerable to these four, are these here: these four, to His four.

And as it is a meeting, so a cross meeting, of four Vertues, that seem to be in a kind of opposition (as hath been noted.) No matter for that. They will make the better refraction; the cool of one, allay the heat; the moist of one, temper the drought of the other. The soft vertues, need to be quickned: the more forward, to be kept from Altum sapere. So are the Elements, of which our body: So are the four winds, of which our breath doth consist, which gives us life. And these (in the Text) have an analogy, or correspondence, with the elements, observed by the Ancients. [1] Truth, as the earth, which is not moved at any time: [2] Quasi fluvius pax (saith Esay) Peace as a water-stream, the quills whereof make glad the City of our God. [3] Mercy, we breath and live by, no less than we do by Air: and [4] Righteousnes, she ventura est judicare sæculum per ignem, in that element. Psal. 93. 1. Esay 66. 12. Psal. 46. 4. Esay 66. 16.

You may happen find one of these, in Scripture, stood much upon, and of the other three nothing said there, but all left out; Conceive of it, as a figure (Synecdoche they call it.) As, ye have (here) man called earth; yet is he not on earth alone, but all the other three elements as well. No more is Christianity any one, but by Sydecdoche: but in very deed, a meeting of them all four.

It deceived the Gnostick, this place: This is eternal life to know thee. Knowledge (saith he) is it; As if, it were all: and so, he bade care for nothing else, but to know, and knowing live as they list. The Encratite, he was as far gone the other way; He lived straightly, and his Tenet was, non est curandum quid quisque credat, Id curandum modo quod quisque faciat: So that ye hold a straight course of life, it skils not what ye hold in point of Faith. No meeting, with these: Single vertues all. Ioh. 17. 3.

Yes, it skills. For both these were wrong; both go for Heretick. Christianity is a meeting; and to this meeting, there go Pia dogmata, as well as, Bona opera; Righteousnes, as well as Truth. Erre not in error (how) to single any out, (as it were) in disgrace of the rest; Say not, one will serve the turn, what should we do with the rest of the four; Take not a figure, and make of it a plain speech: Seek not to be saved by Synecdoche. Each of these is a quarter of Christianity, you shall never while you live make it serve for the whole.

The truth is, sever them, and farewel all; take any one from the rest, and it is as much as the whole is worth. For (as Bernard well observed) non sunt virtutes si separentur, upon their separation they cease to be vertues. For, how loose a thing is Mercy, if it be quite devoid of Justice? With it foolish pity. And how harsh a thing Justice, if it be utterly without all temper of Mercy? Summa injuria then (that is) Injustice at the highest. Mercy, take truth away, what hold is there of it, who will trust it? Truth, take Mercy from it, it is Severity, rather than Verity: Then Righteousnes, without Peace, certainly wrong is much better; better than perpetual brabling: And Peace without Righteousnes; better a sword far. This, if you sunder them. But, temper these together, and how blessed a mixture! Set a song of all four, and how heavenly a melody!

Entertain them then all four; [1] Hope in mercy: [2] Faith in truth: [3] Fear of Righteousnes: [4] Love of peace: O quàm præclara concordia! O how loving a knot! how by all means to be maintained! how great pity to part it!

A little of the time (now,) when this meeting would be. No time amiss: no day in the year, but upon intreaty, they will be got to meet. Yet if any one day have a prerogative more than another, of all the dayes in the year, on this day most kindly; the day we hold holy to the memory of this meeting; the day of Oriæ est, the occasion of it. The time of his meeting.

In remembrance of the first meeting, then they are apt and willing to meet upon it again; forward (ever) to meet, this day, they first met of themselves. But, Christ this day being born, this day, to meet of course. One special end, that He was born, was that, at His birth, this meeting might be. If to day then they should not meet, that were in a sort to evacuate Christs birth: if there should be a Veritas orta, without an obviaverunt sibi; So that if we procure it not, we had as good keep no Feast at all.

VVhat is then the proper work of this day, but still to renew this meeting on it? For, Christs birth we cannot entertain, but all these we must too; Necessary attendants upon it, every one. They be the vertues of his Nativity, these. At His birth, Christ bethought himself of all the vertues, which He would have to attend on Him, then; and these He made choice of, then, and for ever, to be the vertues of this Feast.

The sooner and the better to procure this meeting, the Church meets us (as Melchisedeck did Abraham) with bread and wine; but, of a higher nature than his, far: prepares (ever) this day a love-feast, whereat they may the rather meet. Where, truth from the earth, may look up to heaven and confess; and Righteousness from heaven, may look down to earth and pardon: where we may shew mercy, in giving where need is; and offer Peace, in forgiving where cause is; that so, there may be an obviaverunt, a meeting, of all hands.

And even so then let there be. So, may our end be as the end of the First verse in peace; and as the end of the Second, in Heaven. So, may all the blessings that came to mankind by this meeting, as by the birth of CHRIST (the cause of it) meet in us and remain upon us: till, as we now meet together, at the Birth; So we may then meet in a perfect man, in the measure of the fullness of the age of CHRIST: As meet (now) at the LAMBS yeaning;
Eph. 4. 13. so meet then, at the LAMBS marriage: be caught up in the clouds
1 Thes. 4. 17. (then) to meet Him and there to raign for ever with Him, in His Kingdom of Glory.

A SER-

A SERMON

Preached before the

Kings Maiesty,

At White-Hall, on Friday, the XXV. of Decemb. An. Dom. MDCXVIII. being Christmas Day.

LUKE Chap. II. Vers. XII, XIII.

Et hoc erit vobis signum, &c.

And this shall be a sign unto you: ye shall find the Child swadled, and layed in a Cratch.

And straight way there was, with the Angel, a multitude of heavenly souldiers, praising God, and saying,

Glory be to God on high, &c.

OF these three verses, the points be two: [1] The Shepherds Sign: and [2] the Angels Song. The Sign is a remain of Angelus ad Pastores, the Angels speech to the Shepherds: VVe called it, as the Angel himself called it, a Sermon: Evangelizo (the word, he useth) is, to preach.

Of which Sermon there are two parts: His [1] Birth (the verse before,) [2] His Finding (in this.) For, this is a double Feast: not only, the Feast of his Nativity; but the Feast of his Invention also. Therefore the Angel makes not an end with [unto you is born:] but tells them further; it is not enough, Christ is born; but to take benefit by his Birth, we are to find him. Natus est, his part; Invenietis, ours.

Of Natus est somewhat hath formerly been said: Invenietis (now) follows: and follows well. For, what is Natus est, without Invenietis? Such a one there is born; what shall we be the better, if we find him not. As good not born, as, not known: To us, all one. Nobis nascitur, cum à nobis noscitur. Born He may be, before; but, nobis, natus, to us He is born, when to us He is known, when we find Him; and not before. Christus inventus, is more than Christus natus. Set down invenietis then first.

Invenietis leads us to Hoc erit signum. For, how shall they find Him without a sign? So come we from Christus natus, to Christus signatus. Natus, born to be found; Signatus, signed or marked, that He may be found. Born he is, that they know: And, when, they know; (hodie.) And, where, they know; in Bethlehem. To Bethlehem they will: but when they come there, how then? In such resort, the Town so full of strangers, as no room in the Innes, whither should they turn them? What could they wish, but O quod erit signum! Natus est, O that he were Signatus! O that we had a sign to find him by.

Their wish is honest and good: And pity, any that seeks Christ should want a sign, to find him by: the Angel will not suffer that; But, before he end his speech, he takes order for their Sign: and this it is. When ye come to Bethlehem, never search in any house, or chamber; in a stable, there, shall you find a Babe The Division.

a Babe ſwadled and laid in a manger; You would little think it, but that is He: and ſo Signo dato, this ſign given, the Sermon ends. For, to find Chriſt is all: All, in all.

A Sermon would have an Antheme of courſe; It hath ſo. And one ſuitable, if it might be: an Angel preached it, and no man: It would be a Quire of Angels, and not of men, to ſing it. So it is Gloria in excelſis, all the Fathers call it Hymnum Angelicum, the Angels Hymn, or Antheme.

II. This is ſet down in the two later verſes; the [1] Quire that ſing it, in the former: the [2] Song it ſelf (the ditty of it ſo) in the later. 1, The Quire: in it five. 1. Who? That there were certain heavenly Perſonages firſt. 2. In what habit? that in the habit of ſouldiers to ſee to. 3. What number? that a great multitude of them. 4. What they did: that they took up this Hymn and fell on praiſing God. 5. And fifthly, VVhen? That they did it inſtantly, upon the ſpeech ended.

2 The Song: That conſiſts of three ſtraines. There are in it [1] God, [2] Earth, and [3] Men, theſe three firſt. And then, three to theſe three: [1] Glory, [2] Peace, [3] Good-will: Each ſorted to other: [1] Glory, to God; [2] Peace, to the Earth; [3] To Men, a Good-will.

So have you the ſign and the ſong: the one to ballance or counterpoiſe the other; the ſong to ſing away the ſign; to make amends, for the manger. The ſign, very poor and mean; the Song, exceeding high and heavenly. Paupertas in imis, the Sign; poverty at the loweſt: Gloria in excelſis, the ſong, Glory at the higheſt. That well might Leo ask, Quis eſt iſte puer, tam parvus, tam magnus? VVhat Child is this ſo little and ſo great withal? Tam parvus, ut in præſepi jaceat: Tam magnus, ut Eſ concinant Angeli: ſo little, as He lies in a Crateh: ſo great though, as He hath Angels to ſing to Him; the whole Quire of Heaven, to make Him melody. It is a courſe (this) the Holy Ghoſt began it (here,) at His Birth, and after obſerved it all along, ſociare inter ſummis, & inſolita ſolitis temperare; to couple low and high together, and to temper things mean and uſual, with others as ſtrange every way.

3 Out of theſe we ſhall learn, Firſt, what our duty is, to find Chriſt. The Angel preſuppoſes this; that being born we will not leave, till we have found him: till we can ſay, (it was the firſt word of the firſt Apoſtle) [1] εὑρήκαμεν, We have found, found the Meſſias. Invenietis: by all means to find Chriſt. [2] Then how to find him, at what ſign. [3] And laſt, when we have found him, how to ſalute him, with what words to praiſe God, for him. For him: both for his birth, and for his invention. All conſidered, his Invention, to us, no leſs behoveful, than his Nativity. And this day to be no leſs ſolemnized, for invenietis, his finding, then for natus eſt, his very birth it ſelf. It is more often found in the firſt Fathers, by the name of Theophania, his appearance or being found; than by the name Genethlia, of being born into the world. The Angels Evangelizo reacheth to both: their Gloria in excelſis is ſung for both.

Ioh. 1. 42.

I. THe work of the day, is invenietis, to find Chriſt. VVe ſhall not be the better for natus eſt, if we find him not. Find him we cannot, if (firſt) we find not a ſign to find him by. Erit vobis ſignum, and Hoc erit (ſaith the Angel) a ſign ye ſhall have; and this ſhall be it: Ye ſhall find him ſwadled and laid in a Manger.

I The Sign. Signs never come amiſs; but, are (then) ſo neceſſary, as we cannot miſs them, when we ſhould miſs without them: when, no ſign, no invenietis: As, here. For, if a ſign; if this ſign had not been given, no invenietis: Chriſt had not been found. Not been found: for, never had been ſought in ſuch a place. Had not the Angel thither directed the ſhepherds: had not the ſtar thither pointed the Magi, neither tone, nor tother would ever, there have ſought him. A Non eſt inventus had been returned by both.

And reaſon: For ſome kind of proportion there would be between the ſignum, and ſignatum: And, if the ſign be a place (as here) between Locus, and Locatus. A chief Perſon, in a chief Place: a Lord and Saviour, ſomething Lord and Saviour-like. To Bethlehem they will. Set the ſign by, let them alone, ſay nothing to them: VVhen they come thither, they would never go to an Inne, or Oſtry, but to the very beſt houſe in the Town. Or, if to an Inne, to the faireſt Chamber in it: Or, to a Chamber at the leaſt: Never, to the ſtable: there to look in the manger, for Chriſtus Dominus. To the ſtable we go to look for an Horſe: To the Crib, for bos cognovit & aſinus, for one of them: Never, thither, to ſeek for the Saviour of the world.

Nay, if in their ſearch, paſſing by, by hap, they had lighted upon ſuch a Birth, a Child ſo lying, it may be they would have pitied the poor Babe and the Mother: but have gone on their way, and ſought farther: Never (I dare ſay) taken him, for Chriſt the Lord. And if one ſhould have bid them, Stay, for this is the Child, the Angel ſpake of; they would have ſhaken him off, and ſaid, with as great ſkorn as they, 1 Sam. 16. Nunquid poterit iſte ſalvere nos, what ſhall this be our Saviour trow? For, invenietis is not all, to find him: but finding him, to apply the Angels words unto him; to believe, of this Child thus, there lying, that he ſhould be Chriſt the Saviour, Gaudium omni populo, the joy of the whole earth. It goes hard, this.

1 Sam. 16. 27.

VVe ſaid (when time was) this meſſage was ſo high, as no man meet to bring it, but an Angel of heaven. We ſay now, ex alio capite, this ſign was ſo unlikely, no man was meet to give it but an Angel only. And it was well, it was an Angel: if it had been any elſe, His Birth would have ſeemed (as His Reſurrection did) λῆρος, a fained tale: No mans affidavit would have been taken for it.

VVhat were the Shepherds like to think of this? Sure, thank him for Natus eſt, the news of His Birth; but, not for His ſign, Erit ſignum, they like well: but not, hoc erit. If he had given them them no Sign, it would not have troubled them: Now, the Sign given troubles them worſe. For, this Sign they know not what to make of it; It is ſo poor a one, it is enough to make them half in the mind to give over their journey, as not caring for invenietis, whether they find him or no: If his Sign be no better, as good loſt, as found. Alwayes, this is out of the Evangelizo vobis; no part of it; for, no good news, thus to find him.

And we, if we admit a conference with fleſh and bloud, when we lay together the Sign, and of whom it is the Sign; we find, to our thinking, a great diſparagement, and (I know not how) thoughts ariſe in our hearts, as if ſome better Sign would have done better. The meaning is, we would find Chriſt (fain:) but we would find him, in ſome better place. Half Jews we are all in this point; we would have a Meſſias in ſtate. Hoc erit, this it ſhall be (ſaith the Angel.) Shall be: but ſhould it be this? No: how ſhould it be, let us ſee; VVhy, this ſhall be the Sign; Ye ſhall find the Child, not in theſe clouts or cratch, but in a crimſon mantle, in a cradle of Ivory: That (lo) were ſomewhat Saviour-like: Hoc erit ſignum.

But, in vain take we upon us, to teach the Angel: VVe would have we know not what. VVe forget S. Auguſtines diſtingue tempora: as the time is, the Angel is right: and a fitter Sign could not be aſſigned. VVould we have had him come in power, and great glory? and ſo he will come, but not now. He, that cometh here in clouts, he will come in the clouds one day: But (now) his coming was for another end; and ſo to be in another manner. His coming now was, (as we ſay in the Collect) to viſit us in great humility: and ſo, his Sign to be according.

Nay then, I ſay: Firſt go to the nature of a Sign, if Chriſt had come in his excellency, that had been 1 no Sign, no more than the Sun in the firmament ſhining in his full ſtrength: Hoc non erit ſignum. Contrary to the courſe of Nature it would be, elſe it is no ſign. The Sun eclipſed; the Sun in ſackcloth: that is, ſignum in ſole, the ſign indeed: And that is the ſign here, the Sun of righteouſneſs entring in- Luke 21.25. to his eclipſe, begins to be darkned, in his firſt point, the point of his Nativity. This is the ſign (ſay I:) and, that had been none.

I ſay again: It is not only ſignum, that is not all, it is ſignum vobis: VVe ſhall do well to look to 2.
vobis. There is a matter, in that: For whom, this ſign was given? (Not the perſons ſo much, as the condition.) For, if he had been ſo gloriouſly born, ſuch as theſe ſhould never have been ſuffered to come near him. But, this is a ſign, for you: You that keep ſheep and ſuch other poor people: you have a Saviour too. He is not the Saviour of Great States only, but even of poor Shepherds. The pooreſt of the earth may repair to him, being no other place but this, and by this ſign to find him: And ſo, hoc erit ſignum vobis.

I ſay thirdly, Vobis, and take in our ſelves too. So, Hoc erit ſignum. For, what praiſe or thanks had 3 it been for us, to have believed in him, born in all glorious manner? But, being thus born, with this ſign, if now we do it τῆτο χάρις ἔχει (to ſpeak in S. Peters phraſe) this hath thanks and praiſe with 1 Pet. 2. 19. 20.
God: And ſo, Hoc erit ſignum.

Fourthly, without regard of them, or of us, I ſay, that even in regard of Himſelf, Hoc erit ſignum. 4
VVould there be a proportion between the Sign and the Signatum? There is ſo. This holds good proportion with the enſuing courſe of his life, and death. And, (all conſidered,) it is even ſignum adæquatum. VVe may well begin with Chriſt in the Cratch: VVe muſt end with Chriſt on the Croſs. The Cratch is a ſign of the Croſs. They that write, de re ruſticâ, deſcribe the form of making a Cratch Croſs-wiſe. The ſcandal of the Cratch is a good preparative to the ſcandal of the Croſs. To be ſwadled thus, as a Child, doth that offend? What then, when ye ſhall ſee him pinioned and bound as a malefactor? To lie in a manger, is that ſo much? how then, when ye ſhall ſee him hang on the Croſs? But ſo, ——primo ne diſcrepet imum; that his beginning, and his end may ſuit well and not diſagree, ſic oportuit Chriſtum naſci. Thus ought Chriſt to be born, and this behoved to be his ſign.

But then to remove this ſcandal, I ſay fifthly: that the leſs glorious, the more glorious; the leſs glo- 5 rious his ſign, the more glorious He. And even in this reſpect of his glory, he was to be born under this Sign. Had he come in the power and great glory, we ſpake of, what great matter had it been for him (then) to have done things powerful, and glorious? But coming in this ſort, theſe ſame panni and præſepe were an evident ſign, of the power of his might, in nothing ſo manifeſt, as in this, that, from ſo poor a beginning, he was able to advance ſo glorious a work. It was much, from the Babe floating in the flags of Nilus, in a baſket of bulruſhes (Moſes) to gather himſelf a people, even the Nation and King- Exod. 2. 3.
dom of the Jews, and to deliver his Law. It was infinitly much more, from this Babe (here) lying in the Cratch, to work the bringing in of the Gentiles, and the turning about of the whole world, and to publiſh his Goſpel, the power of God to ſalvation. Herein, is power: from his Cratch, to do this. There to lay him; and, there lying, to make ſo many Nations come, and adore him as ſince he hath. That if ever in his Humility, His judgement were exalted; if his power were ever made perfect in Act. 8. 33.
weakneſs; if ever he ſhewed, that infirmum Dei fortius eſt hominibus, God at the weakeſt, is ſtronger 2 Cor. 12. 9.
then men in all their ſtrength; Hoc erit ſignum, in this ſign it was. 1 Cor. 1. 25.

A ſign, cum externa ejicit quod ſibi ſufficit; in that, He caſts from Him all outward ſignes and means, that He is, of himſelf, all-ſufficient; & nulla indiget niſi ſe, and needs no power but his own. His Cratch and He will bring this work to paſs. His gloria in excelſis will be hoc ipſo excelſior; His glory on high, ſo much the higher, for this, Ever; But now, more than ever: And, in all His ſignes; but, in this, more glorious, than in any, nay, then in all of them. And ſo Hoc erit ſignum, this ſhall be the ſign: ſhall be, and ſhould be, both.

But, I wave all theſe, and ſay ſixthly: Make of the ſign, what ye will; It ſkils not what it be; ne- 6 ver ſo mean: In the nature of a ſign, there is nothing, but it may be ſuch; All is in the thing ſignified. So it carry us to a rich ſignatum, and worth the finding, what makes it a matter, how mean the ſign be? VVe are ſent to a Crib; Not, to an empty Crib; Chriſt is in it: Be the ſign never ſo ſimple, the ſignatum it carries us to, makes amends. Any ſign with ſuch a Signatum.

And I know not the man ſo ſqueamiſh, but if, in his ſtable, and under his manger, there were a treaſure hid, and he were ſure of it; but thither he would, and pluck up the planks, and dig and rake for it, and be never a whit offended with the homelineſs of the place. If then Chriſt be a treaſure (as in Him Coloſ. 2. 3. are all the treaſures of the wiſedom and bounty of God) what skills it, what be His ſign. VVith this, with any other, Chriſt is worth the finding. Though the Cratch be not worth the going to, Chriſt is worth the going for. He is not worthy of Chriſt, that will not go any whither, to find Chriſt.

7 Laſtly, I would fain know, why ſhould the Shepherds, why ſhould any be aſhamed, of this Sign? the Angels are not: Non erubeſcit quis quod prædicat, No man proclaims or preaches of that; makes a Hymn of that, he is aſhamed of. And (indeed) why ſhould the Angels be aſhamed to report it, ſeeing Chriſtus non eſt confuſus, Chriſt is not aſhamed to wear it. And if He be not, ſo to be found, never let us be, ſo to find Him.

I conclude then: they that will have a Saviour without ſuch a ſign, beſt ſtay for the Jews Meſſias, or get them, for their ſign, to ſome body elſe. The Angel hath none; the Goſpel knows none, but this: VVe muſt take Chriſt as we find Him; Cratch and all. The invention of the Cratch, and the invention of Chriſt fall both upon one Feaſt; this day, both: No ſevering of them. All which (I truſt) by this, ſhew plainly, the ſign was well aſſigned, by the Angel: and ſo (I hope) we will not ſet the Shepherds go alone, but go along with them too, for company, to find Chriſt, in hoc ſigno, by this Sign.

But the Cratch is gone, many years ago: VVhat is our ſign now? VVhy, what was the Sign a ſign of? There needs no ſtraigning at all; of humility (clear:) Signum humile, ſignum humilis. Not alwayes. Not alwayes ſo; not with us; where, the higheſt minds will uſe the loweſt ſigns: but, with Chriſt, with ſuch in whom is the mind of Chriſt, there is no odds at all. Ye may ſtrike a tally between the ſign and the Signatum. Humility, then: VVe ſhall find Him, by that ſign, where we find Humility, and not fail: and where that is not, be ſure we ſhall never find Him. This day, it is not poſſible to keep off this Theme: we cannot but we muſt fall upon it; it is ſo woven into every Text, there is no avoiding it: But, of all, into the Sign, moſt of all. Such a Sign, of ſuch Humility, as never was.

Mat. 12. 38. Signs are taken for wonders: (Maſter we would fain ſee a ſign, that is, a Miracle.) And in this ſenſe, it is a ſign, to wonder at. Indeed, every word (here) is a wonder. Τὸ βρέφος, an Infant, Verbum Infans, the Word, without a word: the Eternal Word not able to ſpeak a Word: [1] A wonder ſure. Iob. 38. 9. [2] And the σπαργανισὶς, Swadled; and that a wonder too, He, that (as in the 38. of Iob he ſaith) taketh the vaſt body of the main ſea, turns it too and fro, as a little child, and rolls it about with the ſwadling bands of darkneſs; He, to come thus into clouts, Himſelf! [3] But yet all is well; All children are ſo: But, in præſepi, that is it, there is the wonder. Children lie not there; He doth: There lieth He; the Lord of Glory, without all glory. Inſtead of a Palace, a poor ſtable; of a Cradle of ſtate, a beaſts Cratch; No pillow, but a lock of Hay; No hangings, but duſt and cobwebs; No attendants, but in Habak. 3. 2. medio animalium (as the Fathers read the third of Abakkuk:) For, if the Inne were full, the ſtable was not empty, we may be ſure. A Sign this, (nay three, in one,) able to amaze any.

And it is true (ſaith Solomon, and makes a wonder of it) will God accept a place in earth to receive 1 Reg. 6. 27. Him? VVhen He had built Him a ſtately ſumptuous Temple, and meant it by that. And is that a wonder, if in ſuch a Temple? What is it then, if in a corner of a ſtable, in a Cratch there? Will he accept of that trow? If He will, Hoc erit ſignum, indeed. O Lord, O Lord (ſaith King David (his Father) rapt with admiration) how wonderful! What? why, minoraſti Eum ab Angelis, Thou Pſal. 8. 4. madeſt Him lower than the Angels, (for, to CHRIST, doth the Apoſtle apply that verſe Heb. 2. 6. Hebr. 2.) Lower than the Angels? Nay lower yet (ſaith Eſay in his 53.) Noviſſimus virorum, the Eſay 53. 3. loweſt of men: Nay, lower yet (ſaith the Angel here,) lower than the loweſt of men. For a ſtable, a Cratch, is a place for beaſts, not for men. So low. VVell may this be ſaid a Sign, in this ſenſe, to wonder at: If it be well looked into, it is able to ſtrike a man into an extaſie.

But if we ſtand but gazing and wondring at this ſign, the Angel will blame us at the Nativity, As, Acts 11. 1. they did the Apoſtles, for the like, at His Aſcention. VVhat learn we by it?

2 Vobis, to you. For, loquitur ſignis; ſigns have their ſpeech: and this is no dumb ſign. VVhat ſaith it then to us? Chriſt (though as yet He cannot ſpeak, as a new born Babe, yet) by it He ſpeaks, and out of His Crib Mat. 11. 29. (as a Pulpit) this day, preaches to us; and his Theme is, Diſcite à me; learn of me, for I am humble: Humble, in my birth, ye all ſee. This is the Præcipe of the Præſepe (as I may call it;) the leſſon of Chriſts Cratch.

A ſign it is; but not a ſign at large, indefinitely: Nothing, but hoc erit ſignum. But, ſignum, vobis (for you:) limited, to ſome, not, to all. For not to ſome others; But, to you, and ſuch as you are, a ſign it is: a ſign it is, how to find Him. A ſign for whom He was born, that thus was born: To whom He, to whom His birth belongs. Sure, humilis naſcitur, humilibus. So He was born; and, for them that are ſo, He was born. Such He was found; and, of ſuch He will be found, and of none but ſuch.

But then (as S. Auguſtine ſaith well) ſignum Vobis, ſi ſignum in Vobis: A ſign for you, if a ſign in you. For in this ſenſe alſo, it is a ſign to ſign us with: a ſignature, to make a mark on us. Theirs, (in the Ezek. 9. 4. IX. of Ezekiel) that were ſaved, they were marked with the ſign of a Tau in their foreheads: That, is this very ſign, the mark of Humility, as being the laſt and loweſt letter of the whole Alphabet.

And,

And, this ſign ſhall follow them that believe; and by this mark will He know them: by the ſign, we find Him; by the ſame will He find us: Invenietis, and invenieminí, by one and the ſame ſign both. Mark 16.17. For, nunquam erit aliud Servatoris ſignum, aliud ſervati; Never, He that ſaves, one Sign; they, that ſaved, another. At leaſt, not a quite contrary, but the ſame ſign, both. By the ſame, that CHRIST found, by the ſame a Chriſtian: Or, to ſpeak more nearly to the Day, by the ſame that CHRISTS birth, by the ſame, the Chriſtians new birth. For, as faith is the virtue appropriate to His Conception (by faith He was conceived, Beata quæ credidit:) So is Humility, as proper to His Nativity: in great Humilitie, this Day, was He born, and brought into the world. Then, if the ſign of CHRISTS Birth, be the proper ſign of a Chriſtians new birth, wherein CHRIST is faſhioned in us anew; Hoc erit ſignum, that they, who to faith have not joyned Humility, are not yet come ſo far, as to be babes in CHRIST; not yet (as Saint Baſil ſpeaks) come to their σπαργανα και σπαργανα, their ſwadling clouts, in the ſtate of ſalvation. And what time (trow ye) will theſe be come to the meaſure of the full age in Chriſt, that yet are no further forward? Many a μηγαριον are there among us, if this Sign hold. Luke 1.45,48. Gal. 4.19. 2 Pet. 1.5,6. Matth. 18.3. Epheſ. 4.13.

But then, if it be Signum vobis, to ſome; It is for ſome others, ſignum contra vos: and that is the proud. For, the Word of God hath two edges: and, if it go one way thus for Humilitie; it cuts as deep the contrary, againſt Pride. And withall, under one leads us to the cauſe ſtraight, and ſhews us the malignity of the diſeaſe of pride. For the cure whereof, this ſo profund humility was requiſite in CHRIST. There was one, when time was, took the diſeaſe of Ero ſimilis Altiſſimo: And He breathed upon our firſt parents, with this Eritis ſicut Dii, and infected them with it. To make themſelves equal with God, is plain robbery (ſaith the Apoſtle, Phil. 2.) For that robbery of theirs, was the Son of God robbed (as I may ſay) and quite ſpoiled of His glory. For their puffing up, ἐκένωσεν, He was made empty: For their lifting up, ἐταπείνωσεν, was He brought thus low: for their comparing with GOD, came He to be compared to the beaſts that periſh: lay in their manger, we ſee. Eſay 71.14. Gen. 3.5. Phil. 2.6. Phil. 2.7,8. Pſa. 49.12.

Never blame the Angel, for giving this ſign; he had no other to give. As Chriſt was born, ſo was he to tender Him. Ask CHRIST, why He would be ſo born. Of any other child, this could not be asked: They are born, they neither know where nor how. Of Chriſt it may: He knew both. For, as oblatus eſt, quia voluit: So, natus eſt. He was ſo born, becauſe he would ſo be. And why would He ſo be? His Ecce venio, His coming was to recover man. Man was to be recovered by the contrary of that, by which he periſhed. By pride he periſhed, that is confeſſed. Then, by Humility, to be recovered, according to the rule, Contraria curantur contrariis. So, He to come, in Humility. The pride was high; Eritis ſicut Dii: the contrary, as low, factus eſt ſicut jumenta, as low as they; ly in their cratch. Eſay 53.7. Zach. 2.10. Gen. 3.5. Pſal. 49.12.

It is ſtrange, this point of Chriſt in the cratch, how tedious, how harſh it is to be ſtood on. Harſh, but to none more, nay none ſo much, as to the proud: And they, of all other, have leaſt cauſe to be offended with it: It is they, that were the cauſe of it. They ſhould not (one would think) be offended with their own doing: It is long of them, all this. If there they find Him, It is they, and none but they, that there laid Him, If He be otherwiſe than He ſhould, their pride is too blame for it. But for it, we had found him in a better place. And fie upon pride (ſay I,) if it were but for this onely: Enough to make us loath this vice, that laid this ſo great a diſgrace (as we count it) upon the Son of GOD.

But marvel not, if this be ſignum contra, to them a ſign againſt them; they are againſt it. Well ſaid Bernard: In ſignum poſitum eſt præſepe tuum Domine, ſed in ſignum cui à multis contradicitur; Thy cratch O Lord is ſet for a ſign; but for a ſign, which of many is ſpoken againſt (done againſt I am ſure:) alluding to that of Simeon (at the 34. Ver. after.) that Chriſt ſhould be a ſign (and, if Chriſt, His cratch ſure) to be ſpoken againſt. By many, Whoſe pride (ſaith the Prophet) teſtifies to their faces; you may take up the edges of their garments, and ſhew it them; yea, that, even this day, come hither, to make a ſhew of it, as it were to affront this ſign, and the Angel that gave it: come to celebrate the Feaſt of Humility, in exceſs of pride. Should the Angel ever have perſwaded one of theſe, to have gone into the ſtable, and have ſought his Saviour there? Never: Do but look upon them; you would think they had ſome other Saviour by themſelves, that lay in an ivory Cradle; and never looked to be ſaved by Him that this day lay in a manger. Cap 2.34. Oſe. 5.5.

Sure, it is no good ſign, to be ad oppoſitum to this Sign. If ſignum vobis, to the one; ſignum contra vos to the other. For, if humility be a ſign of finding Chriſt, pride muſt needs be the ſign of loſing Him; and who ſo loſeth Him, is (himſelf) even the child of perdition: and therefore look to this ſign, well.

But, humility is not all, we find in this ſign. The Philoſopher ſaith, Signs are either indicant, or co-indicant. Indicant it is, of humility: Co-indicant of that which, in Him, and on His part, (as pride, on ours) was the cauſe that made Him ſtoop to this humility, and that was His Love. He left gloriam in excelſis, for δόξαν ἐν ὑψίστοις; His glory on high, for His good-will towards men. It was a ſign of Love too (this.) A ſign, nay an enſign, His very colours (as in the 2 of Cant.) He terms it, love His banner, or enſign over us. Signal love indeed; that for our ſakes, refuſed not, firſt our nature, our mortality, (that alone had been love enough:) But, not the baſeſt eſtate of our nature, not poverty: Povertie, and ſuch povertie, as the like was never heard of; uſque ad ſqualorem & ſatorem ſtabuli, to be found, where He was found; there to lie. Cant. 2.4.

Thou didſt not abhor the Virgins womb (ſo we ſing:) Thou didſt not abhor the beaſts manger, (ſo we may ſing too:) And is not this Hoc erit ſignum, a very Enſign of love? Hymn Ambroſ.

Two ways take we meaſure of Love. [1] Of quanti fecit nos (firſt) quanta fecit pro nobis; how much He made of us, by how much He did for us, (the ordinary way of the worlds meaſuring.)

[2] But there is another, and that is, quanti fecit nos, by quantillus factus eſt pro nobis, how much he made of us, by how little He was made for us. This later we hold to be the more, by how much it is eaſier for Him many times, to make great, then once to be made little.

[3] But

[1] But then, will ye take in (this in the Text) nobis (to make up a third) For us. Us that, even at that time, when He ſhewed ſo great love to us, ſhewed ſo little to Him; that, if the beaſts had not been better to Him, than we, He had found no place to be born in. For us He came, and we thruſt Him out from us, and from all place with us, into the place of beaſts. And if He had not borrowed their ſtable, caruiſſet tecto. He had had no roof to cover him: if He had not borrowed their crib, caruiſſet lecto, He had lyen on the cold ground, at this time of the year. Nobis (ſure) is ſomewhat.

And now, to quanta fecit pro nobis. For, all this was not ſo much, to ſhew the love in Himſelf, as to work in God δόξα ἐν ὑψίστοις, Good-will towards men, (the foot of the Angels Song;) to regain His Fathers love: to make Him well pleaſed toward men, by his Humility, with whom, for their pride, He was juſtly diſpleaſed. Thus unlovely He became, to make us beloved; thus poor, to make us rich: rich in the grace and favour of God, more worth (when the time comes) than all the riches of the world.

This (lo) is the co-indicant ſign of love, theſe the colours of it. The cratch is the cradle of His love, no leſs than of His humility, and able to provoke our love again, The leſs He made for us, the more we to make of Him: and that, not ſo much, for that He was made; as for the love, by which He was made it. And, theſe two Signatures made in us, This ſign erit ſignum nobis, and nobis ſignum in bonum: A ſign it ſhall be, to us, and to us for our good. And this for the Sign.

II. The Song.

Will ye now, to this inglorious Sign, hear a glorious Song; to this cratch of humility, a hymn of celeſtial harmony? If the ſign miſlike you, ye cannot but like the ſong and the Quier that ſing it. The ſong I ſhall not be able to reach to, will ye but ſee the Quier? and that ſhall ſerve for this time: For, by all means, before I end, I would deal with ſome-what, that might ballance this ſign of His low eſtate.

This, the Evangeliſts never fail to do; Ever they look to this point carefully: if they mention ought, that may offend, to wipe it away ſtraight, and the Scandal of it, by ſome other high regard. See you a ſort of poor Shepheards? Stay, and ye ſhall ſee a troop of Gods Angels. Hear ye one ſay, laid in the cratch below? abide, and ye ſhall hear many ſing, Glory on high, in honour of Him that lieth in it.

Vidiſti vilia (ſaith S. Ambroſe) audi mirifica: Were the things mean, you have ſeen? Wonderfull ſhall they be, ye now ſhall hear, and ſee both. Vileſcit præſepe, & ecce Angelicis cantibus honoratur: is the cratch mean? Mean as it is, it is honoured with the muſick of Angels; it hath the whole Quier of Heaven to ſing about it. This alſo will prove a ſign, if it be well looked into; a counter-ſign to the other: That, of His humility; this, of His glory.

Surely, ſeeing the other three Evangeliſts omitted this ſign, one would wonder, why S. Luke did not ſo too. In diſcretion, ſmall credit there was in it; better have concealed it, (one would think:) a great deal better. But, Saint Luke knew what he did; He would never have mentioned the ſign, but that ſure he was, when he had laid Him ſo low, he was able to up with Him again, and ſing away all the diſgrace of the Sign with a ſtrange Carrol, and as ſtrange a Quier ſent from heaven to ſing it.

1 The Quier. 1 who?

To the Quier then, Who were they? Where, the firſt I pitch on, is the word Heavenly. For, thence they came, and thither they went again, (15. Ver:) Quid præſepi & cœlo? What hath Heaven or heavenly Perſonages to do here; with the Cratch? It ſhould ſeem, ſome cœleſtial thing there is in it: as low as it ſeems, it reacheth high, as high as Heaven; heavenly things, and heavenly Perſonages both. About it here comes divers from Heaven: For it, there goes Glory up to heaven. So that the ſign is alſo, ſignum de cœlo ſurſum, from on high, by reaſon of the Quier: as well as a ſign from the earth beneath in reſpect of the Cratch here.

2 In what habit.

How appear they, Theſe Perſonages were Angels. It is ſaid expreſly, (v. 15.) Yet are they here, ſaid to be Souldiers. What ſhall we have war then? (for they are in the habit of the war:) True, of war; but, it is war (not, that now is, or hereafter ſhould be, but of war) that had been before even to the day of this birth; but now, to ceaſe (witneſs Pax in terris.) There had been no peace with heaven, but plain hoſtility, between earth and it; No good will toward men, but filii iræ, children of wrath all. Ever ſince the Cherubin firſt drew upon Adam, and with a ſhaken ſword kept the entrance of Paradiſe; Ever ſince, in arms, till this very day. Their habit ſhews, what was before: their ſong, what now ſhould be. By virtue of Chriſts Nativity, Peace to earth, from Heaven; Good-will, to men, from God. So now, upon His Birth, they were to diſarm: but, before they put their armour off, yet being in it, they would have a Pæan, and ſing of the new world, that was now to enſue. A ſign this, and a ſtrange one, (this conjunction,) ſpecies præliantium, and voces cantantium, the habit of war, and the ſong of peace. Souldiers make a camp, come to fight: Theſe make a Quier come to ſing. They are not in the habit of Quier-men, yet they ſing: They are in the habit of men of war, yet ſing of peace.

Eph. 2. 3. Gen. 3. 24.

3 What number?

VVhat number? A multitude there was of them. Firſt, for the more authority: that, in the mouths of many, this might be eſtabliſhed: many, to witneſs it. [2] Then, for the better muſick; if, a full Quier, many to ſound it out. It was a matter of great weight; ſo, divers to teſtifie it: It was a matter of high praiſe; divers therefore to celebrate and ſet it forth.

VVhen we hear of a multitude, we fear a confuſion. But (you will obſerve,) this multitude was multitudo militiæ; No confuſed rout: No; but acies ordinata, a well ordered army. There is order, in an army: there is order, in a Quier: there is order among Angels: coördinate among themſelves, ſubordinate to their head and leader. So, a multitude without confuſion.

And yet: there is a further matter in this ſame multitude. For, that there were not ſome few of them, but a great many; that was a ſign, it was no petty Saviour, that was born. To have Angels com^e, by one, and by two, as at the birth of Sampſon, or Iſaac, and others; But the grand Saviour, of all, by his troops of them; the Lord of Hoſts Himſelf, as attended by the whole Army. Judg. 13. 15. Gen. 18. 2.

For, at His birth was fulfilled that, the Apoſtle ſpeaks of (Heb. 1. 6.) When he brings His only begotten Son into the world, He ſaith, Let all the Angels of GOD worſhip Him, Let the whole Hoſt of Heaven do him honour: As, honour Him (here) they do. For, they that offer up praiſe, honour Him; and praiſe they offer Him, the (next word is laudantium.) And even now they do it: even, here, is this honour done; Even to Him, in his cratch, is it done. And Heaven it ſelf, for a while, left empty, that it may be done. All which is but a ſign, to ſhew, what a ſhew He could have made, if He had liſted: that he might have had the Legions, he ſpeaks of at his Death, that had them in ſuch a multitude, to day, at his Birth. A ſign he was not weak (what ever he ſeemed) that had theſe military forces, if he would, to take arms for him. That he was not to be deſpiſed how ever he appeared, that had theſe conſorts of Angels, to ſing about his cratch, and to praiſe God for him. Heb. 1. 6. Pſalm 50. 23. Mat. 26. 53.

4 What they did:

What did they? Praiſed GOD. For Angels to praiſe GOD is no new thing. From the beginning, it was their occupation, ſo to do (Job 38. 7.) But, to praiſe him for a Child in a Cratch, that (lo) is new; A new thing; A new ſong, and (if you will) a new ſign, too. For, never the like ſeen before. Before (in Job,) their praiſe was for the creating; they had that onely, then, to praiſe him for: now, for the reſtoring of all things. For the birth of the world then; for the new birth of it now, by the birth of Him, by whom the world at firſt was made, and now (ne perderet quod condidit), made again, created anew, and many a new Creature in it. To him, ſitting in the throne, ſing they their Sanctus, Eſay 6. (For, to Chriſt was the ſanctus ſung, ſaith S. John directly in his 12. 41.) Now, to him, here lying in the manger; which is great odds: But indeed, to both; in imis, puero; in excelſis, Deo: For, he was both. And his being both was an Ecce ſignum, if ever there were any upon earth. Job 38. 7. Eſay 6. 3. John 12. 41.

5 When?

And laſtly, all the Quiers, that inſtantly: No pauſe between; between Amen, and Hallelujah. No ſooner the ſpeech ended, but ſtreight, as if the word cratch had bin their reſt, immediately took they up the Hymn, and begun it. A plain ſign, that one of theſe did depend on the other. This the Anthem, that properly belongs to that Sermon: And back again, this the Sermon, that requireth this Anthem: and both to the Child in the manger. The ditty meant by him, and none but him. For Him, this glory: By Him, this Peace: Through Him, this good-will: Glory, Peace, and Good-will, from him all three. And mark, that the word Cratch is the laſt word, in the Sermon; and the word glory the firſt, in the ſong; and nothing comes between to part theſe two. Nothing, to part Humility below; from Glory on high. Even as he drew light out of darkneſs, ſo doth he Glory on high, from Humility below, by a ſequence. VVhich when we hear, and hear it from the mouths of Angels, ſure we are, all that before ſeemed to tend to his diſgrace, were but the Auſpicia of his Glory: All that beneath appear in ignominia in imis, is pronounced gloria in excelſis, and for ſuch celebrated by the whole Quier of Heaven. And this for the Quier, and for this time. 2 Cor. 4. 6.

But I ask; do the Angels praiſe God for this Birth? Ut quid illis concio, vel cantio, VVhat do they preaching of him, or praiſing God for Him? For them, all this is not; they put it not in the firſt, but in the ſecond perſon, Vobis. Here is now Vobis, the third time. [1] Evangelizo Vobis (ſaith the Angel firſt:) [2] Natus eſt Vobis (ſaith the ſecond:) And now Erit vobis ſignum, third. [1] Vobis, the news: [2] Vobis, the Birth; [3] and Vobis, the ſign; all three. And who are theſe Vobis? In the ſong it is expreſly ſet down, In hominibus, for men. VVhat mean the Angels then, to make this adoe, with laudantium, and dicentium, and it concerns not them at all? VVhat then; The bleſſed Angels, they rejoyce and ſing at the good of others, at the converſion but of one poor ſinner: Hoc Angelicum eſt. As, on the other ſide, the Devils manner is, to howl, and to grieve at others good; if CHRIST come to ſave men, to cry, He is come to torment them: Hoc eſt diabolicum. Verſe 10, 11. Luke 16. 7. Mark 1. 24.

But well: from this yet, that the Angels thus ſing (whom in their own particular it concerns not,) I riſe to make this inference; that they, whom it concerns, are to do it with far greater reaſon: And that is, our ſelves, to whom ſolely and wholly this Birth, and the benefit of this Birth redounds. Shall they, for us, and not we for us, for our ſelves? Shall we be in at the other three, [1] at the News, [2] at the Birth, and [3] at the Sign; and be out at this of of laudantium Deum? No, I truſt. The Quier of heaven did it but to ſet us in; VVe, to bear a part: and it ſhould be a chief part, ſince the beſt part of it is ours. They but took it up; we to keep it up; and never to let it go down, or die on our hands, but from year to year, as we have occaſion, ſtill to renew it. The Angels began here; the Shepheards they follow, and praiſe God for that they had heard and ſeen; the Sermon they had heard, the Sign they had ſeen. VVe, to come in at our turn, and to do the like. Verſe 20.

You ſay well, for that we have heard, we may; but, not for any Sign, (we.) Yes: For that too. The Sacrament we ſhall have beſides, and of the Sacrament we may well ſay, Hoc erit ſignum. For a ſign it is; and by it, invenietis puerum, ye ſhall find this Child. For finding his fleſh and blood, ye cannot miſs, but find him too. And, a ſign not much from this here. For, Chriſt in the Sacrament, is not altogether unlike Chriſt in the cratch. To the cratch we may well liken the huſk or outward ſymbols of it. Outwardly, it ſeems little worth; but is rich of contents; as was he crib, this day, with Chriſt in it. For, what are they, but infirma & egena elementa, weak and poor elements of themſelves: yet, in them find we CHRIST. Even as they did, this day, in præſepi jumentorum, panem Angelorum, in the the beasts crib, the food of Angels: Which very food our ſigns both repreſent, and preſent unto us.

Let me ſay this further; It is the laſt word in the Sacrament, This is a ſacrifice of praiſe and Thanksgiving: and the whole Text reſolves into laudantium Deum, to praiſe God: And not to praiſe Him alone, but to praiſe Him with this Hymn of the Angels. Now being to praiſe Him with the Angels Hymn, it behoves, to be in or as near the State of Angels as we can; of very congruity to be in our beſt ſtate, when they and we to make but one Quier. And when are we ſo? if at any time, at that time when we have newly taken the holy Sacrament of His bleſſed body and moſt precious blood; when we come freſh from it. And, as if there were ſome near alliance between this ſong of the Angels, and theſe ſigns; to ſhew that the ſigns or Sacrament have a ſpecial intereſt in this Hymn; therefore it is, that even then, upon the adminiſtration of it, hath the Church ordered this very Hymn ever to be ſung or ſaid, what ever day it fall in the whole year. For then (ſure) of all other times, are we on earth moſt near to Angelique perfection; then, meeteſt to give glory unto God; then, at peace with the whole earth; then, a good-will and purpoſe in us, if ever.

But, as the time falleth out, we have more inducements than one. The day it ſelf is one moſt proper: For, it is the very day, this Hymn was firſt ſung on. And, the celebration of the Sacrament, that is another. But the Sacrament now falling on the day, a double. Either of theſe, of it ſelf apart; but together much more. For, the Sacrament, that comes at other times; the day, but once a year, On this Day, they both meet; and never but on this: Not to ſlip it then; but then, when it is moſt proper, moſt kindly, then to do it. I would to God, we were as meet to do it, as the Sacrament is to do it at, and as the time is to do it on. But as we may; let us endeavor to do it. So enuring our ſelves to record it, as oft as we may (eſpecially when moſt meetly we may) here on Earth among men; that in His good time we may be counted worthy to do it on high, with the Angels in the bliſs of heaven.

A SER-

A SERMON

Preached before the

Kings Maiesty,

At White-Hall, on Saturday, the XXV. of Decemb. An. Dom. MDCXIX. being Christmas Day.

LUKE Chap. II. Vers. XIIII.

Gloria in altissimis DEO, & in terra pax, hominibus bonæ voluntatis (vel, *in homines bona voluntas.)

*Glory be to God in the high Heavens, and peace upon earth, and towards men good will.

* Vel in hominibus.

*Or, in men.

THE Anthem of the Quier of Heaven for this day. For, having heard the Angels Sermon at twise: 1 Of the Nativity, 2 Of the Invention of CHRIST: and seen the Quier of Angels set, with their nature and condition: there remains nothing but the Anthem, to make up a full service for the Day.

This is it S. Luke, besides that he is an Evangelist, hath the honour further, that he is the Psalmist of the New Testament: four Hymns more hath he added to those of the Old. Of which four, this is so much the more excellent than the rest, in that it is not of any mans setting, though never so skilfull: the Ditty and it are both Angelical; from the Angels both. That, we praise God with the tongue of Angels, whensoever we praise Him with this, with Gloria in excelsis.

The Sum of it is: that though, all days of the year, and for all benefits; yet, this day, and for this (now) above all, GOD is highly to be glorified: More highly than in others: Nay most highly then; for, it is in altissimis, the highest of all. The Summe.

That Heaven and Earth, and men are to joyn in one consort: Heaven and Earth first; Heaven on high, Earth beneath to take up one Hymn: both in honour of his birth, both are better by it: Heaven hath glory, Earth peace, by means of it. Heaven hath glory; lætentur cœli: Earth, peace; exultet terra, at thy Nativity, O Lord. Warranted by this Song; at thy Nativity, O Lord, let the heavens rejoyce for the glory: let the Earth be glad for the peace, that come to them by it. Psal. 96. 11.

And men, hominibus, though they rest, and come in last after both, yet they to do it as much; Nay much more than both, for Gods good-will toward them, which brought all this to pass in Heaven and Earth both: restoring men to Gods favour and grace, and all by means of this Child, their Reconciler to God that hath been; their Pacifier on earth, that is; their Glorifier in heaven that shall be. They therefore, if any: nay more than any: and now, if ever; nay more than ever, to bear their part in this glorious hymn at the crach side.

Ita, canunt in Nativitate, quæ per Nativitatem: Thus ſing they at His Nativity, of thoſe things that came by His Nativity. Came to Heaven, to Earth, to Men: Glory to Heaven, Peace to Earth, Grace and favour to Men.

The Diviſion. To take a Song right, it behoveth to know the parts of it. And they are eaſily known: They divide themſelves into the number bleſſed above all numbers, becauſe it is the number of the Bleſſed Trinity; and the myſterie of the Trinity do the Fathers find in the parts of it: [1] In God on high, the Father: [2] In peace, Ipſa eſt pax noſtra, the Son: [3] And in Good-will, the Holy Ghoſt, the Eſſential Love and Love-knot of the God-head; and this day, of the Man-hood and it.

Eph. 2. 14.

Being Ode natalitia, if we conſider it as a Nativity, they that calculate or caſt Nativities, in their calculations ſtand much upon Triplicities, and Trigons, and Trine aſpects. And here they be all: A triplicity of things: [1] Glory, [2] Peace, [3] and Goodwill. A Trigon of Parties: [1] God, [2] Earth, and [3] Men. And a Trine aſpect, referendo ſingula ſingulis: [1] To God, glory; [2] to Earth, peace; [3] to Men, favor, grace, or good-will.

I. II. III. But if (as it is moſt proper) we conſider the parts, as in a Song the three will well agree with the Scale in Muſick: [2] In excelſis, on high, Hypate: [1] On earth, Nete: [3] And men, howſoever they come in laſt, they make Meſe, the Mean: Moſt fitly; for they (as in the midſt of both the other) partake of both: [1] Their ſoul from on high; [2] Their body from the earth. Not the heathen, but did confeſs, the ſoul divinæ particulam auræ. And, for the body, there needs no proof, that earth it is: Earth to earth, we hear, we ſee before our eyes every day.

Of theſe three parts then aſunder. And after, (as the nature of a Song requireth) of their [1] Conjunction, [2] Order, and [3] Diviſion. [1] Conjunction, Glory on high, and on earth peace. Then, the order, or 1 2 Sequence: But, firſt glory, then Peace. [3] And laſt, the diviſion, ſorting them ſuum cuique, each to 3 his own: [1] To God, glory; [2] Peace to the earth; [3] εὐδοκία to men. [4] Laſt, of the ſinging of the hymn, 4 [1] When, the time: [2] and by Whom.

I. The ſeveral acceptions of the Text. By the Greeks. THere are in this Hymn (as the Greeks read, and we with them) three Reſts. The ground of which three, are three Parties. [1] In excelſis Deo, God on high, [2] In terra, earth; [3] and hominibus, men. To theſe three, other three: [1] Glory, [2] Peace, [3] Good-will, as it were three ſtreams having their head or ſpring in Chriſts cratch, and ſpreading themſelves thence, three ſundry ways, having their influence into the three former; One of theſe into ſome of them. Glory, upward, in excelſis: Peace, downward, to the earth: good-will, to men, in the midſt between both, compound of both.

You will mark: The Child (here) is GOD and Man. GOD, from on high; Man, from the earth. To heaven, whence He is GOD, thither goeth glory: To earth, whence man, thither peace. Then, as God and Man is one Chriſt: and as the reaſonable ſoul and fleſh is one man: So, Chriſt conſiſting of theſe two brings εὐδοκία the fulneſs of Gods favour, the true and real cauſe of both; yielding them peace, while here on earth, and aſſuring them of glory, when there on high: as thither on high, we truſt to be delivered, after our time here ſpent in procuring heaven glory, and earth peace. Thus, three Reſts.

2 By the Latines But, let me not keep from you, that the Latine hath but two Reſts, and of the Greek ſome likewiſe: To two they reduce all, and well. The Places are but two: [1] On high, [2] and in earth: The Perſons but two, [1] God, [2] and Men: So, the Parts to be but two, [1] Glory on high, to God: [2] Peace on earth, to Men. But then what ſhall become of goodwill? Good-will is a good word; would not be loſt or left out.

No more it ſhall. And indeed the diverſe reading of that one word makes the parts to be either two, or three. The Greeks read it in the Nominative caſe, εὐδοκία, which refers to men: then there muſt needs be three; there are two beſides. The Latines ſeem to have read it in the Genitive, εὐδοκίας, (but a Σ, but one letter more:) And ſo they make it of the nature of a limitation. Peace on earth to men: What, to men promiſcuè, good and bad, elect and reprobate? No: but to ſuch as pertain to his εὐδοκία, Gods Beneplacitum, his good-will and purpoſe: to the children of it.

[1] Εὐδοκία or εὐδοκίας, Nominative or Genitive, let it not trouble you: To men, a good-will, or To men of good-will, no great matter whether, ſo long as εὐδοκία refers to GOD, and to His good pleaſure: Not, to Men, or any will of theirs. And that ſo it is to be referred, I will uſe no other witneſs but Cardinal Tolet himſelf; who, in his Readings at Rome, and in the Popes own Chappel, and upon this very place confeſſeth as much, that ſo is the native ſignification of the word; and ſo, and no otherwiſe to be taken here, but in that ſenſe.

And in that ſenſe being taken, it goes well. Glory from us, to Him: Peace, from Him, to us: From men on earth, to God on high, glory; From God on high, to men on earth, Peace. Men, I ſay, toward whom He is now appeaſed, and with whom (now) he is well pleaſed; and both, for this Childs ſake here in the cratch, ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα, in whom He is abſolutely well pleaſed, as, of the fulneſs of his Matth. 3. 17. favour we all receive. GOD ſpake it once, and twiſe: [1] Once at His Baptiſm, [2] and again in the 17. 5. Holy Mount.

And Hoc erit ſignum. This may be a ſure ſign, that he is well pleaſed with our Nature, that he hath in this Child taken it, and united it to His own; which, if He had not been highly well pleaſed, He would never have done. What greater goodwill can there be than this? It paſſeth the greateſt, (even that of Marriage) union of nature, unity of perſon.

Then riſeth there another doubt, what Verb to put here? For, never a Verb there is at all. Whether ſome Indicative, Glory is, or ſhall be: and then it is an Hymn of Gratulation, and agreeth well with laudantium, a praiſe to God, that theſe (now) are. Now, hath God glory: Now, earth peace:

peace": Men are now received to favour and grace. Thus: Or whether ſit or eſt, in the Optative: and then, it is Votum bene ominatum, a Vow or wiſh, that Glory may be to God; and ſo to the reſt.

I ſay again here (as before I ſaid: it skil'd not then, whether Nominative or Genitive;) it skills not now whether Indicative or Optative. Tehilla (a Praiſe, it is) and Tephilla (a Wiſh it may be)) do commence. Either is well; But, both are beſt; for, both are moſt true.

By way of Gratulation. Glory it to God

By way of Gratulation: Glory now is, or ſhall be to God, for this Birth. Before it was not: at leaſt, not ſo, as after. Before it was Gloria in excelſis, but Deo was left out. All Nations (in a manner) worſhipping the hoſt of Heaven, the ſuperior bodies; deifying the creature, paſſing by the Creator quite: Excelſa, they did; but Deum in excelſis they did not. But, by this Birth now, down ſhould all Idolatry go; as, down it went, whereſoever Chriſtian Religion took place. From the Creature there, all to the Creator. To none on high, but God on high. The point of Glory much mended; God more glory, than before.

Peace is in earth. John 14. 6.

And the Earth more at peace, if you take peace in things ſpiritual, matters concerning the ſoul. One onely I will mention. There was (as out of Varro, S. Auguſtine reckons them) no leſs than two hundred ſixty and odd ſeveral Opinions, and that of the wiſeſt then on the earth, touching Mans Soveraign good, or chief end. The very higheſt point, and that did moſt concern them; and leaſt peace, moſt variance in it. This miſt alſo was ſcattered, and that point well cleared by Him that was the Way and the Truth: That this εὐδοκία here is it; the favour of God it is, and the aſſurance of it, and nothing but it makes a man truly happy, when all is done.

And Good will toward men.

As for the point of Gods good-will, and favour, that was never in kind, till this Day. Many favours, much good-will, before; Never ſo, as when God and Man, the God-head and Man-hood meet both in one. God never ſo pleaſed, as when he was pleaſed to aſſume it, into one Perſon with Himſelf, uniting both with the ſtreighteſt union that can be. Never that, till this day, when, for δόξα ἐν ὑψίστοις, good-will toward men, He forſook gloriam in excelſis, to come into the cratch for them. So that, for Gods favour, the gratulation is moſt juſt; more than both the reſt.

Biſhop Bradwardine did joyn a good iſſue: Let that be the Religion, let that prevail, as beſt, and moſt true of all other, that is Deo honorabilior, brings more honour to God; Paci amicabilior, beſt friend to the earths peace; and Homini favorabilior, moſt favourable to man: as, ſhewing God better affected to him, and making men better affected to God, better one to another. That Religion is Chriſtian Religion: None ſings this Hymn in time, in true note, but it; all other are out. So that, we have a compendium of true Religion, and three notes of it, out of the three notes of the Song in this Anthem. And this, if it be the Indicative, or by way of Gratulation.

II.
By way of wiſh.

But I confeſs, it is more uſual, per modum voti, by way of wiſh, by ſit, than by eſt. (Sit doth better become the Church Militant: Eſt is more fit for the Church triumphant.) Glory be to God, Peace be to the earth, &c. Exoptando that theſe may be ſo, and, ſo being, continue ſtill, and be daily more and more: And ſo taking it, to the triplicity again.

Glory be to God on high.

[Firſt, glory we wiſh to God. On high ſtands in the midſt, you may either caſt it to the firſt word Glory, Glory on high, and then the point, (that is, high glory:) Or, (with the point, after glory,) and caſt [on high] to God. A third variety (but eaſily reconciled) if we take in both: Glory on high, to God on high. One [on high] may ſerve for the reaſon, why we wiſh glory to God: for God being Altiſſimus, the moſt High, (as Melchiſedek firſt ſtiled Him,) and glory being the altitude, or higheſt pitch, we can fly or perform; by good reaſon, we wiſh Him that is Higheſt, the higheſt thing we have.

Gen. 14. 18.

But, not every glory do we wiſh, but wiſh it him at the higheſt. All glory is high: yet is there one glory higher than another. If any be ſo, that they wiſh to God, the very height of it, even glory in altiſſimis, as high as it can go.

1 Cor. 15. 41.

Now, the more He is glorified, the higher his glory: Higher, if, by Heaven and Earth, on high and below, by Men and Angels; than by either alone.

Pſalm 148.

This then they wiſh, when they ſay, glory be in the higheſt: that high and low, Heaven and Earth, Men and Angels would do their parts, to make His praiſe glorious, glorious at the higheſt. On earth, ſound it out far and wide, all the world over, to the ends of the earth; and lift up our voices, and help them with inſtruments of all kinds, and make them to be heard up to the very Heavens, that ſo it may be in altiſſimis, indeed. Yea, that all creatures, in both, raviſhed with the conſideration of the great favour and good-will of God, in this days birth teſtified, would take occaſion to fill their mouths with the praiſe of His goodneſs, in reſolving; His wiſdom, in contriving; His mercy in promiſing; His truth in performing the work of this day, the bleſſed birth of his Son.

Pſal. 150. 4, 5.

For the work of the Day, to make the day of the work a glorious day: cauſing it to be attended with a number of days according to the number of the months of the year; as no Feaſt elſe. Glorious in all places, as well at home with Carols, as in the Church with Anthems. Glorious in all Ages, even this day, this year, as on the very day on which he was born. Glorious in habit, in fare: But ſpecially, (as we ſee the Angels here do) with the ſervice of God, the moſt ſolemn ſervice, the higheſt, the moſt melodious Hymns, we have: and namely, with this here of the Quier of Heaven. In a word, all the ways we can: all the ways, God can have any glory from us, to let Him have it; and have it even at the height, in altiſſimis.

And good reaſon, we ſhould ſo wiſh: CHRIST loſt His glory, by being thus in the cratch. We took ſome from Him: to wiſh Him ſome for it again. That was ignominia in infimis: to wiſh Him gloria in altiſſimis, in lieu of it.

Again, we get glory by It; our Nature, ſo. For the glory we get by God here below; to return ſome glory to GOD there on high. This is votum gloriæ; This wiſh we, when we wiſh gloria in altiſſimis.

2. Peace in earth.

The next is votum pacis; they wiſh, Peace may be upon earth. [1] Even Auguſtus his peace, firſt, (that is the firſt, cometh to our minds when we hear that word;) the ſhutting of Janus: for, that alſo was a bleſſed fruit of this Birth. Eſay foretold it; There ſhould then be a bridg from Aſhur to Egypt, and from Canaan to them both, that is, from every nation to other, to traffique, and to trade together.

Eſay 19. 23.

Eph. 2. 14.

That: but not onely that, but the taking down alſo of the partition wall, which formerly Moſes had ſet up, between the Jew and the Gentile; the making of them both one in the body of His fleſh: S. Pauls peace.

And yet further. For both theſe are Peace upon earth, of earth with earth. Auguſtus can, the World can give that peace, though many times they will not. But he ſpeaks in a Place of the peace which the world cannot give, that is peace with heaven. That there ſhould not be Eſay's bridg onely, but Jacob's ladder ſet up from Bethel to Heaven; a peaceable entercourſe with that place, by the Angels deſcending and aſcending between us and them.

Pſal. 116. 7.

And further yet, peace at home with our ſelv s, and with our own conſciences. Turn again to thy reſt O my ſoul; for, in finding him we ſhall find reſt to our ſouls.

And laſt, (to anſwer Gloria in altiſſimis) Pax in noviſſimis, peace at the parting, which is worth all; Simeon's peace, a good Nunc dimittis in pace, a departing hence in peace. And all, by means of viderunt oculi, the ſight of the ſalvation of this day. All theſe are in voto pacis.

3 Good-will toward men.

The third is, there may be, in GOD, a good-will toward men. And, good-will is a kind of peace, but, ſomewhat more, with an extent or prorogation; a kind of peace peculiar to men, which the other parts of the earth are not capable of. So, a further matter to men, than bare peace: Even εὐδοκία, to think well, to bear Good-will, to be well pleaſed with men, And, what greater wiſh can there be than In quo complacitum eſt? CHRIST hath no more, than ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα. It is His high glory, that for His (and this His Births ſake, which we now celebrate) that which is verified of His Perſon, is verified of both His Natures: of Him, not onely as Son of GOD, but even as Son of Man too. And, what is verified of Him, as Son of Man, may be verified alſo of the Sons of men, of all Mankind. This wiſh is at the higheſt, and more cannot be wiſhed, than that this favour to day begun, may ſtill and ever continue to us all. So have you now the three parts of the Angels wiſh, Summa votorum, Glory be to God. &c.

Matth. 3. 17.

1 The connexion copulative, glory & peace.

What is now to be done? Three things more: To ſee the [1] Connexion copulative, [2] the Sequence, [3] and the Diviſion. [1] The Connexion copulative, (a bleſſed couple) Glory and Peace. [2] The Sequence: but, firſt Glory, and then Peace. [3] The Diviſion, which to which: [1] One, to God; [2] The other, to earth: [3] The third, to man.

Glory and Peace are coupled together with an [and:] And in earth peace: That, Glory would not be ſung alone, but Peace together with it. We will not, we may not skip the Copulative: that couples together high and low, heaven and earth, and in them God and Man: But, (that which I reſpect ſpecially,) Glory and Peace muſt be ſung together. If we ſing Glory without Peace, we ſing but to halves. No Glory on high will be admitted, without Peace upon earth. No gift on his altar (which is a ſpe-cial part of his glory,) but lay down your gift, and there leave it, and firſt go your way and make peace on earth, and that done come again, and you ſhall then be accepted, to give glory to Heaven; and not before. And O that we would go and do the like, have like regard of His glory, that He hath of our peace. But, this knot of Gloria & Pax, is againſt thoſe, that are ſtill ever wrangling with one thing or other; and all for the Glory of God (forſooth,) as if theſe two could not joyn; God could not have his glory, if the Church were at peace: as if (no remedy) the Angels Et muſt out.

2 The ſequence, glory before Peace.

Glory, and Peace: but, Glory firſt, and then Peace; There is much in the order. Glory to be firſt, elſe you change the Cleff; the cleff is in Glory; that, the key of the Song. That is to be the firſt, and before all: Peace to give place to her; Glory is the elder Siſter: And, no Pax in terris, unleſs it be firſt conſidered, how it will ſtand with gloria in excelſis. To ſet Peace before Glory, is to ſet earth above heaven. Keep the order then; each in her place. So goeth the Song: The Child born is God and Man; God, from on high; Man, from the earth; Cœleſtem primo, dein & terreſtrem celebrant: They keep the right order in ſinging of Him; we to do the like: Heavens part ever to be firſt.

Pſal. 34. 15.

But then, next after His glory, nothing more dear, more precious; nay nothing ſo dear, ſo precious to us then, as peace. Set glory ſafe, and then by all means Inquire pacem (ſaith the Pſalmiſt,) Seek Peace: (if ſhe hide her ſelf, ſeek her out:) Et perſequere eam; and purſue her: (if ſhe fly away, follow her hard.) Peace is not ſought: No man follows her, to make any purſuit; they know not the value of peace, that loſe her ſo eaſily; and follow her ſo faintly. Nay, inſtead of purſuit, perſecute her, and drive her away, and make the chaſing her away, the ſeeking of Gods Glory. The ſecond thing in the world is Peace: Onely one, One onely before it, the glory of God.

But, the Air of the ſong is in the Diviſion, wherein each is ſorted to his own: GOD, to His; the Earth, to hers; Men, to theirs. Juſtices diviſion (which makes peace in Heaven and Earth)

skored here out so plainly, as it is easily seen, which pertains to which. And we by all means so to distribute and deal them; and by all means to preserve and hold up this division. Else we change the note, which is as much as the whole harmony is worth.

Now in this partition glory goes whither? Up on high. To whom there? To God, and to none but God. The Place and the Person are both set forth. On high, there is the Place: To God, there is the Person. Earth is not the place of glory: It is in excelsis, on high, Earth is not on high. Here below it is, as it were the celler or vault of the world. VVhere though there be Excelsa and Excelsi, high places, & high persons both, yet the word is ἐν ὑψίστοις in altissimis; & altissimi they be not; there be higher than they. Eccles. 5.7.

And as Earth is not the place; So Man is not the person: For, man is upon the earth, and is earth. No glory to man then; Especially, none this day, of all dayes. Glory to Him; for what? For entertaining Christ, and lodging him in a stable? Confusion rather, somewhat to be ashamed of, nothing to glory of. Had men deserved it, some to them: Now, let God above have the glory of this day.

Yet, conceive it aright: we wish it, as our duty; not as any longing of His. It were a silly conceit to imagine of God, as if he were avidior gloriæ, did hunger or thirst for our glory. VVhat is He the better for it? Only, nothing we have but that; and so, either that or nothing: for nothing but that can he receive from us. But we have, nothing to render him for all his goodness, for his εὐδοκία, but δόξα. Give it him then; but, give it entirely: give it none but him. Soli Deo (saith S. Paul:) Soli (saith S. Iude) Soli, let us all say. Not unto us O Lord, not unto us: (It is David, as if he were afraid to touch any part of it:) No: But, as Paul and Barnabas, rend our cloaths, if any Divine honor be forced upon us. 1 Tim. 1.17. Jude 25. Psal. 115.1. Act. 14.14.

Yet, glory we may. (I grant;) but not this, here: gloria in altissimis, if we sing to any but him, we sing a false note. Men do so now and then; but the Angels are never out: and thus sing they, and set out Glory for Gods part.

Let, Earth be content with peace: Peace is her portion; and a blessed portion, if she may well hold it; a fair portion; a rich wish. For, I would fain know, what could be said more, to the praise of this portion, than is here in this song? First, that in general it reacheth to the whole world: (Not, to men alone, though they have their share too, in whatsoever good cometh to the earth, but) it reacheth to all on earth: omni animantium, or vegetantium generi, to all the beasts, all the green things on the earth; All are the better for it. 1 Glory to God. 2 On Earth, Peace.

Secondly, what more for the credit of peace, than that it is votum militare, it comes from the mouths of souldiers that were there in their military habit. Even they sing of peace, and praise it, and wish it, where they wish any good; and know not what better thing to wish to the earth, than it. It is the earths happiness, Peace: it flourisheth by it. Before, was the earth as the Garden of Paradise, saith the Prophet) behind, it was a waste and barren wilderness, all spoiled and burnt up. 2 Joel 2.3.

Thirdly, that it is Votum Angelicum, an Angels wish, Peace. They being heavenly Spirits, wish not any thing at any time, but heavenly: So that a heavenly thing is Peace: And so it is, as Nazianzen here well observed, Pugnas & dissidia nescire Deum & Angelos; No broiles, no brabbles in heaven: nothing but, peace there. And a kind of Heaven there is upon Earth, when there is peace upon earth: and justly are they blessed, and rightly are they called the children of God, the most blessed that are, or shall be at any time, that are the procurers of it. This (lo) is the Angels division, they sing. 3

But here we are like to have no little ado to maintain this: As we said before, Huic signo à multis contradicitur; as the sign, so the song is gainsaid of many. The Devil doth all he can, to marre the Angels musick, to bring in his, his own black Sanctus; to procure contempt on Gods glory on high, to bring Gods glory as low as he can, to make Garboiles upon earth, to work men all evil will, mischief, and malice that he can. Verse 34.

And first, to make a confusion in this division, perswades earth not to stand content with the Angels partition, but earth (forsooth) must have glory, must be dealing with heavens part. It is well said, to God on high; There be certain Gods, here below, aspire to glory. And glory we would allow, but no glory will serve, unless gloria in altissimis be sung to it. Sicut Dii cannot be gotten out of us. We cannot yet get Dominus Deus noster Papa out of the gloss, no, not now, after it is reformed. And King Herod would be content to be made more than a man, and to hear—— Nec vox hominem sonat. And we beneath are too ready to sing it, otherwhile; to deifie those, that are on high, and to give that belongs to God on high, to Gods below. Now, that earth is thus willing to entitle her self to Heavens part, this brings all out of tune. Gen. 3.5. Acts 12.22.

But, in tune, or out of tune, to die for it, have it we will. What the Apostles rent their cloaths to put from them, we would rend our skins to pluck to us. So greedy are we, to be held for Gods upon earth. Nay, earth is content to thrust from her, her own part (that is, peace) to invade Gods part (that is, glory;) Et dum gloriam usurpant, pacem turbant, to usurp glory, they lose peace: we can dispense with that (shift Gods glory how it can) rather than our own should suffer the least disgrace, away with peace, moveatur terra, let all the world be on a weker. Acts 14.14.

VVhat comes of this? Pacem contemnentes & gloriam appetentes; & gloriam perdunt & pacem: Even this peace (their own part) they set light by: glory (Gods part) they gape after, and lose glory and peace (both) by the means; and when they have brought all to confusion, sit down by their losses. For first, by seeking glory, glory is lost. The Heathen man well observed; Glory is one of those things, that to seek them, is the very next way to lose; and to neglect them, the way to gain them: Quærendo amittitur, No readier way to miss it, than eagerly to seek it. And again, by seeking glory, peace is lost clear. Yeilding glory to God, doth bring with it pacem in terris; diverting it from him, doth take pacem de terris. In very deed, Peace upon earth, as it stands after it, so it hath a dependence upon Gods glory; comes (as it were) in exchange for it. Da gloriam & accipe pacem (saith God:) Let men on earth send glory up to God on high, and God on high will send down peace to men on earth, and will not faile: Heavens peace, for earths glory. Whereby we see, if we miss peace on earth at any time, what it is long of. It is that, which makes the Angels here keep on their armour still: upon glory detained from God, or transferred whither it should not, they are up in arms straight, have power to take peace from the earth, till the point of glory be set right again. The setting right of which point is the way to recover it. Let Heaven, let God be well served with their part, peace will not long be away, It is coupled to it (you see,) it followeth close, Et pax in terris. So much for that Division.

1 Esay 6. 3.

To men a good will, For, besides Earths peace, wherein they enter common, Men have a part by themselves, which is their prerogative. And first, I would have you to note; that here it is entred first into the Musick of Heaven. In the Angels Hymn, in Esay, in the Old Testament. Men are out there: No mention at all, not a word of them, in that. Heaven is in, and Earth; but, no Men, there. In the Angels Hymn, here, in the New Testament, here, Men, are in; that all may know, that for this Childs sake now made man, Men are now come into the Angels song; to be a part, and a principal part there, who before were left out.

2 A principal part (I say:) For, mark again: They have never an Et, they stand by themselves. For both those former resolve into this of Men: They, the Epitome of Heaven and Earth; The parties, from whom this glory, to whom this peace is principally intended to come. Glory to God, Glory and Peace: Why both? For God hath received men to grace, Men are now in favour again.

But heaven, and earth, and men, and all resolve into the free grace and good-will to God. How shall they perform either peace or glory, but if there be toward them first; and secondly, but if there be in them this third of good-will, Thence issues Gods glory; thence the Earths peace. The fountain of both, that: Nay, of Christ and all. For, Him, this glory; for Christ: Through Him, this peace; through Christ: But, Christ himself whence? Whence, but from the good-will of God toward men? From whence also, the good-will in men, to God, and one to another, if any be in them. That if we go hither yet, even of this Birth, Gods good will was the cause, and because His will was, men should be restored, therefore His will was, Christ should be incarnate and born. Can we go any higher? are we not in altissimis? Verily, as we said, the humility of the Sign was so deep, we could not sound it: so may we now, that the sublimity of this point is so high we cannot reach it. There is a part of Divinity that dazles: if we look too long on it, we may well lose our sight.

Toward men and in men.

Then to ἐν ἀνθρώποις, last. It may be turned two wayes, it will bear both: (and, for my part I wish no word ever narrowed by a translation, but as much as might be, left in the latitude of the Original tongue.) [a] ἐν ἀνθρώποις will bear εἰς ἀνθρώπους in homines, to, or toward men. So we turn it, and we turn it well. [b] But ἐν ἀνθρώποις, is also in hominibus, in, or among men; ἐν ἀνθρώποις, as well as ἐν ὑψίστοις and no less properly. And no hurt, if we turn it so, in hominibus; provided, in, or erga homines goe first, be sung before it, In hominibus so ever, as coming from in homines. For then Donum magnum bona voluntatis Dei, bona voluntas in hominibus, it is Augustine: of the good-will of God towards men, a special gift it is: this good-will in men, to God and man both. The best way is, where there are two, to take in both: So we shall be sure, to leave out neither.

1 But Toward men, first.

Yet in their sequence. To, or toward men then first: But, to, or toward them for this Childs sake. In whom He is so well pleased, as, for His sake, He is pleased, first, to receive men to pardon, though grievous sinners, and so utterly unworthy of it,

Secondly, He is pleased to reward their works also, otherwise (but for this good-will in God, in accepting them) that might justly be accepted too, for their many imperfections: to take them well in worth, though they want worth: and to vouchsafe them a reward, and that a high reward: for, it is your heavenly Fathers good pleasure to give you a kingdom.

Chap. 12. 32.

Thirdly, beyond both these, He is further pleased, in some case to accept even of this εὐδοκία at our hands; and though skill and power both fail, and be wanting; yet a willing mind if there be, if there be but that, a man is accepted according to that, he hath, not according to that, he hath not. Mary Magdalens quod potuit fecit; the poor Widows quod habuit dedit (and God wot, it was but two mites) yet well taken though: One εὐδοκίαν by another, That he placeth not acceptance, neither in σύνεσις deep capacity of wit; nor in εὐδυναμία, great ability of power; but in εὐδοκία, readiness of good-will, an honest true meaning, an untemed hearty desire: Ut si sit actionis infirmitas, & si sit voluntatis integritas, though there be weakness in the act, yet if there be soundness in the will, out of His good-will toward men, He will accept this good will in men. [a] Nehemia's desire to fear Him. [b] Ezechias setting his heart to seek. The [c] Servants but preparing to do his Masters will. And even in Davids secundum cor meum, his honest true heart was the faireſt flower in his garland.

a Neh. 1. 11. b 2 Reg. 20. 3. c Luk. 11. 42, 47.

1 Sam. 13. 14.

And this, if it were well weighed and digested aright; If Christ, if all that comes by Christ (and that is all in all) be by his free grace and favour: If men were but rightly conceited in this point, it would soon bring them out of conceit with their own I wot not what; It would make them truly humble: And it is the humble man that gives God the true glory, that sings this song right, when all is done. The glory that comes to God, is δόξα ἐν ὑψίστοις, the first word for the last. With glory it begins, with good-will it ends; and with good-will it begins, and with glory it ends: As the first shall be last, and the last first.

Mat. 19 30.

2 Then in men.

But, when we have fixed bona voluntas in homines, what hurt will it do, to wish bona voluntas in hominibus; Sure, none. Bona voluntas in homines is to work bonam voluntatem in hominibus, and that by very course of kind. For Suum simile, grace to beget his own like, is most natural: Bene placitum

Dei

Dei, to beget Beneplacitum Deo; Who, out of his good pleasure worketh in us both to will and to do; and whose only work it is, Ut respondeat bonæ voluntati Dei, bona voluntas hominis. Phil. 2. 13.

What harm then, if the Angel should wish it, or commend it to men, in whom if it be, it comes from that of God meerly, and from no other. Verily, what is praise-worthy in God, cannot but be so in men too. Summi Religionis est, assimiliari Ei quem colis, To become like to Him, we worship, is the pitch of all Religion. Rom. 15. 26. 10. 1. Phil. 1. 15.

Now, an εὐδοκία at the second hand there is in men. The word it self is ascribed to them of Acaia, towards the poor Saints at Jerusalem: to S. Paul towards the Jews: to the Philippians towards Saint Paul: and in other places. 1 In men towards God.

To wish them in men this δόσιν a toward God; which, where it is, makes men to δοκιμᾶν, to have a good conceit or opinion of God; which will bring forth a good affection to God. It is well observed, it is not ἀγαθοέλπεις, (which is properly Greek for good will) but εὐδοκία, which is rather a good thinking, if we go to the very nature of the word: But, it will come all to one. Only, the affection that begins in the opinion is noted for good; and the opinion, that is bred in the affection, not so.

From that good conceit of God, accepting well whatsoever it pleaseth Him to send: If good, receiving it thankfully; if otherwise, taking it patiently; ever praising God for all. But, no wayes entertaining, of Him, that opinion, for which they cannot but love Him the worse, if, as of a Tyrant sentencing men to death, onely for his pleasure, before they have offended him at all. That would prove no εὐδοκία, as it may be handled. And the Apostle tells us, the εὐδοκία that is in God, is εὐδοκία ἀγαθωσύνη; it is not, but regulate by His goodness (2 Thes. 1.) for which ever may there be glory ascribed to Him. 2 Thes. 1. 11.

Then, to wish it in men towards men: An εὐδοκία, also, which, where it is, breeds an inclination to δοκιμᾶν, to take all in the better part; and if possibly we can, and as much as in us lieth to have peace with all men, which if it were on earth, would make heaven on earth. Peace is not said (as glory) to be ἐν, but ἐπὶ; and ἐπὶ, is over: For, (indeed) it doth but hover aloft over the earth, would light, but cannot otherwhile. The Raven can, but the Dove cannot, for want of this Bona voluntas in hominibus, or these homines bonæ voluntatis. It finds them not well willing to peace, while every one stands more for his own reputation, or other ends, than either for Churches or Countries peace. Banish the opposites of εὐδοκία, Envy (Rom. 10.) Malice (Phil. 1.) and peace will be no stranger upon earth. It would then be ἐν γῆ where it is ἐπὶ γῆς, the same Proposition in both. All depends upon the cadence δόξα perform that well, and it will be Musick for an Angel. 2 In men towards men. Rom. 12. 18. Rom. 10. 1. Phil. 1. 15.

And, now ye have heard all parts, what shall we do with this Song? Sing it. But we have no Angels to sing it, and it will be musick for an Angel. Angels it would be, as at first it was: But, when it is not, it will please them well, that men sing it, whom it most concerns. But, if by men, of very congruity, an Angels song would be, by men, when in some degree they drew something near to the Angels estate, At least, when nearer than at other times.

And when is that, that men on earth come so? at what time? Sure, if ever men do rise above themselves, and approach in any sort near to those blessed Spirits; if ever they be in state with Angels and Arch-Angels to laud and magnifie His glorious name; if in all their lives they be in peace and charity, the bond of perfection, the bona voluntas we speek of; if at any time it be in men, and they homines bonæ voluntatis; upon the taking of the Sacrament it is: At that time, then, or never, they lift up their hearts in true devotion. So, then in best case, that in all our lives to sing it: If Christ dwell in our hearts by faith, if we be Temples of the Holy Ghost.

And that we might be in that case, and to sing it, the Church is never unprovided, this day, of this means of elevating our minds: And it is operæ pretium, worth the while, if it were but for that; and there may be joy among the Angels in Heaven, to hear their Hymn kept still alive. Though, there is another congruity for the Sacrament: that the Great Mystery of Godliness, which is God manifested in the flesh, might not be celebrated without the Mystery of His flesh: that, the day, He came among us to be partaker of flesh and blood, we also might be partakers of the flesh and blood which he took from us, to give them us again. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

But otherwise, this Day, in this Hymn, and this Hymn in this Day continually have a special interest. Time in Musick is much. And if we will keep time with the Angels, do it when they do it, this day they did it: And what fitter time to sing it, than the day, it was first sung, the day of the first singing of it, Canticum diei, in die cantici? When should the Hymn of Christs birth be better sung, than on Christs birth-day?

But, because it is not Vox, but Votum; the voice is not all, but the hearts desire and wish it is that God chiefly respecteth; to adde that. And, what should we wish from our hearts, but that the Angels may have their wish; Every one may have his due, as it is here set out.

And, for that Nihil æquius est, quam ut pro quo quis oret, pro eo laboret, what we wish for, we should not stand wishing only, but endeavour withall, it may come to pass, that it be our labour too, with all our endeavours, to procure the glory of heaven, and the peace of the earth: To find peace in the good will of God, and to give Him all glory for it, who hath appointed peace our portion here, and glory our hope laid up there. Assuring our selves that the same εὐδοκία that was able to bring the Son of God from Heaven into earth, shall have the like power to lift up the Sons of men from earth to the glory of heaven: There with the blessed Angels to sing this glorious Hymn eternally. No more, of wish then, but of fruition, and so of everlasting Gratulation.

A SER-

A SERMON

Preached before the

Kings Maiesty.

At WHITE-HAL, on Monday the xxv. of December, Anno Domini, MDCXX, being CHRISTMASSE Day.

MATT. Chap. II. Verſ. I, II.

Cum ergo natus eſſet Ieſus in Bethlehem Judæ, in diebus Herodis Regis, Ecce Magi ab Oriente venerunt Jeruſolyman, dicentes.

Ubi eſt qui natus eſt Rex Iudæorum? Vidimus enim ſtellam Ejns in Oriente, & venimus adorare Eum.

When Ieſus then was born at Bethlehem in Iudea, in the days of Herod the King, behold there came Wiſemen from the Eaſt, to Ieruſalem, ſaying.

Where is the King of the Iews that is born? For we have ſeen His Star in the Eaſt, and are come to worſhip Him.

WE paſs now this year, from the Shepherds, and the Angels, to the Wiſe men, and their Star. This Star, and their coming no leſs proper to this day, than thoſe other were. For, though they came not to Jeruſalem, this day; yet, this day, venerunt ab Oriente, from the Eaſt they came: They ſet forth, this very day. For, they came when JESUS was born; And, this day, was He born. Howſoever the Star brought them not to their journeys end, till twelve days hence; yet this day it firſt ſhewed it ſelf: how ſoon Jeſus was born, vidimus ſtellam, it appeared ſtraight. For which very appearing you ſhall find, the Fathers of the Eaſt Church do call this firſt day τὰ ἐπιφάνια, as well as the laſt. This firſt, wherein His Star appeared, and they began their journey. That laſt, wherein He appeared Himſelf, and their journey was at an end. Firſt, and laſt, an appearing there was. One begins, the other ends the Feaſt.

VVe paſs from one of them, to the other; but, from the leſs to the greater: For, of the twain this is the greater. Greater in it ſelf: Greater, to us. Two ways greater, in it ſelf. Th'other (of the Shepheards) a poor one: poor and mean. This (of the Wiſe men) a ſign of ſome ſtate: high and heavenly.

God bade Ahaz ask a ſign; Ask one from here below, or one from the height above: He would ask neither, but God gave both. From below, Hoc erit ſignum, you ſhall find the Babe in a manger: Low enough: (that we have done withall.) Now, from above, Ecce vidimus ſtellam the ſign from Heaven: His new ſtar. Eſay 7. 11. Luke 2. 12.

Beſides, (to ſpeak uprightly) one might in ſome ſort complain, of the privateneſs of the Angels appearing: Somewhat obſcure it was; few privie to it: paſſed over in the night between the Angels and them. And, upon it, three or four Shepherds got them into the ſtable; and, what there they did, no man could take notice of.

More famous, and more Manifeſtation-like was this here. A new light kindled in heaven, A ſtar, never ſeen before. The world could not but look up at it, and ask what it meant. Nothing appeareth there, but, the ſound of it goeth out into all Lands, and the news of it to the utmoſt parts of the earth. Pſal. 19. 4.

This made another manner venerunt: upon this came there to Hieruſalem (not a rout of Shepherds, but) a troop of Great perſons. And not from a heath, or Sheep-common hard by; but, from afar, from the Eaſt, twelve days journey off. All Hieruſalem rang of it. The King, Prieſts, and people buſied with it. To this day, remembred in all ſtories. It cannot be forgotten: For this was not done in a corner. Acts 26. 26. This was (indeed) a Manifeſtation. Better, in it ſelf, thus.

And, for us, Better: For us all. For we (all) hold by this. It was a brack in the former; the Sermon was made, and the Anthem ſung, and none at it but the Shepherds. And what were they? Iews: What is that to us? This ſcripture offereth more grace. Theſe (here) that come from the Eaſt, firſt, they were Gentiles. Gentiles, that concerns us, for ſo are we. We may then look out, if we can ſee this ſtar. It is ours, it is the Gentiles ſtar. VVe may ſet our courſe by it, to ſeek, and find, and worſhip Him, as well as they. James 4. 6.

This is for us all. But there is yet more grace offered to ſome in particular: the Shepherds were a ſort of poor ſimple men altogether unlearned; But, here come a troop of men of great place, high account in their countrey: And withall, of great learned men (their name gives them for no leſs:) this (lo) falls ſomewhat proper to this Place and Preſence, that will be glad to hear it. It is fauſtum & ſalutare ſydus to ſuch; that wealth, worth, or wiſdom ſhall hinder none, but they may have their parts in CHRIST's Birth, as well as thoſe of low degree. It is not onely Stella Gentium, but Stella Magorum: the Great mens, the Wiſe mens ſtar, this.

So, quoad nos, for us, it fitteth well. And, quoad ſe, of it ſelf, it is fit every way. This ſtar leads us to another ſtar, even the Root and Generation of David, the bright morning ſtar. He of whom * Zachary ſaith, in the old Teſtament, Ecce Vir, Oriens nomen ejus: Yea, Oriens ab alto (ſaith * Zachary, in the New:) Viſits thoſe of the Eaſt, whence the day ſpringeth; takes them that are neareſt Him; and his riſing works upon the place firſt, that bears His name. The wiſdom of God the begining of all his ways is found by Wiſe men, of all other (becauſe they be wiſe) moſt fit to find Him. Eſay 11. 1. 2 Pet. 1. 19. Pſalm 110. 3. *Zach. 6. 12. * Luke 1. 78. Prov. 8. 22.

Two verſes I have read. In the former, after the Matter of the Feaſt firſt remembred, (When Jeſus was born,) accompanied with the two circumſtances of Place and Time, (the place where, Bethlehem Juda; the time when, the days of Herod the King:) there is a memorable accident (that then happened) ſet down: A Venerunt, a coming or arrival at Hieruſalem. And they, that ſo came, were a company of Magi, from the Eaſt. And this (lo) hath the Ecce on the head of it, Ecce, venerunt Magi ab Oriente, Behold, there came, &c. As the ſpecial point in the text: and ſo, we to make it. The Diviſion. I.

In the later, is ſet down their Errand. Both the [1] Occaſion, and the [2] End: beſt expreſſed by themſelves out of their own dicentes. 1. the Occaſion: Vidimus ſtellam, they had ſeen his ſtar. 2. the End, Venimus adorare; they are come to worſhip him. Viderunt, Venerunt, Adoraverunt. II.

That they may come to their finis ultimus, they muſt have a medius finis: that is, to worſhip, they muſt find him where he is.

So they ask, Ubi eſt? Not whether He be born; but, where He is born. For, born He is, they are ſure, by the ſame token they have ſeen His ſtar. His ſtar is up, that is riſen; therefore He is riſen too.

So the ſtar in Heaven kindled another ſtar in earth, (S. Peter calls it the Day-ſtar which riſeth in the heart, that is, faith) which ſhined and manifeſted it ſelf, by their labour in coming, diligence in enquiring, duty in worſhip. 2 Pet. 1. 19.

CHRIST's birth made manifeſt, to them, by the ſtar in Heaven: their faith (the ſtar in their heart) made manifeſt to Chriſt, and to all, by the travel of it, which ſhewed it manifeſtly.

That (upon the matter) there falls a threefold Manifeſtation, (you may call them three ſtars, if you pleaſe:) [1] the ſtar in Heaven: [2] the day-ſtar, in their hearts: [3] and, Chriſt himſelf, the bright morning-ſtar, whom both the other guide us to: the ſtar of this morning, which makes the day, the greateſt Day in the year.

The ſum of all riſeth to this: That GOD hath opened the door of faith to the Gentiles: And, among them, to wiſe men, and great men, as well as to the ſimpler ſort. But with this condition, that they ſay with them, venite adoremus: and ſo, come, and ſeek, and find, and worſhip him; that is, do as they did. Acts 14. 27.

The Matter.

VVHen JESUS was born: That (when) is now. His Birth is the ground of the Feast, and the cauſe of our Venimus, our coming together. Where this we note firſt; It is the very firſt time, the firſt (was born) in the Bible: was born, never till now. Here, the tide turns; the ſenſe changes, from ſhall be, to was. A bleſſed change; and, the day is bleſſed, on which it happened.

Eſay 9. 6. Before He was born, it was ſo ſure He ſhould be born, as Eſay ſaid, Puer natus eſt nobis. But for all that there is ſome odds between Eſays natus eſt, and S. Matthews. That was but virtually; as good as born: This, actually born indeed.

Heb. 13. 8. Jeſus Chriſt, yeſterday, & to day, and the ſame for ever. The ſame, yet not altogether after the ſame manner. There is as much between Jeſus Chriſt, yeſterday, not come; and Jeſus Chriſt, to day, cùm natus eſſet; as is between a ſtate in reverſion, and one in being.

Num. 13. 2. The Fathers aptly reſemble their caſe, that were the ante-nati before Chriſt, and ours that came after, to the two men (Numb. 13.) that carried the great cluſter of grapes, upon a ſtaff between them. Both carried; but, he that came behind ſaw that he carried: ſo did not he that went before. The poſt-nati (ſure) are of the ſurer hand: And ſo, for cùm natus eſſet (the day and time) to hold a Feaſt: for When Jeſus was born.

The Circumſtances. VVeighty circumſtances are ever matter of moment; in a ſtory ſpecially. Three there are in the firſt Verſe: [1] The Place: [2] The Time: [3] The Perſons. [4] I add a fourth (out of the ſecond Verſe) the Occaſion. The place (Ubi,) Bethlehem Juda. The time (Quando,) the days of Herod the King. The Perſons (Quibus,) Wiſe men from the Eaſt. The Occaſion, (whereupon) A new ſtar appearing; every one of the four having a ſeveral Propheſie running of it: and every Propheſy a filling of it, in theſe words.

Mica 5. 2. The Place: He was born, in Bethlehem Juda: And thou Bethlehem Juda (ſaith the Prophet Mica,) out of thee ſhall He come. And now, come He is.

Gen. 49. 10. The time: the days of Herod the King. The ſcepter ſhall not quite depart from Juda, till Shilo come (ſaid old Father Jacob in his Propheſie:) Shilo then is (now) come. For, the ſcepter is in Herods hand: His father, an Edomite, his mother, an Iſmaelite: Juda clean gone.

Pſalm 72. 10. Eſay 60. 6. The Perſons: Magi ab Oriente, Kings from the Eaſt. The Kings of Arabia and Saba, ſhall come and bring gifts (ſaith David:) And Eſay ſpecifies them, Gold, Myrrh, Incenſe. Theſe Kings are come: Here they are, they, and their gifts, both.

Num. 24. 17. The Occaſion, whereupon: A ſtar riſen: A ſtar ſhall riſe of Jacob (ſaith Balaam, no very good man, yet a true Prophet in this; and his propheſie true, and for ſuch recorded in the Book of Moſes.) This ſtar is, this morning, up to be ſeen. Propheſies of all four: and, all four accompliſhed.

1 Chriſts ubi.

Of the Place of Bethlehem (out of Mica) it hath formerly been treated: I but touch it and paſs it now. It was the place, where David himſelf was born. And what place more meet for the Son of David, to be born in? It was the place, where was heard the firſt news of the Temple: And, where could the Lord of the Temple, more fitly be heard of? It is interpreted Domus panis, the Houſe of Bread: what place more proper for him, who is the living bread, that came down from heaven, to give life to the world? It was the leaſt, and the loweſt, of all the thouſands of Juda: What little and low is, in things natural; that lowlineſs and humility is in ſpiritual. This natural birth-place, of his, ſheweth his ſpiritual. Humility is his place: Humility (as I may call it) the Bethlehem of virtues: where you find it, Lo, there is he born. So born in us, as born for us. Paſs we Chriſts Ubi, and now, to His Quando.

2 Chriſts Quando. Pſalm 137. 7. Jer. 31. 15.

Of the time: the Days of Herod the King. And thoſe were evil days; Days of great affliction, to that land. Juda's ſcepter clean broken: not a Law-giver left between his feet. Edom (that is, Herod the Edomite) cried, down with them, down to the ground. Not ſo much as a ſort of ſilly babes, but barbarouſly ſlain in their mothers arms: enough, to make Rachel mourn, as ſhe lay in her grave. Diſmal days, certainly: why, then comes Shilo: When mans help furtheſt off, then Gods neareſt: When it is dark, then riſes the ſtar.

Gen. 49. 10. Num. 24. 17. Dan. 9. 25. Agg. 2. 9, 10. 2 Pet. 1. 19.

What one propheſie of Him, but came even ſo; even, at ſuch a time, when they were moſt out of heart, and needed comfort moſt? Iacobs, when they were in Egypt, the houſe of bondage. Balaam's, when in the waſts and barren wilderneſs, among fiery ſerpents. Eſay's, when they were ready to be over run with the two Kings of Syria and Iſrael. Daniel's, when in Babylon, the land of their captivity. Agge's when they built the wall with the trowel in one hand, and the ſword in the other. As his Propheſies came (ſtill:) ſo came he: His Propheſies (ſaith Peter) as a candle: Himſelf, as a ſtar: in the dark, both. For all the world, like the time of the year his birth fell in; in the ſharpeſt ſeaſon, in the deep of Winter. As Humility, His place, ſo affliction, His time. The time and place fit well. For, the time of affliction, makes the place; makes humility: VVhich place Chriſt is born in. I paſs this alſo, and come to the third; of the Perſons.

3 Chriſts Qui bus.

For, there ſtands the Ecce; upon it. VVhich Ecce points us to it, as to the chief point of all; As (indeed) it is. And our chief endeavour, to include our ſelves, to have our parts in this Venerunt, in coming to Chriſt.

Here is a Coming, Venerunt: And they that come, Magi. In which Comers we conſider four points: they ſuſtain four perſons: [1] Of Gentiles; [2] Gentiles, from the Eaſt; [3] Great Perſons, Great Princes, (for, ſo we may be bold to call them, as the Propheſie calls them, Kings:) [4] Of great Learning and wiſdom: ſo [Magi] their name gives them.

To

To Bethlehem came the ſhepherds. Nothing to us, they were Jews. But, thither came theſe too and they were Gentiles: and, in this Gentiles, we; So come we in. Then hath God alſo, to the Gentiles ſet open a dore of faith. At which door we enter; We with them, and they with us: For, they and we Gentiles both. The ſtar is ſtella Gentium, the Gentiles ſtar: And ſo ours; and we to direct our courſe by it. All, that ever write, call them Primitias Gentium, the firſt fruits; Anteſignanes, the ſtandard-bearers, to all the Gentiles, that came in after. Upon this, I beg leave to ſtand a little, becauſe it is our tenure, we hold by. 3 Gentiles. Acts 14. 27.

And, that GOD would thus do, call the Gentiles in, there was ſome little Ecce (ſtill) ſome ſmall ſtar-light from the beginning.

By way of Promiſe. So much promiſed, by the Patriarchs. Noe; that Japhet ſhould at the laſt dwell in the tents of Sem. Abraham; that in his ſeed (not any one Nation, but) all the nations of the earth be bleſſed. Jacob; that Shilo's coming ſhould be expectatio (ſay, ſome, and ſome aggregatio) Gentium: All nations look for him, all be gathered to him. 1 Gen. 9. 27, 28. 18. 49. 10.

By way of Figure. As much was ſhadowed in the Law, the Tabernacle, and the Temple; all, figures of things to come. The Law; Where was it given? Was it not in Sinai, a mountain in Arabia (ſaith the Apoſtle) and ſo upon heathen ground? I truſt, we may have leave to come upon our own ground. And by whom? Was it not by Moſes? And we claim to him by alliance: His wife was the daughter of the Prieſt of Madian: So, of a heathen woman: and his children, heathen of half-blood. 2 Heb. 12. 1. Gal. 4. 25. Exod. 2. 18.

The Tabernacle: was not the ſilk, and gold, and riches it was made of, the ſpoils of Egypt, and ſo heathen ſtuff? Exod. 12. 36. 25. 2, &c.

The Temple: was it not founded upon the threſhing floor of Ornan the Jebuſite, a heathen man? So, on heathen ſoil; and, adificium cedis ſolo. The Timber and materials of it, came they not from Hirams countrey, A heathen King? And, the chief workman, in it (the ſon of a man of Tyre) heathen alſo. So, the heathen were never wholly out. Venerunt, they came, they made their proffers. Some Ecce, ſome little ſtar ſtill. 1 Chr. 21. 18. 1 Reg. 5. 10. 7. 13, &c.

Now the Prophets, when they came, had we not hold there, too? At the ſame time, that God gave Moſes to the Jews, who wrote of CHRIST, did he not likewiſe give Balaam to the Gentiles, who, in the mountains of the Eaſt propheſied of Chriſts ſtar, here? Great odds (I know) between the men; None between their Propheſies: Both, alike true: both their places alike, in the Library of the holy Ghoſt. After that, Jonas: howſoever his book ſtand in the volumn of the Prophets, yet, (when time was) it was ſhewed, that in time, he was the firſt of the ſixteen Prophets: before and ancient to them all. And this was a fair ſtar, that his firſt Prophet of all GOD ſent to Ninive, the great Citie of the Gentiles, then: And ſent him, before he ſent any of the other fifteen to his own people (then) in ſhew, the People of the Jews. 3 Num. 24. 17. John 1. 21.

But, even of them he ſent to the Jews, ſaith not Eſay directly, the Root of Jeſſe ſhould be as a ſtandard, all the Nations gather unto him? Saith not GOD there, It was too poor a ſervice for CHRIST to do to him, to draw to him a ſort of ſilly Shepheards; He would give him as a light to lighten the Gentiles, to bring them, even the very beſt of them, from the ends of the earth. That light to lighten the Gentiles was this ſtar (here;) Simeon had it revealed to him, whereto this ſtar referred, and what it meant; For, it lightned them indeed. And this, ſtanding the firſt Temple. And ſaith not Aggee, (ſtanding the ſecond Temple) The deſire of all Nations ſhall come, (meaning Chriſt;) the deſire, not of one Nation alone, but even of all. So, the Prophets will not be againſt this venerunt: they are (all) for it. Eſay 11. 10. Eſay 42. 6. 49. 5. Luke 2. 32. Agg. 2. 8.

And was not alſo this Venerunt daily ſung in their Quier? The Pſalm of the Nativity: I will think upon Rahab (that is, Egypt) and Babylon, among ſuch as ſhall know me. Behold ye the Philiſtims alſo, and them of Tyre, with the Morians, Lo, there was He born. Born, in all thoſe places; that is, His birth concerns them all: all, their intereſt in it. In the Pſalm of His Paſſion: All the ends of the earth ſhall remember themſelves, and ſhall turn unto the LORD, And all the kindreds of Nations ſhall worſhip before Him. In the Pſalm of the Reſurrection: That, He ſhould then become the Head ſtone of the corner, and joyn both Jews and Gentiles in one coin, or angle. And in the Pſalm of His Aſcenſion: That the Princes of the Nations ſhould be joyned to the People of the GOD of Abraham. And in the Pſalm of His Exaltation: That all Kings ſhould kneel before Him, all Nations do him ſervice. 4 Pſal. 47. 4, 5. Pſalm 22. 27. Pſalm 118. 22. Pſalm 41. 10. Pſalm 72. 11.

That which (then) was thus promiſed, to and by the Patriarchs; ſhadowed forth, in the figures of the Law, the Temple and the Tabernacle; That which was foreſaid by the Prophets, and foreſuing of in the Pſalms; that, was this day fulfilled: Venerunt, here they are come: And Venimus, We, in them, and with them. Who, not onely in their own names, but in ours, make here their entry; came, and ſought after and found and worſhipped their Saviour, and ours, the Saviour of the whole world.

A little wicket there was left open before, whereat divers Gentiles did come in. Many, a Venit there was: Venit [a] Job, in the Patriarchs dayes: Venit [b] Jethro, in Moſes: [c] Rahab, in Joſua's: [d] Ruth, in the Judges time: [e] Ittai (the King of Gaths ſon) in Davids: [f] The Queen of Saba, in Solomons: The [g] Widow of Sarepta, in Elias: [h] Naaman (the Syrian) in Eliſa's time. Each of theſe, in their times, had the favour to be let in. This was but a Venit, a little wicket, for one or two. Now, a venerunt, the great Gate ſet wide open, this day, for all: For theſe here, with their Camels and Dromedaries, to enter, and all their carriage.

Matth. 1. 5. In the ſetting down his Genealogie, (the Chapter before) That Salmon eſpouſed Rahab the Canaanite; that Booz likewiſe, Ruth the Moabite; it is plain, that CHRIST deſcended (according to the fleſh) of Heathen. Deſcending of Heathen, He will never diſdain them, of whom He is deſcended; never ſhut them out, but invite them to his Child-houſe: As we ſee this day by His ſtar, he did.

Luke 24. 25, 27 Mat. 12. 41, 42. And (if you mark it) of his firſt Sermon the Widow of Serapta, and Naaman the Syrian were the Theme: which made his Sermon was not liked. 23. and Weſt are come in, both.

I have a little ſtood on this, becauſe it is the Ecce point. I conclude, The Place, he was born in, (an Inn, which is for all paſſengers of what country ſoever,) the time, he was born in, (of the tax, when Luke 27. 2. Luke 2. 1. all the world came up to be taxed,) the very ſtar, which (as the nature of ſtars is) is common to all Coaſts and Climats, peculiar to none: All ſhew, that all coaſts they may now come; that, the Gen-

Epheſ. 3. 6. tiles are now to be (as the Apoſtle in three pregnant terms delivers it) σύσσωμα, συμμέτοχα, συγκληρονόμα, fellow-members, fellow-partners, and fellow-heirs of one body; Co-partners, and Co-heirs of Chriſt, and his birth. This for Stella Gentium, the Gentiles Star; So both theirs and ours.

2 Gentiles from the Eaſt. Gal. 2. 15. There came Gentiles: And they came from the Eaſt. This may ſeem to ſet us back again; for, we are of the Weſt, the contrary Climate. That is no matter. For, in that they came from the Eaſt, there lieth yet further hope for us; even from that point of the compaſs. For, that is not onely Gentiles, but ſinners of the Gentiles: Sinners, and that chief ſinners. For, ſo were they of the Eaſt; greater, far greater ſinners than the reſt. For tell me, what

Gen. 11. 2. ſin was there that came not from thence? There was the Tower ſet in hand, that ſhould have confronted GOD: and of it came Babel, and from it confuſion. [a] Thence came all Tyranny

Gen. 10. 9. and oppreſſion among men, from Nimrod, that hunted and ranged over men, as over beaſts in a forreſt. [b] Thence, all Idolatrie, and worſhip of falſe Gods; both in earth, from Belus tomb, firſt: And in heaven, from the Star of their God Remphan (which S. Stephen ſpeaks Acts 7. 33. Num. 23. 7. of.) [c] Thence (from the Mountains of the Eaſt) the poſterity of Balaam, falſe Prophets,

2 Pet. 2. 15. that loves the wages of unrighteouſneſs; and, from them, all that naught is. And, if in all theſe it did, It cannot be denied, but that the whole World received their infection that way, from the Eaſt.

Tit. 2. 11. And herein appeared the grace of God, which bringeth Salvation to all men, and to all ſinners, as fair and clear, as the Star it ſelf; that, thence (out of the mountains of the Eaſt) GOD calleth theſe to ſeek, and guided them to find Chriſt: that, whence the poyſon firſt came, thence might come the Triacle: and that as they were the firſt that went out, ſo they ſhould be the firſt that came in.

So the Eaſt ſets us no further back, but brings us nearer. For if the Eaſt may come, which are the greater; much more may the Weſt, which are the leſs: if the Seducers, the Seduced. From

Mat. 8. 11. the Eaſt to the Weſt, is à majore ad minus. That, if venerunt ab Oriente, venient ab Occidente: if the greater, much rather the leſſer. This, for the Star of the Gentiles, firſt: And now, the Star of Sinners, and chief ſinners of the Gentiles, even Oriental ſinners.

3 Great Perſons. Pſal. 72. 10. Verſe 3, 4, 11. But, they ſuſtain yet a third perſon, theſe: (to come near, and to make it come nearer us, even to this place.) For Great men they were in their Countreys, of the higheſt place and account there, as all Stories teſtifie. The Pſalm calls them Kings of Sheba and Seba: and, ſo may we. It may appear by Herods reſpect to them: His calling a Synod to reſolve them: his privie conference with them. So may it by their treaſures they opened, and by their preſents they offered (preſents, for a King,) which give them for no leſs. So, this is (now) thirdly, Stella Magnatum, the Star of Princes and Nobles alſo. Yea, Stella Regia, the Star Royal, Kings themſelves have their hold and claim by it.

CHRIST is not onely for ruſſet cloaks, Shepherds and ſuch; ſhews himſelf to none but ſuch: But even the Grandez, Great States, ſuch as theſe; venerant, they came too: and when they came, were welcom to Him. For they were ſent for, and invited by this Star (their ſtar properly.)

Theſe, at His Birth, at his welcom into the world; and others ſuch as theſe, at his death, at his

Matt. 27. 60. John 19. 30. going out of it. Then Joſeph of Arimathea, an honourable Counſellor, beſtowed on him a fair new Tomb: and others came, with their hundred pound of ſweet odors. So that coming and going, He was beholden to ſuch. The Tribe, Chriſt came of, was the Royal Tribe, to whom the Sceptre belonged;

Num. 24. 17. And in the Propheſie it follows, A ſtar ſhall riſe out of Jacob, and a Scepter out of Iſrael. To Kings, to Sceptres Chriſt cannot but be well inclined.

Amos 1. 1. Dan. 1. 6. Among his Prophets, I find Amos, an heardman: True: but, I find Eſay and Daniel, (both) nobly deſcended, and of the blood Royal.

Mat. 2. 6. In His deſcent, there are Booz, and Jeſſe, plain country men; But there are David, and Salomon too, and a liſt of Kings withall: that ſo, there may be a mixture of both. It is true, S. Paul ſaith: You

2 Cor. 1. 26. ſee your calling; not many mighty, not many noble after the fleſh: Not many, he ſaith: Not any, he ſaith not: he ſhould (then) have ſpoken contrary to his own knowledg. Some pertained to this ſtar, a Acts 13. 7. b Acts 17. 34. c 11. d Phil. 4. 22. went by it. The [a] Lord Deputy of Cyprus; the great [b] Judg in Areopage, divers of the [c] nobler ſort at Berea; And divers of [d] Cæſars houſhold came in, and had all their calling, by and from Him.

As

As likewiſe the great [e] Lord Treaſurer, by St. Philip; and the [f] Eleſt Lady, by St. John. Thoſe (all) were of this Troop here: Under this Star, all of them, ſtella Magnatum. To conclude, from our Saviour Chriſt's own mouth: As there is in Heaven room for poor Lazarus; So, that room was in the boſome of one that was rich (that is) of Abraham; a great Man, yea: a great Prince in his time.

f 2 Iohn 1.

[1] Stella gentium; [2] Stella peccatorum de gentibus; [3] Stella Magnatum. But yet all this while, we have not touched Stella Magorum: Not yet deal with Magi, the very word of the Text, and the chiefe perſon they repreſent. For, beſide that they were great States, they were alſo great learned Men; And (being both) they are ſtiled rather by the name of their skill and learning, than by that of their greatneſs; to point us, to the quality in them, we are principally to regard.

4. Wiſe men.

You ſhall not need ſtartle, when you hear the word Magi, as if they were ſuch as Simon Magus was. Of later times it ſounds not well (this name) of old, it was a name of great honour, as was the name of Tyrannus, and Sophiſtes; all, in the like caſe. Evil and unworthy men took them up after, and ſo, they loſt their firſt reputation. But, originally, Magus was a title of high knowledge.

I adde, of Heathen knowledge, and comprehend in it this very knowledge, that they were well ſeen in the courſe of heaven, in the ſtars and bodies celeſtial. Their Vidimus ſtellam ſhews as much. The ſtars God hath given, for ſigns (ſaith the Book of Geneſis:) Even the ordinary. And, if them, the extraordinary (ſuch as this) much more. For, Signs they are, open the Signature who can.

Gen. 1.14.

This learning of theirs made them never the further from Chriſt (we ſee;) It did them no hurt, in their coming to Chriſt: No more than it did Moſes, that he was well learned in all the wiſdom of the Egyptians (ſaith S. Stephen, Act. 7.22.) Nor no more than it did Solomon, that he paſſed all the children of the Eaſt, in their own learning, (1 Reg. 4.30.) No more than it did Daniel, that he was brought up, and well ſeen, in the cunning of the Chaldeans (Dan. 1.4.) No more theſe; than the gold and ſpoils of Egypt, did the Tabernacle hurt, that was hung all over with them.

They, that are ſeen in this learning of Egypt, of Chaldea, of the Eaſt, are not thereby barred at all. This is their ſtar, their guide; a guide apt and proper for them that knew the ſtars; for them that were learned. Chriſt applyeth himſelf to all; diſpoſes all things: what every one is given to, even by that, Chriſt calleth them. Saint Peter, Andrew, James, and John, Fiſhermen, by a draught of Fiſh. Theſe, Theſe that were ſtudious in the Starr, by a ſtar for the purpoſe.

And note that the apparition to the Shepherds was no ſooner over, but this ſtar appeared preſently, if not the very ſame hour: (that is) both at once. In like manner, Chriſt, at firſt (to ſhew the glory of his greatneſs) took and employed Fiſhermen, ſuch as had no bringing up in Schooles. But it was not long after, but Learned Men came in apace: Learned men of all ſorts; [a] Zenas, in Law; [b] Luke, in Phyſick; [c] Apollo, with his Eloquence; [d] Dionyſe, with his Philoſophy; [e] S. Paul, with his πολλὰ γράμματα much learning, (which he had at Tharſus, as famous an Univerſity for Aſia, as Athens was for Greece.) Which Learning (for all Feſtus phanſie) turned not his braines, nor did them any hurt at all.

b 1 Tim. 4.11.
c Acts 18. 24.
d Acts 17. 34.
e Acts. 26. 24.

There is no ſtar or beam of it; There is no truth at all, in humane learning, or Philoſophy, that thwarteth any truth in Divinity; but forteth well with it, and ſerveth it, and all to honour Him, who ſaith of Himſelf, Ego ſum veritas, I am the truth. None that will hinder this Venerunt, keep back any wiſe man, or make him leſs fit for coming to Chriſt.

Ioh. 14.6.

So, you ſee your calling; all four. [1] Gentiles may come, [2] Sinners of the Gentiles may come, (yea, though they be peccatorum primi, of the primer ſort:) [3] Men of Place; [4] Men of Gifts, Learned and Wiſe may come. In Magis inſunt omnes hi, all are in Venerunt Magi: The ſtar goes before them, guides them (all) to Chriſt.

It remaineth, that, what we may doe, we will do; that is, come. (For, further than Venerunt, we are not like to come, at this time.) And though we go no further, it skils not, ſo we do but that; come: Even that will ſerve. For, it is all in all. We ſhall go in the company of Wiſe men, that is once. And if the Shepherds were too homely to ſort with, theſe are company for the beſt; they were company for Cyrus, and Darius, and all the great Monarchs of Perſia.

The Application.

Ecce Venerunt it is, in the Text: And (indeed) not only the Perſons, (Ecce Magi,) but their very coming deſerved an Ecce. It is an Ecce venerunt, theirs (indeed) if we weigh it well, whence they came, and whither. Whence; from the Eaſt, their own countrey: Whither, to Hieruſalem, that was to them a ſtrange Land: That was ſomewhat. [1] They came a long journey, no leſs than twelve dayes together. [2] They came an uneaſie journey, for their way lay through Arabia Petræa, and the craggy rocks of it. [4] And they came a dangerous journey, through Arabia Deſerta (too,) and the black tents of Kedar there then famous for their robberies, and even to this day. [5] And they came, now, at the worſt ſeaſon of the year. And all, but to do worſhip at Chriſts birth. So great account they made; So highly did they eſteem their being at it, as they took all this great travel, and came all this long journey, and came it, at this time. Stayed not their coming, till the opening of the year, till they might have better weather and way, and have longer dayes, and ſo more ſeaſonable and fit to travel in. So deſirous were they to come with the firſt, and to be there, as ſoon as poſſibly they might: broke through all theſe difficulties. Et ecce venerunt, And, behold, come they did.

Pſal. 120.5.

And we, what excuſe ſhall we have, if we come not? If ſo ſhort and ſo eaſie a way we come not, as from our Chambers hither, not to be called a way indeed? Shall not our own venerunt have an ecce, Behold, it was but ſtepping over the threſhold, and yet they come not?

And theſe were Wiſe men; and never a whit the leſs Wiſe, for ſo coming: Nay, never ſo truly wiſe, as in any thing they did, as in ſo coming. The Holy Ghoſt recordeth them for wiſe, in capite libri, even in the beginning of the New Teſtament. Of Chriſt, when He came into the world (that is, when He was born) the Pſalm ſaith, In the beginning of the Book it was written of Him, He ſaid, Ecce venio, Lo, I come: Of theſe, in the ſame words, when they came to meet Him (ſo born) it is ſaid here, in the beginning of the Goſpel, Ecce venerunt, Behold they come.

Pſal.40.7.

And we, if we believe this, that this was their wiſedom; if they and we be wiſe by one Spirit, by the ſame principles; we will follow the ſame Starre, tread the ſame way, and ſo come (at laſt) whither they are happily gone before us.

Nay, not onely that [come;] but this withall; to think and ſet down with our ſelves, that, to come to Chriſt, is one of the wiſeſt parts, that ever theſe Wiſe men did; or we, (or any elſe) can do in all our lives.

And how ſhall we that do? I know not any more proper way left us, than to come to that, which himſelf by expreſs order hath left us, as the moſt ſpecial Remembrance of Himſelf, to be come to. When He came into the world (ſaith the Pſalm) that is, at His Birth (now) He ſaid, Ecce venio, Lo, I come: When then? Sacrifice and burnt offerings thou wouldſt not have; but a body haſt thou ordained me: Mark (ſaith the Apoſtle) He takes away the firſt, to eſtabliſh the ſecond, (that is) to eſtabliſh His body, and the coming to it. By the offering, breaking, and partaking, of which body; we are all ſanctified, ſo many as ſhall come to it. For given it is for the taking away of our ſins. Nothing more fit, than at the time, His body was ordained Him (and that is to day,) to come to the body ſo ordained.

Ibid. verſe 6. Heb.10.9. Heb.10.10. Mat.26.28.

And in the Old Ritual of the Church we find, that the cover of the Caniſter (wherein was the Sacrament of His body,) there was a ſtar ingraven; to ſhew us that (now) the ſtar leads us thither; or His body, there.

Apoc.22.15.

And what ſhall I ſay now, but (according as Saint John ſaith) and the ſtar, and the Wiſe men ſay Come. And He, whoſe ſtar is, and to whom the Wiſe men came, ſaith, Come. And let them that are diſpoſed, Come. And let, whoſoever will take of the Bread of Life, which came down from Heaven, this day, into Bethlehem the houſe of Bread. Of which Bread, the Church is this (day) the Houſe; and the true Bethlehem, and all the Bethlehem we have now left to come to, for the Bread of Life; of that life, which we hope for in heaven. And this, our neareſt coming that (here) we can come, till we ſhall (by another Venite) come unto Him in His heavenly Kingdom. To which, He grant we may come, that (this day) came to us in earth, that we thereby might come to Him, and remain with Him, Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous.

Iohn 6.35.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED Before the Kings Maiesty.

At WHITE-HAL. on Wedneſday the xxv. of Decembe. Anno Domini, MDCXXII. Being CHRIST MASSE Day.

MATT. Chap. II. Verſ. I, II.

Behold there came Wiſe Men, from the Eaſt to Hieruſalem;

Saying, Where is the King of the Iewes that is born? For we have ſeen His Star in the Eaſt, and are come to worſhip Him.

THere be, in theſe two Verſes, two principal points, (as was obſerved, when time was,) [1] The Perſons that arrived at Hieruſalem: [2] And their Errand. The Perſons in the former Verſe: whereof have been treated heretofore. Their Errand in the later: wherewith we are now to deal.

Their Errand we may beſt learn from themſelves, out of their Dicentes, &c. Which (in a word is, To worſhip Him.) Their Errand, our Errand, and the Errand of this Day.

This Text may ſeem to come a little too ſoon, before the time; and ſhould have ſtayed till the day, it was ſpoken on, rather than on this day. But, if you mark them well, there are (in the Verſe) four Words, that be Verba Dieĭ hujus, proper and peculiar to this very day. [1] For firſt, Natus eſt is moſt proper to this day of all days, the day of His Navity. [2] Secondly, Vidimus ſtellam: For, this day, it was firſt ſeen; appeared firſt. [3] Thirdly, Venimus: For, this day, they ſet forth, began their jouiney. [4] And laſt, Adorare Eum: For when He brought His only begotten Son into the World,

World, He gave in charge, Let all the Angels of God worſhip Him. And when the Angels to do it, no time more proper for us to do it, as then. So theſe four appropriate it to this day, and none but this.

The Diviſion. The main heads of their Errand are, [1] Vidimus ſtellam, the Occaſion: [2] And Venimus adorare, the end of their comming. But for the better conceiving it, I will take another courſe, to ſet forth theſe points to be handled.

I. Their Faith firſt: Faith in that they never ask, Whether He be; but, Where He is born: For, that born He is, that they ſtedfaſtly believe.

II. Then the work, or ſervice of this Faith, (as S. Paul calleth it;) the touch, or trial βασανος (as Saint Peter;) the Oſtende mihi, as (S. Iames) of this their faith in theſe five: [1] Their confeſſing of it, in venerunt dicentes. Venerunt, they were no ſooner come, but dicentes, they tell it out: Confeſs Him, and His birth to be the cauſe of their coming. [2] Secondly, as confeſs their Faith, So, the Ground of their Faith; Vidimus enim, For, they had ſeen his ſtar: And, His ſtar being riſen, by it they knew, He muſt be riſen too. [3] Thirdly, (as S, Paul calls them, in Abrahams Veſtigia fidei, the ſteps of their Faith, in venimus, their coming; coming, ſuch a journey, at ſuch a time, with ſuch ſpeed. [4] Fourthly, When they were come, their Diligent enquiring him out by Ubi eſt? (For, here is the place of it:) asking after Him, to find where He was. [5] And laſtly, when they had found Him, the end of their ſeeing, coming, ſeeking; and all for no other end, but to worſhip Him. Here they ſay it: at the 11. Verſe they do it, in theſe two acts, [1] Procidentes, their falling down: [2] And, Obtulerunt, their offering to Him. Worſhip Him with their bodies; Worſhip Him with their goods: Their worſhip, and ours; the true worſhip of Chriſt.

Phil. 2. 17. 2 Pet. 1. 7. Iam. 2. 18. 1 2 3 Rom. 4. 12. 4. 5

The Text is of a ſtar: And we may make all run on a ſtar: that ſo, the Text and Day may be ſuitable, and heaven and earth hold a correſpondence. S. Peter calls faith, the Day ſtar riſing in our hearts; Which ſorts well with the ſtar in the Text, riſing in the skie. That, in the skie manifeſting it ſelf from above, to them: This, in their hearts, manifeſting it ſelf from below, to Him, to Chriſt. Manifeſting it ſelf, by theſe five: [1] By [a] Ore ſit confeſſio, the confeſſing it: [2] By [b] Fides eſt ſubſtantia, the ground of it: [3] By [c] Veſtigia fidei, the ſteps of it, in their painful coming: [4] By their Ubi eſt? Careful enquiring: [5] And laſt, by Adorare Eum, their devout Worſhiping. Theſe five, as ſo many beams of faith, the day-ſtar riſen in their hearts. To take notice of them. For, every one of them is of the nature of a Condition: ſo, as if we fail in them, non lucet nobis ſtella hæc, we have no part in the light, or conduct of this ſtar: Neither, in ſtellam, this ſtar it ſelf: Nor, in Ejus, in Him, whoſe the ſtar is; that is not in Chriſt neither.

2 Pet. 1. 9.

a Rom 10. 10. b Heb. 11. 1. c Rom. 4. 12.

We have now got us a ſtar on earth, for that in heaven: And theſe (both) lead us to a third. So as, upon the matter, three ſtars we have; and each his proper manifeſtation. 1. The firſt, in the firmament: That appeared unto them, and in them, to us: (A figure of S. Pauls Ἐπεφανη χαρις, the Grace of God appearing, and bringing ſalvation to all men; Iews, and Gentiles and all. 2. The ſecond, here on earth, is S. Peters Lucifer in cordibus: And this appeared in them, and ſo muſt, in us. Appeared, [1] In their Eyes, Vidimus: [2] In their Feet, Venimus: [3] In their Lips, Dicentes: ubi eſt: [4] In their Knees, Procidentes, falling down: [5] In their Hands, Obtulerunt, by offering. Theſe five, every one a beam of this ſtar. 3. The third in Chriſt Himſelf (S. Iohns ſtar) The generation and root of David, the bright morning ſtar Chriſt. And He, His double appearing. [1] One, at this time, now, when He appeared in great humility; and we ſee, and come to Him by faith. [2] The other which we wait for; even, the bleſſed hope, and appearing of the great God, and our Saviour, in the Majeſty of His Glory.

1 Tit. 2. 11. 2 2 Pet. 1. 9. 3 Tit. 2. 13.

Theſe three: [1] The firſt, that manifeſted Chriſt to them; [2] The ſecond, that manifeſted them to Chriſt: [3] The third, Chriſt Himſelf, in whom, both theſe were (as it were) in conjunction. Chriſt the bright Morning ſtar of that Day, which ſhall have no night; the Beatifica viſio, the bleſſed ſight of which Day, is the conſummatum eſt of our Hope, and Happineſs for ever.

Of theſe three ſtars, the firſt is gone; the third yet to come; the ſecond only is preſent. We to look to that; and to the five beams of it. That is it, muſt do us all the good, and bring us to the third.

I Their Faith. Acts 14. 27.

SAint Luke calleth Faith, the [*] Door of faith: At this door let us enter. Here is a coming: And, He that cometh to God (and ſo, he that, to Chriſt) muſt believe that Chriſt is: ſo do theſe. They never ask, An ſit, but ubi ſit? Not, Whether, but, Where He is born. They that ask Ubi, qui natus? take natus for granted: preſuppoſe, that born He is. Herein is faith: Faith of Chriſts being born, the third Article of the Chriſtian Creed.

And what believe they of Him? Out of their own words here: [1] Firſt, that Natus, that born He is; and ſo Man He is: His Humane Nature. [2] And as His Nature, ſo His Office, in Natus eſt Rex, born a King: they believe that too. [3] But, Iudæorum may ſeem to be a bar: For then what have they to doe with the King of the Iews? they be Gentiles, none of his Lieges; No relation to Him, at all; What do they ſeeking, or worſhiping Him? But, weigh, it well, and it is no bar. For, this they ſeem to believe: He is ſo Rex Iudæorum, King of the Iews, as he is adorandus à Gentibus, the Gentiles to adore Him. And though born in Iewry, yet, whoſe birth concerned them, though Gentiles, though born far off in the mountains of the Eaſt: they, to have ſome benefit by Him and His birth; and for that to do Him worſhip, ſeeing Officium fundatur in beneficio, [4] As thus born in earth, ſo a ſtar He hath in Heaven of His own:

ſtellam Ejus, His ſtar; He the owner of it. Now we know the ſtars are the ſtars of Heaven; and He, that Lord of them, Lord of Heaven too; and ſo, to be adored of them, of us, and of all. St. John puts them together: The Root and Generation of David, His Earthly; and, The bright Morning ſtar, His Heavenly or Divine Generation. Hac eſt fides Magorum, this is the Myſtery of their faith. In Natus eſt, Man; In ſtellam Ejus, GOD: In Rex, a King, (though of the Jews, yet) the good of whoſe Kingdom ſhould extend and ſtretch it ſelf far and wide, to Gentiles and all; and He of all to be adored. This, for corde creditur, the day-ſtar it ſelf in their hearts. Now, to the Beames of this ſtar. Rev. 22. 16.

II. Next to Corde creditur is Ore fit confeſſio, the Confeſſion of this Faith. It is in venerunt dicentes, they came with it in their mouths. Venerunt, they vvere no ſooner come, but they ſpake of it ſo freely, to ſo many, as it came to Herod's ear, and troubled him not a little, that any King of the Jews ſhould be worſhiped, beſide himſelf. So then, their faith is no boſom-faith, kept to themſelves, vvithout ever a dicentes, without ſaying any thing of it to any body. No, Credidi, propter quod locutus ſum; They believe, and therefore they ſpake. The ſtar in their hearts caſt one beam out at their mouths. And though Herod, who vvas but Rex factus, could evil brook to hear of Rex natus, muſt needs be offended at it; yet they vvere not affraid to ſay it. And, though they came from the Eaſt (thoſe parts, to vvhom and their King the Jews had long time been captives and underlings,) they vvere not aſhamed neither to tell, that, One of the Jews Race they came to ſeek, and to ſeek Him to the end to worſhip Him. So, neither affraid of Herod, nor aſhamed of CHIST: but profeſſed their Errand, and cared not vvho knevv it. This for their confeſſing Him boldly.

II. The work of their Faith.
1 Their Confeſſion, dicentes Pſal. 116. 10.

2 But, Faith is ſaid (by the * Apoſtle) to be ὑπόστασις, and ſo there is a good Ground, and ἔλεγχος, and ſo, hath a good Reaſon for it. This, puts the difference between Fidelis and Credulus, or, (as Salomon terms him) faſtus, qui credit omni verbo: between Faith and lightneſſe of belief: Faith hath (ever) a Ground: Vidimus enim, an Enim a Reaſon for it; and is ready to render it. How came you to believe? Audivimus enim; For, we have heard an Angel (ſay the Shepherds) Vidimus enim, for we have ſeen a ſtar, (ſay the Magi:) And this is a well-grounded faith. We came not of our own heads; We came not before we ſaw ſome reaſon for it; ſaw that which ſet us on comming; Vidimus ſtellam Ejus.

2 Their Ground. Vidimus enim: * Heb. 11. 2. Prov. 14. 15. Luke 2. 20.

Vidimus ſtellam: We can well conceive that: Any, that will but look up, may ſee a ſtar, But, how could they ſee the [Ejus] of it, that it was His? Either, that it belonged to any; Or that, He it was, it belonged to. This paſſeth all Perſpective: No Aſtronomy could ſhew them this. What by courſe of Nature the ſtars can produce, that they, by courſe of Art or Obſervation, may diſcover. But, this Birth was above Nature. No Trigon, Triplicity, Exaltation could bring it forth. They are but idle, that ſet figures for it. The ſtar ſhould not have been His, but He, the ſtars, if it had gone that way. Some other light then, they ſaw this [Ejus] by. Stellam Ejus.

Now (with us in Divinity) there be but two in all: Veſpertina, and Matutina lux. Veſpertina, the Owle-light of our Reaſon or skill, is too dimme to ſee it by. No remedy then, but it muſt be (as Eſay cals it) Matutina lux: The Morning light, the Light of Gods Law muſt certifie them of the Ejus of it. There, or not at all, to be had, whom this ſtar did portend.

And in the Law, there we find it (in the XXIV. of Numbers.) One of their own Prophets, that came (from whence they came) from the Mountains of the Eaſt) was raviſhed in ſpirit, fell into a trance; had his eyes opened, and ſaw the Ejus of it many an hundred yeares, before it roſe. Saw Orietur in Jacob, that there it ſhould riſe; VVhich is as much as Natus eſt, here. Saw ſtella that there ſhould be the bright Morning-ſtarre; and ſo might well have a ſtar to repreſent Him. Saw Sceptrum in Iſrael (which is juſt as much as Rex Judæorum,) that it ſhould portend a King there: Such a King, as ſhould not onely ſmite the corners of Moab (that is) Balac their enemy, for the preſent; but ſhould reduce and bring under Him all the ſons of Seth (that is) all the VVorld: For, all are now Seth's ſons, Cain's were all drowned in the Flood. Here now is the Ejus of it clear. A Prophets eye might diſcern this: Never a Chaldean of them all could take it with his Aſtrolabe. Balaams eyes were opened to ſee it; and he helped to open their eyes, by leaving behind him this Prophecy, to direct them how to apply it (when it ſhould ariſe) to the right Ejus of it. Num. 24. 17. Ibid. Ibid.

But theſe had not the Law: It is hard to ſay that the Chaldee Paraphraſe was extant long before this. They might have had it. Say, they had it not: If Moſes were ſo careful to record this Prophecy in his Book, it may well be thought, that ſome memory of this ſo memorable a Prediction was left remaining among them of the Eaſt, his own Countrey where he was born and brought up. And ſome helpthey might have from Daniel too, who lived all his time in Chaldea and Perſia, and propheſied among them of ſuch a King, and ſet a juſt time of it.

And this, (as it is conceived) put the difference between the Eaſt and VVeſt. For I ask, VVhat is Vidimus in oriente with them; Was it not vidimus in occidente? In the Weſt, ſuch a ſtar, it or the fellow of it was ſeen, nigh about that time, or the Roman Stories deceive us. Toward the end of Auguſtus Reign, ſuch a ſtar was ſeen, and much ſcanning there was about it. Pliny ſaith, it was generally holden, that ſtar to be a Fauſtum ſydus, a Lucky Comet; and portended good to the World, which few or no Comets do. And Virgil (who lived then) would needs take upon him to ſet down the Ejus of it, ----- Ecce Dionæi, &c. Entituled Cæſar to it. And verily, there is no man, that can (without admiration) read his ſixth Eclogue, of a Birth, that time expected, that ſhould be the Off-ſpring of the Gods, and that ſhould take away their ſinnes. Where-upon it hath gone for current, the Eaſt and Weſt, Vidimus, both.

But, by the light of their Prophecy, the East, they went ſtraight to the right Ejus. And, for want of this Light, the Weſt wandred and gave it a wrong Ejus: As Virgil, applying it to little Salonine; and (as evil hap was) while he was making his Verſes, the poor Child died; and ſo, his ſtar ſhot, vaniſhed, and came to nothing. Their vidimus never came to a venimus: they neither went, nor worſhiped him, as theſe (here) did.

But, by this we ſee, when all is done, hither we muſt come, for our Morning-light; to this book, to the Word of Prophecy. All our vidimus ſtellam is as good as nothing without it. That Star is paſt and gone, long ſince: Heaven and earth ſhall paſſe, but this word ſhall not paſſe. Here, on this, we to fix our eye, and to ground our faith. Having this, though we never hear Angel, nor ſee ſtar, we may (by the Grace of GOD) do full well. For, even they, that have had both thoſe,
2 Pet. 1. 17. have been fain to reſolve into this, as their laſt, beſt, and chiefeſt point of all. Witneſſe St. Peter: He, ſaith he, (and they with him) ſaw Chriſts Glory, and heard the voice from Heaven, in the holy Mount: What then? After both theſe, Audivimus and vidimus (both ſenſes) he comes to this, Habemus autem firmiorem, &c. We have a more ſure word of Prophecy than both theſe. Firmi-
Verſe 19. orem, a more ſure, a more clear, than them both. And Si hîc legimus (for, legimus is vidimus,) If here we read it written, it is enough to ground our faith, and let the ſtar go.

And yet (to end this point;) Both theſe, the ſtar, and the Prophecy, they are but circumfuſa Lux: Without, both. Beſides theſe, there muſt be a light within, in the eye: Elſe (we know) for all them, nothing will be ſeen. And, that muſt come from Him, and the enlightening of His Spirit. Take this for a Rule: No knowing of Ejus, abſque Eo; of His, without Him, whoſe it is. Neither, of the Prophecy, without Him, that inſpired it. But, this third comming too; He ſending the light of His Spirit, within, into their minds; they then ſaw cleerly, This, the ſtar; now the Time; He the Child, that this day was born.

He, that ſent theſe two without, ſent alſo this third within: and then, it was Vidimus indeed. The light of the ſtar, in their eyes, the word of prophecy in their eares, the Beam of His Spirit in their hearts; theſe three made up a full vidimus. And, ſo much for vidimus ſtellam Ejus, the Occaſion of their comming.

3 Their comming. Venimus.

Now, for venimus, their comming it ſelf. And it follows well. For, it is not a ſtar only, but a Load-ſtar: And whither ſhould ſtella Ejus ducere, but ad Eum? whither lead us, but to Him, whoſe the ſtar is? to the Stars Maſter.

All this while we have been at dicentes, ſaying and ſeeing: Now we ſhall come to Faciemes, ſee them do ſomewhat upon it. It is not ſaying nor ſeeing will ſerve St. James: He will call, and be ſtill
Jam. 2. 18. calling for Oſtende mihi, ſhew me thy Faith by ſome VVork. And, well may he be allowed to call for it, this Day: It is the day of Vidimus, Appearing, Being ſeen. You have ſeen His ſtar: Let Him now ſee your ſtar, another while. And, ſo they do. Make your faith to be ſeen: So it is: Their
Rom. 4. 12. Faith, in the ſteps of their Faith. And, ſo was Abraham's, firſt, by comming forth of his countrey; As, theſe here do, and ſo walk in the ſteps of the faith of Abraham; do his firſt work.

Acts 1. 11. It is not commanded, to ſtand gazing into heaven too long, Not on CHRIST Himſelf aſcending: much leſſe on His ſtar. For, they ſate not ſtill gazing on the ſtar. Their Vidimus begat Venimus; their ſeeing made them come; come a great journey. Venimus is ſoon ſaid; but a ſhort word: But, many a wide and weary ſtep they made before they could come to ſay Venimus, Lo, here we are come; Come, and at our journeyes end. To look a little on it. In this their Comming, we conſider, 1. Firſt, the diſtance of the Place they came from. It was not hard by, as the ſhepherds (but a ſtep to Bethlehem over the fields:) This was riding many hundred miles, and coſt them many a dayes journey. 2. Secondly, we conſider the way, that they came: if it be pleaſant, or plain and eaſie: For, if it be, it is ſo much the better. [1] This was nothing pleaſant; for, through deſarts; all the way waſte and deſolate. [2] Nor (ſecondly) eaſie neither, For, over the rocks and crags of both Arabies (ſpecially Petraa) their journey lay. 3. Yet if ſafe: But it was not; but exceeding dange-Cant. 1. 4. rous, as lying through the middeſt of the Black Tents of Kedar, a Nation of Thieves and cut-throats; to paſſe over the hils of Robbers; Infamous then, and infamous to this day. No paſſing without great troops or convoy. 4. Laſt we conſider the time of their comming, the ſeaſon of the year. It was no ſummer progreſſe. A cold comming they had of it, at this time of the year; juſt the worſt time of the year, to take a journey, and ſpecially a long journey, in. The wayes deep, the weather ſharp, the dayes ſhort, the ſun fartheſt off in ſolſtitio brumali, the very dead of Winter, Venimus, VVe are come, if that be one; Venimus, VVe are (now) come, come at this time, that (ſure) is another.

And theſe difficulties they overcame, of a weary-ſome, irk-ſome, trouble-ſome, dangerous, unſeaſonable journey: And for all this, they came. And, came it cheerfully, and quickly; As appeareth by the ſpeed they made. It was but vidimus, venimus with them; They ſaw, and they came: No ſooner ſaw, but they ſet out preſently. So, as upon the firſt appearing of the ſtar (as it might be, laſt night) they knew it was Balaam's ſtar; it called them away, they made ready ſtraight to begin their journey this morning. A ſure ſigne they were highly conceited of His believed ſome great matter of it, that they took all theſe paines, made all this haſte, that they might be there to worſhip Him, with all the poſſible ſpeed they could. Sory for nothing ſo much, but that they could not be there ſoon enough, with the very firſt to do it even this day, the day of His birth. All conſidered, there is more in venimus than ſhews at the firſt ſight. It was not for nothing, it was ſaid (in the firſt verſe) Ecce venerunt; their comming hath an Ecce on it: it vvell deſerves it.

And

And we, what ſhould we have done? Sure, theſe men of the Eaſt, ſhall riſe in judgement againſt the men of the Weſt, that is, us: and their faith, againſt ours, in this point. With them it was but vidimus, venimus: With us, it would have been but venienus at moſt. Our faſhion is, to ſee and ſee again, before we ſtirre a foot: Specially, if it be to the worſhip of CHRIST. Come ſuch a Journey, at ſuch a time? No: but fairly have put it off till the ſpring of the year, till the dayes longer, and the wayes fairer, and the weather warmer: till better travelling to CHRIST. Our Epiphany would ſure have fallen in Eaſter-week at the ſooneſt. Mat. 8. 11.

But then, for the diſtance, deſolateneſſe, tedioufneſſe, and the reſt, any of them were enough to mar our venimus quite. It muſt be no great way (firſt) we muſt come: we love not that. VVell fare the Shepherds yet, they came but hard by: Rather like them than the Magi. Nay, nor like them neither. For, with us, the neaver (lightly) the furtheſt off: Our Proverb is (you know) The neaver the Church the farther from God.

Nor, it muſt not be through a Deſart, over no Petraa. If rugged or uneven the way; if the weather ill diſpoſed; if any never ſo little danger, it is enough to ſtay us. To Chriſt we cannot travel, but weather and way and all muſt be fair. If not, no journey but ſit ſtill and ſee further. As indeed, all our Religion is rather vidimus, a Contemplation, than Venimus, a Motion, or ſtirring to be ought.

But when we do it, we muſt be allowed leaſure. Ever, veniemus; never venimus: Ever comming; never come. VVe love to make no very great haſte. To other things perhaps: Not to Adorare, the Place of the worſhip of GOD. VVhy ſhould we, Chriſt, is no VVild-Cat. VVhat talk your of twelve dayes? And if it be forty dayes hence, ye ſhall be ſure to find His mother and Him; She cannot be Churched till then: VVhat needs ſuch haſte? The truth is, we conceit Him and His Birth but ſlenderly, and our haſte is even thereafter. But, if we be at that point, we muſt be out of this Venimus: they like enough to leave us behind. Beſt, get us a new Chriſt-maſſe in September: we are not like to come to Chriſt at this Feaſt. Enough, for venimus.

But, what is Venimus without Invenimus? and when they come, they hit not on Him, at firſt: No more muſt we think, as ſoon as ever we be come, to find Him ſtraight. They are fain to come to their Ubi eſt? VVe muſt now look back to that. For, though it ſtand before in the Verſe, here is the right place of it. They ſaw before they came; and came, before they asked: Asked, before they found; and found, before they worſhiped. Between venimus (their comming) and Adorare (their worſhiping) there, is the true place of [Dicentes, ubi eſt?] 4 Their Enquiry. Ubi eſt?

VVhere (firſt) we note a double uſe of their Dicentes, theſe Wiſe men had: *As to manifeſt what they knew, Natus eſt, that He is born; ſo, to confeſſe and aske what they knew not; the Place, Where. VVe, to have the like.

*Secondly, ſet down this: That, to find where He is, we muſt learn of theſe, to aske Where He is: VVhich we full little fet our ſelves to do. If we ſtumble on Him, ſo it is, But for any asking we trouble not our ſelves: but ſit ſtill (as we ſay) and let Nature work; And ſo let Grace too; and ſo, for us, it ſhall. I wot well, it is ſaid (in a place of Eſay) He was found à non quærentibus, of ſome that ſought Him not, never asked Ubi eſt? But it is no good holding by that place. It was their good hap that ſo did. But, truſt not to it: it is not every bodies caſe, that. It is better advice, you ſhall read in the Pſalm, Hæc eſt generatio quærentium: There is a Generation of them that ſeek Him. Of vvhich, theſe vvere: And, of that Generation let us be. Regularly, there is no promiſe of Invenietis, but to quærite; of Finding, but to ſuch as ſeek. It is not ſafe, to preſume, to find Him othervviſe. Eſay 65. 1. Pſal. 20. 6.

I thought there had been ſmall uſe (novv) of [Ubi eſt?] Yet there is: Except we hold the ubiquity, That CHRIST is ubi non? any vvhere. But, He is not ſo. CHRIST hath His ubi, His proper Place, vvhere He is to be found: And if you miſſe of that, you miſſe of Him. And vvell may vve miſſe (ſaith CHRST Himſelf) there are ſo many vvill take upon them, to tell us Where: and tell us of ſo many ubi's: Ecce hîc, Look you here He is, Ecce illîc, Nay then, there. In deſerto, in the deſart: Nay, In penetralibus, in ſuch a privy Conventicle, you ſhall be ſure of Him. And yet, He (ſaith He Himſelf) in none of them all. There is then (yet) place for [Ubi eſt?] I ſpeak not of His Natural body, but of His Myſtical: That, is CHIST too. Mat. 24. 23.

How ſhall we then do? VVhere ſhall we get this [Where] reſolved? VVhere theſe did, They ſaid it to many and oft, but gat no anſwer, till they had got together a Convocation of Scribes; and they reſolved them of CHRIST'S ubi. For, they (in the Eaſt) were nothing ſo wiſe or well ſeen, as we (in the Weſt) are now grown. VVe need call no Scribes together, and get them tell us, where: Every Artiſan hath a whole Synod of Scribes in his brain, and can tell where CHRIST is, better than any learned man of them all. Yet, theſe were Wiſe men: Beſt, learn, where they did.

And how did the Scribes reſolve it them? Out of Mica. As before, to the ſtar they joyn Balaam's Prophecy: So now again, to His Orietur (that ſuch an one ſhould be born) they had put Mica's [& tu Bethlehem] the Place of His Birth. Still helping, and giving light (as it were) to the light of Heaven, by a more cleer light, the light of the Sanctuary.

Thus then, to do. And, to do it our ſelves: and not ſeek CHRIST, per alium; Set others about it (as Herod did theſe) and ſit ſtill our ſelves. For ſo, we may hap never find Him, no more than He did.

And now we have found where, what then? It is neither in ſeeking or finding, Venimus nor Invenimus:

5 Their End, Adorare Eum.

nimus, the End of all, the Cauſe of all is, in the laſt vvords Adorare Eum, to Worſhip Him. That, is all in all: And vvithout it, all our ſeeing, comming, ſeeking, and finding is to no purpoſe. The Scribes they could tell, and did tell, where He vvas; but, vvere never the nearer for it: For, they worſhiped Him not. For this End to ſeek Him.

Ver. 16.

This is acknovvledged: Herod (in effect) ſaid as much. He vvould knovv, vvhere He vvere (ſain) and, if they vvill bring him vvord where, he vvill come too and vvorſhip Him, that he vvill. None of that worſhip. If vve find Him, his Worſhiping vvill prove Worrying, as did appear by a ſort of ſilly poor Lambs, that he vvorried vvhen he could not have his vvill on CHRIST. Thus he, at his Birth.

And at His death, the other Herod he ſought him too: but it vvas, that he and his Souldiers might make themſelves ſport vvith Him. Such ſeeking there is other vvhile. And ſuch worſhiping as they, in the Judgment Hall, vvorſhiped Him vvith Ave Rex, and then gave Him a bob blind-fold. The VVorlds worſhip of Him, for the moſt part.

Luke 13. 32.

But we may be bold to ſay, Herod was a fox. Theſe mean as they ſay: to worſhip Him they come, and vvorſhip Him they will. Will they ſo? be they vvell adviſed, what they promiſe, before they know, whether they ſhall find Him in a worſhipful taking, or no? For, full little know they, Where, and in what caſe, they ſhall find Him. What if in a ſtable, laid there in a manger, and the reſt ſuitable to it; in as poor and pitiful a plight as ever was any: More like to be abhorred than adored of ſuch Perſons? Will they be as good as their word (trow?) VVill they not ſtep back at the ſight, repent themſelves of their journey, and wiſh themſelves at home again? But, ſo find Him, and ſo finding Him, worſhip Him for all that? If they will, verily then, great is their faith. This, is the cleareſt beam of all.

Mat. 12. 42.

The Queen of the South, (who was a figure of theſe Kings of the Eaſt) ſhe came as great a journey, as theſe. But when ſhe came, ſhe found a King indeed, King Salomon in all his Royalty. Saw a glorious King, and a glorious Court about him. Saw him, and heard him: Tryed him, with many hard queſtions, received ſatisfaction of them all. This, was worth her comming. VVeigh, what ſhe found, and what theſe here: As poor and unlikely a birth, as could be, ever to prove a King, or any great matter. No ſight, to comfort them; Nor a word, for which they any whit the wiſer: Nothing worth their travel. VVeigh theſe together, and great ods will be found between her faith, and theirs. Theirs, the greater far.

VVell, they will take Him, as they find Him: And, all this notwithſtanding, worſhip Him for all that. The ſtar will make amends for the Manger: And, for ſtella Ejus, they will diſpenſe with Eum.

And, what is it to worſhip? Some greater matter (ſure,) it is, that heaven and earth, the ſtars and the Prophets (thus) do but ſerve to lead them, and conduct us to. For, all we (ſee) ends in Adorare: Scriptura & Mundus ad hoc ſunt, ut colatur qui creavit & adoretur qui inſpiravit; The Scripture and World are but to this end, that He, that created the one, and inſpired the other, might be but worſhiped. Such reckoning did theſe ſeem to make of it, here. And ſuch, the Great Treaſurer of the Queen Candace. Theſe came from the Mountains of the Eaſt; He, from the uttermoſt part of Æthiopia came, and came for no other but only this, To worſhip: and, when they had done, then home again. Tanti eſt adorare. VVorth the while, worth our comming, if (comming) we do but that; but worſhip, and nothing elſe. And ſo I would have men accompt of it.

Acts 8. 27.

To tell you what it is in particular. I muſt put you over to the 11. Verſe, where it is ſet down, what they did, when they worſhiped. It is ſet down in two acts Προσκυνῆσαι, and Προσφέρειν; Falling down and Offering. Thus did they; thus we to do: We to do the like, when we will worſhip. Theſe two are all: and more than theſe, we find not.

We can worſhip GOD but three wayes: we have but three things, to worſhip him withal: ' The Soul He hath inſpired; ' The Body, He hath ordained us; ' And, the Worldly goods, He hath vouchſafed to bleſſe us withal. VVe, to worſhip Him, with all, ſeeing there is but one reaſon for all.

If He breathed into us our Soul, but framed not our body (but ſome other did that) Neither bow your knee, nor uncover your head, but keep on your hats, and ſit even as you do hardly. But, if he have framed that body of yours, and every member of it, let him have the honour both of head, and knee, and every member elſe.

Again, if it be not He, that gave us our worldly goods, but ſome body elſe; what He gave not, that with-hold from Him, and ſpare not. But, if all came from Him, all to return to Him: If He ſend all, to be worſhiped with all. And this (in good ſooth) is but Rationabile obſequium (as the Apoſtle cals it.) No more, than Reaſon would, we ſhould worſhip Him withal.

Rom. 12. 1.

Elſe, if all our worſhip be inward onely; with our hearts, and not our hatts, (as ſome fondly imagine) we give Him but one of three. VVe put Him to His Thirds; Bid Him, be content with that, He gets no more but inward worſhip. That is out of the Text, quite. For, though (I doubt not, but) theſe here performed that alſo; yet, here it is not: St. Matthew mentions it not: It is not to be ſeen: No Vidimus on it. And the Text is a Vidimus; and, of a Starre; that is, of an Outward viſible worſhip, to be ſeen of all. There is a Vidimus upon the worſhip of the Body, it may be ſeen: Procidentes. Let us ſee you fall down. So is there, upon the worſhip with our worldly goods, that may be ſeen and felt: Offerentes. Let us ſee, whether, and what you offer, with both which (no leſſe, than with the ſoul) GOD is to be worſhiped. Glorifie GOD with your bodies, for they are GODS (ſaith the Apoſtle.)

Ho-

Honour GOD with your ſubſtance; for he hath bleſſed your ſtore (ſaith SOLOMON) It is the precept of a wiſe King; of one, there: It is the practiſe of more than one, of theſe three, here. Specially, now: For, CHRIST hath now a body; for which, to do Him worſhip with our bodies. And, now, He was made poor, to make us rich: and ſo, offerdutes will do well, comes very fit. 1 Cor. 6. 20. Prov. 3. 9.

To enter further into theſe two, would be too long; (and indeed, they be not in our Verſe here:) And ſo, for ſome other treatiſe, at ſome other time.

There now remaines nothing, but to include our ſelves, and bear our part with them, and with the Angels, and all who this day adored Him.

This was the Load-ſtar of the Magi: and what were they? Gentiles: So are we. But, it muſt be ours, then we are to go with them: Vade, & fac ſimiliter, Goe, and do likewiſe. It is Stella gentium; but idem agentium: The Gentiles ſtar; but ſuch Gentiles, as overtake theſe and keep company with them. In their [Dicentes,] confeſſing their faith freely: In their [Vidimus] Grounding it throughly: It their [Venimus] Haſting to come to Him ſpeedily; In their [Ubi eſt] Enquiring Him out diligently: And in their [Adorare eum] Worſhipping him devoutly. Per omnia, doing as theſe did: Worſhiping, and thus worſhiping; Celebrating, and thus celebrating the Feaſt of His BIRTH. The Application. Luke 10. 37.

We cannot ſay, Vidimus ſtellam: The ſtar is gone long ſince; Not (now) to be ſeen. Yet (I hope for all that, that, Venimus adorare, we be come thither to worſhip. It will be the more acceptable, if not ſeeing it, we worſhip (though). It is enough, we read of it in the Text; we ſee it, there. And indeed (as I ſaid;) it skills not for the ſtar in the firmament, if the ſame day-ſtar be riſen in our hearts, that was in theirs; and the ſame beams of it to be ſeen, all five. For then, we have our part in it, no leſſe; nay, full as much as they: And, it will bring us whither it brought them, to CHRIST. Who, at His ſecond appearing in glory, ſhall call forth theſe wiſe men, and all that have enſued the ſteps of their Faith; and that upon the reaſon ſpecified in the Text: For, I have ſeen their ſtar ſhining and ſhewing forth it ſelf by the like beames: And as they came to worſhip me, ſo am I come to do them worſhip. A Venite then; for a Venimus, now. Their ſtar I have ſeen, and give them a place above among the ſtars. They fell down: I will lift them up, and exalt them. And, as they offered to me; ſo am I come to beſtow on them and to reward them, with endleſs joy, and bliſs, and of my Heavenly Kingdom. To which, &c.

A SERMON PREACHED

Before the

Kings Maiesty

At WHITE-HALL, on Thursday the XXV. of Decemb. Anno Domini, MDCXXIII, being CHRIST MASSE Day.

EPHES. Chap. I. Verse X.

In dispensatione plenitudinis temporum, instaurare omnia, in CHRISTO, quæ in cœlis, & quæ in terra sunt, in Ipso.

That in the dispensation of the fulness of the times, He might gather together into one all things, both which are in Heaven, and which are in Earth, even in CHRIST.

SEeing the Text is of Seasons, it would not be out of season it self. And though it be never out of season to speak of CHRIST, yet even CHRIST hath His seasons. Your time is alwayes (saith He, Iohn VII.) So is not mine; I have my seasons. One of which seasons is this; the season of his Birth, whereby all were recapitulate in Heaven and Earth: which is the season of the Text. And so, this, a Text of the season.

Iohn 7. 6.

There is (for the most part) in each Text some one Predominant word. That word (in this) is the word ἀνακεφαλαιόσασθαι, here turned gathering together into one again. To know the nature and full force of it, we may consider it three wayes, [1] As it is properly taken: [2] As it is extended: [3] As it is derived.

1. As it is taken properly. So, it signifies to make the foot of an account. We call it the foot, because we write it below at the foot: They of old writ theirs above over the head, and so called it κεφάλαιον: In Capite libri Scriptum est de me: the summe in the top.

2. As it is extended. So, it is the ſhort recapitulation of a long Chapter; the compendium of a book, or of ſome diſcourſe. Theſe are all like the foot of an Account, and are uſually called, the Summe of all that hath been ſaid. Pſal. 40. 8.

3. As it is derived: So ſhall we have the native ſenſe of it. It comes of κεφαλαῖον, and that of κεφαλὴ (Greek for a head.) Beſt expreſſed in the word recapitulate; that is, to reduce all to a head. Each of theſe is gathering together into one (as, we read.) Which of the three, you take; nay, take them all three, you cannot do amiſs. They be all true: all tend to edifie. CHRIST is the [1] Summe of our account; [2] The ſhutting up of our diſcourſe; [3] The Head of the body Myſtical, whereto this gathering (here) is. We ſhall make no good audit without Him: no nor good Apology. VVhatſoever be the premiſſes, with CHRIST we muſt conclude; As we do the year with Chriſt-maſs, ſo conclude with in CHRISTO. Col. 1. 18. Eph. 4. 15, 16.

Two parts here be: [1] Seaſons, firſt; Seaſons, more then one. [2] Here is a fulneſs of them: [3] Here is a diſpenſation of that fulneſs: [4] And that by GOD, That He (that is, GOD) That in the diſpenſation of the fulneſs of times, He might. This is the firſt part. I

The Things. For firſt, here are all things: Things in heaven, Things on earth; All, in both. 2. Of theſe, a collection or gathering them all together: or rather a Recollection or gathering them together again. 3. A gathering them all into one: All into one κεφαλαίωσις, one Summe; Or all to one κεφαλὴ one head: and theſe two are one; and that one is CHRIST. II

You obſerve, that as the things anſwer the ſeaſons, and the ſeaſons them; So doth the fulneſs anſwer the gathering, and the gathering, it. To fill the ſeaſons, to make a fulneſs of them, here is a gathering. 2. A gathering, whereof? Of all in heaven, and all on earth (a great gathering ſure, and able to fill the ſeaſons up to the brim.) 3. But, this is not a gathering at the firſt hand, but a gathering againe; that is a-new, at ſecond hand. 4. A gathering, whereto? to one: One, either one ſumme, or one head (both are in the body of the word:) and theſe two are one, and that one is CHRIST. 5. A gathering, how? (that is in the word too:) By way of contracting or recapitulation. 6. And when? When GOD diſpenſed it; and that is at CHRISTS Birth. 7. Now laſt, what are we the better by this gathering, what fruit we gather by or from it, what our ſhare is in this Summe, which is Summa dividanda. 8. And then how we may be the better for it: if we divide, as GOD; and when GOD did it: 9. As GOD, gather things in Heaven, firſt: 10. When GOD; and that is, this ſeaſon of the year, the gathering time, with GOD, and with us. So ſhall we diſpenſe the ſeaſon well.

Find the things, they will bring you to the ſeaſon: find the fulneſs of things, you ſhall find the fulneſs of ſeaſons. Find the gathering, you ſhall find the fulneſs: find CHRIST, and you ſhall find the gathering (for the gathering is full and whole, in CHRIST.) So, upon the point find CHRIST, and find all. And this is the firſt day, we can find Him; for this day, was He born, and ſo firſt to be found by us.

VVE have heretofore dealt with the * fulneſs of time: and now are we to deal with the fulneſs of ſeaſon. Time and Seaſon are two, and have in all tongues two different words to ſhew they differ. In Hebrew זמן and עת, in Greek, χρόνος and καιρός; in Latine, Tempus, and tempeſtivum. I

1 Tempora, the Seaſons: * At Chriſtmaſs, A. D. 1609.

And, differ they do as much, as a time, and a good time. It is time alway, all the year long: So is it not ſeaſon, but when the good time is. Time taken at large, any time: Seaſon, not ſo; but is applyed to that with which it ſuits, or for which it ſerves beſt. Here, it is applied to gathering: the ſeaſon of gathering.

Theſe ſeaſons be καιρῶν in the plural: for, Ut res, ita tempora rerum; as the things to be gathered are many, ſo are the Seaſons, wherein they are to be gathered, many likewiſe. Each, his ſeveral ſeaſon, to be gathered in.

Now, as the things (Res) have their Autumn of maturity: So (tempora) the Seaſons have their fulneſs: And, when the things are ripe, and ready to be gathered, then is the ſeaſon full. 2 Their fulneſs.

Now, of theſe ſeaſons and their fulneſs, there is a diſpenſation, an Oeconomia (the word in the Text) which is a word of Husbandry; a great part whereof conſiſteth in the skill of ſeaſons; of taking them when they come, allotting the thing to the ſeaſon, and the ſeaſon to it. 3 The diſpenſation.

Which diſpenſation is here aſcribed to GOD: That He (that is) that GOD in whoſe hands our times are (ſaith the Pſalm) and our ſeaſons, both. He that can make them, full, by giving us kindly ſeaſons; or empty, by making them unſeaſonable: and having made them full, is to diſpoſe of them, very right. There is none of theſe but is ſenſible in the courſe of the year, in things upon earth. 4 The Diſpenſer, GOD. Pſ. 104. 27, 28. Pſ. 145. 15, 16.

But are there ſeaſons for the things on earth and their fulneſs, and are there not alſo ſeaſons for the things in heaven, and for the filling of them? All, for reliefe of the bodily wants here below; none or the ſupply of ſpiritual neceſſities above? All, for the body, and never a ſeaſon for the ſoul? If we allow them to the World, ſhall we not to the Church, the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, or abridgement of the world? If it be ſenſible in the natural things; (though not ſo eaſily diſcerned, yet) it is as certaine in the main revolution of Annus Magnus, the great periodical year of the VVorlds endurance.

It can never enter into any man, to think, that the great Oeconomus or Steward of this great houſ-
Eccleſ. 3. 1. hold (the VVorld) ſhould ſo far forget Himſelf, but if for all matters He had appointed a ſeaſon, then for the greateſt matter: if for every purpoſe under heaven; then, for the higheſt purpoſe of all, that (as we ſee) concerneth all the things in heaven, and earth, both. Above Salus populi (this) Salus mundi, the ſaving the whole world. Shall not theſe have their ſeaſons, and the ſeaſons their fulneſs there, and that fulneſs the due diſpenſation (of all other) moſt worthy of GOD, the greateſt work, of the greateſt perſon? Set this down then (to begin with:) There are ſeaſons; as in our common year (of twelve months:) So, in the great year, whereof, every day is a year (by Daniels) nay, a
2 Pet. 3. 8. thouſand years, (by St. Peters calculation.)

Mar. 4. 28. And which be the ſeaſons, and when, in the common year? Our Saviour, ſets them down (Mar. 4.) 1. The ſeaſon, when the earth bringeth forth the blade. 2. VVhen, the ſtalk. 3. VVhen, the ear. 4. VVhen, the full corn in the ear. And when the ear is full, and full ripe, the ſeaſon is full: then,
Pſal. 129. 7. is the ſeaſon of fulneſs, the fulneſs of ſeaſon. Then, the reaper fills his hand, and he that bindeth up
Prov. 3. 10. the ſheaves, his boſome: Then, are the Barns filled with plenty; and the Preſſes run over with new wine. And when all is full, then, to gathering we go.

Such like ſeaſons do we find in Anno Magno: [1] The time of Nature, all in the blade: [2] Of Moſes, in the Stalk: [3] of the Prophets in the ear: [4] And, when the full corn? VVhen, but at this great gathering here mentioned. VVhen all in heaven, and all in earth gathered, (I think) was the fulneſs of things (plenitudo rerum:) and the fulneſs of Seaſons (plenitudo temporum) may be allowed for it.

II.

1. Res: the things. This ſets us over to the ſecond part, from the Seaſons to the things; from the fulneſs of ſeaſons, to the gathering of things. And firſt, whereof, of what things? of τὰ πάντα, even all. All: And (to ſhew the extent of it) ſubdivided, into all in heaven, all in earth: and that (I trow) is All. It was not amiſs, he would thus ſever them, and expreſs things in heaven by name: Elſe, we ſhould little have thought of gathering things there ſo high. No farther then earth, we: There is all our gathering;
Coloſ. 3. 1, 2. and there onely. The Apoſtle points up to heaven (ſurſum corda) to lift up our hearts, to ſet our affections on things there, above; to gather them. There is a gathering of them, alſo.

Of which gathering into one, I know not what the things in heaven have; the things in earth (I am ſure) have good cauſe to be glad. In heaven is all good, and nothing but good. In earth, to ſay the leaſt, there is much evil. Yet upon the reckoning, Heaven is like to come by the loſs: we (on earth) are ſenſible gainers by it. It is a good hearing for us, that both theſe ſhall be thus gathered together. For, if heaven and earth be ſo gathered, it is, that heaven may advance earth higher; and no meaning, that earth ſhould draw it down hither. Magis dignum ſemper ad ſe trahit minus dignum, is the old rule.

2. The gathering. But well; between them both here is a great gathering toward; well expreſſed by the Apoſtle, in the terms of a Summe. For, it is Summa ſummarum, a ſumme indeed; Heaven and earth, and the fulneſs of them both.

All theſe to be gathered, and well. Gathering, GOD favours: for it ends in Unity, To gather into one: and Unity GOD loves, Himſelf being principalis Unitas. GOD favours it ſure; Himſelf is the gatherer, ſcattering GOD favours not; that tends to diviſion, and diviſion upon diviſion. Gathering it good for us: Unity preſerves; diviſion deſtroyes. Diviſum eſt (be it houſe, or be it king- Mat. 12. 25. dom) ever ends in deſolabitur. GOD delights not in deſtruction, would have none to periſh. The Ezek. 33. 12. 2 Pet. 3. 9. kite, he ſcatters: The hen, how faign would ſhe gather.

3. Gathering again. But ſtay a while, and take with us what kind of gathering? it is not κεφαλαίωσις, a gathering, but ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, a gathering together again: (We muſt not loſe Ἀνά, there is force in it.) It is not a Collection, but a Recollection. Re imports, it is a new Collection again; the ſecond time. You ſee it in re-call, re-turn, re-duce; that is, to call, turn, bring back again.

Now our rule is, Ἀνά, ever preſuppoſeth ἀπὸ; ἀνακεφαλαίωσις preſuppoſeth ἀποκεφαλαίωσις: that is, a returning to, implies a departing from: a gathering together again, a ſcattering in ſunder before: a diſpenſation, a diſſipation. So, a diſſipation, a departure, a ſcattering there had been.

Yet one degree more, ἀπὸ (that is, from) ever implies σὺν, that is, a former being with. One cannot be ſaid to be gone from, that was never with, or to fall out, that was never in: One cannot be ſaid to be ſo again, that was never ſo before. So then, together we were firſt, and in ſunder we fell after. VVhich falling in ſunder, required an ἀνά, to bring us together again; to reſtore us to that the ſe-
Acts 3. 22. cond time, that we had before loſt, to our former eſtate. It is S. Peter's word [reſtoring] the ſame with S. Paul's [gathering together again] here.

Now theſe three ſet forth unto us our threefold eſtate: [1] Together (σὺν) our firſt original, which we had in Adam, while he ſtood with GOD together. [2] In ſunder (ἀπὸ) there came our miſery, by Adams not keeping his firſt eſtate, but ſcattering from GOD. [3] But then comes Ἀνά about, and makes all well again, by bringing us where we were at the firſt. There was a former Capitulation; The Articles were broken: then came this Recapitulation (here) anew: An account was caſt, but it was miſ-caſt; and ſo it is here caſt new over again.

But when all is done, Ἀνά is it, we muſt hold by. The firſt is gone: All periſhed, by being ſcattered

ſcattered from. All muſt be recovered, by being gathered to again: Our ſeparation, Our ruine; Our Reparation, our Aye, our gathering again: And not ours alone, but Salus mundi, of all in heaven, all in earth.

But this we may ſee (by the way,) what caſe, all were in: [2] what caſe, all are in ſtill, that lie looſe and ungathered, and whom Aye hath not recollected again.

VVe ſee, what and how gathered: Now (quo?) the next point is, whereto? Into one. Every thing, that is gathered, is ſo. But, there is more ones, than one, one heap, as of ſtones: One flock, as of ſheep: One pile, as of the materials of a building. All are good: but to take the word in the Native ſenſe, the gathering, here, is either to one κεφαλαιον, one Summe (as many members:) Or (to go neerer) to one κεφαλη, one Head (as many members;) and, that is it, the Apoſtle purſueth to the Chapters end. Both theſe (Summe, and Head) are in the body of the word ἀνακεφαλαιωσις; and they both ſerve, and ſuit well. The body: the Head is (as it were) the Summe of all; all [3] ſenſe, [2] motion, [3] ſpeech, [4] underſtanding, all recapitulate into the Head. This (of Head, or Summe) fitteth it beſt. For, (to ſpeak properly) many heaps, flocks, piles, there may be: Head there can be but one. Deratione capitis eſt, unum eſſe. And ſo, of a ſumme: but one true ſumme, were there never ſo many, ſo divers wayes caſt. 4. Into one.

So then, into one, that is not enough; it is not co-adunation will ſerve. It is recapitulation, and, in that word, there is Caput: it is ἀνακεφαλαιωσις, and in that word there is κεφαλη, ſuch a reducing all to one, as that one be the Head. A headleſs gathering, the Apoſtle cannot skill of. And indeed, ſay there were an entire body, ond every member in his right place, and all ſtrictly knit together; yet if the head ſhould hap to be away, as good the members all in ſunder, for all were to no purpoſe. So, a Head or nothing.

This gathering then (you ſee) is to the chief Member; to the Member, that weares the Crown. Thither, upward, the true gathering goes. There is an Union downwards; (as of Sampſon's Foxes, that were together by the tailes;) That, is not the right: but, by the head. The Oxen that plough, are joyned together by the head. The Foxes, that are tied by the tailes, they ſet all on fire. The Unity of the head GOD ſend us: That, is the true Unity. Eſay 7.9.

And yet are we not where we ſhould. VVe may gather upward too, and make a head, and not the right head. That, to a head, is not enough, if it fall out to be but a wrong head (ſuppoſe Romelie's Son) Humano capiti, &c. do but paint (ſaith the Poet) any body, with a wrong head, it will but move laughter and ſcorn. The right, the own head it would be. A ſtrange head will not ſuit, nor do us any ſtead. The right head, then.

And which is the right head? He addes: Recapitulati in Chriſto; it is Chriſt. There (lo) is the right head, now. To that, let all gather.

And now we are arrived at Chriſt, we are, where we ſhould; our gathering is at the beſt. All in heaven; All in earth: gathered together: together again: Again into one. One Summe, whereof Chriſt is the Foot: One body, whereof Chriſt is the Head. Gather then, and be gathered to Him: Gather then, and be gathered with Him: He that gathereth not with Him ſcattereth. Luke 11.23.

And ſo were all, ſcattered without Chriſt; till he came with his Aye, and got them again together. The ſeaſons were (all) empty; The things, all on heaps.

Things in heaven, from things in earth; Angels with drawn ſwords at men: Things on earth, from things in heaven; Men, at but the ſight of an Angel, ready to fall down dead. The members, from the head; the head from the members: The members one from another: Neither union with the head, nor among themſelves. Peccata veſtra, it was ſin, that divided between GOD and them; and, divided once and divided ever, divided in ſemper inviſibilia, till they were quite paſt all diviſion: No longer divided (now) but even ſcattered. The caſe of the world, then. Gen.3.24. Iud.13.22. Ier.5.25.

Scattered in point of Religion: Gods ſcattered all over; as many gods as Cities: All the Hoſt of heaven; all the beaſts and creeping things of the earth. Ier.2.28.

Scattered, in point of morality, or moral Philoſophy: I know not, how many ſcattered opinions Auguſtine reckons, de Summo Bono, the chief point of all.

The Iewes ſcattered from the Gentiles, and the Gentiles from the Iewes: A maine Wall between. Epheſ.2.14.

The Gentiles ſcattered from themſelves groſly; all in fractions, they. Nothing of a Body; Never a head: and yet many heads, but never a right one among them all.

No, not the Iewes themſelves: For, the Tabernacle of David was then down, and the ruines of it ſcattered into many Sects (as the Prophet Amos complaines. And Saint Iames alledgeth it out of him, (*Act.*15.) In a word: the whole world then was but a maſs of errors, a Chaos of confuſion, Tohu and Bohu: empty and void of all ſaving grace or truth. Well likened, to them that were ſcattered at the tower of Babel, where no man underſtood another: or to the people that were ſcattered all over the land of Egypt, to gather ſtubble, to pick up ſtraws. All (then) wandring hither and thither, and ſeeking death, in the error of their life. By all which, you ſee, what need there was of this gathering, this ἀνακεφαλαιωσις. Amos 9.11. Act.15.16. תוהו ובוהו Gen.2.2. Gen.11.8. Exod.5.12. Wiſdom.1.12.

Now then, if, for the diviſions of Reuben, there were great thoughts of heart (as it is in Deboras ſong) for but one Tribe ſcattered from the reſt; ſhall there be no thought or courſe taken for theſe; ſuch, ſo general, ſo many (not diviſions, but plaine diſpertions) ſcatterings all abroad? Iud.5.15.

Great pity, that all these should lie thus loose and ungathered, as if they were not worth the taking up.
Ioh. 5.12. He that (in John 6.) took order for the broken meat, for the fragments; willed them to be gathered, ἵνα μὴ τι ἀπόληται, that nothing might be lost, no not of them; He (certainly) were no good Oeconomus, if He would let all these be lost for lack of gathering.

But could not this gathering be absque Christo, in some other? It appears, no. Seasons there were more then one, but all empty: profers were made in them, but nothing full, nor any thing neer full.

A season of the Law unwritten: Then came the Patriarchs. But they had much adoe to keep themselves from scattering: they gathered none.

A season of the Law written: Then, the Priests and Levites; but the gathering little the fuller for them.

Then came all the Prophets: To no great purpose they neither: Some few Proselytes they made,
Luk. 10.31,32. that was all. But in the end, all these (as they in the Parable of the wounded man,) passed by, looked on him, but let him lie: Little was done, till the good Samaritane came. The things in heaven and earth (the generality of them, so) in not much better case for all these, could not be recapitulate, in the Patriarchs, Moses, the Prophets. So that to this plunge it was come, that the Psalmist even asked Psal. 89.47. Heb. 10.37. God, Wherefore hast thou made all men for nought? It was time for him to come, Qui venturus erat.

It was time; More than time, when that which was the onely known way (when one was scattered
1 Sam. 26.19. from God; how to gather him to God again, which was, Let him smell a sacrifice;) when that grew
Psal. 40.6. out of season, when that failed. And that it did. Sacrifice; burnt offering; burnt offerings for sin (sin, that made all the scattering) noluisti (that is plain) thou wouldst not; (It is Christ now speaketh) then said I, lo I come. I of whom it is written, ἐν κεφαλίδι, in the top or front of the book, that I should fulfil thy will, and gather these together again. Lo, I come to do it.

By this Ecce venio of His, a way was found, those that were thus distracted and scattered before, how to bring them together again. What way was that? It follows in the same place, what he meant by Ecce venio. He goes it over again; No sacrifice thou wouldest; No: Corpus autem aptasti, But Psal. 40.6. Heb. 10.20. a body hast thou ordained me. The Incorporating Christ, the ordaining Him a Body, that is, the new and living way, through the vaile, that is his flesh. With that He comes this day, and gathers all again.

5 The manner Recapitulando. Act. 10.12. How, or in what manner, that? The manner is set down in the Word: by way of Recapitulation. We are not to conceive, there was such a great Sheet, as S. Peter saw let down from heaven (Act. 10.) and that all these were put into it, and so gathered. No: it was recapitulando, by reducing to lesse roome (as we do many diffused matters to a few heads) as we contract great Maps, to a small compass; as great plots, to a small module: for, that is (properly) to recapitulate. There are two words in the verse, set it out well: [1] εἰλημάτη, and [2] κεφαλαῖον. Πλήρωμα, this fulness will come into a little κεφαλαῖον, as the particulars of many leaves come into a Total of not halfe a line.

If then we be to proceed by way of recapitulation, then are we to reduce all to heads. So let us reduce these things to these two heads: [1] First, Heaven, and all in it, to God; Earth, and all in it, to Man. Gather these two into one, and there is the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις in short. To conceive it the better, you shall understand, this was on a good way onward, before. You have heard man called the little World, the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, of the great one, a compendium of all the creatures. And so he is, of both. He participates with the Angels, and so with things in heaven, by His soul. He participates with the elements, and so with things on earth, by His Body. The Poet had it by the end: Fertur Prometheus, &c. That to the making of mans body, there went a piece of every of the creatures. So, there was in man, a kind of recapitulation before.

But, that was not full: yet lacked there one thing. All in heaven were not gathered into man. Of God we say, Qui es in coelis: He was one of the things in heaven, and He was out all the while. But, if He could be gathered in too, then were it a full gathering indeed, All, in heaven, recapitulate into one; that is, GOD: All, in earth, recapitulate into one; that is, Man. Gather these two now, and all are gathered: all the things in either. And now at this last and great Recollection of GOD and Man; and in them, of Heaven and Earth; and in them, of all in Heaven and Earth; are all recapitulate into the unity of one entire Person. And how? Not so, as they were gathered at first; Not, as the κεφαλαίωσις (the first gathering) so the ἀνακεφαλαίωσις (the second gathering.) When things are at the best, God and Man were two in number: Now, God and Man is but one in CHRIST. So the gathering, nearer then before: So, surer then before: So every way better then before.

In Man, there was onward an abridgment of all the rest. Gather GOD and Him into one, and so you have all. There is nothing, not any thing, in Heaven or Earth, left out. Heaven is in, and earth: the creatures in heaven and earth; the Creator of heaven and earth. All are in now: All (reconciled as it were) in one mass, all hast into one summe: Recapitulate (indeed) truly and properly.

1 Cor. 15.27. Herein is the fulness, that God Himself comes into this κεφάλαιον. The Apostle (1 Cor. 15.) where the Psalm saith [He hath put all things in subjection under his feet;] It is manifest (saith the Apostle) that he was accepted, that so put them under: But here it is manifest (say we) that He is not accepted, that did gather; but, He (the very Collector is, in this Collection, Himself and all.

2 Cor. 5.19. Col. 2.9. 1.21,22. For, GOD was in CHRIST reconciling the world: The world, that is, all things; All in heaven, all in earth. And, in CHRIST did dwel the fulness of the Godhead bodily, when he did so reconcile them, in the body of his flesh. In a word: certain it is, that, by vertue of this recapitulation, we are one with CHRIST; CHRIST, as Man: GOD is one with CHRIST, CHRIST as GOD. So, in CHRIST, GOD and Man are one. And, there is good hope, they that are one, will soon be at one: where unity is, union will be had with no great adoe.

And

And even beſides this, there is yet another Recapitulation; that, well might it have that name. For (if you mark it,) it is not Recapitation, but Recapitulation; and that comes of Capitulum; which is a Diminutive. So was it: verbum in principio, the eternal, mighty, great Word became verbum abbreviatum, as the Apoſtle ſaith (*Rom.*10.) to bring this to paſs. He; that the heavens are but his ſpan abbreviate into a Child of a ſpan long: He, that Caput the Head of men and Angels, principalities and powers, became capitulum: He that κεφαλὴ, κεφαλαῖον, a little diminutive head; Head? Nay, became the foot, Pes computi (the Text is) the Foot, the loweſt part of the accompt; and of the loweſt accompt. Rom. 10.18. Eſay 40.12.

And now (becauſe we are in Seaſons, we ſpeak of Seaſons.) When was this, at what ſeaſon of the year? when was it, that he was ſo capite minutus? Sure, never leſs, never ſo little, never ſo minorated, ſo minimated (I am ſure) as now. When was Ecce venio fulfilled? we may know that, by all the four Sundayes in Advent now paſt, that, to day, it is Ecce venio. His coming, the Pſalm expounds, by ordaining him a body: A body there was ordained Him in the Womb: But, to us things are, when they appear. That, though the Word were made fleſh before, yet God was not manifeſted in the fleſh; came not and dwelt among us viſibly to be ſeen, till this day. So that, if you ask [of In CHRISTO] what, or when? In CHRISTO nato, then, was this gathering of things in heaven, and earth. The Seaſon when. Pſal. 40.7. Joh. 1.14.

And in ſign it was then, look there comes a Quire of Angels down, there comes a new Star forth to repreſent the things in Heaven: there comer together a ſort of Shepherds, and there is gathering to them a troop of great Princes from the Eaſt, to repreſent the things on earth, which conſiſt (as theſe do) of high and low, noble and baſe, wiſe and ſimple: All, to celebrate, and make ſhew of this gathering, of this great πλήρωμα, into this ſmall κεφαλαῖον. And in their heavenly Hymne, there is mention of this gathering: In excelſis, and in terris ſet together; as if, all (in both) were now in full and perfect harmony. Luke 2.13. Mat. 2.1. Luke 14.

Now, when the ſeaſons travelled with, at laſt brought forth Him, that was the beſt thing, they had or ſhould ever bring forth when they were at the beſt. When Him, in whom it pleaſed the FATHER, all fulneſs ſhould dwell, then were they at the full. The gathering of the things, ſo full, as it made plenitudo rerum: The gathering of the ſeaſons, ſo full, as it made plenitudo temporum. And ſo have we brought both parts, (ſeaſons and things) together.

The Summe is at the foot: the Oration at the period; the Building, at the head ſtone, the Tide, at the full: the fulneſs of the Gentiles are come into his Church, which is his Body, the fulneſs of Him, that that filleth all in all. Rom. 11.25. Verſ. 23.

The Application of the text to the time, & to us.

But, why God, in the diſpenſation of the ſeaſons, did ſo order, that at ſuch a year of the world, ſuch a month of the year, ſuch a day of the month, this ſhould fall out juſt, this is more, than I dare take upon me to define. But this I may: that the Chriſtian world hath ever obſerved divers good congruities of this Feaſt, with this Text.

The Text is of Recapitulation: The Feaſt is ſo. Twelve months recapitulate to twelve dayes. Six for the old; in ſix dayes was the creation of the old. And, when the old things are paſt, as many for the new; For, behold all things are new; And, if any be in Chriſt he is a new Creature. But theſe recapitulate in one ſeaſon equally divided. Equally divided between both: yet ſo, as the days of the laſt are ſet before the firſt, that ſo erunt noviſſimi primi is verified even of the ſeaſon, and the laſt, firſt, there alſo. 2 Cor. 5.17. Mat. 19.30

The Text is of a gathering: and that falls fit with the ſeaſon; and giveth us great cauſe to admire the high wiſdom of God, in the diſpenſation of ſeaſons; That now at this ſeaſon, when we gather nothing, when nothing groweth to be gathered, there ſhould be a gathering (yet) and a great one: nay, the greateſt gathering that ever was, or will be: And ſo by that means, the pooreſt and emptieſt ſeaſon in natures, become the fulleſt and richeſt in grace.

Now we do, our ſelves (in effect) expreſs as much as this comes to. For we alſo make it a ſeaſon of gathering together, of neighbourly meetings and invitations. Wherein we come together, and both (our ſelves) have, and we make each other partakers of what we have gathered, all the yeare before.

In which ſenſe alſo, we may call it the ſeaſon of diſpenſation; in that we then diſpenſe the bleſſings, God hath ſent us; and that is in good houſe-keeping, and hoſpitality.

And (if you will) of fulneſs too. For, the moſt part do then uſe to be better filled, and with better fare, that are not ſo full again all the year beſide. That one may truly ſay, there is more fulneſs in this ſeaſon, than any other. And ſo it is the ſeaſon of fulneſs then; For the hungry are then filled with good things; then of all the ſeaſons of the year. Pſal. 107.9.

And laſt, there is in the Text (and it is the main word in the Text) ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, which (in the Primitive ſenſe) is the making the foot of an accompt: which agreeth well with the foot of the yeare, for, at the foot of the leaſe Summes uſe to be ſet. Set it at the head, or ſet it at the foot; it is the foot of the Old, and the head of the New: and ſo the fitteſt ſeaſon to celebrate it in. For, be it head, or be it foot, Chriſt it is. So, recapitulation, or gathering, fulneſs, or diſpenſation, or ſumming all up, the Text is ſeaſonable.

In heavenly things.

But, theſe (I have ſpoke of) are of things on earth. Were it not to be wiſhed, we would endeavour to have ſome fruition, and to gather ſome fruit, for the heavenly part from this gathering, this ſumming up of Chriſts?

Chriſt is but κεφαλαῖον, a ſhort ſumme; but there is in Him πλήρωμα, a fulneſs of all: Chriſt is but the Contents of a Chapter, ſome three or four lines; but a great long Chapter follows, long and large

Cant.6.13. large. For, what ſhall you ſee in this Shulamite, but Choros Caſtrorum, legions, whole armies of good things, to gather. Such, ſo great a ſum, as twelve dayes will not ſerve to caſt them up. But, yet, ſomewhat let us gather, that the ſeaſons being full, we our ſelves be not to be ſent empty away.

Our accompting. The time failes: I will therefore name but one; and that (the main word of the text) ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, which referreth properly to the making up an account. The Fathers, taking the Verſe into their conſiderations, pitch upon it: (As S. Ierome, who thinks it choſen of purpoſe to that end.) But, the word and thing both, we may have good uſe of, ſeeing we all are to be Accomptants (Redde rationem, ſaid to us all:) ſeeing, to an accompt we muſt all come.

Luke 16.2. And thus he followeth it, goes no further than the text, for the particulars of our accompt; makes them conſiſt of quæ in cœlis, and quæ in terris. Which two, as they are principally taken for the creatures in both; So may they alſo (and not amiſs) be taken, for the things done in them both. Specially, our gatherings in them referring to either.

1 For, quæ in cœlis. Act.10.4. Things in heaven, to ſtand for our good deeds, our alms, faſts, and prayers, that aſcend up thither, (the Angel tells Cornelius ſo,) and will receive us up thither into everlaſting Tabernacles. Of which gather we as many as we can all our life long.

2 For quæ in terris. As for theſe on earth, we gather but too faſt; meaning our evil deeds, which ſmell of the earth, whence they are, and where they were done.

Now, when we come to give up our accompt, it ſhould ſeem by the word ἔδοξε we had caſt them up once before, and caſt them falſe; that we muſt to it again, and ſee, if we can find our ſummes right. There is no danger, but in caſting our quæ in cœlis (our good) leſt we caſt them over; and our quæ in terris (our bad) leſt them we caſt under. The other way, the errour is nothing ſo perilous.

Our quæ in cœlis (our good) howſoever our new Auditors caſt them ſo, as they find GOD in their debt, for that we have laid out more than ever GOD required; I doubt, will not prove ſo at the Audit. But, of our quæ in terris, our evil, there is no great fear of overcaſting them: their ſumme will riſe but too high, if we deceive not our ſelves.

Both to be in Chriſto. But whether it be of both; we ſhall find our ſelves wrong in both, if they be not recapitulate in Chriſto. For our quæ in cœlis; having done all we can, Chriſt bids us ſay, ſervi inutiles ſumus: and Luke 17. 10. ſo we muſt ſay then: (and what account can be made of inutile? having ſuffered all we can, Non ſunt condignæ (ſaith S. Paul:) So both come not home. The good Centurion, he that built the Synagogue;

Rom.8.18. Nay then Saint John Baptiſt himſelfe, both caſt themſelves to a Non ſum dignus; Even the beſt

Luke 3.16. 7.4. of our nature. That, when we have done, we muſt, begin again, and caſt and caſt till we be weary, unleſs we caſt in Chriſt; faile ſtill, unleſs our Total of quæ in cœlis, be recapitulate in Chriſto.

But then come to the other accompt of quæ in terris: to that, there is a fulneſs, and the fulneſs of our ſeaſons. Many a broken reckoning ſhall we find there, ſuch furd numbers, ſuch fractions we ſhall meet with, we ſhall not tell how or when to get through, we ſhall want compters. They are ſo infinite, and intricate withall, that (I fear) we ſhall be found in a mighty arrear, a huge debt of thouſands

Mat.16.24. and ten thouſands of talents: we ſhall not tell which way to turn us, nor which way to ſatisfie it, though all we have were ſold, and we our ſelves too. To ballance this accompt, Chriſt is moſt needfull; For Summis conjunctis, caſt both theſe together, and Iob being our Auditor, he finds we ſhall not

Job 9.3. be able to anſwer GOD one for a thouſand, that he can charge us with. Sine Me nihil poteſtis facere

Ioh. 15.5. (if ever) we ſhall find, in this, moſt true. For gather heaven and earth, and all that is in them, all together, and leave him out, they will never be able to make our diſcharge: Not the beſt Auditor of them all.

But He, out of the fulneſs of his ſatisfaction, can relieve us that way, to take off (or ſtrike off) a great part of our Onus. And he can caſt in, of the fulneſs of his merits to make up that, is found minus habens, or defective, in ours that way. For, the ſhort is, He is both Pes, and Caput compoti, the κεφαλὴ, and the κεφάλαιον; he is called both in the Text. His ἀνακεφαλαιώσις muſt help us, if ever we come to our Audit.

Yet not to hinder our gathering. But foreſeen, that this be no hinderance to our gathering. No: gathering we muſt be ſtill, thoſe of heaven (ſpiritual;) and turn as much of our earthly as we can into them. And ſtill order the matter ſo, as while we have time, we be doing good. We ſhall but evil ſumme up all, in Chriſt, if we have Gal.6.10. no particulars to raiſe our ſumme of; if we have nothing, but what is out of Chriſt, to recapitulate, in Chriſt. To gather, I ſay; Elſe are we like to have but an empty ſeaſon of it.

And even to begin, now: to imitate God, in His time, when; and in His order, how. His time: this is the time, God made his in; Now, we to take the ſame time, to fall on gathering. His order: this is the order, God made his by; He began with heavenly things; we to keep the ſame order, follow His method, begin where He begins: begin with the things, that have the priority of place in the Text, begin with them: Make Regnum ejus, our primum quærite, and the things that pertain to it.

Mat.9.33. And not pervert Gods order, and be ſo wholly given to the fulneſs of the things on earth, that we fall to them, firſt. Nay, I pray God, it be not firſt, and laſt, and all. We ſhall the better diſpenſe the ſeaſon, if we gather to prayers, to Gods word: If we begin with them: If with the diſpenſation of his holy myſteries: gather to that, eſpecially.

The application to the Euchariſt. For, there, we do not gather to Chriſt, or of Chriſt; but, we gather Chriſt Himſelfe, and gathering Him, we ſhall gather the tree, and fruit, and all upon it. For, as there is a recapitulation of all in heaven and earth, in Chriſt: So, there is a recapitulation of all in Chriſt, in the holy holy Sacrament. You may ſee it cleerly: There is in CHRIST, the Word eternal, for things in heaven; There is alſo Fleſh, for things on earth. Semblably, the Sacrament conſiſteth, of a Heavenly, and of a Terrene part; (It is Irenæus own words:) the heavenly, there the word too (the abſtract of the other;) the Earthly, the Element. 1

And in the Elements, you may obſerve, there is a fulneſſe of the ſeaſons of the natural year; of the corn-ſtver (or harveſt) in the one, Bread: of the wine-preſſe (or vintage) in the other, Wine. And, in the heavenly, of the wheat-corn whereto He compareth Himſelf (Joh. 12.) Bread, even the living bread (or bread of life) that came down from heaven; the true Manna, whereof we may gather each his Gomer. And again, of Him, the true Vine (as He cals Himſelf;) the blood of the grapes of that Vine. Both theſe iſſuing out of this dayes recapitulation; both, in corpus autem aptaſti mihi, of this day. 2 Joh. 12. 4. 6. 51. 49. Joh. 15. 1. Pſal. 40. 6.

And the gathering or Vintage of theſe two, in the bleſſed Euchariſt, is (as I may ſay) a kind of hypoſtatical union of the Signe and the thing ſignified, ſo united together, as are the two natures of Chriſt. And even from this ſacramental union do the Fathers borrow their reſemblance, to illuſtrate, by it, the perſonal union in Chriſt: I name Theodoret for the Greek, and Gelaſius for the Latine Church, that inſiſt upon it (both) and preſſe it againſt Eutyches. That even as, in the Euchariſt, neither part is evacuate or turned into the other, but abide each ſtill in his former nature and ſubſtance; No more is either of CHRISTS natures annulled, or one of them converted into the other (as Eutyches held;) but, each nature remaineth (ſtill) full and whole, in his own kind. And backwards: As the two Natures in CHRIST, ſo the Signum and Signatum in the Sacrament, è converſo. And this later device, of the ſubſtance of the bread and wine, to be flowen away and gone, and in the room of it, a remainder of nothing elſe but Accidents to ſtay behind, was to them not known; And (had it been true) had made for Eutyches, and againſt them. And this for the likeneſſe of Union in both. 3

Now, for the word gathered together in one. It is well knowen, the holy Euchariſt it ſelf is called Synaxis (by no name more uſual in all Antiquity that, is a Collection or gathering. For ſo it is, in it ſelf: For, at the celebration of it (though we gather to Prayer, and to Preaching, yet) that is the principal gathering, the Church hath, which is (it ſelf) called a Collection too (Heb. 10.) by the ſame name, from the Chiefe: For, where the body is, there the Eagles will be gathered: And ſo, one Synaxis begets another. 4 Heb. 10. 25. Luke 17. 37.

And laſt, there is a Diſpenſation: that word, in it, too: that moſt cleerly. For, it is our Office, we are ſtiled (by the Apoſtle) Diſpencers of the myſteries of GOD; and, in and by them, of all the benefits that came to mankind, by this diſpenſation in the fulneſſe of ſeaſon, of all that are recapitulate in CHRIST. 5 1 Cor. 4. 1.

Which benefits are too many to deal with. One ſhall ſerve, as the ſumme of all: That the very end of the Sacrament is, to gather again to GOD and His favour, if it happen (as oft it doth) we ſcatter, and ſtray from Him. And to gather us, as cloſe and neer, as alimentum alito, (that is) as neer, as neer may be. 1

And as, to gather us to GOD; ſo likewiſe each to other mutually: Expreſſed lively, in the Symbols of many graines into the one, and many grapes into the other. The Apoſtle is plain, that we are all one bread, and one body, ſo many as are partakers of one bread. So molding us (as it were) into one loaf altogether. The gathering to GOD refers ſtill to things in heaven: This other, to men, to the things in earth. All under one Head, by the common faith: All into one Body miſtical, by mutual charity. So ſhall we well enter into the diſpenſing of this ſeaſon, to begin with. 2 1 Cor. 10. 17.

And even thus to be recollected at this Feaſt, by the holy Communion, into that bleſſed Union, is the higheſt perfection, we can in this life aſpire unto. We (then) are at the higheſt pitch; at the very beſt we ſhall ever attaine to on earth; what time we newly come from it: Gathered to Chriſt; and, by Chriſt to God; ſtated in all whatſoever He hath gathered, and laid up againſt His next comming. VVith which gathering here in this world we muſt content and ſtay our ſelves, and wait for the conſummation of all, at His comming again. For, there is an Ecce venio, yet to come. Apoc. 22. 12.

This gathering thus here begun, it is to take end and to have the full accompliſhment, at the laſt and great gathering of all, which ſhall be of the quick and of the dead. VVhen He ſhall ſend His Angels, and they ſhall gather His Elect from all the corners of the earth: ſhall gather the wheat into the barn, and the tares to the fire. And then (and never till then) ſhall be the fulneſſe indeed, when GOD ſhall be, not (as now He is) ſomewhat in every one, but all in all. Et tempus non erit amplius, and there ſhall be neither time, nor ſeaſon any more. No fulneſſe then, but the fulneſſe of eternity, and in it the fulneſſe of all joy. To which in the ſeveral ſeaſons of our being gathered to our fathers, He vouchſafe to bring us; that (as the year, ſo) the fulneſſe of our lives may end in a Chriſtmaſſe, a merry joyful Feaſt, as that is. And ſo GOD make this to us, in Him, &c. Mat. 25. 32. 24. 31. Mat. 13. 30. 1 Cor. 15. 28. Apoc. 10. 6.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED Before the KINGS MAJESTIE.

At WHITE-HAL, on Saturday the xxv. of December, Anno Domini, MDCXXIV, being CHRIST MASSE Day.

PSAL. II. Verse VII.

Prædicabo Legem, de qua dixit ad me Dominus: Filius meus tu, hodie genui te.

I will preach the Law whereof the* LORD *said to me: Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

THis Text the first word of it is Prædicabo, I will preach. So, here is a Sermon toward. And it is of Filius; Filius meus genui te; of the begetting, or bringing forth a child. And that, Hodie, this very day.

And let not this trouble you, that it is (begotten) in the Text, and (born) on the day. In all the three tongues, one word serves for both. In Latine, Alma Venus genuit: Venus did but bear Æneas; yet it is said, Genuit. In Greek γεννᾶται ἐκ παρθένου: He was but born of the Virgin; yet He was said γεννηθεὶς, Genitus. And I report me to the Masters of the Hebrew tongue, whether the original word in the Text, bear not, be not as full, nay do not more properly import His Birth than His begetting. It is sure, it doth. So, it may be used; and so, we will use it indifferently. And let this serve once for all. We return to our Sermon.

1 אמר Prædicabo. Here is one saith, he will preach. Hath he a licence? Yes: Dixit ad me, he was spoken to, or (indeed) he was commanded. (Amar is to command.) Commanded: by whom? By him that hath lawful authority so to do, Dixit Dominus. He stept not up of his own head; He came to it orderly: made no suit for the place; was appointed for it.

2 What will he preach of? Whence will he take his Text? Out of dixit Dominus, out of the Word of God. And that is right. So do we take, ours; for, so did he take his. To Dixit Dominus He held Him; preached not voluntary: but, as he preached the law, so he had a law to preach by (the Word of God.) Dixit Dominus.

3 And what was His Text? Filius meus tu hodiè genui te. This Text He preached on: As it might be, at the bringing forth of a Son. And that (as it should seem by the word, Hodiè) this very day. This day, the Birth; this day, the Sermon. And, if so: by the same equity, the same Text may well be preached on again, whensoever that day comes about, by the circling of the year.

4 It useth to be the first question (I kept it last) who preacheth? For, if we like him, we will hear him, else not. Sure, He, to whom this is spoken, Filius meus tu, He it is, that saith, Prædicabo. And He to whom it is said, Filius meus tu, is CHRIST. CHRIST then preacheth. And CHRIST is worth the hearing. There will lie no exception to the Preacher, that, I am sure of.

And indeed, so it was most meet, that He should. He, that was the Law-giver, most meet to read upon His own law; He, that the Son, most meet to preach upon Filius meus tu; He, that was born, upon His own Birth.

Upon His own Birth. And if upon it, any day, that day especially, whereon He was born. So is the Text. The day He preach'd on, He was born: The day He was born, He preach'd on, No time so kindly to preach de Filio hodiè genito, as Hodiè. So shall you have CHRIST preach; of CHRISTS Nativity; and that, upon the very day of his Nativity; (which, according to the Christian account, is this day of all the dayes of the year.

The applying to this Birth. And, first I must tell you, this same Hodiè (here) is said Signanter, that CHRIST was begotten to day. For, He was begotten besides this: had more Begettings, than one. Two natures He had, and so, two Nativities. One eternal, as the Son of God: the other temporal, as the Son of man.

And

And, as it fals out, this very place (here) I find vouched for both. Vouched for His begetting, as the Son of GOD, by the Apoſtle (Heb. 1. 5.) For to which of the Angels ſaid He at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? Alledging this place to prove His Deity: as one, whoſe nature was farre above, farre more excellent, than the Angels.

But, of the twain, more properly we apply it to this dayes birth: (His Birth, as the Son of Man.) And for our ſo applying it, we have the warrant, not of one, but of all the Apoſtles at once; and, even of the whole Church aſſembled in prayer (Acts 4. 27.) Where, to God Himſelf they ſay, that the Prophecy of this Pſalme was fulfilled, when Herod, the High Prieſts, and the reſt took counſel againſt His holy Child Jeſus: And, that (we know) was at this Birth. So applying it to this Birth, ſure we are, we apply it aright.

And indeed, it cannot be otherwiſe. For, in the very next words, GOD bids Him, Aſk, and He will give Him the Heathen, and the utterwoſt parts of the earth. This muſt needs be ſaid to Him, as the Son of man; and can no wayes be ſaid to Him, as the Son of GOD. As the Son of GOD, He aſked not; He needed not aſk; He had all: All æquo jure with His father, as being in form of Phil. 2. 6. God. Nothing was; nothing could be given to Him: He was not a perſon capable of any gift: All was His own. So, it was ſpoken, as to the Son of Man, this day born. And ſo, to the Son of Man, this day born, we apply it.

Of this Sermon, theſe be the parts. The matter of it at large, or in general: That it is a Law firſt. The Diviſion. Then, what manner of Law, or how qualified: 1. A Law to be preached, as other lawes uſe not to be. 2. A Law de quâ dixit Deus, where other lawes are, de quâ dixit homo: Which is the reaſon, I. why it is to be preached. 3. And then (out of the very body of the word in the Text) that it is not a Law at large, but a Statute Law, for ſo is Elchock) which but by publiſhing, none can take notice אלחק of. A ſecond reaſon, why it is to be preached. And this is the firſt part.

The ſecond, is the very Text it ſelf, or the body of the Law in theſe words, Thou art my Sonne, this II. day have I begotten thee. The points in it are five: [1] Of a Sonne. [2] Of my Sonne (that is) the Sonne of GOD. [3] Genui, the Sonne of GOD begotten. [4] Hodiè the Sonne of GOD, this day begotten. [5] And Dixit genui (that is) dicendo genuit, begotten only by ſaying; onely ſaid the word, and it was done, and the Word became fleſh. This is the ſecond part. Joh. 1. 14.

The third is the hardeſt. For it would make one ſtudy (Filius meus tu) how this ſhould be a Law, III. as here it is called. It looks not like one. But, ſaid it muſt be, which CHRIST hath ſaid: A Law He cals it, and a Law we muſt find it. Now there be but two lawes (as the Apoſtle tells us, Rom. 3. 27.) Lex fidei, and Lex factorum: if, both theſe wayes, a Law it be, a Law we ſhall find it. And both theſe wayes a Law it is.

1 Lex fidei. A Law limiting what to believe of Him. Of Him (that is) of His Perſon: His Natures: and His Offices. His Perſon, out of the words, Ego, and Tu. His Natures, out of Hodie, and Genui. His Offices, out of Prædicabo, and Legem.

2 Then Lex factorum. Setting out firſt, what he doth for us; and then, what we are to do for Him. What He doth for us (Filius meus tu) to us He conveyeth all Filial rights. What we to do for Him (Filius meus tu) we to return to Him all Filial duties. Which duties are compriſed in Prædicabo legem. And legem, that law is no more, than Filius meus tu: for, Filius meus tu goes through all, and is all in all. Theſe are the parts. Of theſe, &c.

PRædicabo Legem (ſaith CHRIST.) And we like it well, that He will preach. But He hath not I. choſen ſo good a Text: Legem were a fitter Text for Moſes to preach on. We had well hoped, Legem: CHRIST would have preached no law; all Goſpel, He That He would have preach'd down the old law, but not have preach'd up any new. VVe ſee, it is otherwiſe. A law He hath to preach, and 1 preach it He will: He ſaith it Himſelf, Prædicabo Legem.

So, if we will be His Auditors, He tels us plainly, we muſt receive a Law from His mouth. If we love not to hear of a law, we muſt go to ſome other Church. For in CHRIST'S Church (there) a law is preached. Chriſt began, we muſt follow, and ſay, every one of us (as He ſaith) Prædicabo Legem.

Nay, there is another point yet more ſtrange. Theſe very words here [Filius meus tu, &c.] are as 2 good Goſpel as any in the New Teſtament; yet are here (as we ſee) delivered by Him under the term of a Law. And we may not change His word: we may not learn CHRIST how to uſe His terms. The words are plain; there is no avoiding them: a law he cals it, and a law it is.

Firſt then, to take notice of both theſe. 1. That Chriſt will preach a law; and that they are not for 1 the law, are not for Chriſt. It was their quarrel above (at the third verſe) they would none of Chriſt, for this very cauſe, that Chriſt comes preaching the law, and they would live lawleſſe: they would indure no yoke: that were the Sons of Belial; Belial (that is) no yoke: but what agreement hath 2 Cor. 6. 15. Chriſt with Belial.

And then: that theſe words Filius meus tu, are a law; and ſo as a law by Chriſt preached. So as 2 in the very Goſpel it ſelf, all is not Goſpel, ſome law among it. The very Goſpel hath her law. A law Evangelical there is, which Chriſt preached: and, as he did, we to do the like. (VVhereof, more is to be ſaid by and by.)

In the mean time, it is not without danger to let any ſuch conceit take head, as though Chriſtian

Re-

Religion had no law-points in it, consisted onely of pure narratives: believe them; and all is well: Had but certain Theses to be held, dogmatical points, matters of opinion. And true it is, such points there be; but they be not all. There is a law besides, and it hath precepts, and they to be preached, learned, and (as a law) to be obeyed of all.

Look but into the Grand Commission (by which we all preach) which Christ gave at his going out Matth. 28. 19. of the world: Go (saith He) preach the Gospel to all nations, teaching them, What? to observe the things that I have commanded you. Lo, here is commanding, and here is observing. So, the Gospel consists not only of certain Articles to be believed: But of certain Commandements also, and they to be observed. And what is that, but Prædicabo Legem?

Now (I know not how, but) we are fallen clean from the term, Law; nay, we are even fallen out with it. Nothing but Gospel now. The name of Law, we look strangely at: we shun it in our common talk. To this it is come, while men seek to live, as they list. Preach them Gospel as much as you will: but (hear ye) no Prædicabo legem, no law, to be preached, to hold or keep them in. And we have gospelled it so long, that the Christian Law is clean gone with us; we have lost it, if Prædicabo legem (here) get it us not again. But, got it must be, for as Christ preacheth, so must we; and Law it is, that Christ preacheth.

I shall tell you, what is come by the drowning of the term, Law. Religion is even come to be counted res precaria; No law, no, no: but a matter of fair entreaty, gentle perswasion, neither jura, nor leges, but only Consulta patrum, good fatherly counsel, and nothing else. Concilia Evangelica were a while laid aside: now there be none else. All are Evangelical counsels, now. The reverend regard, the legal vigour, and power, the penalties of it are not set by. The rules, no reckoning made of them, as of Law Writs, none; but onely, as of Physick bils, if you like them, you may use them: if not, lay them by. And this comes of drowning the term, Law. And all, for lack of Prædicabo legem.

I speak it to this end: to have the one term reteined, as well as the other, to have neither term abolished; but with equal regard, both kept on foot. They are not so well advised, that seek to suppresse either name. If the name once be lost, the thing it self will not long stay: but go after it, and be lost too.

They that take them to the one term only, are confuted once a moneth. For, every moneth, every first day of every moneth, this verse fails not, but is read in our ears. And here, a law it is. And so was the Christian Religion called in the very best times of it, Christiana lex, the Christian law; and the Bishops, Christianæ legis Episcopi, the Bishops of the Christian law. And all the ancient Fathers liked the term well: and took it upon them.

To conclude. Gospel it how we will: if the Gospel hath not the legalia of it acknowledged, al-
Heb. 8. 13. lowed, and preserved to it: if once it lose the force, and vigour of a law, it is a signe it declines, it
7. 18. growes weak and unprofitable: and, that is a signe, it will not long last. We must go look our salvation by some other way, than by Filius meus tu: if Filius meus tu. (I say not, be not preached, but) be not so preached, as Christ preached it; and Christ preach'd it, as a Law. And so much for Legem.

1 Prædicabo Legem. Now, of this law, three things are here said: First, legem turns back upon Prædicabo. And this priviledge it hath, that it is materia prædicabilis, a law which may; nay, a law which is to be preached. And that lawes use not to be: Not to be preached. To be read upon at times privately: but, to be preached, not any law, but this. But, this is: and it serves for a special difference, to sever it from other lawes, and make it a kind by it self. Even this, that it is to be preached.

To be preached: and that even to Kings themselves, that make lawes: to Judges themselves, that are presumed to be best seen in the Law: yet they to learn, they to be learned, in this law. Erudimini (is the word) qui judicatis terram, in the tenth Verse after.

2 De qua dixit Dominus. אמר And the reason is: for this is a law, de qua dixit Deus, And so is none else. And that is a second difference. There is a law, de qua dixit homo, quam sanxerunt homines, which men among themselves make for themselves (as by-lawes are made.) This is of a higher nature. This, God himself made; is a Law of His own making. De qua dixit, or rather edixit, for so is Amar: which God enacted first, and then gave commandement, it should be preached.

And to whom? Dixit ad me, Who is that CHRIST. First, and before all others to be preached by his Sonne. His preaching, He thought it worth, and gave it Him in charge, and accordingly (we see) He performed it, and professed Prædicabo, that He will preach it.

3 Dixit or edixit. But, the third is a reason, why it could not be otherwise; why it could not but be preached. Because (as I told you, out of the very body of the word) it is not a law at large: but a Statute law. And the nature of that law is, without publishing, it cannot be known.

GOD hath His Law in the same division that man hath his: His Statute, and His Common Law.
Rom. 2. 14. The Law of nature which is written in the hearts of all men, that, is the Common Law of the world. Of that every man is to take notice at his peril. But this law, here, is no part of that law: Filius meus tu is not written in the heart; it must be preached to the ear. No light of Nature could reveal it, from within; Preached from without, it must be. And so, and no otherwise, come we to the knowledg of it. The very words gives it for such, which is properly a Statute (as this is) enacted, and decreed in the high Court of GODS Councel above, and reserved to be revealed in the later times; And of that we cannot hear without a Preacher: and the preaching thereof was committed to CHRIST.
Eph. 3. 5. Rom. 10. 14. He began, and we follow. And so much for Prædicabo legem, de quâ dixit Dominus ad me. (The matter at large.) And now to His Text, wherein is the letter of the Law it self.

I

I reckoned up to you five particulars in this Law. 1. Filius, a Son. 2. Filius meus, my Son (that is) the Son of God. 3. Filius meus genui; the Son of God begotten. 4. Hodie genui, the Son of God begotten this day. 5. And fifthly, Dixit genui (that is) dicendo genuit, begotten by saying, as the word should be. II.

Of a Son, first. Which plainly sheweth, it is not the old; it is a new law (this.) The old runs, Ego sum Dominus, which must needs imply, Servus meus tu. This is Filius meus tu (in another stile) which necessarily doth imply Ego sum pater tuus. A Father to be the giver of it. According to the former, He saith Ego sum Dominus, and we say, Dominus meus tu. According to this latter, He saith, Filius meus tu, and we say, Pater meus tu. This, the better by far: as far as the condition of a Son is better, than that of a Servant. And indeed, the main difference between the two Laws, is but this: Do it (saith the one) Servus meus tu, the imperfect law of fear and servitude. Do it (saith the other) Filius meus tu, the perfect law of love and liberty. 1 Filius. 1 Joh. 4. 18. Heb. 7. 9. Jam. 1. 15.

Of a Son. VVhose Son? Filius meus. And He that speaks it, that saith meus, is God; and so to whom it is spoken, the Son of God. And the Son of God is a high title, and of a special accompt. Salomon, before his Crown or Scepter prized that speech of God; I will be his Father, and he shall be my Son. 2 Filius meus. 2 Sam. 7. 14.

But nothing makes it more clear, than this place. The last verse he saith, Posui te Regem, I have set thee a King: that He speaks not of, thinks it not fit. But here, now, Filius meus tu, this (lo) preach He will, this He thinks worth the preaching. Filius meus tu, rather than, posui te Regem, to be the Son of God, than to be a Prince in Sion.

The Son of God: and the Son of God begotten. For Sons of God there be, that are not begotten; that come in another way, that come by adoption. To beget, is an act of nature, and is ever determined in the identity of the same nature, with him, that did beget. And this putteth the difference. 3 Genui.

Otherwise, God speaks of Angels as of his Sons. When all the Sons of God praised him. Speaks it of Israel, his people: Out of Egypt have I called my Son. Speaks it of Rulers and Governors: Ye are all the Sons of the most high. To every of these, as much in effect is said, as Filius meus tu. But to which of them all, to which of the Angels said He at any time, Genui te, I have begotten thee? Not to any. Filii they were, but not geniti, none of them all. So, Filius meus tu is communicated to others, but Genui te, to no creature, either in heaven or earth. Of none, is Genui to be verified in proper terms, but of CHRIST, and of CHRIST only. Job 38. 7. Hos. 11. 1. Psal. 82. 6.

Begotten; and this day begotten: Genui, and Hodie genui: for, begotten He had been before. Another begetting besides this, Two Genui's, a Genui before Hodie: Ex utero ante Luciferum genui te, said the LORD to my LORD, in the CX. Psalm. Twice begotten He was. This day begotten, and begotten ante Luciferum, before there was any morning Star, and so, before there was any day at all; and so, before any, quod cognominatur Hodie, any time, that is called, To day. Hodie genui. Psal. 2. 11, 3.

VVe are to take notice of both these generations, [a] Of Christus ante Lucifernm, and of [b] Lucifer ante Christum. To take notice of both: but to take hold of this latter. For, that, ante Luciferum was not for us, His second begetting, his Hodie genui, his this dayes begetting is it for us, it we hold by. Not, by his going out from everlasting: not by his olim, ante Luciferum, ante seculo genitus: None of these, Hodie genitus is the law, that we are to preach: (that is) not his Eternal, but his Hodiernal generation. Not as GOD, of the substance of his Father, begotten before all worlds: but as Man, of the substance of his Mother, born in the World: when in the fulnesse of time God sent his Son made of a Woman. And that, was the hodie genui of this day. Mic. 5. 2. Gal. 4. 4.

Now the speculative Divine pierceth yet deeper, he finds a further mystery in these two words, Dixit genui (that is, saith he) dicendo genuit. He said, he begat (that is) by his very saying, he begat. VVherein the very manner of his begetting, is set forth unto us. 5 Dixit genui.

There is a very near resemblance betwixt Dixit and Genui; betwixt begetting and speaking. To beget is to bring forth: so, is to speak to bring forth also. To bring forth a word, and Christ (you know) is called the Word. Now, when we speak, either we do it within, to our selves, or without to others. Either of which two, may well be compared to a like several begetting.

VVhen we think a word in our thought, and speak it there, within, to our selves, (as it were in silence) and never utter it: this (if you mark it well) is a kind of conceiving of generation: the mind, within of it self ingendring a word, while (yet) it is but in notion, kept in, and known to none, but to our selves. And such was the generation of the Eternal Word, the Son of God, in the mind of his Father before all VVorlds; and even to that doth the Apostle apply the Genui of this verse. And this is the first begetting or speaking. 1 Heb. 5. 1.

Now, as the word, yet within us in our thought, when time comes that we will utter it, doth take to it self an airy body (or breath by the vocal instruments being framed into a voice) and becommeth audible to the outward sense: And this we call the second begetting or speaking.) Right so, the eternal Word of God, by Dominus dixit, by the very breath of God, the Holy Spirit (which hath his name of Spiro, to breath) corpus autem aptasti mihi, had a body framed Him, and with that body was brought forth, and came into the world. And so these words Genui te, this very day, the second time, verified of him. Genui and Dixit Genui; said, and by saying begot Him. For, how soon the Angels voice sounded in the blessed Virgins ear, instantly was he incarnate in the womb of his Mother. 2 Heb. 10. 5.

Of both which words, Dixit and Genui, we can spare neither. There is good use of both. Of Genui: to shew the truth of the identity of his nature and substance, with his Father that begat him, and with his Mother that bare him. For, to beget is when one living thing bringeth forth another living thing, of the same nature, and kind it self is.

3 But (I know not how) the term of begetting, the very mention of that word, carrieth our conceit to a matter of carnality: therefore, is the word [Dixit] well set before it, to shew this Genui, was not by any fleshly way; to abstract it from any mixture of carnal uncleanneſſe. That the manner of it was, onely as the word is purely and spiritually conceived in the mind. The one word [Genui] noting the truth. The other word [Dixit] the no way carnal, but pure, and concrete manner of His generation. And so I have gone over, the five terms of this Law, or (if you please) five points of this Text.

III. The hardest is yet behind: For it will not sink into our heads, how this should be called a Law. It seems nothing lesse, rather a Dialogue between a Father and his Sonne. But a law (sure) it cannot be. A law runs in the imperative: this is meerly Narrative: declares some-what, injoynes nothing; gives not any thing in charge, as laws use to do.

John 10. 35. Rom. 3. 4. Sed non potest solvi Scriptura, GOD must be true in all his sayings; CHRIST may not preach false doctrine. A Law He hath called it; and we may not give it any other name.

There be that think, this verse is but the preamble, and that the body of the law doth follow, and reacheth to the end of the Psalme.

But, the better sort are of mind, that even this verse, taken by it self contains in it a law full and whole. Let us see then, whether we can find it so.

We pitch upon the Apostles division of the law, into Lex fidei, and Lex factorum. If both these be found in it, we may well allow it for a Law.

We will begin with Lex fidei: what we are to believe of Him. Of Him (that is) of these three: 1. Of His Person. 2. His Natures. 3. and His Offices.

And then come to Lax factorum. First, what He doth for us, the benefit of this Law. 2. And then, what we are to do for Him again, our duty of this Law. The former of which (the benefit) is the Gospel of this law. The later (the duty) is the law of this Gospel.

1 Lex fidei. 1 Of his Person. Of His person first. That He is, of Himself, a person subsisting. Plain, by the two persons that are in the Text, Ego and Tu; the first and second person in Grammar: and the same, the first and second person in Trinity. Here is Ego genui, the person of the Father; and Filius meus tu, the person of the Son. Here is one begets: And (sure it is) nemo generat seipsum, none begets himself: but he, whom he begets, is a person actually distinguished from him, that begets Him.

John 14. 6. But, of these two persons, this you will mark. That, the first that is named, is Filius meus tu. He stands first in the verse before Genui te. We hear of Filius, before ever we hear of Genui: For, that is the Person we hold by. By Nature; Genui te should go before Filius meus; but quo ad nos, Filius meus is before Genui te. To shew, there is no comming to the Father, but by Him; no interest in the Father, but from, and through Him. This for His Person.

2 Of his Natures. And, in His person, we believe two natures, set down here in the two words, Hodie and Genui. If you do observe, there is somewhat a strange conjunction of these two words. One is present, Hodie, the other is perfectly past, Genui. In propriety of speech it would be a present act, for a present time: or it would be an act past with an adverb of the time past: and not joyn a thing in being (Hodie) with an action ended and done (Genui.)

The joyning of these two together, the verefying them both, of one and the same person, must needs seem strange. And indeed, could not be made good, but that in that one party, there are two distinct Natures. To either of which, in a different respect, both may agree, and be true, both. Some little difference there will be about the sorting of the two words: which to referre to which. But, that will easily be accorded, for they will both meet in the end.

There be, that, because Hodie (the present) is yet in Fieri, and so not come to be perfect; understand by it, His temporal generation (as man) which is the lesse perfect, as subject to the manifold imperfections of our humane nature, and condition. And then, by Genui, which is in factum esse (and so, done and perfect) understand His eternal generation (as the SON of GOD) in whom are absolutely all the perfections of the Deity.

There be other, and they fly at a higher pitch, and are of a contrary mind: For, whatsoever is past, is in time (say they) and so Genui is temporal: and, that Hodie (that) doth best expresse His eternal generation: For that, nothing is so properly affirmed of Eternity it self as is Hodie. Why? For, there, all is Hodie: there, is neither Heri, nor Cras; no yesterday, nor to morrow. All is, to day, there. Nothing past; nothing to come: all present. Present (as it were) in one instant, or center, so in the Hodie of Eternity. Past, and to come argue time; But, if it be eternal, it is neither: All there is present. To day then, sets forth eternity best (say they) which is still present, and in being. But Genui (that being past) cannot be His eternal at any hand, but must needs stand for his temporal.

But whether of these it be; Genui, His eternal (as perfect) and Hodie (as not yet perfect.) His temporal; Or vice versa, Hodie represent eternity best, and Genui, time, as being spent and gone. Between them both, one way or other, they will shew His begettings. You may weave Hodie with Genui, or Genui with Hodie, and between them both, they will make up the two Natures of Him, that was the Hodie genitus of this day. Concerning whom, we believe; as first, that He is one entire person, and subsists by Himself; So, second, that He consists of two distinct Natures, eternal and temporal. The one, as perfect God: the other, as perfect Man.

3 Of his Offices. Now for His Offices. Them, we have likewise in the two words, Prædicabo and Legem. Prædicabo By that, it is plain, He doth preach. And that seems strange: for the last news we heard of Him (in the verse before) was, that he was set a King in Sion. And the word Legem imports as much: For, Laws (with us) are the Kings Laws.

A King to Preach? Let that alone for the Prieſts. That, is their Office; they ſhall teach Jacob his Judgments, and preach to Iſrael his Law. But preach He will (as he ſaith.) So, meus Filius will prove a Prieſt (as it ſeems:) A Prieſt, indeed. And, which is yet more ſtrange, by vertue of theſe very words: Filius meus tu. No words (one would think) to prove him a Prieſt by; and we ſhould hardly believe it, but that (in Heb. 5. 4.) the Apoſtle deduceth His Prieſthood from theſe very words: No man (ſaith he) taketh unto him this honour, (that is, the honour of the Prieſthood) but he, that was called of God, as was Aaron. And then he adds, No more did CHRIST, He took not this honour upon Him, to be our high Prieſt: but He, that ſaid to Him [Filius meus tu, hodie genui te] He gave it Him. So that by vertue of theſe words, CHRIST was conſecrated a Prieſt; as by vertue of the other [Poſui te Regem] He was ſet a King in Sion. Deut. 33. 11.

And the place (Sion) ſuits well with both. For Mount Sion had two tops. On the one was the Temple built: on the other was the Kings Palace ſituate. The one for Prædicabo: the other for Legem. In the one (as King) he makes a law: in the other (as Prieſt) preacheth it. Firſt, Poſui Regem; and then, Prædicabo Legem.

And indeed the Kings that were his types, were mixt of both. Melchiſedek; him the Apoſtle ſtands on at large, (in Heb. 7.) And if this Pſalme be David's (as queſtionleſſe it is, for, his it is avowed to be Act. 4. 25.) why then, he preach'd too. And for Salomon, it is too evident; we have his book of the Preacher. The like, may be ſaid of Ezechias, and the reſt by whom, this King (here) was in any ſort repreſented. And by vertue thereof, they all had a greater care of publiſhing this law, here, than of any of their own lawes: as on the contrary, Ahab, and his race had more care of the keeping of the Statutes of Omri, then they had of the Lawes of GOD. Mic. 6. 16.

We believe then, for His Offices; that, He is both King and Prieſt. Hath a Kingdom to rule: Hath a Dioceſs to preach in. His Kingdom, the Heathen, to the uttermoſt parts of the earth: His Dioceſs, as large. His Auditory, all States, even the higheſt, Kings and Judges: for Prædicabo Legem concerns them all, And this, for lex fidei: what it binds us to believe of Him.

Now for Lex factorum. Firſt, what ſhall be done to them, that live by and under this law. They ſpeak of Lawes of grace: This is indeed, a law of grace; nay, it is, The law of grace: not only as it is oppoſite to the law of nature; but even, becauſe it offereth grace, the greateſt grace, that ever was. For, what greater grace or favour can be done to any, than to have theſe words [Filius meus tu] ſaid unto him? This law doth it: for to them that receive it, it giveth power to be made the Sons of God. Joh. 1. 12.

2 Lex factorum. 1 What he doth for us. The benefit.

The words ſeem to be ſpoken to one perſon onely; but (as lawes of grace uſe to be) are to receive ampliation, and to be extended, to the moſt benefit.

Dixit ad me. Said He it to Him, and ſaid He it, to Him alone, and ſaid he it to no other, but to Him? No: for, He gave it Him in charge to preach it; and to preach it, is to ſay it to others. Therefore it is, Dixit ad me, ut ad alios, per me: it was ſo ſaid to Him, as that by Him, it might be ſaid to others. Prædicabo makes it plain. 1

Prædicabo. When CHRIST doth preach, He is not to be underſtood to preach to Himſelf: no man doth ſo at any time; but to others more or leſſe, that may be, or ſhould be the better for His preaching. For, what needed it be preached, if it concern none, but Him? if none to have benefit, but He? if they, that hear it preached, ſhall receive no benefit by it? 2

So ſay we, of Legem. This law was not made for CHRIST: it needed not for Him (any law.) He was Filius meus tu φύσει, & ὐ νόμῳ, needed no law to make Him that, which by nature he was. The law was for others, which, by this law, were to be made that, which, by nature, they were not (that is) the Sons of God. 3

Take the very words. You ſee, His Text is not in the firſt perſon, Filius tuus Ego: His Text is, Filius meus tu. And, who is that, Tu? It cannot be CHRIST Himſelf by common intendment. The Father ſaith to Him, thou art my Son: But, to whom is it, that CHRIST ſaith, Thou art my Son? For, Filius meus tu, is His Text; that, He muſt preach on: He may not go from the words, or change the tenour of his Text. Who is then, that Sonne? To whom applyeth He His Text? To ſome other certainly. The Apoſtle ſaith, He was ſet and ſent, that He might bring many Sons unto God, to whom God alſo might ſay, Filius meus tu. And himſelf likewiſe ſaith of himſelf in the Prophet: Behold, here am I, and the children which God hath given me. 4 Heb. 2. 10. Eſa. 8. 18.

And who be thoſe Children? Thoſe, whom He ſhall regenerate, and beget anew by his prædicabo Legem, the immortal ſeed: For, of His own good will begat He us, by the Word of truth, that We might be the firſt fruits of His creatures. Theſe are the children, that are here meant. Of whom it ſhall be ſaid, quod, per filium, filii, that in and by this Son, they ſhall be His Sons, all. And, what was ſaid to Chriſt, ſhall be ſaid to them, and every of them, Filius meus tu. The Birth. 1 Pet. 1. 2, 3. Jam. 1. 18.

Of Sion ſaith the LXXXVII. Pſalme, It ſhall be ſaid, He was born in her. And that is true, for ſo He was. But he goes on further, and ſaith, He did remember himſelf of Rahab, and Babylon, the Philiſtims, and the Morians land, for, lo, there He was born. Born there? How can that be? Yes, born there, and here, and every where; where, by this Prædicabo Legem, He begets children to God. The power and vertue of his Birth reacheth even thither. Every place that receiveth His law (where ever it be) even there he is Born. This for his birth. Pſal. 87 4.

To this Birth there belongs a Birth-right. They talk much of the law, as of a birth-right: but (lo) this here, is a Birth-right, indeed; and that, veri nominis; and amounts to more than a Childs part. And it growes out of the double title, or intereſt, which he hath to all that is given him. For, as The Birth-right.

he is twice a Son, twice begotten, [1] Ante luciferum, and [2] Hodie: ſo hath he double right grows to him expreſſed in two diſtinct words (in the next verſe) [1] one of Inheritance, [2] the other of Poſſeſſion, or purchaſe; for, Ahazza is true Hebrew for a purchaſe. Of which two, One contents him: his title, as Heir. The other he tranſcribes and ſets over to us, which is that of his purchaſe, as Hodie genitus.

But we need not ſo much as to go to the next verſe for it. Filius meus tu, will ſerve; Which was ſaid twice to him. [1] Once, as his Baptiſme, hic eſt filius meus. And ſo it is likewiſe at ours, to us; for, therein we are made members of Chriſt, and the children of God [2] And again, hic eſt Filius meus, at his tranſfiguration in the Mount. And we keeping the law of our Baptiſme, the ſame ſhall be ſaid to us likewiſe, the ſecond time; and when time comes, we ſhall be tranſfigured into the glorious image of the Son of God. And this is, Lex factorum on his part: this ſhall be done for us by Him. This we called the Goſpel of this Law.

Mat.3.17.

Phil.3.21.

What we to do for Him: The duty.

And what ſhall be done for us by Him? Which is the Law of duty on our part required; and which we called the Law of this Goſpel: implyed in the two firſt words, Prædicabo and Legem. Either word hath his condition. Firſt, if he preach, that we beſtow the hearing of him. And then legem, that we know it is a law he preacheth: and therefore ſo, and no otherwiſe than ſo, to hear it.

1 Prædicabo.

Hear him preach? that we will be entreated to, eaſily. If that be all, we will never ſtick with him for that. Nay Gods bleſsing on his heart, for (as the world goes) we are now, all, for preaching.

2 Legem.

But take Legem with you too. It is ſo Prædicabo, as it is legem. Preached, and ſo preached, as it is a law, his Sermons are ſo many Law-lectures: His preaching is our Law to live by; And law binds, and leaves us not to live, as we liſt. And if that which is preached be law, it is to be heard, as a law; kept, as a law; to be made our lex factorum, as well as lex fidei. If we hear it otherwiſe, if we hear it not ſo, if we looſe legem; we may let go Prædicabo too, and all.

And here now, we break. As a law? Nay none of that. The hearing we will give him: but ſoft, no law (by your leave.) Our caſe is this: So long as it is but Prædicabo, but Preaching, we care not greatly, though we hear it: but if it once come to legem, to be preſſed upon us, as a law; farewell our parts; we give him over: for law binds, and we will not be bound. Upon the point, we are faſt at Prædicabo, and looſe at legem. Leave Chriſt his book to preach by; but keep the law in our own hands. But (to be ſhort) if we hear it, not as a law; hear it not, but as news; if we bring our Sermons to an end, as a tale, that is told; if that be all; we forfeit all that follows, all our part and portion, in Filius meus, and Hodie genui and all.

By legem, what law is meant.

Now, if you aſk, what law it is, is hear meant? No other, but the law, of theſe words, Filius meus tu: For, Filius meus tu, in the body of it, carrieth a law: That containes all Filial duties, which is the perfecteſt law, when all is done. For, the law of a Son is more, than all laws beſides. For beſides that it is lex factorum, that a Son will do any thing that is to be done; he will further do it, out of filial love and affection, which is worth all. And this Law (indeed) is worth the preaching. It is exhibita de Sion lex, the law that came from Sion.

Eſay 2.3.

The law of Sinai, that begins with Ego ſum Dominus; it is a Law of ſervitude; a law for the bondwoman and her brood. Never preach it: at leaſt, not to children. That law is to give place, and in place therof, is to come the law of Sion, which we preach; the law of the free-woman, & the children of promiſe: the law of love, of filial love, proceeding, not from the Spirit of bondage, but from the Spirit of adoption.

Gal.4.24.

Rom.8.15.

There is lex factorum in both: But, as Gregory well expreſſes it, Si ſervus es, metus plagas, if thou be bond (as Iſhmael) do it, out of ſervile fear, for fear of the whip. Si mercenarius, expecta mercedem: if thou be an hireling (as Balaam) do it, out of mercenary reſpect. Sed ſi filius meus tu; then do it, out of true, natural affection; perform all duties of a kind Son to him, that ſaid, genui te, as did Iſaac the ſon of the free-woman, to Abraham, that begot him, even to the laying down of his life. None to Timothy (ſaith S. Paul) none like minded to him; for, as a ſon with his father, ſo hath he laboured with me in the Goſpel. So, (that is) ſo freely, ſo ſincerely, ſo reſpectfully, as a loving, kind, natural ſon could do no more. And that is Lex factorum, indeed. And ſo much for lex factorum on our part: what we do for him: the filial duties: the Law of this Goſpel.

Gen.22.9.

1 The Time hodie.

VVe lack nothing now, but the time. And as legem, is the condition; ſo hodie, is the time. VVe are willed by the Apoſtle to inſiſt upon this word, Hodie, to call upon men for this duty, while it is called, To day. Not to defer, or to put off, or make a morrow matter of it. VVe are all inclined to be Craſtini, or Perendini, for to morrow, or next day, or, I know not when; but not to be Hodierni. Hodie is no Adverb with us: for where ſhall we find one, but will take dayes for any matter of duty? To look to this Hodie, and not deceive our ſelves: for no time, but hodie, hath any promiſe: VVitneſſe, Hodie, ſi vocem; To day if you will hear his voyce; which every day ſounds in our ears.

Heb.3.13,15.

2 Hodie genui.

But, Hodie genui, is more than Hodie: for every day in the year, while it laſts, is Hodie, To day: but every day is not Hodie genui. There is but one of them in the whole year; and that, is this day. This day then to take: of all other Hodie's, not to let ſlip the Hodie of this day. A day, whereon this Scripture was fulfilled: whereon, Dixit, & factum eſt, He ſaid it, and did it; whereon, this Son was born, and given us: A day, whereon as it is moſt kindly preached; ſo, it will be moſt kindly practiſed of all others. And ſo, I hold you no longer; but end.

Praying to Him, that was the Hodie genitus of this day, Him, that was begotten, and Him, by whom He was begotten: that we may have our parts, as in Prædicabo, preacking; ſo likewiſe in legem, the law: in both legem fidei, to believe aright, and legem factorum, to live according: That we performing the filial duties required, may attain the filial rights promiſed, and may be in the number of thoſe to whom firſt, and laſt, Filius meus tu ſhall be ſaid, to our everlaſting comfort, and to the praiſe of the glory of His grace, through Chriſt our Lord.

Being ASHWEDNESDAY.

PSAL. LXXVIII. Vers. XXXIV.

Cum occideret eos, quærebant Eum: & revertebantur; & diluculo veniebant ad Eum.

When He slew them, then they sought Him: and they returned, and inquired early after God.

THIS Psalm is a Calendar, or Roll of reports, how from Moses to David, the Iews carried themselves to God, in matter of Religion. And this verse, a report how in the matter of repentance (expressed here, under the terms of seeking and turning to God.) Wherein, this they did, this was their fashion; while He spared them, they sought Him not; When he slew them, then they sought him. Cum, &c. These words are a report.

A report: but such an one, as when S. Paul heard of the Corinthians, he could not commend it: What shall we say, shall we praise you in this? No, we praise you not. Neither He them, for that: Nor I these, for this. Rather as old Father Ely said to his sons: Non est bonus Sermo hic, quem audio de vobis; This is no good report I hear, Cum occideret, &c.

Whether good or whether evil, it pertaineth to us. For, to us of the Gentiles hath S. Paul entailed whatsoever well or ill befell the dissolved Church of the Iews: These, all these came unto them for example, and are enrolled, to warn us that grow nearer and nearer to the ends of the world.

Both pertaineth unto us; the Scripture hath both: And, in it draweth on our duty to us, in both, in good and evil reports; as it were in white work, and black work. And we have to use of both: Yet, not of both reports alike, but diversly, as our instructions upon them are divers. For we are not so much to regard the bare report, as the inſtruction of it. For which cauſe Aſaph hath entitled this Pſalm, not Aſaph's report, but Aſaph's inſtruction.

Now, we have here our report; May we find, what our inſtruction is touching it? VVe may. Aſaph expreſſly hath ſet it down at the VIII. verſe before. That this, and other errours of theirs are here upon the File, Ne fiant ſicut patres eorum, that we ſhould not be like our forefathers, a croſs and crooked generation. Not like them, in other indignities: and among other, in this Cum occideret, &c. Never to ſeek God but when he kills us.

In which foul indignity, our age is (certainly) as deep, as ever was that; And we need Aſaph's inſtruction, no leſſe than they.

For, as if there were no uſe of Religion, but onely Cum occideret, ſo ſpend we all our whole time, in the ſearch of other things. Not caring to ask, or ſeek, or conferre about the ſtate of our ſouls, even till occideret come. And then (peradventure) ſending for Aſaph, and hearing him ſpeak a few words about it, which we would fain have called the ſeeking of God. I can ſay little to it; I pray God it prove ſo: but ſure (I fear) it will be found Minus habens, far ſhort of it.

Dan. 5. 27. VVhich is ſo uſually received, that take a ſurvey, not one of an hundred ever think of it, before. So ſecurely practiſed, as if we had ſome Superſedeas lying by us, not to do it till then: As if there were no ſuch Scripture as this upon record; which turned to their deſtruction, and muſt needs lie heavy upon us, when we ſhall remember it. Cum occideret, &c.

Now ſure, this courſe muſt needs be prejudicial to our ſouls: and a number periſh in it daily before our eyes. Yet we ſit ſtill, and ſuffer this cuſtome to grow and gather head. Neither delivering their ſouls, or (at leaſt) our own, by telling them ſeriouſly, this is not the time: and, then, to ſeek is not the ſeeking, God will allow. That this is a Ne fiant, ſuch a thing, as ſhould not be done in Iſrael. That it is upon record, ad ignominiam, to their diſgrace and deſtruction: And it cannot be to our comfort or commendation, to do the like. Out of which their deſtruction, Aſaph frameth an inſtruction for us: and (as it is well ſaid, and fitly to this day) ex cinere Judæorum lixivium Chriſtianorum, of the Iews Aſhes maketh a Lee for Chriſtians, to cleanſe us from this foul indignity. Ut videntes cadentes, videant ne cadant, that, heeding their fall, we take heed we fall not; that is, ſeek, not as they ſought, leſt we periſh, by like example of ſeeking too late.

Therefore, that we ſet our ſelves to ſeek, before this Cum come: that is (in a word) ſeek God, as by repentance and the fruits; ſo by undelayed repentance, and the timely fruits of it; and be not like Jude 12. the Apoſtle Jude's Autumnus bis emortuus, our ſeeking all Summer, withered and dry, and beginning to ſhoot out a little, about Michaelmaſ ſpring; of which kind of ſhooting, fruit can never come. This is the ſum.

The diviſion The words conſiſt of two parts. Two parts? but, theſe two evil matched, or (as S. Paul) unequally 2 Cor. 6. 4. yoaked together. For where our chief actions (of which I take it, our ſeeking of God is one) ſhould have the chiefeſt time: Here, is the firſt and beſt of our actions ſorted, with the laſt and worſt part of our time: Quærebant Eum, with Cum occideret.

And, not onely miſs-ſorted, but miſs-placed. For, cum occideret, His killing ſtandeth before our ſeeking: whereas our ſeeking ſhould be firſt, and His killing come after. This was never Gods Fiant: they muſt have a Ne fiant.

I. Of theſe two, then. Firſt by way of report, joyntly: that, de facto thus it is: thus, they; and thus, we ſeek.

II. Then, if we take them in ſunder, and (as Jeremy ſaith) * Separate the pretious from the vile. Quærebant Eum, the flower of our actions, from cum occideret, the droſs, dregs, and very refuſe of our time. Conſider them apart, and ſhew: 1. That this time is not the time. 2. And that this ſeeking, thus ſorted and thus placed, is no ſeeking, nor ever ſhall find. Therefore, with Aſaph's inſtruction, to ſettle our ſeeking upon ſome other time; and to reſolve, to begin it before.

* Jer. 15. 19.

I. Of both de facto joyntly. 1 Cum occideret. Verſe 33.

TWo powers there are in Cum: 1. A Privative, of all times before: 2. A Poſitive, of that inſtant time, then. No time, before, we ſeek: At that inſtant time, then, we do. On which two conſiſteth Theatrum vitæ, the very Theater of our life. Our caſe, before that time, is lively expreſſed in the words immediately precedent. They ſpent their dayes in vanity, and their years in turmoile in the world. Our caſe, then, at that time, in theſe words, cum occideret eos. Yea, by implication they are both in this verſe: By what they do now, is implyed what they did before. 1 Now, they ſought him: So that, before, they loſt Him. 2 Again, Then they turned to; So that, before, they turned away, and not onee looked toward Him. 3 Now they roſe up early: So that, before, they put it off till twilight. 4 Now they remembred: So that, before, they forgat Him clean; No ſpeech, no queſtion; nay, no thought about Him.

1 Thus it was (ſaith Aſaph) under Moſes. While His hand was not upon them; they regarded Him not, as not worth the ſeeking: Perdebant Eum, it was their loſing time. But, when He ſlew them, they fell to ſeek; and well was he that might find: Quærebant Eum, it was their ſeeking time.

2 Before, Quærebant alia, they found themſelves other matters more meet to ſeek: Then Quærebant eum, they gave over all, to ſeek Him, onely.

3 Before, He ſought them; and they gave Him good leave, ſo to do. Then all is turned out and in: As, He, them, before; So they, Him, now.

And

And is it not thus with us, that are now in theatro upon the ſtage? Yes indeed: and more, if more may be. This, is but vetus fabula, per novos hiſtriones, the ſame Play again by other Actors. For, in Publike: when in the dayes of ſafety, plenty, and peace, we are in the 6 of Amos, and are beſt at eaſe when Quærebant is fartheſt from us; but, if Warre, Famine, or Contagion come, then we runne to the II. of Joel, Sanctifie a Faſt, and call for the Ark, and grow all godly on a ſudden: What is this, but Cum occideret? And in Private: VVhen while youth, and ſtrength, and health doth laſt, while the evil day is farre off, we are even at ceſſare fac Sanctum Iſrael à nobis, Cauſe the Holy one of Iſrael to ceaſe from us; But, when diſtreſſe, danger, or death come, when Rabſaketh is before the walls, then we cry, Now is the day of tribulation and anguiſh; now the children are come to the birth, and there is no ſtrength to be delivered; Now, Send to Eſay; Now, lift up thy prayer for the remnant that is left: VVhat is this, but Cum occideret? Surely, this is our caſe: Our ſeeking goeth wholly by our Killing: waxeth and waineth: is out and in, as that is neer at hand or farther off. I need not tell it, your eares and eyes are daily witneſſes, that this is a true ſaying, Cum occideret eos, &c. No killing, no ſeeking.

Joel 2. 19.

Eſay 37. 3, 14.

This is a true ſaying: but, all true ſayings are not by all meanes (Nay ſome, not by any meanes) to be received. The report (indeed) is, Thus it was. But the inſtruction, is Ne fiant, that it ſhould not be, To the end then, we may know, what to receive and what to refuſe, we will take it in pieces, and melt the droſſe from the ſilver metal. Quærebant eum, by it ſelf is good: Put occideret to it, it is baſe. Of theſe then in order.

II. Of each ſeverally.

Of quærebant eum, we ſhall ſoon agree (if it be quærebant eum) that it is a Fiat, a thing to be done. VVhich, many other wayes might be made to appear, but by none better than this here: That, at laſt, all come to it: Sooner or later, all ſeek it: all men, if not before, yet cum occideret, then, certainly.

1 Quærebant Eum, our fiat.

All ſeek: And among all, They ſought: which word is not without his weight here. For, what, are theſe, that Aſaph here meaneth, by they? Not Saints: Not, generatio quærentium, the generation of them that ſeek GOD. But, they, that (in the verſe before) waſted all their dayes in vanity, and their years in turmoiling in the world. They idle riotous perſons: They ſought.

Quærebant, they ſought: they and all. Pſal. 24. 6. 1

They, that (in a verſe after) flattered Him with their lips, and gave Him all the good words that might be, and meant no ſuch thing. The Hypocrites, They ſought. Ver. 33. 2

They, (that a little before) grievouſly provoked the moſt High GOD, with ſpeeches little better than blaſphemy, Can GOD doe this? Is there a GOD amongſt us, or is there none? And ſo in ſtead of quærebant Deum; An Deus, made a queſtion whether there were any to ſeek: That is, even the very wicked, and (of all wicked, the worſt) the prophane Atheiſt, They ſought, Even, at laſt, They ſought. This, is the triumph of Religion: The Riotous perſon, The Hypocrite, The Atheiſt, all ſhall ſeek. Ver. 35. Ver. 19.

And herein is folly condemned even of her own childen, and wiſdome juſtified of her very enemies: That they, that greedily ſeek ſin, at laſt would be glad to be rid of it: and they, that merily ſcorne Religion, at laſt are glad to ſeek to it.

They ſhall ſeek: And, the time is ſet down when they ſhall ſeek; and when you ſhall not faile, but ſee them ſeek, that never ſought before. In diebus juventutis, not then: Sanus factus eſt, nor then, neither: But, cum occideret, then, certainly. Cum occideret, Mark this Cum, when it commeth, and you ſhall ſee them, that ſtood out all their life long, then come in.

The Heathen man ſaw it with his eyes. O (ſaith the Perſian Meſſenger in Æſchylus) when the Græcian forces hotly purſued our Hoſt, and we muſt needs venter over the great water Strymon, frozen then; but beginning to thaw, when an hundred to one we had all dyed for it (that is cum occideret;) with mine eyes, I ſay (ſaith he) when Θεὸς ἢ τίς, &c. of thoſe Gallants whom I had heard (before ſo boldly maintein, There was no GOD to ſeek, τοτ' ἄυχὸ λιταις, then every one of them on their knees, and full devoutly praying, the Ice might hold till they got over. Moſes ſaw it, with his eyes. Pharaoh (who was at high termes,) Who is the LORD you talk of? (and anſwered himſelf) he knew none ſuch, nor nothing would do for Him: When Cum occideret came, he took notice, there was a LORD higher than he: that that LORD was righteous, and he a wretched ſinner, that ſought for grace at His hands. Mark but the ſhutting up of dixit inſipiens (their own Pſalme.) When (ſaith David) they have in heart ſought to perſwade themſelves, Non eſt: ſeek none, None there is: and thereupon corrupted themſelves, and became moſt loathſome in their lives, eat up their tenants, as they would do ſo many morſels of bread; made a mocke of ſuch holy men, as ſet themſelves ſeriouſly to ſeek GOD: When all is done, and occideret come, trepidabunt timore, ubi non erat timor, they ſhall begin to be afraid, where (they held before) no fear needed: And here ſhall be the laſt verſe of their Pſalme; Quis dabit è Sion ſalutem, to wiſh for the ſalvation of Sion: which they have ſo oft derided. They ſhall ſeek, and then they ſhall ſeek. Till then (poſſibly) you ſhall loſe your labour, if you tell them of ſeeking of GOD but and how good it is. They are (ſaith Jeremy) like the Dromedary of the wilderneſſe, a beaſt of exceeding ſwiftneſſe, the female ſpecially:) Over hill and dale ſhe goeth (ſaith the Prophet,) and ſnuffeth up the aire at her pleaſure, and who can overtake her? They, that ſeek her, will not weary themſelves, till her moneth: And in her moneth when ſhe is bagged, then they will finde her, and deale with her well enough. The caſe is like. Age, ſickneſſe, death are farre off: Youth, health, and ſtrength poſſeſſe them: there is no comming to them then. The moneth, cum occideret, is not yet come: But, come that once (as, once it will to all) you ſhall find, quærebant will have his place, Fiat. It is therefore GODS own reſolution; Thus He re-

Jer. 2. 24.

Hos.5.15. reſolveth: I will go (ſaith He) and returne to my place, till they acknowledge their faults, and ſeek me: And when will that be? He addeth: in noviſſimo quærent me diligenter, an end will come: and when that commeth, they will ſeek me diligently, even the beſt of them. And, even ſo we are fain to reſolve: For, our lot, is GODS lot, and when He fought to them, we go to our place, and there

Joh.5.4. ſtand, till their moneth, Expectantes aquæ motum, waiting till the deſtroying Angel come and ſtirre the water, and then quærent eum will be worth the ſeeking after.

2 Cor.5.13. Then, according to S. Paul's disjunctive, we, that all other times mente excedimus Deo, at that time ſobrii ſumus vobis. Divinity, which (in our ruffe) is ſophiſme and ſchool-points, and (at the beſt) a kind of extaſie about God, is and ſhall be, then, the words of truth and ſoberneſſe. For, GOD, and His ſeeking will have their time; Before, if it may be: but if not before, then, at the fartheſt: Firſt, or laſt; all ſhall confeſſe, by ſeeking God is to be ſought. Some, before He kill; and happy are they: But, when He killeth, all: Hypocrites, Heathen, Atheiſts, and all.

And I would pray you (in a word) but to note, in ſeeking then, how many things they confeſſe. For, there be (I take it) four potential Confeſſions in it:

1 That ſuch an one there is to be ſought. A Power above us, whoſe being and ſovereignty all, firſt or laſt ſhall ſeek.

2 Eſay 45.19. That ſomewhat there is to be found: ſome good to be done, in ſeeking (as Eſay ſaith) Non fruſtra dixit, He hath not in vain ſaid to the ſeed of Iacob, ſeek ye me. For, were it to no purpoſe, they would not then do it; but, as at other times they did, ſo let it alone then, too.

3 That, whatſoever that good is, hit upon it, or ſtumble on it, we ſhall not: It will not be had in parergo, but ſeek it we muſt. For, without ſeeking it will not be had. If it would, they might ſit ſtill, and let it drop into their laps.

4 Pſal.69.32. That, ſeeking at this time when He ſlayeth them, they that ſhew what that good is, they ſeek. Even that, the Pſalmiſt ſaith, ſeek the LORD, and your ſoul ſhall live: that whatſoever become of their body, at leaſt, their ſoul may live: that we looſe not both; that He kill not both, and caſt both into hell fire. And this even when we come within the hemiſphere of the other life, the ſenſe we then have of ſomewhat that ſhould have been ſought before; the miſ-giving of our hearts; they ſhall come to reckoning, for not ſeeking ſooner: And this, that not one of us would die ſuddenly by our wills, but have a time to ſeek GOD; before we looſe our ſelves: This, that we deſire to die ſeeking, howſoever we live; all ſhew certainly, it is a Fiat, a thing to be done; a good thing to ſeek GOD, even the enemies of it, being Judges of it.

So then: quærebant Eum is as it ſhould be. But, I adde: [1] If it be quærebant, ſeeking indeed. [2] And, if it be quærebant Eum, and not aliud in Eo: ſeeking, not Him, but ſomewhat elſe by Him.

1 It muſt be quærebant, ſeeking indeed.

If it be ſeeking indeed. For they, to whom the Prophet Eſay ſaid, * Si quæritis, quærite; If ye ſeek, why then do it; ſought ſo, as (it ſeemeth) their ſeeking deſerved not the name of ſeeking. So looſly, ſo ſlightly, ſo ſlenderly, they did it; as if, that they ſought were as good loſt as found. So ſought the party that ſaid, In lectulo quæſivi quem diligit anima, that lay in bed and ſought. So he that asked our Saviour, Quid eſt veritas? (a very good queſtion:) and when he had asked it, another thing took him in the head, and up he roſe and went his way, before CHRIST could tell him, what it was. Such is our ſeeking, for the moſt part. Some idle queſtion caſt: Some table-talk moved: Some quid eſt veritas, and go our way: all by the way, in tranſcurſu: and never, as if it were about ſome matter of ſpecial moment, ſit about it, and ſeek it out indeed.

* Eſay 21. 12. Cant. 3.1. Ioh.28.30.

1. They turned them (ſaith the text:) as if, before, they ſought, without ſo much as turning them about.

2. They roſe up: as though before, they ſate ſtill and ſought.

3. They did it early, and did not tarry till Cum occideret, the Sun were ſet, and no light to ſeek by, but their feet ſtumbled in the dark mountains.

4. They inquired: So that before, if you had ought to ſay to them, you might; they had nothing to ſay to you. To ſeek, then, is to turn, to riſe, to riſe early, to enquire after it. O ſi quæritis, quærite (ſaith Eſay,) this morning commeth, and ſo doth the night: that is, our dayes ſpend apace; and we ſay, we will ſeek: If we will ſeek, let us once do it indeed.

Eſay 21. 12.

1 2 It muſt be Eum, Him. * 2 Cor.12: 14. Ioh.6.26. Pſal. 105. 4.

Secondly, if it be quærebant, and if it be eum: Another point to be rectified. * Non veſtra, ſed vos (ſaith the Apoſtle) is the right ſeeking. Not, ſeek him, for ſomewhat we would have of Him: but to ſeek Himſelf, for Himſelf. It is one thing (ſay the Schooles) to ſeek GOD, for fruition: another, to ſeek Him, to make uſe of Him. One thing (ſaith CHRIST) to ſeek for the miracle; another, for the loaves. One thing, to ſeek his face; another, to ſeek His fingers ends. One thing to conſult with Him only for conſcience, to know and do: another, to conſult with Him, if it hit our, humour to make our advantage of it; if it go againſt us, to ſet light by it. Such is our ſeeking for the moſt part: Cum occideret, to have our turn ſerved; to have our health reſtored, that we may ſeek Him no longer, but to our former ryot again, and to morrow may be as yeſterday, and much more.

Eſay 56.12.

2 Our Ne fiat: cum occideret, the time. * Hoſ.5.6. Iohn 8. 21.

Seek Him, indeed: Seek Him, for Himſelf. Theſe two points being agreed of, we ſhall thoughly agree of quærebant eum. And, ſo much for it, and for our fiat. Now, to our Ne fiat.

For, when we have agreed of our ſeeking, we have not done. With * diligence, it would be, and due reſpect. Our ſeeking (as all things, the beſt things under the Sun) muſt have τὸν ὁ῾ραν καὶ τὸν χῶρον, their due time and place. Wherein appeareth the abating power of Circumſtances: that they are able to bring down the ſubſtances. Namely, of the time: And that, miſſe-timing marreth not only muſicke, but all things elſe. The thing is right, The Cum is wrong; and ſo, all is wrong.

To find out the time, we agree firſt, that as every weighty thing hath, ſo the ſeeking of GOD is to be allowed a time, too. 1 Gods ſeeking to have a time.

VVhat time is that? Verily, we ſhould doe it abſolutely, all our life long: Quarite faciem Ejus ſemper. Not, When? But, when not? without limitation, continually. Pſal. 105. 4.

And, in this ſenſe we grant Cum occîderet: then, and at other times too. But, not (as Aſaph) then, and never till then: So, we deny it.

GOD (indeed) is ſo to be ſought: but we cannot ſo ſeek Him: Other our affaires crave allowance out of our time, and we are well content to yeeld it largely. Only that GOD hath a ſet time left, when to ſeek Him. That is but reaſon: all will yeeld to it. All grant a Cum. A ſet time, Cum.

But, come to knovv, vvhen that when ſhall be; here, vve vary, firſt. We cannot be brought to let dovvn any certainty, but love to be left at large. Doe it vve vvill; but (indeed) vve cannot ſhevv when; but even Felix his when, ὅταν μετακαλέσωμαι, when we have leaſure. I cannot novv ſtand to ſeek (ſaith he;) I hope one day to be at leaſure to do it: but, that day neuer came. Acts 14. 26.

Urge them, preſſe them, When? No other reſolution, but, omnis peccator dicit, Aliquando Deum ſequar, ſed non modò: Sometime ſtill; but, not this time. Never in the preſent; but, ſometime hereafter.

Follovv them all along their life, they finde not this Cum, but put it from one Cum to another, till there be none left, but only Cum occîderet, Even that very time againſt vvhich GOD layeth His exceptions. Every time before, vve ſay, Nondum tempus, it is not time yet: Every houre before, Nondum venit hora, the hour is not yet come.

Not to leave GOD'S ſeeking thus at randome: But to grovv to ſome certainty. I demand, Will any time ſerve? Is GOD at all times to be found? It is certaine, Not. The very limitation (of dum invenire poteſt) ſhevveth plainly, that other times there be, vvherein, Seeke him you may, but finde Him you ſhall not. Eſay 55. 6.

Then, if, at all times. He is not to be found, vve are to make choice of a certaine Cum, Cum inveniri poteſt, vvhen He may be found, and then ſeek him.

Many returnes there be, in the term of our life; Many Cum's: All are reduced to tvvo: 1 Cum Servaret, and 2 Cum Occîderet. Or (if vve vvill needs be vvedded, to a Cum occideret) 1 Cum occîderet hoſtes eorum; 2 not, eos: VVhen He ſcattereth and ſlayeth our enemies, and ſaveth us. One of theſe tvvo it muſt needs be.

Cum occîderet, it is not. CHRIST Himſelfe expreſly limiteth it, before: * Dedi ei tempus ad pœnitendum; (ſaith he) I gave her a time to repent. VVhat time is that? Leſt vve might miſtake it, to be Cum occideret: He adds; if vve doe it not in that time, ſo by Him given, He vvill caſt us downe on our beds, the beds of affliction and ſickneſſe, and there kill us with death. So that, the time, He allovveth us to repent, is before vve come thither. For, thither vve come, becauſe vve did it not in the time, he gave us to doe it in. Indeed, our bed is not the place. In lectulo quæſivi: I ſought Him in my bed: quæſivi, ſed non inveni: I ſought Him, but I found Him not. The place of ſlaughter is not the place: Nor, the time of killing is not the time. VVe may take that time: but it is not dedi illis, none of His giving. The time, He giveth us, is before we come there. It would be 1 Cum ſervaret. * Apoc. 2. 21. Ver. 22, 23. Cant. 3. 1.

Then, if when he kills us, is not it when he ſaveth us? it is. It is indeed: and a cluſter of it, an houre of cum ſervaret, then, is better than a vintage, a whole day of Cum occîderet.

Upon theſe [illegible] the whole Pſalme ſtandeth: and the part (before) ſheweth, when it ſhould have been. When He over-whelmed the Egyptians in the Sea: When the pillar of the clond was over: When, He not only ſaved them, but ſerved them, raining downe Manna, for their need, and giving them Quailes for their luſt: then, was the time with them: and then, is the time with us. Ver. 13, 14, 24, 27.

For (ſure) as we ſeek GOD, to ſave us: ſo, He ſaveth us, to ſeek Him. If when we ſeek Him, we are ſaved; when we are ſaved, we ſhould ſeek Him. The time of His ſaving, is the time of our ſeeking: And, one houre, then, is better than four and twenty.

All that while, what ſeek we? VVhy (as Jeremy ſaith) we doe then quærere grandia. Other greater matters we have in hand: Matters of more weight than the ſeeking of GOD. As if His ſeeking were ſome pety buſineſſe: Slightly to be ſought, and lightly to be found. And any time good enough for it. Jer. 45. 5.

Nay, not that: but, ſo evil are we affected to ſeek Him, then, that quærebant is occîderet: we indite Him of our death; it is death to doe it: as leeſe die, as ſeek: It maketh us old; it killeth us before our time. VVe digeſt not them, that call on us for it, but ſeek our ſelves (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) Magiſtros ſecundùm deſideria, that may entertaine us with Speculations, of what may be done by miracle, at the houre of death: that may give us dayes and elbow-roome enough, to ſeek other things, and to ſhrink up His ſeeking into a narrow time, at our end; and tell us, time enough then. For, thus (then) we reckon: all the time we ſpend in it, we looſe the fruit of our life, and the joy of our hearts ſhall be taken from us. As if the fruit of life were not to find GOD; Or, as if any true hearts joy, GOD being not found. Call we this our fruit and joy, not to ſeek God? Call it not ſo: Lætetur cor quærentium Deum (ſaith the Holy Ghoſt) Let the heart of them rejoyce, that ſeek the LORD. Yea, in lachrymis peccatorum, in the very teares of a penitent, there is (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) more ſound joy, than in riſu theatrorum, in all the games the Theater can afford. Da Chriſtianum, & ſcit quid dico. But our taſte is turned, and we reliſh not this ſeeking. By our fleſh-pots 2 Tim. 4. 3. Pſal. 105. 3.

we have lived, and by them we will dye, and ſo we doe. Luſt hath been our life, and we will be buried in the graves of Luſt: And ſo we ſhall, and never know, what that joy meaneth, Lætetur cor quærentium Deum.

1 Cum occîderet alios.

Cum ſervaret then, will not ſerve. Nay, Cum occîderet will ſcarce ſerve, it hath much adoe; Let him draw His ſword and come amongſt us. For if (as, of His goodneſſe, He doth not) He ruſh not on us at firſt, but begin with others: If it be cum occîderet alios: we ſeek not. See yee the XXXI. Verſe: He took away others, before their faces; and thoſe, not weak or ſickly perſons, but the goodlieſt and ſtrongeſt of all Iſrael, and leaſt likely to die: Here is occîderet. Now, did this move? No. (See the XXXII. Verſe:) for, at this they ſinned yet more, and went about their ſeeking never the ſooner. It muſt be cum occideret eos, themſelves, their owne ſelves, or it will not doe it.

4 3 Cum cæderet eos.

Come then to themſelves, and ſmite them with the edge, not with the point: with the edge, to wound; not with the point; to diſpatch out-right; will that ſerve? Cum caderet eos, when He wounded them, with ſome mortal ſickneſſe the meſſenger of death, would they ſeek Him then? No: not then, not for all that, would they frame to it. For, quærebant medicum, then. I ſay, as Aſa ſought medicos, & non Deum: Not, GOD and them, but them firſt, and let GOD ſtay till they be gone. And till they give us over, and tell us plainly, occideret is now come indeed: no ſmiting or wounding will ſend us to ſeek. So that, it is not either [1] Cum ſervaret eos, or [2] Cum ſerviret eis, His ſaving, or ſerving us: Nay, it is not, [3] Cum occideret alios, or [4] Cum caderet, His killing others, or wounding us with any but our deaths-wound, will doe it.

2 Chro. 16. 12.

It is Cum occideret, which is a Ne fiat.

Tandem then, when we are come to the very laſt caſt, our ſtrength is gone, our ſpirit clean ſpent, our ſenſes apalled, and the powers of our ſoul as numb as our ſenſes: when a general proſtration of all our powers, and the ſhadow of death upon our eyes: Then, ſomething we would ſay or do, which ſhould ſtand for our ſeeking: but (I doubt) it will not ſerve. This is the time, we allow GOD, to ſeek Him in.

Is this it? would we then ſeek Him, when we are not in caſe, to ſeek any thing elſe? Would we turne to Him then, when we are not able to turne our ſelves in our bed? Or, riſe early to ſeek him, when we are not able to riſe at all? Or enquire after Him, when our breath faileth us, and we are not able to ſpeak three words together? Neither before, nor with, but even at the end of occideret? No hour, but the hour of death? No time, but when He taketh time from us, and us from it, & tempus non erit amplius? What ſhall I ſay? Shall I commend this ſeeking, turning, riſing, enquiring? No: I cannot commend it, either in it ſelf, or to any. I commend it not.

Apoc. 10. 7.

That that may be ſaid is this, and it is nothing. True: ſome one or two of a thouſand and ten thouſand, that have. How then? Shall we not therefore follow our inſtruction and ſeek Him before? Nay then, Some have found and never ſought: Let us not ſeek him at all, if that will hold. Thus it is: Some, going a journey, have found a purſe by the way: It were mad counſel, to adviſe us to leave our money behind, upon hope of like hap in ours. No: this is ſafe and good: Though ſome one or two have found and not ſought; yet let us ſeek for all that. Though ſome one or two have, then, ſought, and found, yet let us ſeek before. Though ſome have found a purſe in their way, let us not truſt to like hap, but carry money with us. This is a privy door, on ſpecial favour open to ſome few. There lyeth no way by them. This is the way, (you have heard) walk in it, and you ſhall find reſt to your ſouls.

Eſay 65. 1.

1 As not CHRIST'S time of ſeeking.

To ſpeak then of ſafe ſeeking, and ſure finding, I ſay (as Aſaph ſaith) it is a Ne fiant. This time is not the time CHRIST giveth us: He aſſigneth us another. Yea, we condemne our ſelves, in that we would ſeek to allow it our ſelves. If we were put to it, to ſay plainly; Not, till he kill me: it would choake us. We neither have heart nor face, we would not dare to anſwer ſo; we dare not avow it. And if it be a Ne dicant, it is a Ne fiant. The time of GODS quærite is Primum quærite. This Cum is the laſt of all our Cum's; all other before it. Firſt, and laſt are flat ad oppoſitum. This is not it.

Matth. 6. 33.

2 Not the acceptable time.

The time of ſeeking GOD muſt be Kairos, ſuch as is meet to be received. This, is not: Therefore (I hope) we will not offer it GOD. If we do, take heed He ſcorn not this time, as He doth their price, in Zachary: A goodly time that I have aſſigned me. Take heed He ſtand not upon His reputation (as in Malachi) and bid us Offer our ſervice, at this hour, to any great man and ſee, whether he will be content with it, and not reject both us and our ſeeking, then. This, is not; cannot be but a great Ne fiant; To offer GOD that, no man is ſo mean, but would take in evil part.

Zach. 11. 13.

Mal. 2. 8.

This time, is the time, when all Hypocrites, Atheiſts, tag and rag come in, and ſeek Him in a ſort: And ſhall not we be confounded to ſee our ſelves in their number? Nay, to ſay that muſt be ſaid (for, true it is.) It is paſt the Devils time. They be his words [Cur, ante tempus?] and he ſeeketh to make them ours, that it is ever too ſoon to ſeek GOD. At the hardeſt (I truſt) we will not keep time with Him.

Mat. 8. 29.

3 No time of ſeeking, but of diſſembling. Verſe 25.

And, to ſeek Him then, is not to ſeek Him: Not quærebant Eum. No: they ſeek Him not, they diſſemble with him (ſaith Aſaph, in the next verſe.) For, when GOD, to try them, reprieved them never ſo little time, they fell to their old byas; and vvhen as He ceaſed killing, their ſeeking vvas at an end. So are all forced ſeekings: like to a bovv-ſtring brought to his full bent, but remit you never ſo little, it ſtarteth back again.

Nay, it is not quærebant, not kindly ſeeking, but a baſe ignoble creeping to, vvithout all all] ingenuity, vvhen vve muſt either die or do it. Neither χάρις nor καιρὸς to do it then.

But in very deed it is not ſeeking at all, as before vve defined quærebant, to ſeek indeed. There is a diameter betvveen occîderet and quærebant, and therefore, betvveen it and quærebant Eum. Men cannot then ſeek: If they muſt riſe up, and turn them that muſt do it; they are not able for their lives; to turn or ſtirre themſeves to do it. Nay, nor to enquire. For, vvhat is our ſeeking then? Is it not to lie ſtill on our bed, and ſuffer a fevv vvords to be ſpoken in our eares? Have a little opiate Divinity miniſtred to our ſouls, and ſo ſent away? Sure, this is rather to be ſought, than to ſeek. There goeth more to Quærebant, then thus. We muſt then ſeek, when we are in caſe, to give ſentence, and to doe judgement on our ſelves: VVhen we are able to take up our croſſe, before it be laid on us. Quærebant enim muſt ſtand before cum occîderet. 4 No ſeeking at all.

Laſtly, it would be known, What became of this Quærebant? VVhat they found that ſought thus; and then, and not before? They found not Him, the Prophet ſaith plainly: They go then, with ſheep and bullocks, and all manner of ſacrifice, to ſeek the Lord, but find Him not; for He hath with-drawn himſelf before. Theirſucceſſe of it. Hoſ. 5. 6.

And juſtly they find Him not, ex lege talionis. GOD himſelf anſwers them; nay, their own hearts anſwers themſelves: Go, vvhom you have ſpent your life in ſeeking, ſeek to them novv. Let them ſave you, at this, whom you ſought at all other times. As for me, it ſhall come to paſſe, as I cryed and you would not hear; So, you ſhall crie and ſeek, and ſhall not find, or be heard, (ſaith the LORD.

Yes, they found Him; but, with a door ſhut between Him and them. But, what found they? The Parable of the ten virgins tels us (which is the Goſpel for this Pſalme) they found (that vvhich we, I hope, ſhall ne ver find) a Neſcio vos. VVhere (that we may ſee, that this courſe is folly, and therefore indeed a ne fiant ſicut) that which putteth the difference of thoſe that be wiſe and go in, is that they had ſought and looked to their oyle yer the Bridegroome come: And thoſe that were fooliſh and ſhut out, when the Bridegroome was even comming (that is cum occideret) were to ſeek their oyle then; had not looked to it, till then. Neſcio vos is their anſwer, He knoweth them not: they took too ſhort a time, to breed acquaintance in. Noſcio vos they find, that ſo ſeek. Profecto ad hoc venitru, &c. At this clap, he that vvaketh not, is not aſleep but dead. Mat. 25. 12. Mat. 25. 41

To conclude then, vvith our Inſtruction. If this time, and this ſeeking have ſo many evill marks: the time ſo unſeaſonable; the ſeeking ſo many vvayes to ſeek: If the ſucceſſe to this ſeeking be no better, but Neſcio vos; VVhy then Ne fiat. If theſe here vvere not vvell adviſed: If thoſe Virgins vvere fooliſh: vvhy then, No fiant ſicut, not to be like. Our Inſtruction.

Secondly, To ſever the ſilver from the droſſe; The ſeeking is good, keep it: the time is wrong, change it; Either into Antequam occideret, or into Cum ſervaret. Fiat to the action, Ne fiat, to the time. 2

Thirdly, As we confeſſe, that there is one to be ſought: And that, with the turning of a ginne we cannot have Him, when we liſt, but ſeek Him we muſt: That His ſeeking is worth the while: And that it is not diſpatched in a minute, but muſt have time: So, to think His ſeeking worthy a better, and to allow it a better time than this to do it in. 3

Fourthly, ſeeing yet is the acceptable time; Yet, He may be found; Yet, it is cum ſervaret; occideret is not yet come; (How neer it is, it is hard to ſay: Our SAVIOUR CHRIST ſaith, it is qua hora naſcis, it may be neerer than we are aware:) Left it come upon us before we ſeek, let us ſeek, before it come upon us. So ſeeking, we ſhall ſafely ſeek: Safely ſeek, and ſurely find GOD; and with GOD, whatſoever is worth the finding. But (that which we ſeek) we ſhall, after occideret is paſt, find our ſelves in His preſence, and at His right hand, In whoſe preſence, is the fulneſſe of joy, (Not as ours here, joyes half empty:) and, at whoſe right hand, there are pleaſures for ever more; (Not as ours here, for a time, and a ſhort time, GOD knoweth.) 4 Luk. 12. 49. Pſal. 16. 11.

That, which here we ſeek and cannot find, with Him, we ſhall; if we ſhall here, indeed, and in due time ſeek Him, by the timely fruits of an undelayed repentance. Almighty GOD lighten our minds kindle our affections, ſettle our hearts ſo to ſeek, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE Queen Elizabeth,

At RICHMOND,

On the XXI. of FEBRUARY, A. D. MDXCIX.

Being ASWEDNESDAY.

At what time the Earle of ESSEX was going forth, upon the Expedition for IRELAND.

DEUT. XXIII. Verse IX.

Quando egreſſus fueris adverſus hoſtes tuos in pugnam, cuſtodies te ab omni re mala.

When thou goeſt out with the Hoſt againſt thine enemies, keep thee then from all wickedneſſe.

TO entitle this time to this Text, or to ſhew it pertinent to the preſent occaſion, will ask no long preface. When thou goeſt forth, &c. This When is Now. There be enemies: and we have an Hoſt: it is going forth. CHRISTS own application; (which is the beſt) may be well applied here. This day, is this Scripture fulfilled in your eares. This our Hoſt ſo going forth, our hearts deſire and prayer unto GOD is, that they may happily go, and thrice happily come again; with joy and triumph to Her Sacred Majeſty; honour to themſelves, and general contentment to the whole Land. So ſhall they go, and ſo come, if we can procure the Lord of Hoſts to go forth with, and to take charge of our Hoſts. It is he that giveth victory to Kings (ſaith DAVID:) It is He that is Triumphator Iſrael (ſaith Samuel:) Victory and triumph never fail, if He fail not.

Luk. 4. 21.

Pſal. 114. 10.
1 Sam. 15. 29.

Now then, that God may not fail them, but go in and out before them, and bring them back with victory and triumph, and that, we all deſire and pray for, may ſo come to paſſe; Moſes doth here, out of his own experience, beſtow an adviſe upon us: (And Moſes could could skill what belonged to war, as one that fourty years together was never out of camp.) Which adviſe is: that among our military points we would reckon the abatement of ſin for one: That now this time of our going forth, we would go forth againſt ſin too; and keep us from it, as we would keep us from our enemy. If we could be but perſwaded to reform our former cuſtome of ſin, it would (certainly) do the journey good. That therefore with other courſes, ſome remembrance, ſome regard be had of this; that, at this time, ſin do not ſo over-flow among us, be not ſo very fruitful as before time it hath.

And this is an uſe of Divinity in war. And, as this an uſe of Divinity, in war: ſo have we withal an uſe of war, in Divinity. For, Moſes telling us, that when our forces go forth againſt the enemy, that we, Then, at that time, are in any wiſe to keep us from wickedneſſe: by ſorting theſe thus together, doth plainly intimate: that, when the time of war is, then is a fit time, a very good opportunity, to draw from ſin and to return to GOD. Theſe former years, this time of the faſt, and this day, the firſt day of it, (both) miniſtred an occaſion to call for an abſtinence from ſin: This day, and this time being ſet out by the Churches appointed to that end. Now, beſides that ordinary, of other years, GOD, this year, hath ſent us another, the time of war: and that a very ſeaſonable time too, wherein to repent and retire from ſin. As if he ſhould ſay: If you will forſake ſin, now you may do it: For behold, now is an acceptable time, and a fit ſeaſon. This time to concurre with that time; and both to co-operate to the amendment of our lives.

And what ſhall I ſay? O that one of them, the former or the latter, or both might prevail ſo much with us, that as the fore-part, this day is fulfilled in our eares, ſo, the latter part might be fulfilled in our lives: that it might not be ſingly regarded, that is thus doubly commended: That the faſt at hand might keep us; or the war at hand might keep us; or both might keep us; that we might be kept from ſin. That either Joel's trump proclaiming a faſt, or Amo's trump proclaiming war, might ſerve to ſound this retreit, might ſerve to awake us from that (now more than ſleep,) even almoſt that Lethargie of ſin, which the ſecurity of our ſo long peace hath caſt us in.

This is the Summe. Theſe, the double uſe, [1] Of war, in Divinity: that our going forth might procure the giving over ſin. [2] Of Divinity, in war: that our giving over ſin might procure good ſpeed to our going forth; even an honourable and happy return.

The parts are two: (For, the Verſe parteth it ſelf by when, and then.) Theſe two: [1] the going forth of the Hoſt. [2] The keeping from ſin. To expreſſe them in the terms of the preſent buſineſſe: [1] The former, the Commiſſion authorizing to go. [2] The latter, the inſtruction directing ſo to go, that we may proſper and prevail. In which latter will come to be conſidered theſe three points. 1. The Conjunction and Coherence of theſe two. 2. The Conſequence. 3. The Contents of the latter; How to keep us from ſin. The Diviſion. I. II.

I. The Commiſſion.

WHen thou goeſt forth, &c. In the firſt is the Commiſſion, which is ever the corner-ſtone of all proceedings. If we take the Verſe entire, both parts together, it riſeth thus: If they which go to war muſt keep themſelves from ſin, then is war no ſin, but lawful; and, without ſin, to be undertaken. Or, if we take the firſt part by it ſelf, in ſaying, when thou goeſt, he implyeth, a time will come, when they may go forth. For, vain were the ſuppoſal and far unworthy the wiſedom of GODS Spirit to ſay, when; if never any ſuch time ſhould come: if there were no time for war, of Gods allowance. We cannot better pattern it, then by the Goſpel of this day [When ye faſt, be not like hypocrites] by all Divines reſolved this. Faſt ye may ſometimes; and then faſting, look you fall not into hypocriſie. And as in that, ſo in this: Go ye may, ſometimes: Only, When ye go, ſee ye refrain from ſin, and then go and ſpare not. Out of which match of theſe two, Faſt, and War, we may riſe higher. Mat. 6. 16.

It is no leſſe uſual with the Prophets, to ſay, Sanctificate prælium (as Ioel. 3.) then to ſay Sanctificate jejunium (Ioel. 2.) Sanctifie a war, as well as a faſt. And in another, Conſecrate manus veſtras hodie Domino, conſecrate your hands, this day unto the LORD. Which ſheweth war is not ſo ſecular a matter, but that it hath both his lawfulneſs and his holineſs: and that the very hands may be ſacred or hallowed, by fighting ſome battails. And therefore, in the Calender of Saints, we have nominated, not Abel, Enoch, and Noe alone, men of peace and devotion, who ſpent their time in prayer and ſervice of God: But Gedeon, Iepthe, Sampſon, worthies and men of war, who (ſaith the Apoſtle) through faith were valiant in battel, and through faith put to flight the armies of Aliens. War therefore hath his time and commiſſion from God. Ioel 3: 9. Ioel 2. 15. Exod. 32. 29. Heb. 11. Verſe 4, 5, 7. Verſe 32, 34.

Secondly, I add that this kind of war; Not onely defenſive war, but offenſive too hath his when. And that out of this very text: which is (if we mark well) not When they come forth againſt thee, but when thou goeſt forth againſt them, παρεμβαλλειν (ſay the Seventy) to invade and annoy them. Both theſe have their time: The former to maintain our right: the latter, to avenge our wrong. By both theſe wayes, doth GOD ſend His people forth: Both have warrant. Before Moſes: Abraham's war to reſcue Lot his allie, was Defenſive and lawful: Iacobs war, to win from the Amorite by his ſword and bow, Offenſive and lawful too. Under Moſes: the war againſt Amalek, who came out againſt them: and the war againſt Madian, againſt whom they went forth, to wreak themſelves for the ſin of Peor; both lawful. After Moſes: King David, in the battel of Paſ-dammim keeping the enemy from their gates; in the battail of Gath, ſeeking the enemy at his own gates, and giving him battail Gen. 14. 14. Gen. 48. 22. Exod. 17. 8. Numb. 31. 2. 1 Chro. 11. 15. 2 Chro. 20. 6.

Luk.14.23. in his own territory. And this, as good Law; so Egredere, & compelle eos intrare, Go forth and compel them to come in is good Gospel too. So that, war, and this kind of war hath his commission.

Thirdly: And to strengthen the hands of our men of war yet further. As war, and To go forth to war; Against our enemies, any enemies, whether forreign foes, or rebellious subjects: So, of all enemies, against the latter, against them to go forth, hath ever been counted most just and lawful. Ios.22.12. Iud.20.1. Many Commissions are upon record in the law, of journeyes in this kind. Against the tribe of Reuben; for erecting them an altar, beside that of Moses: And, that have these of ours done too. Against the tribe of Benjamin, for a barbarous, and brutish outrage committed at Gibea: And, that have these too; 2 Sam.20.1. And not one, but many. Against Seba, for blowving a trumpet and crying, No part have we in David, no inheritance in the son of Isai: And, so far hath their madnesse proceeded. And the Gospel is not behind neither. Against them that sent word, Nolumus hunc regnare super nos, producite & occidite Luke 19.14. 27. (saith our SAVIOUR CHRIST Himself.) In effect, they say as much as nolumus: and as much may be said and done to them. Nay, if once he say no part in David; if he were Absolom, or 1 Kings 2.23. Adoniah (of the blood royal) he hath spoken that word against his own life; Much more, if but such a one as Seba the son of Bichri. And yet, even he was nothing so deep as this. For, neither had King David vouchsafed him any favour, any time before; neither offered him peace, or to receive him to grace, after he had lift up his heel against him. But here, here have been diverse Princely favours vouchsafed, and most unkindly rejected; means of Clemency many times most graciously offered, and most ungraciously refused: yea, faith falsified, and expectation deluded; contempt upon contempt heaped up, that the measure is full. These then are the enemies against, and this the time when. When not only we may, but must; and that, not with GODS leave only, but with His liking and full commission, Go forth in this cause. So that, war is lawful: and this kind, to go forth: and against these enemies, most just and most lawful. At this time, against these enemies, it is a war sanctified, they shall consecrate their hands, they shall praelari praelia Domini, that fight against them. So much for the Commission.

II. 3 The Instruction. The Commission being had, we are not to depart, but to stay and take our Instructions also with us: Which is the later part, of keeping from wickednesse. JOSUA had his Commission from GOD, to go up against AI: Yet, for leaving out this later, and not looking to Acan better, had not so good speed. This therefore must accompany, and keep time with the former, as a Then to that When.

The Conjunction, that it is needful. 1. Wherein first, of the joyning these two, [1] that they must go together [2] and (of the reason) why they must go together.

2. And after, of the manner; how we may and must keep our selves from this wickednesse.

The meeting of these two within the compasse of one Verse, [1] Going forth with an army, and [2] Forbearing of sin, is worth the staying on.

Leading an army, perteineth to Military policy: Forbearing of sin, is flat divinity.

For, what hath the leading an army to do with forbearing of sin? Yet, GOD hath thus sorted them, as we see. Therefore Policy of war; whereto the former; and Divinity whereto the later belongeth, are not such strangers one to the other, as that, the one must avoid while the other is in place. But that as loving neighbours and good friends (here) they meet together, they stand together, they keep time, consequence, and correspondence the one with the other. God Himself, in whose imperial style (so oft proclaimed in the Prophets) they both meet, The LORD of Hosts, the holy one of Israel: GOD (I say) Himself in the great Chapter of War (the twentieth of this Book) assigneth an employment to the Priests, as well as the Officers of the Camp: even to do that (which yer while was assayed) to animate the Companies in the LORD, and the power of his might; letting them see the right of their cause, and how ready GOD is to receive the right under the banner and power of His protection. And from GOD Himself (no doubt) was that happy and blessed combination, which in most wars of happy successe, we find, of a Captain and a Prophet sorted together: [a] Josua with Moses a Prophet; [b] Baruk with Debora a Propheteſſe: [c] Ezechias, with Esay; [d] Josaphat, with Jaaziel; [e] Joas, with Elisha: And one of these doing the other no manner of hurt, but good. Josua lifted up his hand, against Amalek: Moses lifting up his hand, for Josua. The one leading against the enemy and annoying him; the other leading against sin, and annoying it; Against sin (what some reckon of it, it skils not, but) certainly the most dangerous enemy both of private persons and of publick States.

a Exod.17. b Iud.4.9. c Esay 37. d 1 Chr.20.14 e 2 Kin.13.14.

These two then, [1] Going forth with the Host, and [2] Departing from sin, being thus linked by GOD, our suit is, Break not this link: GOD hath joyned them, that we should joyne them. And this is a needful suit. For, it is one of the diseases under the Sun; in war, all our thoughts run upon the Host; Looking to the Host onely, and nothing but the Host: and letting sin run whether it will without any keeper. I know well; I both know and acknowledge, that the armies going forth is mainly to be regarded: It hath the first place in the Verse; and it hath it not for nought. JOSUA must choose out men first: Victuals must be supplied (*Judg.*20.) And nemo militat stipendiis suis, Pay must be thought of. We must go forth with our Host; (They be the words of the Text:) Go; not sit still: And, With an Host; not a heap of naked, or starved men. We must help, and not tempt GOD. To help GOD, is a strange speech; yet, said it may be, seeing an Angel said it. Curse ye Meroz (saith the Angel of the LORD) curse the inhabitants thereof; VVhy? because they came not to help the LORD, to help the LORD against the mighty. This must first be done. But, when this is done, all is not done: VVe are not at a full point; VVe are but in the middest of the sentence yet. As that part (of the Host)

Exod.17.9. Iud.20.16. 1 Cor.9.7. d.5.23.

is to be regarded; ſo, this (of ſins reſtraint) is not to be neglected. As, that hath the firſt place: ſo muſt this have the ſecond, and ſecond the former, or we ſhall have but a broken ſentence without it. There is not, there cannot be a more prejudicial conceit, then to ſay in our hearts: the firſt be well, all is well; then ſin on and ſpare not; it skils not greatly, for the later. Si putas, in robore exercitus bella conſiſtere, faciet te Dominus cadere coram inimicis tuis (ſaith the Prophet to Amazia) If this be your conceit, ſo the Hoſt be well, all is well: GOD will teach you another leſſon (ſaith he) which I liſt not Engliſh. A proof whereof we have, before Gibea. Where the whole power of Iſrael (400000 ſtrong) truſting in their going out ſo ſtrong, fell before a few Benjamites, a ſmall handful in compariſon; and ſhewed plainly to all ages to come, that it is but a part, it is not all, to go forth with an Hoſt, though never ſo well appointed. 2 Chr. 25. 7 8. Iud. 20. 17.

Let us then (as adviſe leadeth us) make up our period with taking a courſe for reſtraint of ſin. For, what ſin un-reſtreined can work, the valley of Achor may teach us; where, the inhabitants of the poor town of Ai, put to flight JOSUA with all his forces; and all, becauſe this ſecond point was not well looked to. Iud. 7. 5.

Now, this ſecond point being within the compaſſe of our profeſſion, and yet having ſo neceſſary a uſe in war, as the ſentence is not perfect without it, may ſerve to anſwer the queſtion (more uſually then adviſedly oft caſt out) What good do theſe Church-men? VVhat uſe is there of them (now) at ſuch times as this? Yes, there is a uſe of them, and that in war, we ſee. The Camp hath uſe of this place; and they that ſerve there, of them that ſerve here. Which GOD ſheweth plainly, in the firſt field that ever his people fought: and, when he had ſhewed it, cauſed it to be recorded ad perpetuam rei memoriam (they be Gods own words) that the ſame courſe might be ever after holden in all. VVere it is thus written (and, if we believe not, we ſhall not be eſtabliſhed) that Ioſua having the better, or going to the worſe, depended not a little on the ſteddineſs of MOSES hands: and, that MOSES, ſtaying behind and ſtriking never a ſtroke, did his part toward the atteining of the victory, not much leſſe than Ioſua, that went forth and fought manfully. Prayer then is of uſe: and though we be (ſaith S. Paul) armed at all points from hand to foot, yet muſt we ſuper omnia, over all, draw this; and arm even our very armour with prayer and ſupplications. Exod. 17. 14. Epheſ. 6. 18.

But what availeth prayer, without keeping from ſin? Therefore, to that armour of S. Pauls, we muſt adde S. Peters too, To arm our ſelves with this mind of ceaſing from ſin, that our prayers may be effectual. Therefore MOSES himſelf joyneth not to our going forth his exerciſe of keeping up our hands at prayer; but this rather of keeping our feet from ſin. The King of Moab (Balak) when he obſerved what prayer had wrought in the battail of Amaleck, thought to take the very like courſe, and ſent for Balaam into his Camp; to match Prophet with Prophet, and to oppoſe prayer unto prayer. But when all his altars and rams would do no good; Balaam knowing well, there is, in ſin, a power to defeat any prayer, he cometh to the dangerous counſel of cauſing Iſrael to ſin with the daughters of Moab: which was found too true. For, it turned to their ruin, and all their prayers would then do no good. Here is then another uſe. For, the chariots and horſes of Eliah, the weapons of our warfare (as the Apoſtle termeth them) though not carnal (if GOD enable them, to caſt down ſuch ſinful thoughts and wicked deſires, as exalt themſelves daily, and to captivate them to the obedience of CHRIST) have (certainly) their uſe to ſecond the former: and, we, in our turnes, ſerviceable, as by crying unto GOD by prayer, and drawing Him to the Hoſt, who is our chiefeſt and beſt friend; ſo by crying alſo againſt ſin and chaſing it away, which is our chiefeſt and worſt enemy. Since then theſe two have this mutual uſe either of other, let this be our petition (and withal, the concluſion of this part:) That we ſingle them not, or lean to either alone, but ſuffer them, as they ſtand together in the verſe, ſo, in our care and regard, joyntly to keep time and go together. So much for them. 1 Pet. 4. 11. Num. 22. 5. 2 King. 13. 14. 2 Cor. 10. 4.

III.

And now to enquire into the reaſon of this coupling. VVhy, now? why, at this time (in war) a giving over ſin. For that (indeed) they be not barely joyned; but, ſo joyned, as one eis made the antecedent, the other the conſequent. One, the time, and (as it were) the reaſon to infer the other. Truly MOSES word [כי] will bear both, either Quando or Quia: When thou goeſt, then keep; or Becauſe thou goeſt, therefore, keep thy ſelf from ſin. VVith the ſame word ſpeaketh the vertuous Lady to King DAVID, Quia praliaris prælia Domini, ideo non invenietur in te iniquitas, Becauſe thou fighteſt the LORDS battails, therefore let there not any iniquity be found in thee, all thy dayes. 1 The Reaſon of the conjunction. 1 Sam. 25. 28.

Sin (certainly) at all times is to be forborn. VVhen it is war: and not only when it is war, but when it is peace too, Take ye heed, leſt at any time (ſaith CHRIST) Your hearts be over-layd with ſurfeiting, with drink, &c. Not allowing us any time, to be wicked in. But though at all times we be to refrain ſin; Yet, not at all times, alike (ſaith MOSES) here. For it is, as if he ſhould ſay: Be it at other times, ſin may better be born with; It is leſſe perilous: But, when thou goeſt forth with an Hoſt: Then, then, with an high accent, with an emphaſis (that is) then eſpecially; then, above all other times, then, if ever, it importeth you to have leaſt to do with it. Good LORD, how croſſe and oppoſite is mans conceit to GODS, and how contrary our thoughts unto his! For, even ad oppoſitum, to this poſition of His, We ſee (for the moſt part) that even they, that are Goers forth, ſeem to perſwade themſelves, that, Then, they may do what they liſt; that at that time, any ſin is lawful: that, war is rather a Placard, than an Inhibition of ſin. A thing ſo common, that it made the Heathen man hold, that between Militia and Malitia, there was as little difference in ſenſe, as in ſound: And the Prophet DAVID, to call Sauls Companies in his dayes, Torrentes Belial, the Land-floods of wickedneſſe. VVhich being well conſidered, we may ceaſe to murmure or to marvaile, if our going forth have not Luk. 21. 34. 1 Sam. 25. 28.

been ever with ſuch ſucceſſe, as we wiſhed. GOD, who would give the ſucceſſe, commanding then a reſtraint; and man, that ſhould need it, then, taking moſt liberty. Verily, if we will learn of GOD, if He ſhall teach us, Sin is never ſo untimely, as in the time of VVar: never ſo out of ſeaſon, as then: for, that is the time of all times, we ſhould have leaſt to do with it. To inſiſt then a little upon this point, becauſe it is the main point, and to ſhew the vigour of this conſequent.

1 From the very nature of war, firſt: Which is an act of Juſtice, and of Juſtice corrective, whoſe office is to puniſh ſin. Now then, conſider and judge, even in reaſon; What a thing this is, how great, groſſe, and foul an incongruity it is, to poure out our ſelves into ſin, at the very time, when we go forth to correct ſin: To ſet forth to puniſh rebels, when we our ſelves are in rebellion againſt GOD, His words, and Spirit. Which, what is it but to caſt out Devils by the power of Belzebub? Sure, our hearts muſt needs ſtrike us in the midſt of our ſin, and tels us, we are in great and grievous prevarication; allowing that, in our ſelves, that we go to condemn and to ſtone to death, in others. Therefore, ſince to go to War, is to go to puniſh ſin: Certainly, the time of puniſhing ſin is not a time to ſin in.

2 Secondly, from war, in reſpect of GOD. I know not what we reckon of War: Peace is His bleſſing (we are ſure) and a ſpecial favour it is from him (as the Prophets account it) for a land to ſpend more iron in ſithes, and plow-ſhares, then in ſword-blades or ſpear-heads. And, if peace be a bleſſing, and a chief of His bleſſings, we may deduce from thence what War is. To make no otherwiſe of it then it is, the rod of Gods wrath (as Eſay termeth it:) his iron flaile (as Amos:) the hammer of the earth (as Ieremy) whereby he daſheth two nations together; One of them muſt in pieces; both, the worſe for it. War is no matter of ſport. Indeed, I ſee Abner eſteem of it as of a ſport; Let the young men riſe (ſaith he to Ioab) and ſhew us ſome ſport. But I ſee the ſame Abner, before the end of the ſame Chapter, weary of his ſport, and treating with Ioab for an end of it: How long ſhall the ſword devoure (ſaith he) ſhall it not be bitterneſſe in the end? So, it may be ſport in the beginning; it will be bitterneſſe in the end, if it hold long. War then being GODS rod, His fearful rod, and that ſo fearful that King David (though a Warriour too) when both were in his choice, preferred the Plague before it, and deſired it of the twain: VVhen Gods hand, with this rod, this His fearful rod, is over us, to be ſo far from fear, and all due regard, as, then, not to ſhun ſin any whit the more, but to fall to it as faſt as ever: it cannot be, but a high contempt; yea, a kind of defiance and deſpite, then, to do it: Do we provoke the LORD to anger, are we ſtronger than he? Then, ſince VVar is GODS rod, chooſe ſome other time: under the rod, ſin not; then, forbear it: Certainly, that time is no time to ſin.

3 The rather, for that, ſin it is; and the not keeping from ſin, but our keeping to it and with it, that hath made this rod, and put it into His hand. For, ſure it is, that for the tranſgreſſion of a people, GOD ſuffereth theſe diviſions of Reuben within; GOD ſtirreth up the ſpirit of Princes abroad to take peace from the earth: thereby to chaſten men, by paring the groweth of their wealth, with this His hired razor; by waſting their ſtrong men (the band of the enemies eating them up;) by making widowes and fatherleſſe children; by other like conſequents of war. If then our ſins (common unto us, with other nations) and that our Unthankfulneſſe (peculiar to us alone) have brought all this upon us; if this enemy have ſtirred up theſe enemies; if war be the ſickneſſe, and ſin the ſurfet; ſhould we not (at leaſt-wiſe now, while the ſhivering fit of our ſins is upon us) diet our ſelves a little and keep ſome order? but drink iniquity as water, and diſtemper our ſelves as though we were in perfect ſtate of health? Shall we make our diſeaſe deſperate, and haſten our ruin by not conteining from ſin? that hath caſt us in it? Know we, what time this is? Is this a time of ſin? Certainly; we cannot deviſe a worſe. In the time of VVar, it is high time, to keep us from ſin.

4 But, above all (which will touch us neereſt, and therefore again and again muſt be told us over,) that the ſafe and ſpeedy comming again of them that now go forth (whoſe proſperity we are to ſeek with all our poſsible endeavours) that their good ſpeed dependeth upon GODS going forth with them: and GODS going or ſtaying dependeth very much upon this point. Moſt certain it is, the event of war is moſt uncertain. VVhen Benhadad went forth with an army, that the duſt of Samaria was not enough to give every one in his camp a handful, it was told him (and he found it true) Ne glorietur accinctus, &c. He that buckleth on his armour muſt not bouſt, as he that puts it off. They that fight can hardly ſet down, what name the place ſhall have that they fight in: It may be the valley of Achor (that is, ſorrow) by reaſon of a foil, as that of Ioſua; It may be the valley of Berecha (that is, bleſſing) by meanes of a victory, as that of Ioſaphat. All is, as GOD is, and as he will have it. * Once, ª twice, and ᵇ thrice, by David, by Salomon, by Ioſaphat, we are told it, that It is neither ſword nor bow; It is neither Chariot nor horſe; It is weither multitude nor valour of an Hoſt will ſerve: But that the battail is GODS and He giveth the upper hand. VVe need not be perſwaded of this; we all are perſwaded (I hope) & we ſay with Moſes, If thy preſence go not with us, carry us not hence. Then, if we ſhall need GODS favour and help in proſpering our journey, and to make that ſure which is ſo uncertain; it will ſtand us in hand, to make ſure of Him, in this, this needful time; and to keep Him ſure, if it may be. For if He keep with the Hoſt, and take their parts, Rebelles tui erunt quaſi nihil (ſaith Eſay;) and theſe ſmoking tailes of firebrands, ſhall quickly be quenched. But, if GOD either go not with them, or retire from them: If there were among them but naked or wounded men; (what ſpeak I of men? If but frogs or flies) they ſhall be ſufficient to trouble them

Now then, we are at the point. For, if we will have hold of GOD, make him ſure, be certain of Him; we muſt break with ſin, needs. Sin and Satan, are His enemies; and no fellowſhip nor communion, no concord, no agreement, no part, no portion between them. If we will draw Him into league, we muſt profeſſe our ſelves enemies unto his enemies, that He may do the like to ours. At one and the ſame time enter, as an outward war with wicked rebels, ſo an inward hoſtilitie with our wicked rebellious luſts. For that if we keep our ſelves from the one, He will keep us from the other: and theſe being ſuppreſſed, thoſe ſhall not be able to ſtand. Thus doing, the ſword of the LORD ſhall be with the ſword of Gedeon: GOD ſhall be with us, Ithiel; and we ſhall prevail, Ucal. For where Ithiel is, Ucal will not be away. But if we will needs hold on our league with hell, and continue our vvonted entercourſe with wickedneſs ſtill, and go forth unto it when it beckens or calls, and be ſo far from keeping from it, that we keep it as the apple of our eye, and cheriſh it between our breaſts: If we retein the mark of it in our very fore-heads, and the price of it in the ſkirts of our garment: for not keeping from it, He will keep from us, and with-draw His help from us, and put us clean out of His protection.

Therefore, without keeping from ſin, there is no keeping GOD; out of whoſe keeping there is no ſafety.

3 The Contents of the Inſtruction, to keep from ſin.

This adviſe being ſo full of behooſe, ſo agreeable to reaſon and religion both, ſo every way for their and our good: it remaineth, we ſet our ſelves to think of it and keep it: * Every one returning to his own heart, to know there (as Salomon ſaith) his own plague, even the ſins wherewith he hath grieved GOD; and to make a covenant with Himſelf, from henceforth more carefully to ſtand upon his guard; and not to go forth to ſin, or entertain it as a friend, but to repute it as an enemy, and to keep him from it.

* 1 King 8. 38.

Firſt, for the term of keeping. When thou goeſt forth againſt thy enemy, go forth againſt ſin. We ſhould indeed go forth againſt ſin, and practiſe thoſe military impreſſions, that are done in camp againſt the enemy: Give it the aſſault, annoy it, purſue it, never leave it till we have driven it away. Theſe we ſhould do againſt it. But, the Scripture offereth more grace; and bids us (if we liſt not go forth againſt it: only not to go forth to it) but keep our ſelves (that is) ſtand upon our defence, to keep good watch, that it ſurpriſe us not, that it get not dominion over us: do but this againſt ſin, and it ſhall ſuffice.

Rom. 6. 12.

But this muſt extend to all wickedneſs. Wherein yet, we do humanum dicere, propter infirmitatem noſtram, ſpeak after the manner of men, becauſe of our infirmity: retching [All] no further, then humane infirmity, then the frailty of our nature will bear; then this corruptible fleſh wherewith we are compaſſed, and this corrupt world in the midſt whereof we live, will ſuffer and give us leave. In the body, we put a difference between the ſoyl, which, by inſenſible evacuations goeth from our bodies, keep we our ſelves never ſo carefully; and that, vvhich is dravvn forth by chafing or ſvveat, or othervviſe gotten by touching ſuch things vvherevvith vve may be defiled: That, cannot be refrained: This, falleth vvithin reſtraint. And even ſo, there is a ſoyl of ſin, that of it ſelf vaporeth from our nature (let the beſt do his beſt:) I ſay not, we ſhould keep our ſelves from this. But, from provoking it, by ſuffering our minds to vvander in it; by not keeping our eares from ſuch company, and our eyes from ſuch occaſions, as will procure it (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) by putting the ſtumbling block of iniquity before our faces. From that, by the help of GOD, vve may keep our ſelves vvell enough. From ſins lightning upon our thoughts, it is impoſſible; it cannot be: but from making there a neſt, or hatching ought; that, vve are vvilled to look to, and that (by Gods grace) we may. And the vvord that Moſes uſeth here דִּבֶּר רַע it not vvithout a Dixit (at leaſt) in corde; not vvithout a ſaying within us, This, or that, I vvill do. It muſt be dictum, or conditum, ſaid to, and ſaid yea to, or elſe it is not רכד רע. The heart not reſolving or ſaying, content; but keeping it ſelf, from going forth to any act: though wickedneſs be not kept from us, becauſe of the temptation; yet vve are kept from it, becauſe of the repulſe: and vvith that, vvill Moſes be content at our hands, as our eſtate novv is.

But vvith theſe proviſo's. We ſay generally, they that go forth, keep from all: from all ſuch both deeds, and vvords, as juſtly may be cenſured to be vvickedly, either ſpoken or done. Words (I ſay) as vvell as deeds. For the vvord דבר beares both. And indeed, if in good words (as in prayers) there be force to help: I make no queſtion, but, in wicked words (as blaſphemies, irreligious ſayings, locis fulmine dignis) there is force alſo, to do miſchief. Therefore keep from all: All thoſe eſpecially (as very reaſon vvill lead us) vvhich have been the ruin of armies: in former times a vievv vvhereof vve may take, vvhen vve vvill, out of Liber Bellorum Domini, the Book of GODS battailes.

A SERMON PRECHED before Queen ELIZABETH, at White-hall, on the XVII. of February Anno Domini, MDCII. being ASHWEDNESDAY.

JER. Chap. VIII, &c.

4 Thus ſaith the LORD: Shall they fall and not ariſe? ſhall he turn away, and not turn again?

5 Wherefore is this people of Jeruſalem turned back by a perpetual rebellion? they gave themſelves to deceit, and would not return.

6 I hearkned and heard, but none ſpake aright: no man repented him of his wickedneſſe, ſaying, What have I done? Every one turned to their race, as the horſe ruſheth into the battel.

7 Even the Storke in the aire knoweth her appointed times; and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow obſerve the time of their comming; but my people knoweth not the judgment of the Lord.

THE Apoſtles counſel is, Qui ſtat, videat ne cadat, He that ſtandeth, let him take heed leſt he fall. And, there is (ſaith Eſay) a voyce behind us that crieth, Hæc eſt via, this is the right way, keep it, turn not from it. Good counſels, both; to thoſe; quorum vita, via vitæ, whoſe life is a journey, and a journey to another, a better life: To look to their feet, they fall not; to look to their way they erre not. Good counſels indeed, but of which, we muſt ſay (with CHRIST) Qui poteſt capere capiat; Follow them that may. 1 Cor. 10. 12. Eſay 30. 21. Mat. 19. 12.

For true it is, that, not to fall nor erre; nor do amiſſe at all; is an higher perfection, than our nature (in ſtate it is) can attein to. Being men (ſaith St. Chryſoſtome) ἄνθρωποι ὄντες, and πανταχοῦ τὸν σαρκικὸν φορτίον bearing about us this body of fleſh, the ſteps whereof are ſo unſtayed: Καὶ τοῦτον κόσμον οἰκοῦντες, and walking in this world, the wayes whereof are ſo ſlippery. It is an Apoſtle that ſaith it, In multis, omnes, &c. In many things we offend all; and it is another that ſaith, that, whoſoever ſaith otherwiſe (not, he is proud, and there is no humbleneſſe; but) he is a lyar, and there is no truth in him. Jam. 3. 2. 1 Joh. 1. 8.

Our eſtate then (as it is) needeth ſome Scripture, that offereth more grace: And ſuch there be (ſaith S. James) and, this, is ſuch. That they which have not heard the Apoſtle and his counſel. Qui ſtat, &c. May yet hear the Prophet here and his Qui cecidit, let him up again. That they which have not heard Eſayes voice, Ambulate; you are in the way, turn not from it; May yet hear Jeremies voice, Qui adverſus eſt, &c. He that is out, let him get into it again. Jam. 4. 6.

So that, this is the ſumme of that I have read. If we have not been ſo happy, as to ſtand and keep our way; let us not be ſo unhappy, as not to riſe, and turn to it again. Beſt it were, before we ſin, to ſay to our ſelves, Quid facio, what am I now about to do? If we have not that, yet it will not be amiſſe, The Summe.

amiſſe, after to ſay: What have I done? God will not be pleaſed, to hear us ſo ſay. We ſhould not follow thoſe foules; we ſhould have no wings to fly from God: but if in flying away, we have followed them; then, that we follow them too, in the retrive or ſecond flight. In a word: Yeſterday, Pſal. 95. 7, 8. if we have not heard his voice, To day if we will not hear His voice, not to harden our hearts, when He calleth us to repentance:

2 This is the ſumme. The manner of the delivery is not common, but ſome-what un-uſual and full of
1 paſſion. For ſeeing plain pœnitentiam agite doth but coldly affect us, It pleaſeth God hâc vice, to take unto him the termes, the ſtyle, the accents of paſſion; thereby to give it an edge, that ſo it may make the ſpeedier and deeper impreſſion.

2 And, the Paſſion, He chooſeth, is that of Sorrow: For, all theſe verſes are to be pronounced, with a ſorrowful key. Sorrow (many times) worketh us to that, by a melting compaſſion, which the more rough and violent paſſions cannot get at our hands.

3 This ſorrow He expreſſeth, by way of complaint: (For, all the ſpeech is ſo) which kind of ſpeech maketh the better nature to relent; as moved, that by His means any ſhould have cauſe to complain, and not find redreſſe for it.

4 That, He complaines of is (not that we fall and erre, but) that we riſe not, and return not; that is, ſtill delay, ſtill put off our repentance. And that 1. Contrary to our own courſe and cuſtome in other
Ver. 4. things: we do it every where elſe; yet here we do it not. 2. Contrary to Gods expreſſe pleaſure. For,
Ver. 8. glad and faine He would hear, we do it, yet we do it not. 3. Contrary to the very light of nature. For, the fowles here flie before us, and ſhew us the way to do it, yet we do it not for all that.

Which three He uttereth by three ſundry wayes of treaty. 1. The firſt, by a gentle yet forcible expoſtulation (Ver. 4.) Will you not? Why will you not? 2. The ſecond by an earneſt proteſtation (Ver. 5.) How greatly He doth harken after it. 3. The third by a paſſionate Apoſtrophe (Ver. 7.) by turning Him away to the fowles of the aire, that do that naturally every year, which we cannot be got to, all our life long.

3 Of which Paſſions to ſay a word: It is certain, the immutable conſtancy of the Divine nature is not ſubject to them, howſoever here or elſ-where he preſenteth himſelf in them. I adde, that as it is not proper, ſo neither is it not fitting for God thus to expreſſe himſelf. But that He (not reſpecting what may beſt become Him, but what may beſt ſeem to move us and do us moſt good) chooſeth of purpoſe that dialect, that Character, thoſe termes, which are moſt meet and moſt likely to affect us.

And becauſe good moral counſel plainly delivered enters, but faintly, and of paſſionate ſpeeches we have a more quick apprehenſion, He attireth His ſpeech in the habit, uttereth it in the phraſe, figure, and accent of anger or ſorrow, or ſuch like, as may ſeem moſt fit and forcible to prevail with us.

2 Adv. Mar. 1. Tertullian ſaith, the reaſon (this courſe is uſed) is ad exaggerandum malitiæ vim, to make the hainouſneſſe of our contempt appear the more. GOD (indeed) cannot complain: it falleth not into his nature to do it. But, if He could; if it were poſſible by any meanes in the world, He might; ſuch are our contempts, ſo many, and ſo mighty, that we would force Him to it.

2. But S. Auguſtines reaſon is more praiſed: Exprimit in Se, ut exprimat de te, In Himſelf He expreſſeth them, that from us He may bring them: Sheweth himſelf in paſſion, that He may move us; and even in that paſſion whereto He would move us. As here now: As in griefe He complaineth of us, that we might be grieved and complain of our ſelves, that ever we gave Him ſuch cauſe: And ſo conſequently that, we might bethink our ſelves to give redreſſe to it; that ſo, His complaining might ceaſe.

The Diviſion. And from the complaint, it is no hard matter to extract the redreſſe. 1. To yeeld to but even as much, for Him (for Him? nay, for our ſelves) as, every where elſe, we uſe to do. 2. To ſpeak that, which GOD ſo gladly would hear. 3. To learn that, which the poor fowles know, the ſeaſon of our return; and to take it, as they do. Three wayes to give redreſſe to the three former grievances: Theſe three:) and the ſame the three parts of this Text, orderly to be treated of.

TO make His motion the more reaſonable, and His complaint the more juſt, he makes them Chancellors in their own cauſe: And, from their own practice other-where, God frameth and putteth a Caſe; and putteth it in queſtion-wiſe: and therefore queſtion-wiſe that they may anſwer it, and anſwering it condemn themſelves by a verdict from their own mouth. Will they (this people) themſelves fall, &c. Is there any, that if he turn, &c? In effect, as if He ſhould ſay: Go whither you will, farre or eare, was it never heard or ſeen, that any man, if his foot ſlipped and he took a fall; that he would lye ſtill like a beaſt and not up again ſtraight? Or if he loſt his way, that he would wittingly go on, and not with all ſpeed get into it again?

I proceed then. Men riſe if they fall: and ſin is a fall. We have taken up the term our ſelves, calling Adams ſin, Adams fall. A fall, indeed; for it foules as a fall; for it bruiſes as a fall; for it bringeth down as a fall; down, from the ſtate of Paradiſe, down to the duſt of death; down to the bar of judgment, down to the pit of hell.

Prov. 14. 22. Again: Men turn when they erre; And ſin is an errour. Nonne errant omnes, &c. (ſaith Salomon) make you any doubt of it? I do not: No ſure, an errour it is. What can be greater, than to go in the wayes (of wickedneſſe) they ſhould not, and come to the end (of miſery) they would not. It is then a fall and an errour.

Upon

Upon which he joyneth iſſue, and inferreth the fifth verſe, Quare ergo? and why then? If there be no people ſo ſottiſh, that when they fall will lie ſtill, or when they erre, go on ſtill, why do this people that, which no people elſe will do? Nay ſeeing they themſelves, if they be down, get up; and, if aſtray; turn back; how commeth it to paſſe, it holds not here to? That (here) they fall, and riſe not? ſtray, and return not? Fall, and ſtray (peccando) and not riſe and return (pœnitendo?) Will every people, and not they? Nay, will they, every where elſe and not here? Every where elſe, will they riſe, if they fall; and turn again, if they turn away; and here, only here, will they fall, and not riſe, turn away, and not turn again? In every fall, in every errour of the feet, to do it, and to do it of our ſelves; and in that fall, and that errour, which toucheth God and our ſouls, by no means, by no entreatie to be got to do it? What dealing call you this? Yet this is their ſtrange dealing (ſaith the LORD.) Both theirs and ours: Which GOD wonders at and complaineth of; and who can complain of His wondering, or wonder at His complaining? 3

But what ſpeak we of a fall, or an errour? there is a word, in the fifth verſe, (the word of rebellion) maketh it more grievous. For it is (as if he ſhould ſay) I would it were nothing but a fall, or turning away: I would it were not a fall, or turning away into a rebellion. Nay, I would it were but that; but rebellion; and not a perpetual Rebellion: But, it is both: and that is it which I complain of.

There is ſin, a fall: men fall againſt their wills: that, is ſin of infirmity, There is Sin, an errour: men erre from the way, of ignorance: that is ſin of ignorance. The one, for want of power; The other, for lack of skill. But rebellion: the third kind (that hateful ſinne of rebellion) can neither pretend ignorance, nor plead infirmity; for, wittingly they revolt from their known allegiance, and wilfully ſet themſelves againſt their lawful Sovereigne: That is the ſin of malice.

Take all together, Sinne, a fall, an errour, a rebellion: (We ſee, ſin aboundeth: will you ſee, how grace over-aboundeth?) Yet, not ſuch a fall but we may be raiſed; not ſuch a departure, but there is place left to return; no, nor ſuch a rebellion, but (if it ſue for) may hope for a pardon. For behold: He, even He, that GOD, from whom we thus fall, depart, revolt, reacheth His hand to them that fall; turneth not away from them, that turn to Him; is ready to receive, to grace them; even them, that rebelled againſt Him. It is ſo: for He ſpeaketh to them; treateth with them, asketh of them, why they will not riſe, retire, ſubmit themſelves.

Which is more yet. If ye marke, He doth not complain and challenge them, for any of all thoſe three; for falling, ſtraying, or for rebelling: The point He preſſeth, is not, our falling, but our lying ſtill: not our departing, but our not returning; not our breaking off, but our holding out. It is not: why fall, or ſtray, or revolt? But, why riſe ye not? Return ye not? Submit ye not your ſelves? Thus might He have framed His interrogatories: Shall they fall and not ſtand? He doth not; but, thus: ſhall they fall and not riſe? Shall they turn from the right and not keep it? No: But, ſhall they turn from it, and not turn to it? As much to ſay as; Be it you have fallen, yet lie not ſtill; erred, yet go not on; Sinned, yet continue not in ſin, and neither your fall, errour, nor ſin, erunt vobis in ſcandalum, ſhall be your deſtruction, or do you hurt.

Nay, which is farther, and that beyond all. It is not theſe, neither; (though this be wrong enough, yet upon the point, this is not the very matter.) Neither our lying ſtill, nor our going on, nor ſtanding out, ſo they have an end, they all, and every of them may have hope. Perpetual is the word, and perpetual is the thing. Not, why theſe, any of theſe, or all of theſe; but, why theſe perpetual? To do thus; to do it and never leave doing it; To make no end of ſin, but our own end; To make a perpetuity of ſin; Never to riſe, return, repent, (for Repentance is oppoſite, not to ſin, but to the continuance of it:) that is the point.

In ſinne are theſe: [1]The fall, [2]The relapſe, [3] The wallow: it is none of theſe. It is not falling, not, though it be recidiva peccati, often relapſing. It is not lying ſtill; not, though it be Volutabrum peccati, the wallow: It is none of all theſe: It is τὸ ἀναλλαγητὸν, the never ceaſing, the peopetuity, the impenitency of ſin. To ſpeak of ſin, that is the ſin out of meaſure ſinful; that is the offence, that not only maketh culpable, but leaveth inexcuſeable. That fall, is not, Adams, but Lucifers fall; not to erre, but to periſh from the right way; not Shimeies rebellion, but the very Apoſtaſie and gain-ſaying of Coreh.

This then, to adde ſin to ſin, to multiply ſin, by ſin to make it infinite, to eternize it as much as in us lyeth; that, is it, to which God crieth, O quare? Why do you ſo? Why perpetual?

VVhy perpetual? Indeed, why? For it would poſe the beſt of us to find out the Quare? a true cauſe or reaſon for our doing?

Before, ſhew but an example: Now here, ſhew but a reaſon, and carry it. But they can ſhew no reaſon, why they will not. It were to be wiſhed, we would repent or ſhew good cauſe to the contrary.

But as (before) we violate our own cuſtome, ſo (here) we abandon reaſon; we throw them both to the ground (order, and reaſon) and ſtamp upon them both, when we make perpetuities. Verily true cauſe, or good reaſon there is none. Being called to ſhew cauſe why? They tell not: we ſee, they ſtand mute; they cannot tell, why: God himſelf is faine to tell them. VVhy, all the cauſe that is, is in the latter part of the verſe Apprehenderunt, &c. that is, ſome Non cauſa pro cauſâ, ſome lie or other they lay hold of, or elſe they would return, and not thus continue in it. To flatter it ſelf that it may not repent, Mentita eſt iniquitas ſibi, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, Sinne doth even cozen it ſelf, telling a faire tale to it ſelf, which is (in the XI. Verſe) Pax, Pax Peace, well enough; and that is a lie: for, there is no peace for all that. It is (ſaith the Apoſtle) the deceitfulneſſe of ſin, that hardeneth men Pſal. 36. 1. Heb. 3. 13.

men in it; that is, if there were not ſome groſſe errour, ſtrong illuſion; notable, faſcinatio mentis, it could not be that ſin ſhould prove to a perpetuity. There is ſome errour ſure.

But why is not that errour removed? GOD anſwereth that, too. But, the errour hath not taken hold of them, for then it might be cured; but, they have taken hold of it; faſt hold; and will not let it go. That is: it is not in the weakneſſe of their wits, but in the ſtubbourneſſe of their will. For, ſo is His concluſion. Not,
Pſal. 95. 10. Non potuerunt, they could not: but, Noluerunt, they would not return. So ſaith David, It is a people that do erre, in their hearts: Their errour is not in their heads; but in their hearts; and if it be there, forty years teaching will do them no good. If they had an heart to underſtand, they might, ſoon: but, they aſſot themſelves; they will not conceive aright of their eſtates. If they did, they could not chooſe but return: But now, return they will not: that, is reſolved: therefore they get them ſome lewd irreligious lying poſitions, and with them cloſe up their own eyes; even hood-wink themſelves. Is it not thus? Yes ſure: Rather then return, to apprehend a lye. This is a woful caſe: but let it be examined, and thus it is. It is a lye, they apprehend; that maketh they lye ſtill. Peradventure, that Verſ. 6. errour, inter alias, may be ſuch an illuſion as this: that if they ſhould make meanes, it would be to no purpoſe; GOD would ſtop His eares, He would not hear of it. May it not be thus? Deſpaire of pardon hath made many a man deſperate. Yes ſure. And if that were it; if they would, and GOD would not, they had ſome ſhew of reaſon, to abandon themſeves to all looſnſſe of life. But it is contrary: they would not return. For, I for my part faine would (ſaith GOD:) It is their Not: and not mine. My Nolo is, Nolo ut moriatur: My Volo is, Volo ut convertatur. I will not Exek. 18. 32. their death; I will their converſions: This is my Volo. Nay, quoties volui? How often would I? Et
33. 11. noluiſtis, and ye would not.
Mat. 23. 37. My outward calling by My Word, inward movings by My Spirit, My often exhortations in your eares, My no leſſe often inſpirations in your hearts: Tacti ut mei, & tractus, My touches, and My twitches; My benefits not to be diſſembled, My gentle chaſtiſements, My deliverances more than ordinary, My Pa-
Eſay 4. 5. tience while I held My peace; ſuch periods, as this, when I ſpeak; My putting you to it by Quid debui facere? to ſet down, what I ſhould have done and have not: theſe ſhew, Quoties volui, that many times I would when you would not. The two verſes paſt, His compaſſionate complaint in them. And, is there no hope? Will you not? O why will you not? Other where you will, and not here; why not here? You have no reaſon, why you will not. Why will you not? If not, why fall, or erre, or revolt, yet only why perpetual? Theſe are evidences enough, He is willing enough therewithal. But (to put it out of all doubt) we ſee. He breaketh out into a proteſtation, that if this be the lye, we lay hold of, we may let it go when we will. And ſure how earneſtly GOD affecteth the ſinners converſion, we might be thought to miſ-informe, and to blow abroad our own conceits, if this and ſuch places were not our warrant. I not hear? Why, I ſtand wiſhing, and waiting, and longing, and and liſtning to hear of it, Wiſhing, O that my people! Waiting, Expectat Dominus ut miſereatur;
Eſay 30. 18. Longing, even as a woman that is great after green fruit (Mic. 7. 1.) Liſtning, that I might
Mic. 7. 1. but hear two good words from them, that might ſhew, that they were but thus forward as to think of this point. It is not all one; it is not neither here nor there with me, whether you do it; it is a ſpecial thing, I hearken after: No Merchant, for his commodity; no Athenian for his newes, more oft or more earneſt.

Then, lay not hold on that lye, that I would not hear. Be your errour what it will be, let it not be, that; let not the charge be mine, but yours, if you will needs caſt away that; I would have ſaved.

Should not this move us? Now truly, if all other regards failed, and men for them ſhould not return: yet, for this, and this only, we ought to yeeld to it, that GOD ſhould be liſtning ſo long for it, and in the end be deluded.

GOD harkeneth and liſteneth: and (after) there is a kind of pauſe, to ſee what will come of it. And loe, this commeth of it, this un-kind, un-natural effect: After all this, not ſo much as locuti ſunt rectè, a good honeſt confeſſion. Nay, not ſo little as this; Quid feci? What have I done?
2 He expecteth no great matter; no long proceſſe; but two words, but three Syllables: and thoſe, with no loud voice, to ſpend their ſpirit or breath; but, even ſoftly ſaid, for He layeth His eare and liſtneth for it.

Thus ſaith the LORD. But, what ſay they? None of them, either audibly (for, I harkned;) or ſoftly (for, I liſtned,) ſaid (no long ſolemne confeſſion, but not this) Quid feci? GOD wot, this is not repentance: erre not, this is farre from it.

From whence yet this we gain: What GOD would hear from us, and when we ſaying, may give Him ſome kind of contentment. This, is but Mica's fruit (we ſpake of:) which yet, He ſo much deſired, that he will take it, green and unripe as it is. This is but a ſtep unto a proffer; but yet Mic. 7. 1. begin with this. Say it; Dic, Dic (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) ſed, intus dic: ſay it, and ſay it from within; ſay it, as it ſhould be ſaid, not for forme, or with affectation, but, in truth and with affection. Do but this onward, and more will follow. Indeed as (before) we ſaid of the Quare; ſo (here) we may ſay, of the Quid: If either of them; If but this latter were well weighed, rightly thought on, or rightly ſpoken, there is much more in it than one would think. What have I done? [1] What, in reſpect of it ſelfe: What a foule, deformed, baſe, ignominious act! which we ſhame to have known; which we chill upon, alone and no body but our ſelves. [2] What, in regard of God, ſo fearful in power, ſo ſo glorious in Majeſtie! [3] What, in regard of the object: for what a trifling profit; for what a tranſitory pleaſure! [4] What, in reſpect of the conſequent; To what prejudice of the ſtate of our ſouls and bodies, both here and for ever! O what have we done? How did we it? Sure, when we thus ſinned, we did we knew not what.

Sure

Sure to ſay it with the right touch; with the right accent, is worth the while. Say it then: ſay this, at leaſt. Leſt, if you will not ſay, Quid feci? What have I done? When he hearkens; you may come into the caſe, you know not what to do; and ſay to Him, What ſhall I do? And, if you hear not, when He complains; one day, when you complain, He refuſe to bow down His ear and hearken to you at all.

Yet one ſtep further. Nothing they ſaid: Is that all? have we done? Nay: He hears and ſees (both) a worſe matter. For in ſtead of this, He ſees and hears, that forth they run to their careleſſe courſe of life, tanquam equus ad prælium. We ſaw (before) their ſlowneſſe, in that: Now ſee we their vigour in this. VVherein obſerve: Here they go not, It is no ſoft pace; they run: Not, as men; but, as horſes: And, not every kind of them neither; but, as the barded horſe for ſervice: and he, not every way conſidered; but when he is enraged by noiſe and other accidents of war, רָץ rather ruſheth, like a violent breach of waters (from whence it is taken) than runneth: ὡς ἵππος ἐφέδρος (ſaith the Seventy) as a horſe all of a white ſome, into the battel, where a thouſand to one, he never commeth out again. That is, with as great fury, and as little conſideration, as a war-horſe runneth upon his own deſtruction. And all this, when GOD hearkneth and liſteneth to hear and receive them; even then, and at no other time; then, ſo ſling they from Him. All return to ſin is brutiſh: Recidiva peccati, that, is tanquam canis ad vomitum: Volutabrum peccati; that, is tanquam ſus ad lutum: But, this fury and fierceneſſe of ſin, is tanquam equus ad prælium. Should there be no more regard in the rider, than, the beaſt, he rides on? ſhould ſuch a mind as this, be in men? 3 Prov. 26. 11. 2 Pet. 2. 22. Verſe 7.

No, verily, we be now gone from men: VVe be come among beaſts. And, thither, doth GOD follow us. And, even among them (if we will but look to the leſſe brutiſh ſort) He hopes to do it: even among them, to point us to thoſe, that, if we will learn, it will teach us as much as this commeth to. This is His Apoſtrophe of the laſt verſe. VVhere breaking off (occaſioned by their abrupt breaking off) He even ſets down Himſelf upon the light of Nature, Well yet, the Stork, &c.

Two kinds of forcible reaſons (or Apoſtrophe's) there are to move us. 1 One, To ſend the people of GOD, to heathen men, that would ſhame to deal with their Idols, as we do daily with the GOD of heaven: Get you to Chittim and to the Iſles, (ſaith Jeremy 2 chapter) See if the like meaſure be offered by them, to their gods. Then the Concluſion is, Quis audivit talia? GODS people, worſe than the Heathen? This is ſuch a thing, as the like was never heard. This was done in the firſt verſe, If any fall, &c. Jer. 2. 10.

2 Yet more effectual is it, when He goeth yet further; thus far. That, not finding, among men, with whom to ſort them, becauſe they keep no rules of men, He is forced to a ſecond Apoſtrophe, to ſeek among beaſts, with whom to ſuit them.

3 But then, if it come to this, that the beaſts be not only compared with us (as in the laſt tanquam quus;) but preferred before, as better adviſed or diſpoſed, than we (as in this, the ſwallow doth know, my people doth not:) that we, in the compariſon, go not even with them, but are caſt behind them; that, is ὑπὲρ ἰσχὺν (indeed) a foul check to our nature. And to that the Prophet crieth, Audite cœli, Hear ye Heavens, and be aſtoniſhed at it. O the damp and myſt of our ſin! ſo great, that it darkneth not only the light of Religion, which God teacheth; but even the light of nature, which her inſtinct teacheth, even the reaſonleſſe creature it ſelf. VVith a very pathetical concluſion doth the Pſalmiſt break off the XLIX. Pſalme: Man being in honour, &c. but becommeth meet to be compared to the beaſts that periſh. VVhich is no ſmall diſgrace to our Nature, ſo to be matched. Profecto (ſaith Chryſoſtome) peſſus eſt comparari jumento, quam naſci jumentum, Now (ſure) it is far worſer to be matched with a beaſt; than to be born a beaſt. To be born, is no fault: we, nor they, make our ſelves. But, to be born a man, and to become matchable with beaſts, that is our fault; our great fault: and therefore, the worſe certainly. Jer. 2. 12. Pſal. 49.

VVell; this Interrogate jumenta, in the Old; this Reſpicite Volatilia, in the New; this Apoſtrophe, this ſending us to beaſts and fowles to ſchool; ſetting them before us, as patterns; ſetting them over us, as Tutors, to learn of them how to carry our ſelves, is (certainly) a bitter Apoſtrophe, a great upbraiding, to us; a great aggravating our ſin, or our folly, or both. Job 12. 7. Matth. 6. 26.

Eſpecially in them, who (as, in the next verſe he ſaith) would hold it great ſcorn, to be reputed of, otherwiſe than as deep wiſemen; that they, ſhould paſſe their lives, with as little conſideration (not, as Heathen men, for they be men; but with as little) yea, leſſe, than the beaſts in the field, or the fowles in the air. Thus ſpeaketh GOD, often and with diverſe. The ſlothful body He ſetteth to ſchool to the Ant, (Prov. 6.) The unthankeful perſon, to the Ox; the diſtruſtful man, to the young Ravens: the Covetous wretch, to that beaſt which reproved the madneſſe of the Prophet, who for the wages of unrighteouſneſſe, was ready to make ſale of his ſoul (that is) Balaams beaſt, the Aſſe (2 Pet. 2. 16.) And, here now in this place, the wilful impenitent ſinner, one ſo far gone, as He appointeth him not one (as to all the former) but, no leſſe than four at once. Belike, either the number is great, that ſo many Uſhers need (and ſo it is: Or, their capacity very dull and hard to take, that no fewer will ſerve them (and ſo, it is too:) Or, He ſorteth them thus, that every countrey may be provided for, of one to teach in it. For though, in ſome places, all are not; yet, in all places, ſome of them are to be found. Verſ. 8. Prov. 6. 6. Eſay 1. 3. Luke 12. 24. 2 Pet. 2. 15, 16.

The leſſon, with theſe four (all of them, from the Stork in the top of the Firre-tree, to the Swallow that buildeth under every pent-houſe) would take us forth, is, that which they themſelves are ſo perfect in, that they may be profeſſours of it, And, it is of four ſorts: 1. They have a time to return in. 2 That time, is certain, and certainly known. 3. They know it. 4. They obſerve it.

They have a time. The place, the Climate, which the cold of the weather maketh them to leave, they fail not, but find a time to turn back thither again. This they teach us, firſt: VVho, in this reſpect leſſe careful, and more ſenſeleſſe than they, find a time and times many, oft and long, to take our flight from GOD; occaſioned, by no cold or evil weather (for commonly, we do it when times are beſt and faireſt:) But we can find no time, not ſo much as half a time, to make our return in. This muſt be learned. Sure, we muſt (ſaith Saint Paul) σχολάζειν καιρῷ, take ſome time of vacancy and leiſure: we muſt (ſaith Saint Peter) χωρῆσαι εἰς μετάνοιαν, take ſome ſeveral retiring place, where and when to do it to purpoſe; and intend it not as a ſlight matter, but as one of the chiefeſt and moſt important affairs of our life. Sure, this adoe that GOD keeps about it, theſe paſſions, complaints, proteſtations, apoſtrophes, give it for no leſſe.

2 Cor. 7. 5.
2 Pet. 3. 9.

2 They have a time certain: When if you wait for them, you ſhall be ſure to ſee them come; and come at their appointed ſeaſon: they will not miſſe. It will not be long, but you ſhall ſee the Swallow here again. This they teach us, ſecond: Us, who have ſometime, ſome little perſwaſions, In modico (like Agrippa's) to do as Chriſtian men ſhould do, but (as Felix) we can never εὐκαιρῆσαι, find a convenient ſet time for it. Return we will, that we will; but, are ſtill to ſeek for our ſeaſon: and ever, we will do, and never we do it. Verily though no time be amiſſe (but [a] at what time ſoever we repent, that is the acceptable time, that the day of ſalvation:) yet Eſaus [b] tears when the time was paſt; and the [c] five Virgins that came too ſhort, and but a little too ſhort; and that very word of GOD to Saul, [d] Now was the time, Now, if thou hadeſt taken it: theſe plainly ſhew, that (as, for [e] all things under the Sun, ſo) for this great and weighty buſineſſe, there is not only עת but זמן; not only χρόνος but καιρός, not onely a time, but a ſet ſeaſon. Which ſeaſon is in time, as a joynt, in a member: If you hit on the joynt, you may eaſily divide; if on this ſide or beyond, you ſhall not do it, or not do it ſo well; therefore, to diſcerne it, when it is.

3 They have their certain time, and they know it. What time of the year the time of their return is, is commonly known: who knows not, when Swallows time is? And our ignorance in not diſcerning this point, doth God juſtly upbraid us withal; and bids us, if we know not what time to take; to get us to theſe fowles, and to take their time, the time they return at; (that is) now, even this time, this ſeaſon of the year; to return with the Swallows, and to take our flight back, when they do theirs. Rather do thus, than waſte our lives (as we do) and take none at all; neither fair nor foul, neither hot nor cold, neither Fall nor Spring, to do it in. This is the third they teach us.

4 The laſt leſſon is, to obſerve it. Opportunity (it ſelf) is a great favour, even to have it; but a ſecond grace it is, to diſcern it when we have it: and, a third (better than both) when we diſcern it, to obſerve and take it. And many are the errours of our life, but all the errours of our repentance come from one of theſe: either, our ignorance; that while we have it, diſcern it not: or our negligence, that when we diſcern it, obſerve it not. The one (our ignorance) CHRIST with bitter tears lamenteth: the other (our negligence) doth GOD (here) complain of. This is the laſt leſſon.

Luk. 19. 41, 42.

There want not, that ſtretch it farther: that by theſe four fowles, there is not only taught the time, but even the manner alſo, how to perform our Repentance.

1. That vox turturis, which is gemebam, a mournful note: 2. That the very name and nature of the Stork חסידה of חסד full of mercy and compaſſion: 3. That the Swallows neſt, ſo neer the Altar of GOD, (Pſal. 84.) 4. That the painful watching, and abſtinence of the Crane, ſpecially when they take their flight, ſo credibly recorded in the Natural Hiſtories: That theſe (Emblem-wiſe) teach us the [a] mournful bewailing of our life paſt; [b] the breaking off our former ſins, by works of mercy; [c] the keeping neer this place, the houſe, and Altar of GOD; [d] the abſtinence and watching to be performed, during this time of our return: That is, that all theſe are allyed to the exerciſe of our Repentance, and are meet vertues to accompany and attend the practice of it.

Dan. 4. 24.

This, the Turtle dove mourneth; the Swallow chattereth: this, all of them ſound as well as they can: This, if they ſerve not (as Maſters) to teach us, they ſhall ſerve (as a Queſt) to condemn us, whom neither our own cuſtom, reaſon, religion, before, nor (now) the light of Nature can bring to know ſo much as they: either to learn it our ſelves, or to be taught it by others. This we ſhould learn, but this we do not; therefore He taketh up His laſt complaint, But my people, &c.

1 The word Judgement receiveth two conſtructions: For, either by Judicium Domini is meant that within us, which is anſwerable to that ſecret inſtinct, whereby the fowles are inclined to do this, which is, the prick and diſtamen of our conſcience, τὸ ἐνσὰν δικαίωμα, (the impreſſion whereof is apparent in the moſt miſcreant on earth; in whom Nature it ſelf ſhrinketh and ſigheth, when it hath done amiſſe; and joyeth and lifteth up it ſelf, when it hath well done: and by which we are moved inwardly, as they by their inſtinct, to return, but that the motion (with us) paſſeth, and with them, not:) And then, the complaint is, that their parva naturalia carry them further, than our great judicials do us in this point.

2 Or elſe, by Judicium Domini, is meant His viſitation, hanging over our heads; called therefore Judgment, becauſe it cometh not caſually, but judicially proceedeth from GOD; (that is) when GOD calleth to judgment by invaſion, by ſcarcity, by gentle, general diſeaſes, and ſuch like: and then the complaint is, that where we ſhould imitate theſe fowles, and return againſt the ſweet ſpring, and fair time of the year (that is, while the dayes of peace and proſperity laſt) we are ſo far behind them, as, not againſt fair, nay, not againſt foul (againſt neither) we can be brought to it: Not in the dayes of adverſity, no, not againſt the winter of our life.

That

That they regard Natures inclinations, ſo as, every ſpring, ſure to come: We have loſt our regard ſo even of judgement and all, as neither vernal nor hibernal repentance we bring forth. Nay, not the everlaſting judgment of the LORD do we regard; to which, ſooner or later, we muſt all come, and there receive the ſentence, under execution whereof we ſhall lie eternally.

Πάντα δίκαια (ſaith S. Chryſoſtome) I embrace both ſenſes: Both be good and profitable to men: Take whether you will, or both, if you will, you ſhall not take amiſs: and if both, you ſhall be ſure to take right, Regard judgment, when either it awaketh, from within, or when it threatneth, from without. And when any of theſe ſummon us before the great Judge, know (for a certainty) that, the time of returning is come: the Angel is deſcended, the water is moved; let us have grace to go in; Even then, ad aqua motum: We know not how long it will be, or whether it will be ſtirred again. Ioh. 5. 3.

And thus we be come to anchor, at this laſt word judgment. A word, which if with judgment we would but pauſe on, and rowle it a while up and down in our thoughts, duly weighing it and the force of it, it would bring us about, and cauſe this whole Scripture to be fulfilled; make us flie as faſt back, as any fowl of them.

For indeed, the not judicial apprehending of this one word; the ſhallow conceiving and ſlight regard of it is the cauſe, we fore-ſlow the time. The fore-ſlowing the time, the cauſe, we come not to Quid feci? the not comming to that, the cauſe, why we run on ſtill tanquam equus; why we riſe not; return not, yeeld not, but ſtand out in perpetual rebellion. Did we hear this word; hear it and regard it right; and ſcire terrorem hunc, know the terrour of it; that God hath fearful judgments in ſtore, even here, to meet with us: Or (howſoever, here, we ſcape.) He hath (there) a perpetual judgement behind; and that ſo ſtraight, as the righteous ſhall ſcarce eſcape it; ſo heavy, as the mightieſt ſhall not endure it: Did we regard this one Point, we would find a with-drawing time, for this ſo ſerious a work; we would ſay, and ſay that God ſhould hear it, what have I done? We would riſe, return, repent; and ſo, His whole complaint ſhould ceaſe. O judgment! of the very mention of this word judgement, if a perfect view were taken of it, that only were enough. But without judgement or regard, we hear it; and therefore the complaint continueth ſtill. 1 Pet. 4. 18.

To conclude: We ſaid at the beginning, God therefore ſhevveth Himſelf in paſſion, that he might move us; and in that paſſion, vvhereto He vvould move: Thus complaineth GOD, that we might thus inferre, and ſay: And doth GOD thus complain? VVhy it toucheth not GOD, it toucheth me; He needeth not our repentance, and our unrighteouſneſs toucheth Him not. It is I, that ſhall vvin or looſe by it; even the beſt thing I have to looſe, my ſoul: He is in no danger; it is I, the hazard of vvhoſe eternal vveal, or vvo, lieth upon it. And yet doth God ſhevv Himſelf ſorry for me, and ſhall not I be ſorry for my ſelf? Doth God thus complain of my ſin, and ſhall not I be moved, or do as much for mine ovvn ſin? From this meditation to proceed, to propound the ſame queſtions, vvhich GOD here doth, and to ask them of our ſelves. What then, ſhall I continually fall and never riſe, turn away and not once turn again? Shall my rebellions be perpetual? Do I this any vvhere elſe? can I ſhevv any reaſon vvhy not to do it, here? Shall theſe Swallows flie over me and put me in mind, of my return; and ſhall not I heed them? Shall GOD ſtill, in vain, hearken for quid feci? and ſhall I never ſpeak that, He ſo fain vvould hear? Shall I never once ſeriouſly ſet before me, the judgements of the Lord? Ask theſe: ask them, and anſvver them, and upon them, come to a reſolution, ſaying: I vvill riſe, and return, and ſubmit my ſelf, and from my heart ſay, quid feci? I vvill conſider volatilia cœli; I vvill not ſeem to flie, but I vvill think of the ſeaſon of my returning: but, above all, I vvill not be vvithout regard of GODS judgment, then vvhich, nothing (in this vvorld) is more to be regarded. Iob. 22. 3.

Becauſe the time; the time is the main matter, and (ever) more ado about it, than the thing it ſelf; to have ſpecial care of that: knovving, that it vvas not but upon great cauſe, that our SAVIOUR, complaining of this point cried: ô if thou hadſt but known, that this day had been the day of thy viſitation! and ſo vvas fain to break off, the tears comming ſo faſt; That he vvas not able to ſpeak out, but forced to vveep out the reſt of his ſentence. O thoſe tears ſhevv; vvhat time is; ſhevv that opportunity it ſelf is a grace, even to have of it, that it is a ſecond grace, to know it; and a third better than them both, to lay hold of it, and uſe it. That the greateſt errours in this manner of repentance come from our ignorance, in not diſcerning of the time, vvhen vve may have it; or our negligence, in not uſing it, vvhen vve diſcern it. Therefore, rather than fail, (or rather, that we may not fail) to take the time of the Text. And that time, is at this time, now: Now, do theſe fowles return. VVho knoweth whether he ſhall live to ſee them return any more? It may be the laſt Spring, the laſt Swallow-time, the laſt Wedneſday, of this name or nature, we ſhall ever live, to hear this point preached. VVhy do we not covenant then with our ſelves, not to let this time ſlip? Surely, leſt no time ſhould be taken, the Prophet pointeth us at this; and (enſuing the Prophets mind) the Church hath fixed her ſeaſon at it. And nature it ſelf ſeemeth to favour it, that at the riſing of the year, we ſhould riſe; and return, when the Zodiack returneth to the firſt ſign. Luk. 19. 41, 42.

Let the Prophet, let the Church, let Nature, let ſomething prevail with us. Et Dominus qui ſic inſtat præcepto, præcurrat auxilio, and Almighty GOD, the upholder of them that ſtand, the lifter up of thoſe that be down; that GOD, who is thus inſtant upon this point by his complaint, prevent us vvith His gracious help, that we may redreſſe it. Following, with His Spirit, where his word hath gone before, and making it effectual to our ſpeedy converſion.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE KING JAMES

At White-hal, on the X. of February, Anno Dom. MDCXIX being ASHWEDNESDAY.

Joel Chap. II. Vers. XII, XIII.

Nunc ergo dicit Dominus: Convertimini ad me in toto corde vestro, in jejunio, & in fletu, & in planctu.

Et scindite corda vestra, & non vestimenta vestra, & convertimini ad Deum vestrum.

Therefore also, now (saith the Lord;) Turn you unto Me, with all your heart, and with Fasting, and with Weeping, and with Mourning.

And rend your heart, and not your cloaths, and turn unto the Lord your God.

F Or this time hath the Church made choice of this Text. The time, wherein, howsoever we have dispensed with it all the year beside, she would have us seriously to entend, and make it our time of turning to the Lord. And that, Now (the first word of the Text.)

Act. 23. 25. For she holds it not safe, to leave us wholly to our selves, to take any time, it skils not when; lest we take none at all. Not now (saith Felix) but when I shall find a convenient time; and he never found any: and many (with him) perish, upon this not now. Take heed of ὅταν μεταστήσω, when I shall find a convenient time: It undid Felix, that.

Act. 15. 28. She hath found, this same keeping of continual Sabbaths and fasts, this keeping the memory of CHRIST's Birth and Resurrection all the year long, hath done no good: hurt rather. So, it hath seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to Her, to order, there shall be a solemn set return, once in the year at least. And reason: for, once a year, all things turn. And, that once is now, at this time: For, now at this time, is the turning of the year. In Heaven the Sun in his Equinoxial line, the Zodiaque, and all the Constellations in it, do now turn about to the first point. The earth and all her plants, after a dead Winter, return to the first and best season of the year.

The

The creatures, the fowles of the Air, the Swallow and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Stork know their seasons, and make their just return at this time, every year. Every thing now turning, that we also would make it our time to turn to GOD in.

Then, because we are to turn cum jejunio, with fasting; and this day is known by the name of Caput jejunii, the first day of Lent; it fits well, as a welcome into this time: a time lent us (as it were) by God, set us by the Church, to make our turning in.

And beside the time, Now; the manner (How) is here also set down. For, as it is true, that repentance is the gift of God, (Si quo modo det Deus pœnitentiam, saith the Apostle) and we by prayer to seek it of Him, that it would please Him to grant us true repentance; So, it is true withal, there is a Doctrine of repentance from dead works (as saith the same Apostle) and that is here taught us. 2 Tim. 2.25. Heb. 6.1.

The Church turns us to these words here of the Prophet Joel; which, though they be a part of the Old Testament, yet for some special vertue in them (as we are to believe) She hath caused them to be read, for the Epistle of this day.

And surely, had there been a plainer than this, wherein the nature of true repentance had been more fully set forth, it behooveth us to think, the Church, inspired by the wisedome of God, would have looked it out for us, against this time, the time sacred by her to our turning.

Again, that the Church carrying to her children the tender heart of a mother, if there were a more easie or gentle repentance than this of Ioel, She would have chosen that rather. For, this we are all bound to think, She takes no pleasure to make us sad, or to put upon us more, then needs She must. Which in that She hath not, we may well presume, this of Ioel is it, She would have us hold our selves to: and that this is, and is to be, the mold of our Repentance.

I wot well, there is in this Text, somewhat of Sal terræ, something of the grain of Mustard-seed in the Gospel: The points be such as we list not hear of. Fasting is durus sermo, an un-welcome point to flesh and blood: but, as for weeping and mourning, and renting the heart, who can abide it? The Prophet (it seemes) fore-saw, we would say as much: and therefore he takes up the word before us. They be the words next before these, Who can abide it? Abide what? These dayes, the abstinence in them? No, but the great and fearful Day of the LORD. If you speak of not abiding, who can abide that? As if he should say, If you could abide that Day when it comes, I would trouble you with none of these. But, no abiding of that. Turn it away you may: turn it into a joyful day, by this turning to the LORD. Thus you may: and, but thus, you cannot. Now therefore you see, how therefore comes in. Here is our choice: One of them we must take. And, better thus turn unto God in some of these little dayes, than be turned off by Him in that great Day, to another manner weeping than this of Joel: Even to weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. Scientes igitur terrorem hunc, knowing therefore this fear, and that upon this turning, Cardo vertitur, the hing turns of our vvell or evil doing for ever; to be content to come to it, and to turn the Heathen mans Non emam, into emam tanti pœnitere. To this turning then. Our charge is to preach to men, non quæ volunt audire, sed quæ volunt audisse, not what for the present they would hear; but, vvhat another day they would vvish they had heard.

Mat. 5.13. 13.31. Ioh. 6.60. Vers. 15. Mat. 3.12. 2 Cor. 10.11.

Repentance it self is nothing else, but redire ad principia, a kind of circling; to return to Him by repentance, from vvhom by sin, vve have turned avvay. And much after a circle is this text: begins vvith the word turn and returns about to the same vvord again. Which circle consists (to use the Prophets ovvn vvord) of two turnings, (for tvvice he repeates this vvord;) vvhich tvvo must needs be tvvo different motions. [1] One, is to be done vvith the whole heart: [2] The other vvith it broken and rent: So as one and the same it cannot be.

First, a turn, vvherein vve look forvvard to GOD, and vvith our whole heart resolve to turn to Him. Then, a turn again, vvherin vve look backvvard to our sins, vvherein vve have turned from GOD; and vvith beholding them, our very heart breaketh. These tvvo, are tvvo distinct, both in nature and names: One, Conversion from sin; the other, Contrition for sin. One, resolving to amend that vvhich is to come: the other, reflecting and sorrovving for that vvhich is past. One, declining from evil to be done hereafter: the other, sentencing it self for evil done heretofore. These tvvo betvveen them, make up a compleat repentance, or (to keep the vvord of the text) a perfect revolution.

And this and none other, doth Joel teach the Iews: and this, and none other doth Jonas teach the Gentiles. None other, the Prophets; nor none other the Apostles: For Saint James comes just to this of Ioel, Enjoyning sinners to cleanse their hands, and to purge their hearts; which is the former: and then vvithal, to change their laughter into mourning, and their joy into heavinesse: Where κλαῦσον and πενθῆσαι, are as full for the Nevv, as Plangite and Fletus are for the Old. These tvvo: both these, and neither to spare: and vve have not learned, vve hold not, vve teach not any other repentance. I speak it for this. There is a false imputation cast on us, that vve should teach, there goeth nothing to repentance but amendment of life: that these of fasting and the rest, vve let run by, as the waste of repentance: Nay, that (for fasting) vve do indicere jejunium jejuniis, we proclaime a fast from it; and teach a penitence vvith no penal thing in it. That therefore, this Text by name, and such other, vve shun and shift, and dare not come neer them. Not come neer them? As neer as we can, by the grace of GOD, that the world may know, and all here bear witnesse we teach and vve presse both.

Jam. 4. 8,9.

Indeed, (as Augustine well saith) Aliud est quod docemus, aliud quod sustinemus. VVhat vve are fain to bear vvith, is one thing; VVhat we preach, and fain vvould persvvade, is another. Et væ tibi flumen moris humani (saith he, and vve both;) VVoe to the strong current of a corrupt Custome, that hath taken such a head, as do vvhat vve can, it carries all head-long before it. But, vvhatsoever vve bear, this vve teach, though.

The Division.

I forget my self. I intend to proceed as the words lye. [1] To turn, first: [2] and to GOD; [3] To
I. GOD, with the heart; [4] and with the whole heart. Then the Manner, with these four: [1] Fasting,
II. [2] Weeping, [3] Mourning, [4] and a Rent heart. Of which the two former are the bodies task; Fasting and weeping: the two latter, the soules, mourning and renting the heart. The former (mourning) the affection of sorrow: the latter (renting) from anger, or indignation: Of both which affections, Repentance is compound, and not of either alone. This for the manner, how.

III. Then last, for the time, when: Now to do it; Now therefore.

I. Repentance a Turning. 1 Turn.

DIversly, and in sundry terms doth the Scripture set forth unto us the nature of repentance. Of renewing, as from a decay (*Heb.*6.6.) Of refining, as from drosse (*Jer.*6.29.) Of recovering, as from a malady (*Dan.*4.24.) Of cleansing, as from soil; Of rising, as from a fall (*Jer.*8.4.) In no one, either for sense more full; or for use more ofter, than in this of turning.

To turn, is a counsel properly to them that are out of their right way. For going on still, and turning are motions opposite. Both of them with reference to a way. For, if the way be good, we are to hold on: if otherwise, to turn and take another.

Whether a way be good or no, we principally pronounce, by the end. If (saith Chrysostome) it be to a Feast, good; though it be thorow a blind lane: if to execution, not good, though thorow the fairest street in the City. S. Chrysostome was bidden to a marriage dinner; was to go to it thorow divers lanes, and alleyes; crossing the high street, he met with one led thorow it to be executed: he told it his Auditory, that non quâ, sed quò, was it.

If then our life be a way (as a way it is termed, in all writers both holy and humane; via morum no lesse, than via pedum;) the end of this way is to bring us to our end, to our soveraign good, which we call Happinesse. Which happinesse, not finding here, but full of flawes, and of no lasting neither, we are set to seek it, and put in hope to find it with GOD, in whose presence; is the fulnesse of joy, and Psal.16.11. at whose right hand, pleasures for evermore.

From GOD then, as from the journeyes end of our life, our way, we are never to turn our steps,
Gen. 5. 22. or our eyes, but with Enoch (as of him it is said) still to walk with God, all our life long. Then should we never need to hear this convertite.

We are not so happy. There is one that maligneth, we should go this way, or come to this end: and therefore to divert us, holdeth out to us some Pleasure, Profit, or Preferment; which to pursue, we must step out of the way, and so do, full many times; even turn from GOD, to serve our own turnes.

And this is the way of sin, which is a turning from God. When having in chase some trifling transitory, I wot not what; to follow it, we even turn our backs upon God, and forsake the way of His Commandments. And here now we first need His counsel of Convertite.

For, being entred into this way, yet we go too far in it, wisdome would we stayed and were advised, whither this way will carry us, and where we shall find our selves at our journeyes end. And reason we have to doubt: For after we once left our first way, which was right, there takes us sometimes that
1 Sam. 25. 31. same Singultus cordis (as Abigail well cals it) a throbbing of the heart; or (as the Apostle) certain
Rom. 2. 15. accusing thoughts present themselves unto us, which will not suffer us to go on quietly: our minds still misgiving us, that we are wrong.

Besides, when any danger of death is neer: Nay, if we do but sadly think on it, a certain chilnesse takes us, and we cannot (with any comfort) think on our journeyes end: And hear (as it were) a voice
Esay 30. 21. of one crying behind us, Hac est via; that, is not the way, you have taken; this that you have lost, is your way, walk in it. Which voice if we hear not, it is long of the noise about us. If we would sometime go aside into some retired place, or in the still of the night hearken after it, we might peradventure hear it.

A great blessing of God it is; for, without it, thousands would perish in the error of their life, and Esay 46. 8. never return to their right way again. Redite prævaricatores ad cor, that sinners would turn to their own hearts. And this is the first degree, to help us a little forward to this turning.

James 3.6. Being thus turned to our hearts, we turn again, and behold the τρόχος γενέσεως (as St. James termeth it) the wheel of our nature, that it turned apace, and turns off daily some, and them younger than we; and that within a while, our turn will come, that our breath also must go forth, and we turn again to our dust.

And when that is past, another of the Prophet, That Righteousnesse shall turn again to judgment:
Psal. 94. 15. Mercy that now sits in the Throne, shall rise up and give place: Justice also shall have her turn. And Psal. 9. 18. then comes the last turn, Convertentur peccatores in infernum, the sinners shall be turned into hell, and all the people that forget, in time, to turn unto GOD. There was wont to be a ceremony of giving ashes this day, to put us in mind of this converteris, I fear with the ceremony the substance is gone too. If that conversion into ashes, be well thought on, it will help forward our turning.

This returning to our heart, the sad and serious bethinking us there, of natures conversion into dust; of sins into ashes (for, ashes ever presuppose fire:) that the wheel turns apace, and if we turn not the rather, these turnings may over-take us: Gods Spirit assisting, may so work with us, as we shall think Joels counsel good: that, if we have not been so happy, as to keep the way; yet we be not so unhappy, as not to turn again from a way, the issues whereof surely will not be good.

And

And would GOD theſe would ſerve to work it. If they will not, then muſt Converſus ſum in ærumnâ, dum configitur ſpina; ſome thorne in our ſides, ſome bodily or worldly grief muſt come and procure it. But, that is not to turn, but to be turned: And, there is great odds between theſe two. As, one thing it is, to take up the croſſe; another, to have it laid upon us. Pſal. 32.4.

To be turned I call, when by ſome croſſe of body or mind (as it were, with a ring in our noſe) we are brought about, whether we will or no, to look how we have gone aſtray.

To turn I call, when the world miniſtreth unto us no cauſe of heavineſſe; all is ex ſententiâ: yet, even then, the grace of GOD moving us, we ſet our ſelves about; and repreſenting thoſe former converſions before us, we work it out, having from without, no heavy accident to force us to it.

We condemn, not Converſus ſum in ærumnâ: Many are ſo turned; and GOD is gracious and rejects them not. But we commend this latter, when (without wrench or skrew) we turn, of our ſelves, And that man, who being under no arreſt, no bridle in his jawes, ſhall in the dayes of his peace, reſolve of a time to turn in, and take it, that man hath great cauſe to rejoyce, and to rejoyce before GOD. And thus much for Convertite, or (if it may not be had) for Convertimini.

Turn, and turn to Me: and He that ſaith it, is GOD. Why, whether ſhould we turn from ſin, but to GOD? Yes, we may be ſure, it is not for nothing, GOD fetteth down this. In Jeremy, it is more plain: If ye return, return to me, ſaith the LORD: Which had been needleſſe, if we could turn to nothing elſe; were it not poſſible, to find divers turnings; leaving one by-way to take another; from this extreme, turn to that, and never to God at all. They that have been fleſhly given, if they ceaſe to be ſo, they turn: but, if they become as worldly now, as they were fleſhly before, they turn not to GOD. They, that from the dotage of ſuperſtition, run into the phrenſie of prophaneneſſe: They, that from abhorring Idols, fall to commit ſacriledge; howſoever they turn, to GOD they turn not. 2 To Me, that is, GOD. Jer. 4. 1. Rom. 2. 22.

And this is even the motus diurnus, the common turning of the world (as Moſes expreſſeth it) to adde drunkenneſſe to thirſt: from too little to too much; from one extreme to runne into another. Would GOD it were not needful for me to make this note. But; the true turn is ad Me: So from ſinne, as to GOD. Elſe, in any deed, we turn from this ſinne; to that ſinne; but, not from ſinne: Or (to ſpeak more properly) we turn ſinne, we turn not from ſinne, if we give over one evil way to take another. Deut. 29.19.

To me then: and with the heart. And, this alſo is needful. For (I know not how, but) by ſome, our converſion is conceived to be a turning of the brain only (by doting too much on the word reſipiſcere) as a matter meerly mental. Where before, thus and thus we thought, ſuch and ſuch poſitions we held; now, we are of another mind than before; and there is our turning. This of Joel's is a matter of the heare, ſure. This? Nay (to ſay truth) where is converſion mentioned, but it is in a manner intended with in corde? And ſo requireth not only an alteration of the minde, but of the will: a change, not, of certain notions only in the head, but of the affections of the heart too. Elſe, it is vertigo capitis, but not converſio cordis. 3 With the heart.

Neither doth this [in corde] ſtand only againſt the brain; but is commonly in oppoſition to the whole outward man. Elſe, the heart may be fixed like a Pole, and the body (like a ſphere) turn round about it. Nay, heart and all muſt turn. Not the face, for ſhame; or the feet, for fear? but the heart for very hatred of ſinne alſo. Hypocriſie is a ſin: being we are to turn from ſin, we are to turn from it alſo; and not have our body the right way, and our hearts ſtill wandering in the by-paths of ſin. But, if we forbear the act, which the eye of man beholdeth, to make a conſcience of the thoughts too; for unto them alſo, the eye of GOD pierceth. Thus it ſhould be: Elſe, Converſion it may be, but heart it hath none.

With the heart; and with the whole heart. As not to divide the heart from the body; So, neither to divide the heart in it ſelf. The devil to hinder us from true turning, turns himſelf (like Proteus) into all ſhapes. Firſt, turn not at all, you are well enough. If you will needs turn, turn whither you will, but not to GOD. If to GOD, leave your heart behind you, and turn and ſpare not. If with the heart, be it in corde, but not in toto; with ſome ends or fractions, with ſome few broken affections, but, not entirely, In modico (ſaith Agrippa) ſomewhat, there is a piece of the heart. In modico & in toto (ſaith S. Paul) ſomewhat and altogether; there is the whole heart. For which cauſe, as if ſome converted with the brimme, or upper part only, doth the Pſame call for it, de profundis; and the Prophet, from the bottom of the heart. 4 With the whole heart. Act. 16.28,29. Pſal. 130.1.

To rend the heart in this part, is a fault; which is a vertue in the next. For it makes us have two hearts hovering (as it were) and in motu trepidationis: and faine we would let go ſinne, but not all that belongs to it: And turn we would, from our evil way; but not from that which will bring us back again, the Occaſion, the Object, the Company: from which, except we turn too, we are in continual danger, to leave our way again, and to turn back to our former folly; the ſecond ever worſe than the firſt.

When the heart is thus parcel'd out, it is eaſily ſeen. See you one would play with fire, and not be burned; touch pitch, and not be defiled with it; love peril, and not periſh in it; dallying with his converſion; turning, like a doore upon the hinges, open and ſhut, and ſhut and open again; with vult & non vult, he would, and yet he would not? Be bold to ſay of that man, he is out of the compaſſe of converſion: back again he will ad voluntabrum luti. Eccle. 1. 3. 2 Eccle. 3. 17.

And

Luk. 3. 10. And as eaſily it is ſeen, when one goes to his turning with his whole heart. He will come to his Quid faciemus? Set him down, what he ſhould do, and he will do it. Not come neer the place where ſinne dwelleth: Refraine the wandring of his ſenſe, whereby ſinne is awaked; fulneſſe and idleneſſe, whereof ſinne breedeth: but chiefly, corrupt company, whither ſin reſorteth. For, converſion hath no greater enemy, than converſing with ſuch, of whom our heart telleth us, there is neither faith nor fear of GOD in them. To all theſe he will come. Draw that mans apologie, pronounce of him, he is turned, and with his whole heart turned to God. And ſo may we turn, and, ſuch may all our converſion be: [1] Voluntary, without compulſion: [2] To God, without declining: [3] With the heart, not in Speculation: [4] With the whole heart entire, no purpoſe of recidivation.

II. The manner of it. All this ſhall be done: we will turn, with the heart, with the whole heart. Is this all? No; here is a Cum, we muſt take with us; Cum jejunio, with faſting. Take heed of turning Cum into ſine: To ſay, with it, or without it, we may turn well enough: Since, it is GOD Himſelf, that to our turning joyneth jejunium, we may not turn without it. Indeed (as I told you) this is but the half-turn. Hitherto, we have but looked forward, we muſt alſo turn back our eye, and reflect upon our ſinnes paſt, be ſorry for them, before our turning be, as it ſhould. The Hemiſphere of our ſinnes (not to be under the Horizon, clean out of our ſight) muſt aſcend up, and we ſet them before us; and we teſtifie by theſe four that follow, how we like our ſelves for committing of them.

I know, we would have the ſentence end here, the other ſtripped off; have the matter between our hearts and us, that there we may end it, within: and no more adoe: and there, we ſhould do well enough. But the Prophet tels us farther (or God himſelf rather; for, He it is that here ſpeaketh) that our repentance is to be incorporate into the body, no leſſe than the ſin was. Hers hath been the delight of ſin, and ſhe to bear a part of the penaltie: that the heart within, and the body without, may both turn, ſince both have gone aſtray. It is a taxe, a tribute, it hath pleaſed God to lay upon our ſins, and we muſt bear it.

I ſpeak it for this. It is a World, what ſtrange conceits there are abroad, touching this point. To the animalis homo, fleſh and blood reveals a farre more eaſie way, not encombred with any of theſe. To turn, and yet not looſe a meale all the year long; and not ſhed a teare; and not rent either heart or garment: and yet do full well. And with this conceit, they paſſe their lives; and with this they paſſe out of their lives; as it ſeemes, reſolved to put their ſouls in a venture, and to come to heaven after their own faſhion, or not come there at all: Change Joel into Jael; take a draught of Milke Jud. 3. 4, 17. out of her bottle, and wrap them warm, and lay them down, and never riſe more.

And (that which is worſe) they would not, by their good-will, have any other ſpoken of. For, this is a diſeaſe of our nature: Look how much we are (of our ſelves) diſpoſed to do, juſt ſo much, and no more, muſt be preached to us. For, more than we have a liking to perform, we cannot at any hand abide, ſhould be urged as needful. But theſe conceits muſt be left, or elſe we muſt tell JOEL, we can turn to GOD; without any of theſe, But, it is not JOEL; GOD it is, that ſpeaketh, who beſt knoweth, what turning it is, that pleaſeth him beſt: and whom we muſt needs leave to preſcribe the manner, how He would have us to turn unto Him.

To ſpeak after the manner of men, in very congruitie, when after a long averſion, we are to turn and preſent our ſelves before God, there would be a forme ſet down, how to behave our ſelves, in what ſort to performe it. This is it; how for our chear, our countenance, how for our carriage every way. Very duty will teach us, if we will not break all the rules of Decorum, we ſhould do it ſuitably to ſuch as have ſtood out in a long rebellion, and being in a juſt diſgrace for it are to approach the higheſt MAJESTIE upon earth. Now, would they (being to returne) make a feaſt the ſame day they are to do it, with light merry hearts, with cheerful looks? and not rather, with ſhame in their countenance, fear in their hearts, grief in their eyes? As they would, ſo let us. Still and ever remewbring what the Prophet ſaith, Magnus Rex JEHOVAH, GOD is a more High and mighty Prince than any on earth, ſtands on His State, will not be thus turned to, thus ſlightly; with, or without, it skils not. But, we in our turning, to come before Him, all abaſhed and confounded in our ſelves; that for a trifle, a matter of nothing, certaine carats of gaine, a few minutes of delight (baſe creatures that we be) ſo and ſo often, Sic & ſic faciendo, by ſuch and ſuch ſins, have offended ſo preſumptuouſly againſt ſo Glorious a MAJESTIE; ſo deſperately, againſt ſo Omnipotent a POWER; ſo unkindly againſt ſo Sovereign a BOUNTY, ſo gracious a God and ſo kind and loving a SAVIOUR.

With Faſting. To take them as they ſtand. Faſting: Which, were there nothing elſe but this, that the Church maketh this time of our return a time of faſt, it ſhews plainly, in her opinion, how neer theſe two are allyed, how well they ſort together. Which Faſt, the Church preſcribeth, not only by way of regiment to keep the body low, that it may be a leſſe mellow ſoile for the ſinnes of the fleſh, (for, this perteineth to the former part) ſo to prevent ſinne to come; but awards it, as a chaſtiſement for ſinne already paſt. For, to be abridged, whether by others or by our ſelves, of that which otherwiſe we might freely uſe, hath in it the nature of a puniſhment. They be the words of the Pſalme, I wept and Pſal. 69. 10. chaſtned my ſelf with faſting: Chaſtned himſelf; So, a chaſtiſment it is.

And thus preach we faſting: [1] Neither as the Phyſitians enjoyne it in their Aphoriſmes, to digeſt ſome former ſurfet. [2] Nor, as the Philoſophers in their Morals, to keep the ſenſe ſubtile. [3] Nor, as the States politike in their Proclamations, to preſerve the breed of Cattel, or increaſe of ſtrength by

Sea

Sea. But as the holy Prophets of God, as Joel ſtraight after, we do Sanctificare jejunium, preſcribe that it, to a religious end: Even to chaſten our ſelves for ſinne by this forbearance. So, no Phyſical, Philoſophical, Political; but a Prophetical, yea an Evangelical faſt. For, if in very ſorrow, we are to faſt, when the Bridegroom is taken away; Much more, when we our ſelves by our ſinnes committed, have been the cauſe of His taking, nay, of His very driving away from us. Ver. 15. Mat. 9. 15.

And muſt we then faſt? Indeed we muſt, or get us a new Epiſtle for the day, and a new Goſpel too. For, as GOD here (in the Epiſtle) commands it; So CHRIST (in the Goſpel) preſuppoſeth it with His Cum jejunatis, taking it as granted, We will faſt. That ſure, faſt we muſt, or elſe wipe out this cum jejunio, and that Cum jejunatis, and tell GOD and CHRIST they are not well adviſed; we have found out a way beyond them, to turn unto GOD without any faſting at all. Mat. 6. 16.

But, how faſt? To relieve all we may: When we ſpeak of Faſting, Humanum dicimus propter infirmitatem veſtram; we intend not, mens knees ſhould grow weak with faſting. Two kinds of faſting, we find in Scripture: 1. Davids, who faſted, taſted neither bread nor ought elſe, till the Sun was down: No meat at all: That is too hard. 2. VVhat ſay you to Daniels faſt? He did eat and drink, but not cibos deſiderii, no meats of delight, and (namely) eat no fleſh. The Church (as an indulgent mother) mitigates all ſhe may: Enjoynes not for faſt, that of David (and yet, qui poteſt capere capiat, for all that:) She only requires of us that other of Daniel, to forbear cibos deſiderii (and fleſh is there expreſly named) Meats and drinks provoking the appetite, full of nouriſhment, kindling the blood: Content to ſuſteine Nature, and not purvey for the fleſh, to ſatisfie the luſt thereof. And thus (by the grace of GOD) we may: if not Davids, yet Daniels. For, if Davids we cannot, and Daniels we liſt not, I know not what faſt we will leave, for a third I find not. Rom. 6. 19. Pſal. 109. 24. 2 Sam. 3. 35. Dan. 10 3. Mat. 19. 12. Rom. 13. 14.

And yet, even this alſo doth the Church releaſe to ſuch as are in Timothies caſe; have crebras infirmitates, It is not the decay of nature, but the chaſtiſement of ſin ſhe ſeeketh. But, at this door, all ſcape through; we are all weak and craſie, when we would repent; but, luſty and ſtrong, when to commit ſin. Our Phyſicians are eaſie to tell us, and we eaſie to believe any that will tell us, Propitius eſto tibi, favour your ſelf, for it is not for you. 1 Tim. 5. 23. Mat. 16. 22.

Take heed, God is not mocked, who would have ſin chaſtned. VVho ſees (I fear) the pleaſing of our appetite is the true cauſe; the not endangering our health is but a pretence. And He will not have His Ordinance thus dallied with, faſt or looſe. Said it muſt be, that Joel here ſaith: Turn to God with faſting, or be ready to ſhew a good cauſe why: And to ſhew it to GOD. It is He (here) cals for it (the pen is but Joels:) He beſt knowes, what turning it is will ſerve our turne, will turn away Ira ventura, which Quis poterit ſuſtinere, who is able to abide? And, take this with you: when faſting and all is in, if it be, Quis ſcit, ſi convertatur Deus? If we leave, what we pleaſe out, then it will be Quis ſcit? indeed. Ver. 14.

The next point (and GOD ſend us well to diſcharge it) is Weeping. Can we not be diſpenſed with that neither, but we muſt weep too? Truly, even in this point, ſomewhat would be done too: Elſe Joel will not be ſatisfied, but call on us ſtill. There is (ſaith the Pſalme) a flagon provided by God of purpoſe for them: Therefore, ſome would come; ſome few drops at leaſt. Not, as the Saints of old: No; humanum dicimus here too. a Job's eyes poured forth tears to GOD: b David's eyes guſhed out with water, He all to wet his pillow, with them: c Mary Magdalen wept enough to have made a bath. VVe urge not theſe. But if not pour out, not guſh forth, Nonne ſtillabit oculus noſter (ſaith Jeremy) ſhall not our eye afford a drop or twain? 2 With weeping. Pſal. 56. 8. a Job. 16. 20. b Pſa. 119. 136. c Luk. 7. 38. Jer. 13. 17.

Stay a little, turn and look back upon our ſinnes paſt: it may be, if we could get our ſelves to do it in kind, if ſet them before us and look ſadly, and not glance over them apace: Think of them not once; but (as EZEKIA did) recogitare, think them over and over; conſider the motives, the baſe motives; and weigh the circumſtances, the grievous circumſtances; and tell over our many flittings, our often relapſing, our wretched continuing in them: It would ſet our ſorrow in paſſion, it would bring down ſome; Some would come: our bowels would turn, our repentings roule together; and lament we would the death of our ſoul, as we do other-while the death of a friend; and for the unkindneſſe, we have ſhewed to GOD, as for the unkindneſſe we doe, that man ſheweth us. Eſay 38. 15.

But, this will ask time. It would not be poſted through, as our manner is: we have done ſtraight. It is not a buſineſſe of a few minutes: It will aske Saint Peter's χωρίου, retired place, and Saint Paul's σχολάζειν vacant time. It would aske a Nazarites vow, to do it as it ſhould be done: Even a ſequeſtring our ſelves for a time, as they did: In other reſpects (I grant;) but among others, for this alſo, even to performe to GOD, a Votive repentance. This (I wiſh) we would trie. But, we ſeek no place; we allow no time for it. Our other affaires take up ſo much, as we can ſpare little or none for this; which, the time will come, when we ſhall think it the vveightieſt affaire of all. 2 Pet. 2. 9. 1 Cor. 7. 5.

And yet it may be, vvhen all is done, none vvill come though. For, vvho hath tears at command? VVho can weep vvhen he liſt? I knovv it vvell, they be the over-flowings of ſorrow; not of every ſorrow, but of the ſenſual parts: and being an act of the inferiour parts, reaſon cannot command them at all times, they vvill not be had.

Fa-

3 With Mourning. 1 Cor. 5. 2.

But if they will not, the Prophet hath here put an ἀπροσδιόνυσον instead of it (for, ſo do the Fathers all take it: Mourn. If weep we cannot, mourn we can: and mourn we muſt. Et vos non luxiſtis (ſaith the Apoſtle:) He ſaith not, Et vos non fleviſtis, and you have not wept; But, and you have not mourned, as if he ſhould ſay, that you ſhould have done at the leaſt. Mourning they call, the ſorrow which reaſon it ſelf can yeeld. In Schools, they term it Dolorem appretiativum, valuing what ſhould be; rating what the ſinnes deſerve, though we have it not to lay down: yet what they deſerve, we ſhould; and, that we can. Theſe and theſe ſins I have committed, ſo many, ſo heynous: ſo oft iterate, ſo long lyen in: theſe deſerve to be bewailed even with tears of blood.

Jer. 9. 1.

2 This we can, and this too, wiſh with the Prophet (and ſo let us wiſh) O that my head were full of water, and my eyes fountains of tears, to do it as it ſhould be done? This we can.

Pſal. 114. 8.

3 And pray we can, that He which turneth the flint ſtone into a ſpringing well, would vouchſafe us (even as drie as flints) gratiam lachrymarum (as the Fathers call it) ſome ſmall portion of that grace to that end. Though weep we cannot, yet wiſh for it, and pray for it we can.

Eſay 24. 16.

4 And complain we can, and bemoan our ſelves (as doth the Prophet) with a very little variation from him: My leanneſſe, my leanneſſe (ſaith he) woe is me: My drineſſe, my drineſſe (may each of us ſay) woe is me. The tranſgreſſors have offended, the tranſgreſſors have grievouſly offended. Grievouſly offend we can; grievouſly lament we cannot; My drineſſe, My drineſſe, woe is me. Nay, we need not vary, we may even let leanneſſe alone, his own word. For, dry and lean both is our ſorrow (GOD wot) GOD help us, This mourn we can.

5 And laſtly, this we can: even humbly beſeech our merciful GOD and Father, in default of ours, to accept of the ſtrong crying, and bitter tears, which in the dayes of His fleſh, His bleſſed SON, in great agonie ſhed for us: for us (I ſay) that ſhould, but are not able to do the like for our ſelves: that what is wanting in ours, may be ſupplyed from thence. Theſe (by the grace of GOD) we may do, in diſcharge of this point. Theſe let us do, and it will be accepted.

4 With renting your hearts. * Gen. 27. 38. † 1 Kin. 21. 27.

And ſo now to the laſt. Rent your hearts. You ſee, firſt and laſt, to the heart we come. For indeed, a meal may be miſſed, a tear or two let fall, and the heart not affected, for all that. * Eſau wept; † Ahab gave over his meat; their hearts both ſwelling and apoſtumate ſtill. To ſhew, that though theſe be requiſite (all;) yet that the paſſion of the heart is caput pœnitentiæ: to the heart He commeth again alwayes, to verifie, that, in both and in all, quod cor non facit non fit; if it be not done with the heart, if the heart do it not, nothing is done. As in converſion, the purpoſe of amendment muſt proceed from the heart: So in our contrition, the ſorrow, the anger, for our turning away muſt pierce to the heart: Some cardiaque paſſion to be; the heart to ſuffer.

Pſal. 51. 17.

And, what muſt it ſuffer? Contrition: It ſhould even conteri, be ground to powder. A contrite heart, it ſhould be: If not that, not contritum, yet cor confractum, a broken heart; broken in pieces, though not ſo ſmall. If neither of theſe; yet with this qualifying here, cor conſciſſum, with ſome rent, or cleft. Solutio continui, ſomewhat there is to be opened; Not only that the apoſtumate matter may breath forth, but much more (which is the proper of this part) that feeling the ſmart there, we may ſay, and ſay it with feeling, Quod malum, & amarum, that an evil thing it is, and a bitter, to have turned away and forſaken the LORD. Some ſuch thing is the heart to feel, or elſe nothing is done.

Jer. 2. 19.

Now, this renting (if we mark it well) doth not ſo properly perteine to the paſſion of ſorrow: but rather to another; even to that of anger. [a] Their hearts rent for anger (it is ſaid Act. 7.) And, it eaſily appeareth; For we uſe violence to that we rend. [b] Ephraims ſmiting his thigh, [c] the Publican his breſt: both, the acts of anger, rather than heavineſſe. The Apoſtle puts into his repentance, indignation and revenge, no leſſe than he doth ſorrow.

[a] Act. 7. 54. [b] Ier. 31. 19. [c] Luk. 18. 13. 2 Cor. 7. 11.

Job. 42. 6.

To ſay truth, they are to go together. Sorrow if it have no power to revenge, growes to be but a heavy dull paſſion: But, if it have power, indignation and it go together. One cannot truly be ſaid to be grieved with the thing done, but he muſt be angry with the doer, And we, if we be ſorry indeed for our ſin, we will be angry with the ſinner. So was Job: Therefore I abhor my ſelf, My ſelf (ſaith he:) Not ſo much the ſin, which was done and paſt, and ſo uncapable of anger; as my ſelf, for the ſin. Which if it be indignation indeed in us (and not a gentle word) will ſeek revenge ſome way or other: Grind to powder, break in pieces, at leaſt make a rent, Contritio, Confractio, Conſciſſio, Compunctio, Somewhat it will be.

Jer. 31. 19. 2 Cor. 7. 10.

But, when we return to enquire, whether and which of theſe two Acts hath in it the very true eſſence of Repentance? In converſion I find it not: Why? For, after I converted, I repented (ſaith Jeremy;) and Nihil prius aut poſterius ſeipſo, Nothing is after it ſelf. Converſio then, is not it. And, when we ſeek for it in this latter: Firſt, in Sorrow it is not: Why? for triſtitia operatur pœnitentiam (ſaith the Apoſtle) Mark [operatur] works it, therefore is not it: For, nihil ſui cauſa. It remains then, of force, that it is in this now of indignation. So that now, (and not before) are we come to the eſſence of it indeed. And, ſet down that: that ἀγανάκτησις, Indignation is the eſſential paſſion; and ἐκδίκησις, revenge (or this renting here) the principal and moſt proper act of a true returning unto GOD.

Now, if you ask, how or which way we can come to make a rent in the heart; ſince no hand may touch it and we live? the meaning is not literal: but that, the heart by reflecting on it ſelf, is able to make ſuch an impreſſion on it, as the Prophet may well call a rent in the heart. As firſt, even by by good moral respects, wherewith the very heathen set themselves in passion against vice. That it is a brutish thing; So against the nobleness of reason: that a shameful; So, against publike honesty: that, ignominious; So, against our credit and good name: That pernicious, as shutting us out of heaven (whither we would come) the greatest losse, and pœna damni; and pressing us down to hell (which we fainest would flie) the greatest torment, and pœna sensus: (For, even the heathen beleeved the joyes and paines of another world:) And yet we for all this, so evil advised as to commit it.

But, these are but ἐκ ἀνθρώπου, drawn from man: the Christian man's is to be εἰς Θεὸν, his eye to GOD. Who, with great indignation, cannot but abhor himself for the manifold indignities offered to God thereby. To the Law of His Justice, to the awe of His Majesty, the reverend regard of His Presence, the dread of His Power, the long-suffering of His Love: That (being a creature of so vile and brittle consistence) he hath not sticked, for some lying vanity, some trifling pleasure or pelting profit, to offend so many wayes at once; all, odious in themselves and able to make a rent in any heart that shall weigh them aright.

Sure, if we take the impression right, So GOD may work with us, as these may work in us, a just indignation: which, if once it be in fervor, what the hand can come to, it will smite; and would the heart also; if it could reach it in. And, if it be in kind, it will award the body to fast, and the mind to spend some time, in these meditations. And this is the Act of renting (as the Prophet;) of revenge (as the Apostle.) And these two, between them both, in Joel and in Paul, make up the full power and consummatum est, of our Conversion and Contrition both.

It remaines, that we set not the Church to teach us that, which we never mean to learn: but, that we intend and endeavour to do, as we have been taught.

III. The Time. Now therefore.

And to do it now For, (as in a circle) I return to the first word [Now] which giveth us our time, when we should enter our first degree: Now therefore. And when all is done, we shall have somewhat to do, to bring this to a Nunc, to a time present. But besides that, now at this time, it is the time that all things turn; Now is the only sure part of our time. That which is past, is come and gone. That which is to come, may peradventure never come. Till to morrow, till this Evening, till an hour hence, we have no assurance. Now therefore. Or if not now: as neer now, with as little distance from it, as may be; If not this day, this time now ensuing.

For, though no time be amisse, to turn in; yet seeing many times go over our heads, and still we cannot find a time to do it in, the Church (as I said) willing to reduce the diffusednesse of our repentance at large, to the certainty of some one set time, hath placed this [now] upon the time now begun, and commends it to us for the time of our turning to God.

And we by a kind of form which we perform, by the altering of our diet to a lesse desireful, by offtner resort hither to Sermons than at other times (every week twice) these make, as if we did agree; seem in a manner to promise, as if we would perform somewhat now, that we have not all the year before.

Sure, the Christian Church ever looked otherwise, had another manner of face; going in the street, you should have seen by mens countenances, what time of the year it was: more grave, more composed, than at other times.

Performe it then: And when our turn is done, God shall begin His, Et pœnitentiam suam gratificabitur nostræ, Our repentance shall beget His. If we turn from the evil we have done, He will turn from us the evil that should have been done to us. Where there was Commination read, with many curses; He shall turn them away, and in stead of them, shall leave a blessing behind Him. We shall turn His very stile, which at first was, ad Me, and in the end is, ad Dominum Deum vestrum: and so make a chang in Him.

In nullo detrimentum patiemini (saith the Apostle) we shall be no losers by it. A lesse sorrow shall turn away a greater, by a great deale. Weigh the endlesse sorrow we shall escape by it; it admits no comparison. The Contrist atoni is but πρὸς ὥραν (saith he) for an hour; the Consolation is, for ever and ever. 2 Cor. 7. 8.
To this lugentes there belongeth a Beati, Blessed they that thus mourn. To this hunger and thirst, Mat. 4. 4, 6. a saturabimini. It is so set by the Church (the time of it) that our Lent shall end with an Easter, the highest and most solemn Feast in the year; the memory of CHRISTS rising, and the pledge of our blessed and joyful resurrection.
To which, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON PREACHED before King JAMES, at White-hall, on the XIV. of February Anno Domini, MDCXXI. being ASHWEDNESDAY.

MATTH. Chap. VI. Vers. XVI.

Cum autem jejunatis, nolite fieri ſicut hypocritæ triſtes; Exterminant enim facies ſuas, ut appareant hominibus jejunantes: Amen dico vobis, quia receperunt mercedem ſuam.

* Or be not like ſowre hypocrites.

Moreover, when you faſt, * look not ſowre as the hypocrites; for they diſfigure their faces, that they might ſeem unto men to faſt: Verily I ſay unto you that they have their reward.

THE Leſſons which this day have been, and yearly, as upon this day, are read in our eares, do all ſpeak to us of Faſting. The Leſſon of the Old Teſtament; Turn to me with faſting. The Leſſon of the New, as you have heard: When you faſt, &c. All, either (as the Epiſtle (telling us, what we ſhould do (Faſt.) Or (as the Goſpel) taking it for granted, that we will faſt, and teaching us, how to faſt, ſo as we may receive a reward for it at GOD'S hands.

Joel 2 12?

These being the Leſſons, this the tenour of them; by them there is intimation given us, that the matter of theſe Leſſons, that a Faſt is at hand; that this when is now. How in our practice it will fall out I know not; but certainly, in the Churches meaning, now. Who would not (we may be ſure) look out an Epiſtle for us beginning with turn to me, cum jejunio, with faſting; and a Goſpel beginning with cum jejunatis when ye faſt, &c. but when ſhe preſumeth, we mean to faſt, to diſpoſe our ſelves that way. It were all out of ſeaſon to ſeek and ſelect Scriptures, what to avoid, how to behave our ſelves in our faſting, if we mean no ſuch matter; if it ſhall be with us, as yeſterday and the day before it was, and no otherwiſe.

This being the Churches intent; this, her Time; and this her Text; What She commends to us, we commend to you, that you would take notice of it, and prepare your ſelves for it accordingly: that the Epiſtle be not ſent, and the Goſpel brought you, and both, in vain.

The Church thus reaching it forth, I took this Text: And I took it rather (if it might be) to ſtop the mouths of them that maligne it; at leaſt, to remove from it the ſlander of any untrue imputation. They preach it, they print it, and (no remedy) ſo they will have it, that the Locuſts (Apoc. 9.) muſt needs mean us here. Why? The Locuſt is all belly, and we are all for the belly; hoſtes jejuniorum, the profeſt enemies of faſting and of all abſtinence. That we (the Preachers) entertaine you with nothing but with diſcourſe about the myſtery of Godlineſſe: but never with exhortation to the exerciſe of it. That, you (the Hearers) fall ſad, and (as the hypocrites here in the Text) look ſowre, not at the act, but at the very name and mention of faſting, at the reading of a Text that tends but that way, as it might be, of this, now.

Sure,

Sure, for fasting, how we practise it, every one is to answer for himself: But, that we preach it, I take, this day, you all to witnesse. Ioel shall beare record with his Cum jejunio, And now CHRIST, with his Cum jejunatis, that we call for it. If it come not, it is not our fault, it is not for want of calling for. We speak to a thing that hath no eares: but we speak though: Liberamus animas nostras, We deliver our own soules, and we deliver our Church from that false slander of theirs. Ezek. 3. 19.

To follow then, whither the Scripture leads us, we are to understand, that as the Morall Law of GOD (in the Chapter before:) and as Almes and Prayers (in this Chapter) going through the Pharisees hands, had gathered much drosse; So had the exercise of fasting, likewise. It is the manner of the world, and so it is of the Prince of the world, to sophisticate ever the best things with hypocrisie, with superstition, with a thousand devises more. Our SAVIOUR then, as He had done to the other of the Law, to Almes and Prayer; So, here now He comes to fasting: and comes with his fan in his hand, to do to it, as He had done to them before: to sever the precious from the vile, the corne in his floore, from the chaff. Cum jejunatis, is his floore; nolite, his fan; hypocrisie, the chaff to be blown away. The Summe. Chap 3. 12.

His purpose is, He would have all stand and continue in force; as the Law, it self, so the lawfull and laudable practice of almes, prayer, and fasting, all three. And it is, as if He should say: That you give almes, pray, and fast, I like it well: do so still. Only, take this Caveat from me, When ye fast, beware of the sower leaven of hypocrisie in your looks, and of the love of videamini ab hominibus, to be seen of men, in your hearts, and all is well: Fast on and spare not. To GOD it is, you fast; and GOD your heavenly Father shall see it in secret, and shall reward you for it openly. Luk. 12. 1. Ver. 5.

The parts arise of their own accord; and, at the first view, give forth themselves, two: For fasting, one: Against hypocrisie, the other. As it were a blast of the trumpet of Sion, to the former: A retreit, from the latter. Cum jejunatis is set downe to be kept: Nolite esse sicut is fanned away, to be left; the leaven of the Pharisees (which is hypocrisie) is cast out. The Division

In the former, we are to doe two things, to settle the duty in both words, 1. In jejunatis, (first) fasting it selfe: 2. After, in Cum, the time when.

In the latter, two things more: 1. The act of separation and casting out the old leaven, first. 2. And then the danger, if we doe it not. The Separation: that we be not like the hypocrites, or not like sower hypocrites. Not like them in two things. Not, in making it our labour to compose our outside or countenance. Nor, in making it our end, Ut videamini, to be seen of men. I II 1

But what if we doe? Then followeth the punishment: You have received your reward. A gentle punishment (one would think) to receive a reward: but a Punishment, and a grievous one, when we shall weigh, how silly a thing it is, they receive, Mens breath: and how great a one they loose by it GOD'S reward.

Thus stand the parts. Of which, the former (I feare) will take up this time, Cum jejunatis, only, and no more.

Cum jejunatis. Two questions there be: One, about jejunatis; whether we will fast at all: The other, about Cum, when we will do it. Best get us a fast first; and get us a time, after. If the thing, if fasting it selfe be loose, the time will be to seeke: God knowes, when. The first thing then we are to do, is to possesse mens minds with a true conceit touching it. Men seeme but faintly perswaded of it, as it were no needfull part of a Christian mans duty. When ye fast, yea when we fast: What make you of this? This leaves us to our selves: When, is no precept, to enjoyne it. Take it right: Here is Cum jejunio, in the Epistle: Cum jejunatis, in the Gospel. The Precept is in Ioel: Turne to me with fasting: And (within a verse after) Sanctifie Me a fast: That is a Precept (I am sure.) Here, it stands thus: What Ioel imposeth, Christ supposeth: implies the thing out of the Prophet, and supplyeth the manner how, from himselfe. I Iejunatis, The duty of fasting 2 Commanded. Ioel. 2. 15.

But, if we stand upon a Precept, we may go higher then Ioel: Even ad Legem (saith Esay) Goe to the Law it selfe, and there is one. Nay there are more then one. One, for a standing fast every year, enjoyned with a severe pain: he that fasted it not was to be cut off from the people of God, (Numb. 29.) One, for a voluntary fast, (Num. 30.) For, whatsoever is votive, is voluntary of it selfe, but who so took it on him by vow, was bound to performe it. One for (both) Integrale, an entire fast, from all, upon the Kipparim day [a] Levit. 16.) And another for Portionale Jejunium, the Nazarites fast, from some and not from other ([b] Numb. 6.) [c] The Law will be for it: The Law it selfe was given at a fast to Moses; a fast of forty dayes. 1 By the Law. Esay 8. 20. Num. 29 7. 30. 2. 13. a Levit. 16. 29. b Num. 6. 3. 4. c Exod. 24. 18. 24. 16

The Prophets are for it too: Under them, and by their direction, to the standing fast in the Law, you have five more added. One, in [d] Est. foure, in [e] Zacharie: all enjoyned. 1 By the Prophets d Est. 4 16. e Zac. 7. 5. 8. 19, &c. Amos. 8. 11. Zac. 7. 3.

It went then, as now it does; The common sort (by their good wills) would neither have holy day nor fasting day. In Amos they complain of the Sabboth, Quando transibit? When will it be over? They thought it as long as any two dayes, that they might be at vendamus merces, opening their shops and selling their wares. In Zachary, they shrugge at their fasts, What and must we fast still, Yet more fasting? have we not fasted enough, and have done it thus and thus long? A sign, they would have been rid of their fasting. Willingly, had the shambles open, as well as the shops. But it would not be, they could not obtein it: The Prophet held them to it, and would not release them.

But, this is Old Testament: When the New came, what then? I had rather you heard S. Augustine than my self: Ego (saith he) animo evolvens, &c. I going over in my mind, the writings of the Evangelists and Apostles in the New Testament [video jejunium esse præceptum] see fasting is commanded, there is a precept for fasting. So fasting is in precept there, if we will trust S. Augustines eyes. And we may: He that (in this place) saith [Cum jejunatis] When ye fast: saith, in another, Tum jejunabunt, Then they shall fast: and that amounts to a Precept (I trow.)

3 By Christ himselfe.

Mar. 2. 20.

Here you see Cum jejunatis a part of the Gospell, a head in Christs first and most famous sermon, His sermon in the mount.

So that, if there should be a meeting about it (such as happened in the holy mount at the transfiguration of CHRIST) of Moses for the Law, Elias for the Prophets, CHRIST for the Gospel, famous all three for their fasts, and for one kind of fast, all (the fast we now begin) all would be for it: at no time to be left, but, in all three estates to be retained; to have the force of a precept in all.

And practised.

But lawes and their precepts do often sleep and grow into disuse. How is jejunatis for practice? Hath it beene used, and when hath it? The fast of [a] Ai, under Iosua; [b] At Gibea, under the Iudges; At [c] Mizpa, under Samuel; [d] At Hebron, under David; [e] Of Ieremie, before the Captivitie; [f] Of Daniel, under it; Of [g] Zachary, after it: At [h] Ierusalem, of the Iewes, at the preaching of Ioel; [i] At Ninive, of the Gentiles, at the preaching of Ionas: All of these shew when, and that it was no stranger with Gods people, so long as the Law and Prophets were in force.

And what was it, when the Gospel came in? At [k] Antioch (where the Disciples were first called Christians) we find them at their fast: the Prophets of the New Testament there, as well as the Prophets of the old. Our Saviour said to them, [l] When He was gone they should fast. So they did. S. Paul for one; [m] he did it oft (2 Cor. 11.) And for the rest they approved themselves CHRISTS Ministers (inter alia, by this proof for one) [n] by their fasting (2 Cor. 6) And, what themselves did they advised others to do; even to [o] σχολάζειν, to make them a vacant time to fast in. So that where the Church for this day (otherwise then her custome is, on other dayes) hath forced us an Epistle, out of the Old Testament, and a Gospel, out of the New (both use to be out of the New) She did it for this end, to shew, that fasting hath the wings of both Cherubins to cover it: both Testaments Old and New; Ioel, for the one; Christ, for the other. So at all hands to commend it to us.

Sure, in the prime of Christianity, it cannot be denied, it was in high esteem (fasting) in frequent practice, of admirable Performance. Which of the Fathers have not Homilies yet extant in the praise of it? What Story of their lives, but reports strange things of them, in this kind? That, either we must cancell all Antiquity, or we must acknowledge the constant use and observation of it in the Church of Christ. That Christ said not here [Cum jejunatis] for nothing. They that were under Grace, went far beyond them under the Law, in their Cum, and in their jejunatis, both.

The ground of it.

Precept then, or practice it wanted not. Neither did they want a ground. It was then holden (and so may yet, for ought that I know) that, when we fast, we exercise the act of more vertues then one.

1 * Gen. 3. 6.

First, an act of that branch of the vertue of Temperance that consist. (not in the moderate using, but) in abstaining wholy. Abstinence is a vertue. Sure I am, the primordiale peccatum, the primordiall sin was * not abstaining.

2 * 2 Cor. 7. 11. * 1 Cor. 9. 27.

Secondly, an act or fruit of repentance: there is pœna in pœnitentia, in the very body of the word; something penal in penitence. And of that penal part is fasting: And so an act of Iustice corrective, reduced to S. Pauls * vindicta, or his * vindicta, Castigo Corpus meum.

Thirdly, an act of humiliation, to humble the soul, which is both the first and most usuall terme for fasting, in the Law and Prophets. For sure, keep the body up, you shall but evill, you shall have much adoe to bring or keep the soule down, to humble it.

4 Gal. 5. 24.

Fourthly, They that are CHRISTS (saith the Apostle) have and doe crucifie the flesh with the lusts of it. Fasting is one of the nailes of the Crosse, to which the flesh is fastned, that it rise not, lust not against the Spirit: At least, fasting, we fulfill not the lusts of the flesh.

Fifthly, Nay, they goe further, and out of Ioel's Sanctificate jejunium, and out of Luk. 2. 37. Where the good old Widow is said to have served GOD (and the word is λάτρευε) by fasting and prayer (not by prayer only, but by fasting and prayer) they have not doubted, but that there is Sanctitie in it, nor to entitle it an act of the Service of GOD: that we serve GOD by it.

6 a Heb. 13 16. b Hos. 14. 2. c Mal. 31. 17. Rom. 12. 1.

Sixthly, And serve Him with the chiefe service of all; even of Sacrifice. For sure, they are all of one assay (these three) Almes, Prayer, and Fasting. If the other two, if Almes be a Sacrifice ([a] with such sacrifices GOD is pleased;) If Prayer be one (one, and therefore called [b] the calves of our lips;) no reason, to deny Fasting to be one too. If [c] a troubled spirit be a sacrifice to God, why not a troubled body likewise? (And it troubles us to fast, that is too plaine:) Since we are to offer our bodies as well as our soules, both a Sacrifice to God: As our soule by devotion, So our bodie by mortification. And these three, to offer to God our [1] soule by prayer, [2] our body by abstinence, [3] our goods by almes-deeds, hath beene ever counted tergemina hostia, the triple or threefold Christian Holocaust or whole burnt offering.

Seventhly, and last, the exercise of it, by inuring our selves to this part of true Christian Discipline, serves to enable us to have venirem moratum, the mastery of our bellie against need be: The Fathers call it ἀγωνίαν, and those that used it ἀγωνιστάς. S. Paul gave it the word first (Act. 24. 16) and saith, he took it himself, 1 Cor. 9. 27.

Use is much; for if before we need, we be not used in some sort, at times, to abridge our selves, but still fill and farce our bodies, weeks, moneths, years together; habituate our selves in it; what need soever there should be, what occasion though never so pressing (suppose God should call us to fast, as Esa. 22. 12.

Say

Say the dayes ſhould come of the loſſe of the bride-groom) we ſhould not be able for our lives; to break our ſelves of that, which all our lives long we have been accuſtomed unto, But, as it is ſaid of Dionyſius lying at a ſiege and forced to keep order, he fell ſick becauſe he kept order and ſurfeited not ſtill (that, having been the corrupt cuſtome of his former life.) So ſhould we. Or for lack of it, grow as impatient as Eſau, rather than looſe our broth, for our birth-right. Or as they in Numb. 11. 5. not part with our fleſh-pots to die for it, but ſit by them, and die by them, and ſo with them alſo be buried in the graves of luſt. Chap. 9. 14. Gen. 25. 30.

The want of which enuring, you ſee what it hath brought us to. VVe are ſo evil able to do it, as we are ſcarce able to hear of it. Our Saviour, when He ſpeakes of faſting, points at this: Having been ſo long at our old wine, we cannot away, nor reliſh new. VVe ſee the experience in our preaching it. Our bottles are ſo uſed to the old, that they leak with the new; as faſt as we pour it in, it runs out again. VVe muſt provide us new veſſels. Elſe, all we ſpeak of this theme, will be ſpoken into the aire. But I forget my ſelf. Chap. 9. 17.

To come to the Text: Cum jejunatis, When ye faſt: To work out of it a little. I ſay firſt, this very when ſhews CHRIST'S liking of it; that there is a time allowed. Elſe would he allow it no Cum, no when, no time at all. For videte ne quando, not a moment for ryot, or for any thing, God hath not required. And, if for no idle word, for no idle act (we may be ſure) is there any Cum allowed. 1 Luke 21. 34.

Again, When ye faſt: This when, is a preſuppoſing at leaſt: and qui ſupponit, ponit. For, can any man phanſie, that Chriſt would preſuppoſe ought that were not required of us by God? to be asked by the Prophet (or rather by God himſelf:) Quis iſta quæſivit de manibus veſtris? Who ever required of you to do any ſuch thing? 2 Eſay 1. 12.

Nay, His manner of the delivery, thus breaking into it with a Cum autem, But when you faſt (as faſt you will, I make no doubt;) here, But when, is plain poſitive: Nay, it is of the nature of a Poſtulatum; takes it as granted; layes it for a ground. This (ſay I) is a precept, and more than a precept; more binding. Ever more forcible is that which is preſumed, than that which is enjoyned. One, we are confident, will be yeelded to ſtraight; needs no injunction. The other, we muſt uſe our authority, and well if we ſo get it. 3

The very things he conſorts it with (to wit) Almes and Prayer (for, them and this He marſhals in one and the ſame rank, cares for them all alike, rewards them all alike: and they (I truſt) are in precept: Yet they are no otherwiſe but preſuppoſed, even as this is, When ye faſt, when ye pray. 4

Then the paines He takes with it, to fan it, to purge the old leven from it, to rectifie and reduce it to the right manner and end: He would never have taken theſe paines, but that he held it worth His paines; but that He would have us uſe it, and uſe it not ſeldome. For, things ſeldome to happen the Law takes no order for. 5

The parties to whom He ſpeaks this; they be his Diſciples. Whereby it will fall out to be, not a duty only, but a Chriſtian duty; becauſe they were Chriſtians, the firſt Chriſtians of all, to whom this Cum jejunatis here is ſpoken. It is for them too; they are not exempted from it. 6

Nay, He likes it ſo well, as he goes about even to prepare even hypocrites, and to frame them fit for it. A ſign, it was not their double faſt, but their double face, (that is) their diſſembling firſt, and then their diſdaine of other, He found fault with. 7

And (to conclude) a double promiſe He annexeth: Firſt, to anſwer their complaint (Eſay 58. 3.) Why do we faſt and thou ſeeſt it not; puniſh our ſelves and thou regardeſt it not? That they ſhall never need to fear, their faſting ſhall be begged for concealed; though it were never ſo ſecret done, though not a man on earth ſee them, He from heaven will caſt his eye on them and regard them. 8

And ſecond, as He ſhall not want an eye to ſee, ſo neither ſhall He a hand to reward them for it: They ſhall not faſt for nothing. His heavenly father that ſees them in ſecret, ſhall reward them openly: the upſhot of all. 9

All theſe, [1] The manner, He delivers it in: [2] The Parties, He delivers it to: [3] The things, He matches it with, [4] The honour, He doth it, [5] The Care, He ſhewes of it, [6] That He frames his Diſciples, [7] That He frames even hypocrites for it, [8], [9] The double promiſe He aſſureth upon it: All theſe are ſo many paſſings thorow the furnace. Would He do all this and not hold it a duty required by God, and acceptable to Him? Have we a Precept, a Practice, a Promiſe; a flat Precept, conſtant Practice, and an ample Promiſe, and doubt we yet whether we ſhould do it or no? No ſure. As long as theſe words ſhall ſtand in S. Matthew, Jejunatis muſt ſtand, and have a Cum, a time when allowed for it. And now to that Cum let us come.

II. Cum The time for faſting.

Allowing jejunatis, the thing, we cannot but allow it a time, when. For, * there is a time when for every thing under the Sun. Only, when that when ſhall be, we ſhall not ſo eaſily agree. VVe would fain have our faſt looſe, be left to our ſelves for the time: This when to be, when our ſelves pleaſe. And, when will it be? Indeed, the practice of the world would make one think, this when to be without a then; a time (as they ſay) in nubibus. A caſe but put; When, (that is) when we liſt, and if we liſt, and not elſe. As if CHRIST had ſaid; If ever you do, if at any time you feel your ſelf diſpoſed, then to obſerve this caution. Otherwiſe, left to our own liberty, when that ſhall be, or whether it ſhall be, or no. * Eccleſ. 3. 1.

If this ſhould be ſo, I have hit upon a very happy Text. For, if this be all; It is no ſooner ſaid than done; done every where all this Land over. Nay, we may ſay with the Young-man in the Goſpel, All this have we done from our youth up. For, when we faſt, we look not ſowre, we diſfigure not our faces, we never ſeek to be ſeen of men. I ſay, when we faſt: for, the truth is, we faſt not at all: but when we faſt, all this is kept. That if this ſhould be the meaning, we have done, before we begin. Luke 18. 21.

To deſtroy a Text, is not ſo evil, as to make a Text deſtroy it ſelf; which, by this ſenſe will come to paſſe. But, if this ſenſe be ſenſleſſe, this gloſſe (as a viper) eats out the bowels of the Text. We muſt then reſolve, this is no caſe put; it is a ground laid. No Hypothetical faſt, if you ſhall; but, Categorical, when you do. For except it be, all that follows is to no purpoſe. To what purpoſe is it, to direct what not to do, what to do is our faſt, if we never mean to faſt? for CHRIST to ſet us down inſtructions how to carry our ſelves, in that, we never mean to go about? Plain dealing were, to tell Him, we would uſe His counſel, in ſome other matter: as for faſting, we find our ſelves no way diſpoſed to it. But, by the grace of GOD, we are not ſo far gone yet. We ſee, His will is, we ſhould do it; and take a time to do it we will, and when is that? When ye faſt? when faſt ye? A time (we ſaid) there is, if for all things under the Sun, then for that.

Let us ſpeak but after the manner of men, go to it but naturâ tenus (as ſaith Tertullian) and Nature it ſelf will teach us when. Mark but when Nature will yeeld to it; when and in what caſe, the natural man will faſt, without eye to God, or Chriſt, or Religion at all. So ſhall we be within the Apoſtle's. Doth not nature it ſelf teach you?

1 Cor. 11. 14.

1 Natures time 1 When in fear. Acts 27. 21. 33.

The time of fear, is a time of faſting with the natural man, Nec eſt ſibi tempus in periculo, for in time of danger men have no mind of meat. They in the ſhip with S. Paul when they looked every hour to be caſt away (the tempeſt was ſuch,) there was (ſaith S. Luke) nemo diuturna, no ſpending of victuals, all that while. Will we naturally faſt for fear of the wrack of our ſhip, and not be afraid as much of the wrack of our ſouls by ſin, and faſt for that? Doth not Nature teach us this? There is one when.

2 When in grief. a Eccleſ. 3. 4. b Joel 2. 12.

VVhen the natural man is in any inward grief of heart, it will take away his ſtomack, he will faſt; ſemper mœroris ſequela jejunium, ut lætitiæ acceſſio ſagina (ſaith Tertullian) faſting followeth mourning, as feaſting doth mirth. The [a] time of mourning is one of Salomons times: VVhy that is our time of Faſting. [b] Faſting and mourning Joel joyns them both. The afflicted ſoul, in his prayer (Pſal. 102. 4.) My heart was ſmitten with heavineſſe, how then? So that I forgat to eat my bread. Our Saviour Chriſt ſhewes it beſt: He was asked, Why faſt not your Diſciples? He anſwers not, how can they faſt? (as He ſhould, for that was their queſtion:) but how * can they mourn, while the Bridegroom is with them? As much to ſay as, if they could mourn, they would not fail but faſt certainly. So (we ſee) did Anna, [c] Flebat, & non capiebat cibos. So (we ſee) did [d] David, for the death of Jonathan: and again when his child lay adying, mourned and faſted for both. Upon ſorow for the death of a friend, or a child, can we faſt then, dictante naturâ; and can we not do as much for our ſins, the death of our ſouls? Doth not Nature teach us that? Nor for the death of Chriſt neither, which our ſins were the cauſe of? There is another, a ſecond when.

* Chap. 9. 14. &c. c 1 Sa. 1. 10, 15 d 2 Sa. 1. 12, 25

3 When in anger. * 1 King. 21. 4.

Thirdly, Anger him throughly, the natural will to his faſt: * Ahab, for curſt heart that he could not have his will, Naboth would not let him have his Vineyard: to bed he goes, and no meat will down with him. Could he, out of his pure naturals, for curſt heart, leave his meat and faſt, and cannot we do the like for juſt indignation at our ſelves; for provoking Gods anger with the curſed thoughts of our heart, and words of our mouth, and deeds of our whole body? cannot we be got to it? Will not Nature teach us, this? A third when.

4 1 Sam. 14. 24. When in a longing deſire.

Fourthly, The natural man, when he is in the fervour of his deſire (if it be an earneſt deſire) he will purſue that he deſires ſo hard, as he will forget his meat quite. Not a man ſo hardy as to eat any thing till Sun ſet, ſaith Saul, when he had his enemies in chaſe: Such was his deſire of victory.

What ſpeak we of victory? we ſee Eſau ſo eager in followving his ſport, that he came home at night ſo faint, and he paid dear for his Supper; yet felt it not all day, vvhile he vvas hot on his game.

Did we hunger and thirſt for the recovery of GODS favour (as did Saul for his victory, or Eſau for his ſport) we vvould not think it much to faſt as they did. VVill not Nature teach us this neither? A fourth when. Put the natural man into any of theſe paſſions kindly, you ſhall need proclaim no faſt for him, he vvill do it of himſelf.

Now mark theſe four vvell: [1] Fear, [2] Sorrow, [3] Anger, and [4] Deſire, and look into 2 Cor. 7. 11. if they be not there made (as it vvere) the four elements of repentance, the conſtitutive cauſes of it. [1] Fear, the middle point, the center of it. [2] Sorrow, that works it. And if ſorry for ſin, then of neceſſity, [3] Angry vvith the ſinner (that is our ſelves) for committing it. It is there called indignation, and no ſlight one, but proceeding ad vindictam, to be wreaked on our ſelves for it. [4] And Deſire is there too, and Zeal joyned with it to give it an edge. Theſe four the proper paſſions all of repentance, and theſe four carry every one (as vve ſay) his faſt on his back. Much more, vvhere they all meet, as, in true earneſt repentance, they all ſhould.

It is ſure, God planted theſe paſſions in our nature, to be beſtovved chiefly upon their Chief objects. And their chief objects are: [1] Of fear, that vvhich is moſt fearful, the wrath of God. [2] Of anger, that vvhich moſt certainly procureth it (that is) our ſin. [3] Of Deſire, that, than vvhich nothing is more to be deſired, Gods favour. [4] Of Sorrow, that vve have moſt cauſe to be ſory for, the loſſe of it. There then to ſhevv them, there to beſtovv them: vvhich if vve did in kind, vve need never take thought for a cum to our jejunatis.

For

For grief of heart, for worldly losse, for bodily fear of drowning, for bitter anger we can do it: why not, for the grief of our grievous offences? for fear of being drowned in perdition eternal? VVhy not, for indignation of our many indignities offered GOD? Alas, it but shews our affections of sorrow, anger, fear, desire, are quick, have life, are very affections (indeed) in secular matters: but dead and dull, and indeed no affections at all, but plain counterfeits, in things perteining to God, or that concern the estate and hazard of our souls.

To take down a peccant humour (as we call it) in our body, whereby we fear impair of our health, we can and do enter into a strict and tedious diet, and hold out well: We can forbear this and that, as we are bidden (though we love it well) if we be but told, it will do us hurt. If for the health of our body, we will do that, which, for our soul's health, we will not, I cannot tell what to say to us.

What speak I of health? To win but a prize at a running or a wrestling, Abstinet se ab omnibus (saith the Apostle, 1 Cor. 9.) They will abstaine from all things, and undergo a strict regiment for a long time before: and all is but for a poore Silver game. What shall I say then, if we cannot be got to endure so much, to obtein the heavenly prize, which is in part done (as there he saith) by castigo corpus meum? This for the naturall mans cum when he will fast. 1 Cor. 9 25. Ibid. Ver. 27.

VVill ye now see the Scriptures when, when that sets us out our time? They be in a manner the very same: Scripture and Nature vary not, dictate to us the same time, both. The Scriptures. When.

Our first when: VVhat time any great danger hangs and hovers over our heads; that, is Gods time (saith Esay 22. 12.) GOD Himselfe doth then call us to fasting. No time then, to kill oxen, or dresse sheep, eat flesh and drink wine: A great pain is there set upon it. God must needs take it ill, if when he bids us fast, we fall to feast. And this when, is of greatest example: None so frequent in all the Bible, as fasts of this nature. Never came their danger toward them, [a] of plague, but David: [b] of famine, but Ioel: [c] of war, but Iosaphat: [d] of any destruction threatned, but not onely good Queene Hester, but wicked [e] Ahab; nay, even the heathen King of [f] Ninive, to their fasts straight; flying to it, as to a forcible meanes (and so they ever found it) to turne away GODS wrath, and so the danger the matter of their feare. This is a time When: and we (then) to do it. VVhen danger.

a 2 Sam. 24. b Joel 2. 12. c 2 Chro. 20. 3. d Ester 4. 16. e 1 Kin. 21. 27. f Jon. 3. 5.

Now, if for the effect we fast; for the cause much more. Of these, of all other our miseries, the cause is within our selves. Our sin, whereby GODS anger is kindled and these ever follow upon it. VVhen therefore we would proceed against our selves for sin [a] humble our selves (the phrase of the Law) [b] chasten our selves (of the Psalme) [c] punish our selves (of the Prophets) [d] take reveng of our selves (the Apostles phrase) tum jejunabunt in die illo: this, is a way; then, is a time to do it. Fasting is a punishment to the flesh, [*] Modicum panis and pauxillum aqua was a part of Michea's punishment. By it, as to amerce our selves (as it were) for abusing our liberty before, and making it an occasion to the flesh, and thereby to prevent his judgement by judging our selves: Do de me pœnas ut ille parcat (it is Augustine.) This so proceeding of ours to take punishment on our selves, it is illex misericordia (saith Tertullian) it allures, inclines God to mercy; when he sees us angry with our selves in good earnest, and doe somewhat, His anger ceases: Nam qui culpâ offenditur, pœna placatur, whom the fault offends, the punishment appeases; whether His punishment, or ours. But, He had rather, ours then His: that we should it, than He. 2 VVhen in sin. 1 To punish it. a Lev. 16. 29. b Psal. 35. 13. c Ezra 8. 21. d 2 Cor. 7. 11. * 1 Reg. 22. 27.

And this to extend to the body also, and to the chastening of it. For, doth the soul only sin? Doth not the body also? And shall the soul suffer sorrow for sin, and shall the body suffer nothing, and yet was in the same transgression? If it shall, then at least pœna damni (for pœna sensus I am sure, we would be more loath to come to.) And what pœna damni but abstinere à licitis quia illicita concupivit, To deny our selves, that we might, for doing that we might not? There is another Cum.

Secondly, As it is a chastisement for sin, when it is done: So hath it alwayes been held to have in it a medicinable force, a special good remedy to prevent sin, when it is not yet fallen on us, or we into it; but grudges us only (as it were) and whereinto we are like to fall, for that we are now leading, even entring into tentation. This is also a time when. And this time we ground upon Christs time of fasting: His fasting went immediately before His tentation. To prevent it. Mat. 4. 1, 2.

No wayes needful for Himself was CHRISTS fast. None is so simple as to think, the Tempter would have prevailed against Him, though He had taken His meals; eat, and drunk, the forty dayes before. It was not for Himself, it was for us His fast: Exemplarily to teach us, it will be a great vantage, if (prepared by this exercise) we shall encounter the evil Spirit. Specially if it be some kind of them, if an unclean spirit: For, that kind is not cast out (no not kept out) but, either by jejunatis, or not at all. CHRIST'S fasting then before His tentation, is to shew us, it is good fasting against tentation. At least, this way we shall weaken his forces, by keeping down our fleshly lusts, which (saith S. Peter) fight against the soul, and lying in our own bosome, oft betray us to the Fiend. For, when all is said that can be, Bernard's saying will be found true; that Nutriuntur cum carne & vitia carnis. And, if Religion did not, experience teacheth us, that. Ply the body apace, let it be kept high, how mellow a soile it proves for the sins of the flesh! and that, if by abstinence we crop not the buds of Sensuality, they will ripen and seed to the ruin of our souls. So, ther is use both wayes of it. [1] Use of castigo corpus, For the time past: Use [2] of in servitutem redigo for the time to come. Jejuna, quia peccâsti, Jejuna ut ne pecces, both (saith Chrisostome.) One, as a punishment, with reference to sin already committed: The other as a preservative for noli amplius peccare, that we commit it not again. Two causes more, and two times, When. Chap. 17. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 11. 1 Cor. 9. 27.

4 When in want of some good. Hest.4.16. Neh.9.1,2.

But, hath fasting his use in evil things only, and repelling them? hath it not also in good things, and procuring them? Yes sure. I demand, doth there never happen us, that we have some cause more than ordinary, the procuring of GODS favour whereto, and the successe whereof, wish more than ordinary prayer we would commend to GOD? Why there then, is another Cum. As, when Hester would move the King, for the safety of her people: or Nehemias, for the new building of the wall of Hierusalem: Both found good of this, that when there is use of earnest and hearty prayer, it will be the more earnest and hearty, if cum jejunatis do also go with it. We have other-while extraordinary occasions in our wordly affairs, and then, we make no account of a meales losse: have we none such in spiritualibus to GOD-ward? None but vulgar there? Never any, but such as we can entertain with our common dull devotion? Need none other, but as if the businesse, between GOD and our soul, were the sillyest and pooreſt businesse we had to go about?

5 When in spiritual exercise. † 2 Pet.3.7 † 1 Cor.7.5.

But say we have none; shall we at no time sequester our selves, and for some small time χαιρεῖν, (it is * Saints Peters word) get us a with-drawing-place; σχολάζειν (it is † S. Pauls) make us a vacant time, of purpose, to intend devout and ghostly meditation throughly? A case, which S. Paul presumes, at one time or other, every good Christian man and woman will not fail but do. Then, hath fasting a time too; and one vacancy to serve for both.

It is a special friend to prayer; to feather it, to put a vigour or fervour into it. Therefore, where (almost) shall you find them but coupled, fast and pray, one following straight in the neck of another? Even here, presently before, was CHRIST in a treaty of prayer: and here now, immediately after it, He falls to speak of fasting. This was not for nothing: But, as if He should give thereby a special Item, that there is a mutual reciprocal correspondence; nay, an alliance between them, to sanctifie and support either the other. And namely, a special vertue in fasting, to awake up and quicken our devotion, thereby the better to elevate our minds unto GOD. We feel this, or we feel nothing; that dull is our devotion, and our prayers full of yawning, when the brain is thick with the vapour, and the heart prest down with the charge of the stomack: And that our devotion and all else, is performed (as Tertullian saith) pollentiora mente, and vivaciare corde, our wits more fresh, our spirits more about us, while we are in virgine salivâ, yet in our fasting spittle; when fasting and prayer are not asunder, but we serve God in both. Psal.141.8. Our Morning prayer, that, that is the Intense (saith the Psalm:) Our Evening, is but the stretching out of our hands, in comparison of it, faint and heavy.

These then: the time, [1] Of fear of the danger sin will draw upon us: [2] Of indignation at our sin the cause of it: [3] Of sorrow for that we have done. [4] Of care, that we do so no more: [5] Of taking down the flesh: [6] Of lifting up the spirit: [7] Of averting evil: [8] Of procuring good, [9] Of giving our selves wholly to Spiritual exercise: These are all causes, Why: These are all times, When; all of the Scriptures limiting; all, of the Saints practice, there.

1 Chap.9.15. Psal.137.2.

And indeed, all of Christs own assigning. For, venient dies, there will come dayes (saith CHRIST.) Do those dayes never come? When come they? Verily when evil dayes come upon us, we may hang up our harps then, the marriage feast is at an end with us, and we then to fast (saith CHRIST) according to the letter.

But, goes He from us only corporally by adversity? Goes he not spiritually also? Yes: and whensoever we fall into any grievous sin, though the piping may continue (perhaps) yet the Bridegroom is gone; assure your self, gone he is; Et tum jejunabunt, and then fast we must: Why? even for very grief, that by our wretched folly, we have set Him gone. For, if when He is taken from us, fast we must: must we not much more, when we our selves, by our lewd carriage have been the cause (I say not, of His taking, but) even of His very chasing and driving away from us?

Thirdly, against temptation, we need to fast; for, against His temation Christ fasted, that needed it not.

And last, His close so joyning, and so oft, of these two ([1] fasting, and [2] prayer) so together still, makes that the time of fervent prayer is a time of CHRISTS appointing too; and that so intimated, even in this very place here.

The Application to the time of Lent.

But, all this while we have been speaking of when we are to fast at large; or when upon some occasion: In the mean-time, we say nothing of this time now at hand, This is not upon any occasion: it is a yearly recurrent fast: Will this also come within the lists of Cum jejunatis? I take it, it will. For shall our fasting be altogether when we will our selves? shall it not also be sometime when the Church will? May we bind our selves, and may not she also bind us? Hath she no interest in us, no power over us? The Synagogue of the Jewes (we see) had power to prescribe fasts, and did: Hath the Church of CHRIST none? Is she in worse case than the Synagogue? No indeed. If Recab might enjoyn his sons, She may hers. She is our Mother, she hath the power of a Mother over us; and a Mother hath power to give laws to her children. And so Cum jejunatis is, When you fast by the Churches appointment, also: the Churches cum. This is sure: No man hath GOD to his Father, that hath not the Church for his Mother: and that, once and twice in the Proverbs, order is taken, as to keep the precepts of our Father, so not to set light by the laws of our Mother. Ira Patris and dolor Matris, are together in one verse: He that grieves her, angers him. And he cannot but grieve her, that little sets by her wholesome orders. The Apostle (we see) S. Paul by name, though he had been in the third heaven, yet he deferred to talem consuetudinem, the Churches custome, and rests in it. We must learn to do the like, and not set light by them, as our manner is.

Jer.35.6. Prov.1.8. 17.25. 1 Cor.11.16.

This

This I may say for this Cum, It is no Custome lately taken up: No Law of the Church our Mother that now is; She is grown old, and her senses fail her: She erres, or at least is said to erre, at every bodies pleasure. It is a custome (this) of the Church, while it was a à Christo recens, yet fresh and warme from Christ, The Church, which was the Mother of the Apostles themselves, at all times kept; every where observed, then, and ever since. Some to shift it, frame to themselves a fear of (I wot not what) superstition, where no fear is. Before any superstition was stirring, any popery hatched, it was, this fast was. Lex abstinendi in Quadragesimâ semper fuit in Ecclesiâ (saith the Oracle of Antiquity, Theophilus Alexandrinus) Lent was even in the Church. Nor onely Quadragesimam, secundùm traditionem Apostolorum, (the Montanists had three) but that one was delivered us by the Apostles (saith S. Hierome.) Why should I weary you with reckoning them up? What one more ancient Writer than other is there, but you shall find it in him expressly, even up to Ignatius, who lived with the Apostles themselves? Apostolike then, it is; and for such S. Hierome avowes it; and when that is said, enough is said for it, I think. Yet it is good (you know it) the fast so delivered, and by the Church ever and every where so kept, the Council of Gangra hath laid an Anathema on them that keep it not, avoid it how they can that keep it not.

And sure in general, that this power should remain in the Church, to prescribe us set times, was most behooseful. Every man (so we would have it) to be left to himself, for Prayer, Fasting, Sacrament, Nay for Religion too (now) and all? For GOD'S sake let it not be so, let us not be left altogether to our selves; No, not in Prayer. Private prayer doth well; but let us be ordered to come to Church, and to do it there, Pharisees, Publicans, Peter and John and all: Let us have our dayes appointed and houres set for it. If all were left to us, God knowes, I durst not promise, what should become of Prayer it self. The like say I for the Sacrament. Let us have a cum when to come to that, too. And so for Fasting: Fast privately in GODS name: But heab you, let not the Church trust to that. Nor she hath not held it wisdom so to do: but, as in both them, (Prayer and the Sacrament,) So in this, holds us to our order of dayes and times established. Them if we keep, so it is: Otherwise, were it not for the Churches times, I doubt there would be taken scarce any time at all. Now yet, somewhat is done: but leave us once at liberty, liberty hath lost us some already, and will loose us the rest, if it be not looked to in time.

The rest, are matters of Discipline rather than Doctrine: [a] The number of forty: [b] The season of the year: [c] The manner of abstinence. Somewhat may be said to content us: But remember, it came from the Apostles: that is it that binds us; that is it, that sets it fast.

That which hath been said, is for some set time at large, for a cum: but, why this cum, at this time, now? Why forty dayes? Why before Easter? Why this fast? It is of all hands confest, that ordained it was, as a part of the Discipline of repentance: And much was done in it, about publike Penitents. Yet not for them only. But, even with them, out of the bowels of a Mother, the Church her self would become a Penitent, and have all her children do the like. Her self become one; For the whole body of the Church hath her fauls (beside the private offences of every particular member) for which there was a several set sacrifice in the Law. For us to become penitents likewise for who knows whether we be not as faulty in private, as they (the open penitents) in publike? As great sinners as they, though not known for such? The cause of it.

So the cause is general, that she with them, and we with her and with them: with them and for them: For them, and for our selves, in whole and in part, all in one, uniformly might performe a solemne annual Repentance to God.

As to the number of dayes GOD saith in the Revelation) † Dedi ei tempus ad pœnitendum. He gave a time for to repent in: What time was that he gave? The time that God gave was * forty dayes, in the famous Repentance of Ninive: happy for the issue; recommended by CHRISTS own mouth, and propounded to us as a patterne. Other set time (save this) she found not. She took the same then: She could not tell how or when to take a better, than that of GODS own giving. This The rather, that Moses, Elias, and CHRIST himself had hit upon the same number in there fast. It is not nothing that it conteineth, though it be but an imperfect expressing of the pattern of so worthy authors; of CHRISTS specially. Ignatius hath said it before me: I dare say it after him. 1 The number of 40 dayes. † Apoc. 1. 2. * Jon. 3. 4.

For the season: The Prophet hath said it, if we know not when to lay our fast, our returning to God, lay it with the * Stork and the Swallow; take their time, do it cum hirundinibus, rather than faile. 2 The Season: In the Spring. * Jer. 8. 7. Against Easter.

But besides that, the Church hath laid it most conveniently to end with the feast of Christs rising, and so to go immediately before it: that against that time (as the Fathers in the first great Council of Nice wish it) all being restored, and all prepared by it, we may of all hands celebrate that high Day, and bring to God a pure offering (the very words of the Council.) Then to end with that high feast, that the saying of Zachary may be fulfilled, that our fast shall be to us turned into high Feasts; as that is the highest and greatest of our Religion; for which cause this fast is called, jejunium Paschale, with reference to it. For Easter and Lent stand upon one base; both stand and fall together. Zach. 8. 19.

As to the manner of our abstinence. It is sure, the fast in kind was in these three, [a] Panem non comedit, [b] potum non bibit, [c] ad vesperam: neither eat nor drink, at all till night. But non omnes 3 The Manner.

capiunt sermonem hunc, all are not capable of this saying: Yet, he that can, let him. But for them that cannot, the Church (as a tender indulgent Mother unto all) that she may win somewhat, is content to remit of the rigour of this; turns her on all sides, to lay no more on us than we can endure, if she can find ought in Scriptures to relieve us. And that doth she three wayes.

1 Daniels fast. 1. Non panem, No manner meat: None at all: Nay, not no manner meat at all (too hard that.) What say you to non talem, not altogether none, but not such or such meat? Non panem desiderabilem, no dainty alluring meats; and namely, no flesh (Dan. 10.) Now we do alter the quality yet; Daniels fast we termed it, on which the Church did ground her ἐυφημίαν, and ours may ground her eating of fish (say what we will) a lesse pleasing diet, and lesse desired by us.

Dan. 10. 3.

2 Tobies fast. 2. Again, Non comedit; Not eat at all, not altogether any? That were too strict. What say you to Non tantum? To some, but not so much? Before, altered the quality: here, abates of the quantity. Not in that quantity, not so much, not so oft as at other times. To cut off one meal if both you cannot. They call it Tobies fast, quando derelinquebatur prandium, he left his dinner: (Dinner or Supper, all is one, so one be left,) nec ventrem cibo oneres duplicato, (It is S. Hieroms, and we do not double ballast our bellies.) And these two we call portionale jejunium: takes not away all, takes some, and leaves some; leaves an honest portion, leaves us a meal, Some kind and some measure (only) abridged.

Tob. 2. 4.

3 Cornelius & Peters fast. 3. Not usque ad vesperam, not till night, forbear; too long, that.) What say you to (as before not so oft, so here) not so soon, as at other times? Put off the time of our repast; Make our molestus cliens break his hours a little: it not ad vesperam, as neer vesperam as we may. Cornelius fast they call it: he was fasting at the ninth hour: (that is) our three at afternoon, till then. Peters fast they find, and that is the lowest; he was fasting till past the sixth hour: till then. Thus indulgent she is: for these are not without example in Scripture (we see) nor unknown to Antiquity. But, for Antiquity, then, they pressed forward as much as they could; and we draw backward all that ever we can. These then, or as many, or as much of these as we can; so to make some manner shew, some countenance toward it: that, if not keep pace with the ancient Church, yet not to give them over clean; not to fall behind them so far, till we lose the sight of them quite, and so fall to abandon Cum jejunatis altogether. And thus much for this Cum, this very time, and the manner of jejunatis, our fasting in it.

Act. 10. 13.

And, now we have found us a time for our fast, God send us to get a fast for our time, a jejunatis for our Cum. For, this Cum is now come. Here then is the place and time to answer CHRIST when ye fast, to ask, when fast we? Every one to enter into his own heart and convent himself about the taking of these times, how oft we have taken them. How oft? I would it were come to that. I fear, it must be whether we have taken them at all or no? Whether any of them? And if this question should be put us, I report me to our consciences (a many of us) whether it would not appose us to tell, when this when last was.

But if (as I doubt) we have not taken them; then I ask why have we not? Have we no sins to be censured? are we in no fear of wrath to come? Our case (sure) is fearful, if we fear not.

Are our souls so very humble, our bodies so in subjection, we need it not? I marvel, if should be so; it should be needful for S. Paul; his body should need chastening; ours none. What, is the Bridegroom alway with us? He with us, & we with him alwayes? do we never part? doth that time never come? Never all our life long? Yes, yes: we want no times, nor we want no causes: we want wils. Whereof sure we should do well to be think our selves better, lest we be out of the Gospel quite. CHRIST cannot say to us, when ye fast, if we fast not at all. Somewhat would be done (sure) if it were but to make CHRIST speak to some purpose: Somewhat; or all that hath been said, and that shall be is to no purpose. No use of it, of a Caution how to do that, we have no meaning ever once to do at all.

I should have now come to the Cautions: and (if God will) so I will: but at some other time. But as our times are inclined to leave sensuality to our own (which we would fain have called Christian) liberty; we had need to bend, and to spend our whole exhortation, not so much against hypocrisie, as for fasting, to keep life in it. As our age fals out, that is not so necessary. Time was, when fasting was in credit: And when a thing is in request, then is counterfeiting to be feared, then take heed of hypocrisie. But now, when little it attributed to the true, then should (I think) there need little fear of the false. So that it were not altogether without reason, as the world goes, not to stand on the later so much; but even let it go; and, so men would fast, let their countenances be as pleased them: let them look as sowre as they list.

Should I say so, I might well enough, for any fear, fasting will now be made matter of vain-glory. But, that were to extend my Commission: I dare not; but leave it as CHRIST hath left it, and say with the Apostle, Quod accepi à Domino, What I have received of the Lord, that, and no other thing; and, as I have received it of the Lord, so, and no otherwise, deliver it unto you; And persuade, exhort, intreat, and even beseech you to do it; but not as Hypocrites: and back again, not as hypocrites to do it; not so; yet in any wise to do it; to fulfil, to make good Christs Cum jejunatis.

Jejunatis, you know what tense it is. In the present tense He hath put it, for at the present time He requireth it. It is not, Cum jejunabitis, or Cum jejunaturi estis, when you shall fast, but when you do. He speaks, as if He would have us fall in hand with it presently, make no future fast of it. This Cum, is already come; and we to do it, now it is come: to make answer to CHRIT's When you fast, with Now we fast, now we are at it, this day commonly called Caput jejunii, the head of it: to which head (I trust) we will allow a body, and so make a fast of it.

And even so then, let us do. And He that saith it, will see it and seeing it, will see it shall not go without a reward at His hands; See, that, any hunger or thirst, for Him and upon His word suffered, shall be satisfied at His heavenly table, at the great Easter-day, the Day of the last resurrection; where there shall be no fasting any more, but a Feast with all joy and Jubilee for ever.

A SER-

before King JAMES, at White-hall, on the VI. of March, Anno Domini, MDCXXII. being ASHWEDNESDAY.

MATTH. Chap. VI. Vers. XVI.

Cum autem jejunatis, nolite fieri ſicut hypocritæ triſtes; Exterminant enim facies ſuas, ut appareant hominibus jejunantes: Amen dico vobis, quia receperunt mercedem ſuam.

*Moreover, when you faſt, * look not ſowre as the hypocrites; for they diſfigure their faces, that they might ſeem unto men to faſt: Verily I ſay unto you that they have their reward.*

* Or, be not like ſowre hypocrites.

OUR laſt yeares endeavours were out of the two firſt words, Cum jejunatis, When ye faſt; to ſettle a true conceit, what every good Chriſtian man is to hold, both of Jejunatis faſting it ſelf, and of Cum, the time when. And that not without great need; the moſt part ſeem ſo faintly perſwaded of faſting, as if it were no needful part of a Chriſtian mans duty: And, of the time, as if CHRISTS Cum did never come.

And this, we did, as for liberâſti animam tuam, to deliver our own ſouls; ſo to deliver the Doctrine of our Church, from a malitious ſlander caſt on it, as if it favoured any way the filling or farcing our ſelves, at this no leſſe than at other times; and did not require and enjoyn a more ſtrict and pœnitential kind of life, at this time, than all the year beſide.

VVherein, if GOD have ſo bleſſed our endeavours, that theſe tvvo points be ſetled, we may then go forward to the reſt; that is, Be not like the hypocrites. If vve reſolve, that CHRIST'S when ſhall have a then, and then, faſt vve vvill.

The next point is a Caveat, vvhat vve are to take heed of, vvhen vve faſt: That vve faſt in ſecret, make no ſhevv of it: Our faſt be to God and not to men: that vve faſt not for vain-glory as hypocrites do.

I confeſſe, I proceed to this ſecond part, as to that, vvhereof there is not ſo much need; And, but that I take my ſelf bound to proſecute the text, I have begun, I vvould chooſe rather to ſpend the hour in ſpeaking again for the duty, to have it done; than to deale vvith the Caution, vvhat to eſchevv in the doing. VVe cannot get men to it (to faſt:) vvhat need vve then ſpend any ſpeech, hovv they ſhould not do it, vvhen they do it not?

VVe divided the Text into tvvo parts: One, for faſting; the other, againſt hypocriſie. As our times are, there is more need, to ſpeak for faſting, then againſt hypocriſie. And yet againſt that too: (God forbid, that, or any vice ſhould be favoured:) but, not againſt hypocriſie, in faſting. There is little fear of that. Men faſt not like hypocrites, vvhen they faſt not at all.

But,

But you will be pleaſed to call to minde how we then left, and wherewith we concluded the laſt year. That, we muſt not think any thing more then needs, in any ſpeech of CHRISTS. That, what we have received of the Lord, that and no other thing; And as we have received it of the Lord, ſo and no otherwiſe are we to deliver it unto you. And, from him we have received both Cum jejunatis, and Ne Sitis; the one as well as the other. And ſo we ſet forward, to Ne ſitis ſicut, the Caution. Yet ſo as our firſt caution ever be, we omit not to faſt. Not, at other times: but not at this eſpecially, when the Church, or rather, God, by the Church her ancient order and cuſtome cals us to it.

For when we are to look to all this, what time? Why, When we faſt: That when is ſtill to be kept in mind; to that we muſt come. That, the ground of all; thither we muſt return again in the end.

The Summe, & Diviſion. We ſay then, Cum jejunatis, is the good ſeed-corne which CHRIST Himſelf hath ſowen. All beſides, is but chaffe to be blowen away. And, now He takes His fan in his hand, to fan away this chaffe. For, quid palea ad triticum (ſaith God, in Jeremy) wheat and chaffe, what ſhould they do together? Theſe muſt be ſevered: One to be laid up in the Garner, the other to be burnt with unquenchable fire.

Jer. 23. 28.

I. 1 The fan in theſe words. Nolite fieri ſicut, Be not like. The Chaffe, is in the word Hypocrites. Firſt then, Hypocriſie in general to be avoided.

II. 2 But here is a ſpecial kind, ſicut hypocritæ triſtes, Not, ſowre, like hypocrites: Or, not like ſowre hypocrites. Not like them.

III. 3 Not like them, wherein? In two points upon which the fan goes. [1] Not like them, in their Sicut: [2] Not like them, in their Ut. Not, in their manner how: Not, in their end, why. [1] Not in their manner how: Why, what do they? they are all for their countenance; and that they diſfigure. In making it their labour, to have it appear in their countenance. [2] And why do they ſo? That ſo, men may know them for faſters. In making it their end, to be ſeen of men. Theſe two He fannes away.

IV. 4 But, what if one could find in his heart to faſt, and yet would have men ſee it, and commend him for it, Ad quod damnum, what hurt will come of it? One would think, none: CHRIST ſayes Amen to it. They make it their reward, to be ſeen of men: Why, it ſhall be their reward, they ſhall be ſeen of men: that is all, they would have to come. VVhy, this, one would never think a puniſhment: But it is one. And think it not a ſmall one, for though it ſeem no great harm to receive a reward of praiſe: yet when we ſhall lay together, how poor a thing it is they receive, Man's praiſe: And, how great an one they loſe by the meanes, Gods reward: they had better be without it. For, when they have that, there is all, all that ſhall come of their faſting: Acceperunt ſuam, amiſerunt meam, They have received their reward, they have loſt mine; and CHRIST to ſay Amen to it; This ſay I, is ſure a heavie puniſhment. Therefore look to it.

Luke 12. 1. And, when the Chaffe is blowen away, and the floore purged: when the old leven, which is hypocriſie, is caſt out; of the reſt, we are to make our ſweet-bread, now againſt the great feaſt of our Paſſeover, we make ready for.

I. The Fanne. Be not like.

WHen we have got paſt the two firſt words; when the thing is won, and the time; and we reſolved, that faſt we will; and when we will; and we ſet our ſelves ſeriouſly to it: What, is all ſafe? Will the Devil be gone his way? Shall we hear no more of him, as ſoon as he ſees us ſo ſet? No, indeed: but hovers about us ſtill; as if there were yet ſomewhat for him to do. Our Bleſſed SAVIOUR when the Spirit led Him into the wilderneſſe, and He fell to His faſt, it is ſaid, that then the tempter came to Him: So, we muſt make reckoning, He will to us. It is exceeding behooveful for us, to take notice of this: as they ſay, to know the length of the Devils chaine: That, neither full nor faſting, we are out of his reach, but he will be buſie with us in them both. Attends our Feaſts, to make [a] our table a ſnare: Attends our Faſts, to turn them (as well as our prayers) [b] into ſinne. Eating, he is buſie with us, to make us eat like [c] Eſau. Faſting; no leſſe buſie, to make us faſt like the [d] Phariſee. And look what in this, in the reſt: Both Alms and Prayer too, are ſubject to it. Therefore, in and through all, whether we give Almes, pray, or faſt, to have an eye to him; in all. Praying, Faſting, giving Almes, he leaves us not; gives us not over, till he have corrupted the manner, perverted the end: till, one way or other he have ſet them awry. His firſt eſſay is, Ne bonum, we do not that which is good, we faſt not at all: His ſecond is, Ne bonum benè, we do it not, as we ſhould; by putting to it a wrong ſicut, an undue manner; or a wrong Ut, an undue end; that ſo, we may do what GOD commands us, for the Devils end. Sure, it is not enough to be exerciſed in doing good; we muſt look to both the Sicut, the manner how we do it; and to the Ut, the end, why we do it: or he may hap go beyond us; and both ſpoil them, and ſpoil us of our reward for them.

But then again, take heed ye be not caught here; and for doubt ye may do it amiſſe, be brought not to do it at all, but let all alone. That is another of his tricks: For his method and manner of proceeding, in this point, is well worth our obſervings: Nôsse hæc ſalus eſt. It is one of the Profunda Satanæ (as the Revelation cals them) the deep fetches, or policies of Satan. For, would any man think, he would uſe this Text, theſe very words of our Saviour [Be not like hypocrites] to draw men from faſting? He doth. For, finding here, faſting, and Hypocrites thus cloſe together; and ſo, that hypocrites uſe to faſt; he perſwades ſome (and ſuch, as ween themſelves no fooles) to think, they cannot faſt, but they muſt ipſo facto prove hypocrites. Sets up this for a ſcar-crow, to raiſe up a vain fear in them, and ſo to chaſe them from it. Will ye faſt? Gods Lord take heed what you do; do it not: why? Ne ſitis ſicut hypocritæ; for, and you do, you will be taken for an hypocrite.

And mark the double taking of Ne ſitis: Ne ſitis, Be not like (ſaith CHRIST:) Ne ſitis, Leſt you be like (ſaith he.) Now, the belly is apt and eaſie enough to apprehend any fear in this kind; any oppoſition, or expoſition, any thing that makes for it.

Nay, hereby he prevailes with them, not onely to give over faſting themſelves: but draws them further to grow jealous, leſt every one that faſts, be not tainted that way: and, leſt every one that preaches for it, be not juſtly to be ſuſpected, as that way given; as having in him ſome ſparks of a Phariſee. Thus doth he.

And, will you ſee how compendious a way he deviſeth, to rid us clean of all hypocriſie? Thus: to keep no Lent; not to faſt at all: and ſo, he will warrant us, we ſhall be ſure to be clear from being any hypocrites. So, to avoid hypocriſie, he voids faſting quite.

But, what is this, but to caſt out devils by the power of Beelzebub, one devil with another? To caſt out hypocriſie by gluttony? To caſt out ſuperſtition with the prophaneneſſe of Eſau? VVho, rather than offend his belly, cared not what became of his birth-right. To bring in Ne jejunatis, Faſt not; under colour of Ne ſitis hypocritæ, not Being like hypocrites: To caſt out Ne ſitis hypocritæ, Be no hypocrites, with ſitis Epicuri, Die not in debt to your bellies. The Devils only way, to rid hypocriſie, by engroſſing Epicuriſme. Mat. 12. 25: Heb. 12. 16.

But (alas) what will this availe us? what is gotten by this? Small eaſe will it be (GOD knowes) for any, not to be condemned as an hypocrite, Seeing he that fell to eat and drink with good fellowes (in the XXIV. Chapter after) had his portion given him with hypocrites, as good a trencher-man as he had been; all his life time. So that, both come into one room, both lye together; and fry together in one place of torments. And, thither it is he would bring us, he cares not whither way. This is his firſt aſſay: and much hurt he hath done this way. Mat. 24. 51.

I know not how, but faſting is laid aſide: In a manner clean gone: Few or none keep it. How is it gone? what is pretended, or given out for it? But for fear of doing that, which perſons do that are ſuperſtitiouſly given; fear, of being like them. For, no fear of hypocriſie, now: Sicut hypocritæ is now gone. But, by this one precedent, this one ne ſitis ſicut, he can make more. As now, in place of Be not like hypocrites, is come a fear of, Be not like Papiſts: we ſhall be like Papiſts, if we do. And not to faſt, is made a Superſedeas of all Popery; as if that alone were enough, to make us truly reformed. This is all our fear now.

But, ibi trepidaverunt timore, ubi non erat timor, there were they afraid, where no fear was. This is but a ſcar-crow neither. [1] Firſt ſet down this: we muſt do ſomething, that hypocrites and ſuperſtitious perſons do, or we muſt give over Alms too, and Prayer as well as Faſting; for, they have a like Ne ſitis upon them. You ſhall find Hypocrita in, at all three. Pſal. 14. 5.

[2] Then the ſecond: we may do what hypocrites do, and yet not do it, as they do it. And it is the ſicut, the manner (not the thing it ſelf) that CHRIST here excepts to. So, that fear is at an end.

[3] Laſtly, theſe words being directed by CHRIST, and by Him ſpoken to His Diſciples, by the grace of GOD all be not hypocrites, or ſuperſtitious, that faſt; For, CHRISTS Diſciples were neither. We may faſt then like CHRISTS Diſciples, we may be of their number. And indeed the truth is; CHRISTS Diſciples are only truly ſeiſed of it. Hypocrites do but encroach upon it, or rather on the out-ſide of it, as doth the Wolfe upon the ſheeps clothing. But neither is the ſheep to leave or lay down his fleece; nor the Chriſtian man, his faſt; becauſe other-while, the VVolf is found in the one, or the hypocrite, at the other.

In three ſhort words CHRIST teacheth us as a way to anſwer both. His ne ſitis ſicut will make both fly away, as chaffe before the fan, and Cum jejunatis never be ſtirred, but lye ſtill. Do the Hypocrites faſt, to be ſeene, doe they? And do the Papiſts faſt, with opinion of merit? Why, Be not like hypocrites, but yet faſt: Nor, be not like Papiſts, no more than like hypocrites, yet faſt though. CHRISTS ne ſitis will ſerve for theſe, and for as many as the Devil can deviſe. Faſt not like them; faſt like CHRIST'S Diſciples, and all is well. And this, for his firſt way of turning CHRISTS Cum jejunatis into Ne jejunatis, upon fear of being like hypocrites, if we ſo do.

But if, this way he ſucceed not to keep us from it, but faſt we will; then comes he about, with a new ſtratagem. And that by way of wholeſome counſel; that, if we will needs faſt, we would do it to ſome purpoſe: (that is) do it ſo, as we may be known to do it, in any wiſe. For, to what purpoſe will it be to do it in tenebris? It is no work of darkneſſe; or, as good in a blind corner, where no man can take notice of it; as if we were aſhamed to be ſeen about ſo good a work. Nay, in any wiſe; take heed of concealment of your faſt, of hiding it under a buſhel. And, good reaſon; they be works of light (all three) Almes, Prayer, and Faſting; and ſo love to be brought to light, to be ſet on a Candleſtick, and to be ſeen. Therefore, as before, in our Almes; he had deviſed we ſhould call our Almesfolk about us with a * Trumpet: and, as in Prayer, that we ſhould do it in † choice places, where folk may come by, and ſee us at it; and to be a good deal longer than ordinary, that ſo, we may ſeem ſomewhat ſingular, and to have more in us, than our fellowes. So, here now, when it is Faſting-day Chap. 5. v. 15. * Verſe 8: † Verſe 5.

with us, to get us a faſting-day face, at any hand. For that, except we be ſomewhat altered in countenance, no man will look at us, or mark us; there vvill be no notice taken of it; and ſo as good not faſt at all: But if it appear in our faces, we ſhall both get reputation to our ſelves, and our Profeſſion ſhall receive credit beſides. Thus doth he medle his chaff; mold in his ſowre leven into CHRIST'S nova conſperſio; to make us do, what God vvould have us, for his owne; to do Gods vvork, for the Devils end. Sanctifie me a faſt, (as I told) ſhews, there is ſanctity in it; a holy duty it is, and he ſeeks to breed moths in it. For, ſo the Fathers call hypocriſie (tineam ſanctitatis) the moth that frets in ſunder all, that holy or good is; and ſo by that meanes, make it a meer moth-eaten faſt.

1 Cor. 5. 7. Joel 1. 14. 2. 15.

Thus whitherſoever we turn our ſelves, he meets with us ſtill. Theſe are his deſigns: this doth he, diverſis itineribus, by contrary wayes, ſeek to circumvent us. Firſt, down he ſits in his Court, and offers us a licence, not to keep Lent, to keep what diet we will: And if we refuſe it, threatens us, he will get us preſented for hypocrites. But if that move us not, but we ſtand out reſolute for all his ſcarcrow, then, out he comes in a new ſtyle; fals to commend to us, as good orderly men: but (withal) to adviſe us friendly to do all ſo, as may be for our beſt behoof: which is, to have it ſeen in any wiſe. And (that which is ſtrange) ſcars us with that, in the beginning, which he brings us to, in the end: Even, to do that in hypocriſie, that (before) he wiſhed us, in no wiſe to do, for fear of hypocriſie. So as, upon the matter, now it is come to ſitis hypocrita, though not in ſo broad terms; but, ſo is his meaning, do it like hypocrites to be ſeen.

II. The Chaffe. 1 Not like hypocrites in general.

This is the proper place: here now comes CHRIST with his fanne, and ſevers the precious from the vile, with Ne ſitis ſicut. And think it never a whit the worſe for this Ne ſitis. Almes hath the ſame before; and ſo hath Prayer the very ſame: And many a Ne ſitis belong to theſe, and to every good duty. They are not the worſe; the better rather, for the fanning: they are rid by it of much refuſe ſtuffe. And, even to this of faſting, there belongs more Be not like's than one. Not like the Manachees, that thought the creatures unclean. Not like them, whoſe faſt is a Commutation of Gluttony. Not like them, that faſt to ſave charges. Not like them that make it an opus operatum: and ſo it be done, it skils not how with them; it skils not for any Sicut. Not like any of theſe. One ne ſitis ſerves them all, ſends them all going one after another, as many as come. Ne ſitis to them all, and to every, or any of them all. And ſo, you ſhall not need give over your faſting for any of them all. I would faſt, but for being like one of theſe: why, be not like any one of theſe, and yet faſt notwithſtanding.

Not like any one of theſe, But ſpecially (ſaith CHRIST here) not like Hypocrites. Why, not like them? For, then, the Phariſees faſted, and their diſciples: and John faſted, and his diſciples: there was, then, faſting on all hands. And then is the time of hypocriſie: Then doth it abound moſt, when things are in requeſt, when moſt uſed; then, is moſt danger of counterfeiting. And hypocriſie is but a kind of counterfeiting (as I ſhall ſhew you.) Therefore as thoſe times were, Be not like Hypocrites.

Mark. 7. 18.

Not like them? and them, of all other, one would chooſe to be like, they of all others are more like to faſt; they look as if they faſted, they carry their faſt in their face, they. Why, that, CHRIST likes not; the carrying it in their face: tels us plainly, they be not the men, we take them for: no true faſters, they be but hypocrites.

Hypocrites: that is, ſtage-players.

Hypocrites? What is that? We muſt needs ſtay a little, to ſearch out the true ſenſe of that word: They be ſo baited, all the Goſpel thorow; there be ſo many Woes cried againſt them. The word Hypocrite is neither Engliſh nor Latine, but as a Deniſon. Originally, it is a known Greek word; and is (in that tongue) the ordinary and proper name for thoſe, whom the Latine term Hiſtriones, and we in Engliſh Stage-players, Such as in diſguiſed attire and haire preſent themſelves on a Stage, and there oft repreſent thoſe, whom (GOD knowes) they are far from; but yet outwardly take upon them their perſons; as if they were.

And the ground of the word is, they are therefore called Hypocrites, for that, to give a true judgement of them, you muſt ὑποκρίνειν judge them (not by their Players coat above, but) by that, they are underneath in their own, when their gorgeous and gay attire is off. That, may be gallant and brave: they themſelves are, it skils not what; Peradventure, he that plai'd the Souldan, but a Sowter.

The word (in the tongue CHRIST ſpake) is as much as to ſay, as one in a vizour, Aſſumens vultum, a face-taker; one that hath got him a taken-on-face, which is none of his own, nor nothing like it; as in Plays and Shews, the manner is. But, we hold us to the word Hypocrita. The dative ſenſe of the word you ſee: and it is, as if He had ſaid in plain Engliſh; When ye faſt, be not like theſe ſame Stage-players. So, it ſignifies at the firſt. And at the ſecond hand, all others, which do off of the Stage, that which they do upon it; and in Court, City, or Countrey, carry themſelves with other faces than their own, as theſe do on the Stage at Playhouſes.

The Heathen man long ſince obſerved, that Mundus, ſcena; that, in his conceit, the world, for all the world, was like a ſtage or theater; ſcarce a true face in it: all in a manner perſonate. And the actions in the world, not much unlike to their acting of their parts in the Acts and Scenes of a Stage-play. But our Saviour CHRIST, he goes further: he tels us here, of a ſtranger matter. That, there want not, that make his Church a very Stage; and play with Religion, and play Religion and every part of it: So carrying themſelves in things perteining to GOD, as if they had ſome Play or Pageant in hand. It is but too true, this. If you will ſet up a Stage, I will find you Actors for it now.

Will you ſee Almes played? out comes Judas fagely, with a ſentence in his mouth [a] Ut quid perditio hac? Alas it would have been better beſtowed upon a many of poor people: why ſhould there be ſuch waſte upon Chriſts head? right, the ſupplication of beggers. [a] Mat.26.8. Iohn 11.5.

Will you ſee Prayer played? Look upon the Players in the XXIII. Chapter after that, under colour of [b] a long prayer, now and then prey upon the houſes and goods of a ſort of ſeduced widows: and make as good gain of their Prayers, as Iudas would have done of his Almes. [b] Mat.23.14.

But, Sermons go away with it now; The Church is, then, full: and (GOD knows) a few true hearers: the reſt are but a ſort of Sermon-Hypocrites. The Scene is in the 33. of Ezekiel: O let us go hear the word: and the Prophet addes, So was the faſhion then, and for faſhion it was. And thither they come, and when they are come, here ſit they, but their heart is elſewhere, wandring where it will. Either they attend not: or if they do, it is to make jeſts. Or, at the beſt, it is but, as they hear a ſong of one that hath a pleaſant voyce; and no more comes of the Sermon than of the Song. Or, if you love the New Teſtament better, there have you (in the 6 of Mark) [a] Herod ſending for Iohn Baptiſt oft, and hearing him full devoutly, till (for a [b] Non licet tibi, in one of his Sermons) he made his Head fly off his Shoulders. And in very deed, the Marriage at [c] Sichem, and the Circumciſion for it; [d] Abſoloms vow; [e] Iehu's ſacrifice, what were they but very Playes, meer Maſks, imitations of him that is Roſcius in ſcenâ, the Maſter Hypocrite of all, who (in the Old Teſtament) got him on a mantle, and played [f] Samuel at Endor: and (in the New) got him wings, and bright rayment, and came forth [g] transformed into an Angel of light. To whoſe company they belong, and whoſe they are, that get them [h] S. Pauls μόρφωσιν εὐσεβείας, the viſor, or maſk of Godlineſſe; and make of it Saint Peters πρόκαλυμμα κακίας, a cloak or cover, for every bad intent. They do no better, but even play religion. And of this Scenical, theatrical, hiſtrionical godlineſs, there is good ſtore abroad in the world: GOD grant it be not found in Iſrael. Be not like Stage Players, when about any religious act; Not, when about any. [a] Mat.6.10. [b] Verſe 18. [c] Gen. 34. 13. [d] 2 Sam. 13.7. [e] 2 King. 10.18 [f] 1 Sam. 28.14. [g] 2 Cor. 11.14 [h] 2 Tim. 3.5. 1 Pet. 2.16.

But, of all parts of Religion, our Saviour (here) may ſeem to have made choice of the worſt. To ſay, when ye faſt, be not like Players, not then, of all times. For, a play and a faſt ſuit not. A Play is lightly had at Feaſts. Men when they faſt are in heavineſſe: theſe agree not well. Well, as evil as they agree, for all that, Faſts have been played too. There was a Faſt played, to get Naboths vineyard: It coſt him his Vineyard, and his life too. There was another played (Acts 23.) to have got S. Paul made away. And they ſay, there was one played againſt the fifth of November; and a Proceſſion too; and all, to have made us all away. From ſuch Faſts playing the Lord deliver us. But ſo you may have a faſt played too, for a need. Not like them in faſting. 1 King. 21.9. Act. 23.14.

That we may not marvel, theſe Hypocrites that play in faſts (CHRIST tells us) are a ſpecial ſort by themſelves. Be not like Hypocrites at all: but, of all other, not like them. Why? the common ſort of Hypocrites abroad, ſeek to put on a better face than their own: but, here have you a Monſter, exterminans vultum, out-lawing (as it were) and baniſhing his own natural countenance, ἀφανίζω is CHRISTS word, defacing his face, as you can hardly know, it is he: taking to himſelfe a worſe face far, than ever GOD made him. To lay on a little (I wot not what) to the end, to look the more faire, the better coloured, of a clearer complection; that, is not ſtrange: But, to affect a look more dim, more hollow, more evil favoured; and to be-leven his face to that end, that paſſes; that, is a new kind of Hypocriſie, per ſe; a kind by it ſelf, that. Yet, ſuch there be. There were, that wore a ſourſe garment to deceive (ſaith Zachary:) So, there is not only gay, but ragged hypocriſie. And, there were (ſaith CHRIST here) that rough-caſt their countenance, and that, to deceive too. That, there is not only fucus, but fermentum pietatis. Not onely fleering, but lowring; not onely well complexioned, but pale coloured hypocriſie. Such are they, that play in CHRISTS faſt, here; triſtes, torvi, auſteri, the word is σκυθρωποὶ; which is (properly) the look of a wild beaſt (a Lion, or a Bear robbed of their whelps) grim and ghaſt; one would be afraid to look on them. Theſe would CHRIST have us not be like; as indeed who would be like them, but ſuch hypocrites as they? 2 Not like ſowre Hypocrites. Zach. 12.4.

Not like them? Why, how do they? Exterminant vultum. We begin with vultum, The hypocrites whole labour is but his look. Blame him not; for he is nothing but look. Nothing but face, and caſe; but a very out-ſide onely. As for any inward matter, he never looks after. 1 Not like them in their Sicut, their manner.

In which point, they ſuit well with Players, whoſe names they bear. It is a very fit reſemblance for them, that are nothing but reſemblance. In the very true and lively perſon of a Prince, the outward pomp or ſhew is the leſs part, by far: the Regal qualities, the Princely vertues are they, we chiefly admire; A religious heart, high wiſdom, heroical courage, clemency, like that of GOD, without meaſure or end. In him that playes the King, it is quite otherwiſe. No Royal quality is required at all; No Princely vertue needs, he never cares for them. But, geſture and gate, the carriage of his countenance, to ſay his part, to pronounce and to act it well; that is all that is cared for by him, or that is looked for at his hands. And even ſo it fares here: Contrition of ſpirit, a broken heart, unfatgued humility, truth in the inward parts; theſe are moſt requiſite in the true faſt. It skills not a whit for any of theſe, in the Stage-faſt; So he can ſet his countenance well, have the clouds in his forehead, his eyes ſomewhat hollow, certain wrinkles in his cheek, carry his head like a bulruſh, and look like leven; all is well. As for any inward accompliſhment, he never takes thought for any. Vultum only is it; He goes no further. Only to be like, to be ſicut; as one, though (indeed) none. Pſal. 51.6.

2 Not like them in their Vt their end.

But why do they take all these paines to disfigure themselves? That do they, Ut videantur, that they might be seen of men, and seem to men, appear to them in the likenesse of such as fast indeed. The leven of hypocrisie in their looks, is from the love of a Videantur in their hearts. Vain-glory, the ground of hypocrisie, ever. And, here now, they match again. The hypocrites end, is as the Players end; Both, to be seen. You never see the play begin, till the Spectators be come, so many as they can get. Nor, no more shall you see this fast acted, unlesse there be some, to eye and to note it, He will not fast on the ground; there must be a Stage set up for him; where I dare say, they wish the scaffolds full to see them: the more, the better.

Both match in videantur; and it must be ab hominibus, of men. Angels eyes, Gods eyes will not serve the Hypocrites turn. Other eyes then, there must be entreated, to gaze on them, or ye get no fast.

Why, is there any harm in mens eyes, that they may not see, nor we may not be seen of them? Verè oculi hominum (saith Bernard) basiliſci ſunt bonorum operum: Now truly there is in mens eyes venome, like that of the Cockatrice, to infect our well-doing; with a well-weening of our selves. O now, I am seen! O ego quantus ſum, mundo cenſore! O what a holy mortified man am I taken for! It troubled Alms before (this:) it troubled Prayer: and now, fasting: It troubles all. In all, this, is the point, this is the Ut, to be seen of men. Not, that it is unlawful to be seen well doing: You will easily put a difference, between, to be seen to do well; and, to do well, to be seen: between facere & videri; and facere, ut videare. Do, and be seen, may be casual, never thought on by us. Do, to be seen; that is the Ut (and that Ut is it) the very end, we do it for, and otherwise we should not do it. It happens otherwhile, many good people do well, and are seen so doing, as it falls out: but, beside their purpose quite. But, none, save this masked crew, sacrifice themselves and their fasts to the eyes of men; and do, what they do, for no other end but that.

Mat.4.1. Luk.5.16. You shall easily discern them. You shall not get one of them, to do as CHRIST did, get Him aside out of the way into the wilderneſſe, fast there: No: CHRIST was not so well advised, to do it there, in a desart desolate place, where there was no body to meet Him, or see Him at it. They be all for the eye (these:) a perſpective fast, or not at all. Nothing out of sight; never by their good-will, where no body to look on. Jejunium oculare, ὀφθαλμιατικὴ, this. The Heathen man said well: Ergo, iſte, in tenebris, non ſervaret hominẽ; Such a one would not be entreated to save a mans life in the dark (if he might) Not, but by torch-light. For, all, is lost, he is clean undone, if no body see or look upon him.

Luk.4.1. Well, if it were the Spirit of GOD led CHRIST into the wilderness to fast there, like an Hermite; you may well know, what spirit it is, that sets one up a Stage, there, to fast like an hypocrite. To be seen then, is their Ut, the very But they aim at.

Mat.16. And wherefore to be seen? in the play, that they may have a plaudite: So plain as they even crave it in their last words. So, in this eye-serving fast, seen they must be: And why must they be seen? To be given out, for such an one is a great faster. And why that? That men seeing that good work of theirs, might glorifie GOD? No indeed: but, them: the earthly child; not, the heavenly Father. And, mark it, when you will: There is no Animal so ambitious, no Chameleon so pants after air, as doth the hypocrite after popular praiſe. 1 Sam.15.13. For it, he fasts; and so hungry and thirsty he is after it, as you shall hear him even beg for it: Honora me coram populo hoc; saith one of them (it is Saul:) O grace me for the love of GOD; seem to honour me in the peoples eyes. Iudg.9.2. Loquimini in auribus populi hujus, saith another (it is Abimelech) O give it out in the peoples ears; I am thus and thus. Mark: the peoples eys, and the peoples ears; for, hypocriſie is ever popular: for their, for mens applause, all in all.

Nay then, will ye hear them expostulate for it, and that, even with GOD himselfe? Wherefore (say they, in the 58. of Esay) fast we, and thou seest it not? So, they would be seen. And, why do we pinch and punish our selves, and thou regardest it not? So, they must be regarded, or they will not take it well. To be short: the putting forth of the finger (as Esay there calls it) or (as the Poet) Digito monſtrari, to be pointed at, and dicier Hic eſt, and said, Look ye, there he goes: To have it whispered, That is He: To be magnified up and down the Peoples mouth, that, is even the conſummatum eſt of all this Stage-devotion.

Which very point makes the fast loose; and indeed, makes it to be no fast at all: They extermine their countenances so long, that they extermine fast and all. This very Ut videantur makes, that it seems to be, but is (indeed) none. For, in the true fast, Psal.69.14. It is as David saith of his; I ſorrowed, and my ſoul fasted: It is an humbling of the soul. Else, if it go no further than the body, it is a fast without a soul. But these though their stomacks be empty, yet their souls do feed and feast all the while. Nam Eſa.51.21. eſt quædam ſagina laudis (saith the Heathen man:) Praise will feed and fill both. And, it is our meat and drink (and so we call it) that we take delight in. And sure, if Esay be right, that one may be drunk, and no cup come at his head; it is like possible, one may surfeit, and yet no meat come in his belly. And with pride both. As for meat and drink the Devil never takes any; keeps a perpetual fast for that matter: but, feeds on pride, as one doth on his meale; and surfeits that way, as much as any Epicure: And even so (for ought I know) one may eat and drink no more than the Devil, and yet be as proud as the Devil: why not? So as upon the matter, their fast is but even the Devils fast, and no better.

Fasting then being an act of humility, if the Devil can make it matter of pride, habetur propoſitum, he hath what he would; he will give you good leave to fast and spare not. And, even matter of pride, Luk.18.11. he makes it. The Pharisees, whom CHRIST would have us Non ſicut, they were, in their own conceits, the Non ſicuts of the world. They tell it GOD, Non ſicut alii, not like other men. Others did but fast once a week, if that: they twice, & never missed. And in the Ecclesiastical story, there is a rare example example of it. He, that ſame John the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, that firſt took upon him the proud title of Vniverſall Biſhop, that very man was called and known by the name of Ἰωάννης ὁ νηστευτής, Johannes Jejunator, Iohn the great faſter. So pride will grow of faſting. Being then ordained to take down the ſoul, if he can bring it to puffe it up, and ſo, turn our faſt into ſin; that is even a Faſt of the Devils own chooſing. One, which (he is ſure) GOD will never look at. The Prophet gives the reaſon: If we faſt for mens eyes, we faſt for men, not for God. If we faſt for our own praiſe, we faſt for our ſelves, not for GOD neither. Now, what GOD ſhould reward, ſhould be done for GOD. And, with GOD, a righteous thing it is, to put men over to receive their rewards, at their hands for whom they faſted: that they pay them their wages, that ſet them on work. For, at His hands, they are like to receive none, ſeeing, for Him they did it not: He was not the He of their faſting. And this is the laſt point. As before; not like them in their Sicut; So, not here in their Ita neither, neither in their manner, nor in their end. Zach. 7. 5, 6.

III. The Danger of it. Verily they have; &c.

Suppoſe now, one may be ſo in love with the praiſe of men, as he is altogether out of love with an inviſible faſt, and muſt needs look a little that way; what harm will come of it? Amen dico vobis, quia receperunt mercedem ſuam: This muſt needs be their puniſhment; for, there is none other but this. And ſure, as ſtrange a puniſhment, as you ſhall read of: To ſay Amen to that, one deſires; to ſay, one ſhall receive a reward. Can it be a puniſhment to receive, to receive a reward and a reward of our owne deſiring? It is ſurely none. You do it, to be ſeen; you ſhall be ſeen; to be praiſed; Why, you ſhall be praiſed: This is your end; your end be it. You hunger and thirſt for mens praiſe, faine you would have it; you ſhall have it; There it is, take it to you, much good doe it you with it. Call you this a puniſhment, to receive a reward, to have ones deſire? Surely, it ſeemes but an eaſie one, if it be one.

True, if the reward be worth the while firſt. And ſecondly, if by receiving, it, we forfeit not one incomparably greater. But, in theſe two caſes, ' If the reward, be but ſome ſlight thing, little worth. ' And then, if by getting it, we looſe another above all worth, then have we no great cauſe to rejoyce at our receiving: then, in ſtead of a reward, it is a puniſhment, ſay I; and that an heavie one, whenſoever both theſe caſes meet.

I Their Reward (popular praiſe) is ſlight. 2 As not judiciall.

Now, both theſe caſes meet here. Firſt, it is but a poore thing, they receive. Shall we value it as it is? I meane this goodly reward, of popular praiſe, which they ſo itch after. What is the popularite, but a ſort of men nothing judiciall? Not one among an hundred. Not praiſing, but out of paſſion (lightly) if that: and not conſtant in that paſſion neither.

Praiſe if it be judiciall, is ſomewhat worth; and ſo worth the deſiring. The popular is not ſo. CHRIST ſaith; they have alwayes ſpoken all good of the falſe Prophets: as for the true, they have ever followed them with all diſgrace: And, then, what judgement is there in them? CHRIST himſelf, will ye hear their verdict of Him? Some there were ſaid, He was a good man; but ſome other (and the greater ſumme) ſaid, No, but a very ſeducer, a cooſener of the people: And then, who can think, there is any judgement in them? In the 19. of the Acts, the whole multitude was together, and when Demetrius had ſet them in, for two houres they never left crying, Great is Diana: and the moſt part of them never knew why they were come together, not why they cried ſo: And then what judgement is there in them? No ſure: out of lightneſſe of mind; out of paſſion it is, they praiſe or diſpraiſe, magnifie, or vilifie a man, for the moſt part. Luk. 6. 26. Iohn 7. 12. Act 19. 28. 32.

2. Not durable.

But is this (be it paſſion, or what it will) of any endurance? will it hold? No indeed. Sicut luna mutatur, Every, new moone, a new mind? nay, every quarter. No better witneſſe of this, than our, Saviour Himſelf, who heard Hoſanna in the higheſt, and Not Him but Barabbas, both, within the ſpace of a ſeven-night. St. Pauls was yet ſhorter; for he was firſt a murtherer, and ſuddenly, a God and no leſſe, in a manner with one breath. There is their conſtancie, this the hold you can have of it. No lock nor key, to ſhut up our reward in: No tenendum to our habendum, to hold it when we have it. And who then would much eſteem it? Chap. 21. 9. Chap. 27. 21. Iohn. 18. 40. Act. 28. 4, 6.

But, ſay there were both lock and key; yet, what is praiſe but words? and words but wind? what is ſpeech but breath? breath but aire? tenuiſſimus fructus, a thin reward (God wot.) For, what is more thin than aire? This is ſure, no great reward. Mihi pro minimo eſt: So, Paul makes but a minim of it, we make ſo much of. 1 Cor. 4. 3.

2 It is their finall reward;

And yet even this, ſlight as it is, were it onely to receive it, and that were all, there were no great hurt in it. But, now comes the hurt, For, when it ſhall come to this, that we are ſo to receive it, as in full payment: (for, ſo it is; not ἔχουσι, have it; but ἀπέχουσι, have it for all, that ever they ſhall have) So to receive it; tanquam mercedem, as it ſhall be our laſt pay, our finall and full recompence and ſatisfaction, for all that ever we have done, then it goes hard.

And that is it, CHRIST meaneth: And that is it every good mind feareth: That here ſhall be all; a few good words, a little warme breath, a blaſt of vaine praiſe, of a ſort of vain men. And when we have this, we have no more for ever to receive or look for beſide this. That, as CHRIST tels us (in the firſt verſe of the Chapter) this acceperunt infers an amiſerunt: Acceperunt ſuum here, an Amiſerunt meum elſwhere. And that, where (of all) we would leaſt be without it. That the receiving of this, cuts us off from another, infinitely above and more worth than this. The reward we receive; no thing leſſe to be regarded: the reward we loſe, the damage we incurre; nothing more to be feared. Lay theſe together, mercedem juxta mercedem, we ſhall find it a puniſhment; ſuch a puniſhment, as no man would ever wiſh his very enemie more.

Of this Amen here, of these words [they have received their reward] you shall read in S. Gregory, that there never did any saying so sound in his ears, so run in his head, reign in his heart, work upon his conscience (as he deeply protests) as did these. This, he took for one of the most fearful sayings in the whole Bible: that what he did here receive (were it praise, or preferment, or what other earthly thing) it should be his last receipt, his final reward, his portion for ever, his Amen: for Amen is the last word (we know) that ends all. For, so are we in a manner proceeded against, and deprived of all hope of further reward, at the last great receipt of all.

The praise of men, which we here sought and found, shall deprive us of hearing Euge Serve bone; One syllable whereof is more worth, than all the Panegyricks that ever were. And not only of that, but of Intra in gaudium Domini besides, much more to be esteemed than all the Euges in the world, nay, than the world it self. That the winning of one shall be the losing of the other.

Mat. 21. 23.

And now judge, whether this receiving be not a losse unvaluable; this reward, a punishment insufferable; this Amen, to be be prayed against of all. Nay, whether there be any so penal a punishment, so heavy a censure: This shall be your punishment, that this shall be your reward; and never more but this.

For, do but ask: VVhy do they this wrong to their faces? To seem to men to fast. And what then? Then they shall be commended of men. And what then? Nay, there is all. And GOD comes to a point with them: saith, Let them be commended for it: And they have no wrong, they making it their end, if GOD make it so too.

To punish one by his own desires; to say (as GOD doth in Osee) Because Ephraim will have altars to sin, they shall be to sin; because you make this your reward, it shall be your reward, take it for your reward: To say, So be it, to have our fast to conclude with the Hypocrites Amen: no more fearful punishment in the world.

Osee 8. 17.

The Application.

[a] 1 Cor. 5. 11.

* Knowing then this fear, we perswade, exhort, intreat men (and no otherwise than CHRIST here doth) to fast. And the Cum is now come: Now then to do it. Not to do it as these, yet in any wise to do it. To fast to GOD; not to the world: to our own hearts, not to other mens eyes: to conscience, not to form, Not, to set us up a stage to do it; but (with CHRIST) to do it apart, in secret. And think not, if men see it not, it shall not be seen (be it never so secret:) that you shall do it without witness. Beside the witnesse, Testis in corde (set by the Heathen man as a thousand witnesses) there is (as Job cals Him) Testis in cœlo, One in heaven who sees it; needs no light to see it by: whose theatre is the dark, and beholds us as cleerly when the candle is put out, as when it burns. Fast then, do it to be seen of Him; and being done not for men, but for him, Him shall you be sure of, to cast His eyes to look on it, to like it; to regard it and reward it, both.

Job 16. 19?

So much doth CHRIST undertake in the verse following; and that, in His Fathers name: and seal it with His Verily, that most certain it shall be so. Our secret fast shall have his open reward. It may be, even here upon earth, He will make our light break forth as the Morning. If here He do not; there, He will. The lesse earth answereth, the more heaven reserveth. * Euge Serve bone, in that day is another manner praise, if praise be it: [b] Intra in gaudium Domini, another manner reward, than earth hath any. Both together [c] Merces magna nimis, Abrahams reward, an exceeding great reward: [d] sed non ascendit in cor hominis: it exceedeth the heart of man, to think how exceeding great.

Esay 58. 8. 8.
[a] Mat. 25. 21.
[b] Mat. 21. 23.
[c] Gen. 15. 1.
[d] 1 Cor. 2. 9.

Which reward Almighty GOD grant we may set before us, and seek it in all our doings: So seek it here on earth, in this life, as we may there find it in heaven, in the life to come, to our endlesse comfort and content, through CHRIST our LORD.

SER-

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE King Iames,

At WHITE-HAL, on the XXVI. of FEBRUARY, Anno Domini, MDCXXIII, being ASHWEDNESDAY.

MATTH. Chap. III. Verse VIII.

--Progenies viperarum, quis demonstravit vobis fugere à ventura ira?
Facite ergo fructum dignum pœnitentiæ (Vel, Proferte igitur fructus dignos pœnitentia.)

--O generation of vipers, who hath fore-warned you to flee from the anger to come?
Bring forth therefore fruits worthy * amendment of life.

* Or repentance.

TO speak of repentance, at the time of fasting, or of fasting at the time of repentance, is no way out of season: As tree and fruit, they stand. Of these fruits fasting is one. And this, we now begin, a worthy fruit ever from year to year, religiously brought forth in the Church of Christ. That we go not from one, when we fall upon the other. The time of repentance will fall out to be a Cum jejunatis.

Repentance is here brought in, and presented to us, as a tree with fruit upon it. The tree of Gods planting; The fruit medicinable; of the nature of a counter-poyson, against our bain taken by the fruit of another tree. The fruit of the forbidden tree had envenomed our Nature: the fruit of this tree, to expel it, to recover and cure us of it. Gen. 3. 6.

Now this Metaphor (of trees and fruit) puts us in mind, that the manner of fruit-trees is, once a year they bear fruit. All do so; once at least: And if all, this tree likewise, within the same compasse, to bring forth hers.

And, though at no time repentance comes amiſſe; good all the year long; it may be taken every day (for, repentance would be as familiar to us; as ſinne it ſelf; and, as the one, ſo the other, daily: Yet at ſometime, more than other: and at this time, moſt proper: for then we have ſpecial uſe of it. That the body and the ſoul may keep time: and when we take phyſick for the body, we may do likewiſe for the other. If all were well known, of the twaine, the ſoul hath more need.

This medicine is to be taken faſting; as the rules of Phyſick are, and as medicines uſe to be. Men come neither eating nor drinking to take Phyſick: when we will take that, we take nothing elſe. Thus faſting is a friend to Phyſick both of ſoul and body. When we repent, no man will adviſe us to do it upon a full ſtomack, but Cum jejunatis.

Of this tree and fruit, GOD (knowing the great need we have) hath a ſpecial care, we be not without it: that it be planted and growing ſtill in our gardens; and that it beares us fruit, whereof we have ſo continual uſe. As that in Paradiſe, was termed the forbidden fruit; So may this (as truly) the fruit bidden, it is ſo enjoyned, ſo called for of us.

Mar. 22. 36, 37. And that, firſt called for, and before all other, as the firſt fruits of the Spirit returning to GOD. There was a firſt commandement in the Law: This, I may juſtly ſay, was the firſt Commandement of the Goſpel.

Go no further, but even where we are, where the Book opens; Saint John is at it, at firſt. It is his very firſt word [Repent] Sermo in apertione oris, the opening of his mouth. So begins He: And ſo begins CHRIST; takes it up after him, word for word the ſame: Repent, for the Kingdome of Heaven is at hand: neither more nor leſſe. It is the firſt fruit of their lips both. And as our Saviour CHRIST began with it himſelf; So gives He it in charge to his Apoſtles; they with it, to begin likewiſe. Both, when He ſent them to preach, to the Jewes firſt; And again after when, at His Aſcenſion, He renewed and enlarged their Commiſſion, and ſent them to all Nations. That repentance firſt; (firſt that;) and then, remiſſion of ſins (after) ſhould be preached in His name.

Verſe 2. Chap. 11. 4. Chap. 10. 9. Luke 10. 9.

Which was accordingly by them purſued. Ever, they ſtood on it, as the ground-work, the fundamental point of all the reſt. So it is expreſly termed, Heb. 6. the foundation of repentance from dead works. On which foundation, would GOD, more coſt were beſtowed: that, while we are buſie aloft on the Scaffolds, in our high points, the groundſils of Religion decay not for want of looking to. To lay them ſurely: VVhich S. John doth here, and we may all learn of him.

Heb. 6. 1.

For, having begun (above at the 2. verſe) with his pœnitentiam agite: when he ſaw, in the throng of his Auditory, diverſe Scribes and Phariſees hypocrites, he knew where they would be ſtraight: (we ſhould have an Agite; a repentance with a penitential face, and all acted:) Repent? Yes, in any wiſe, that they would, and could do it full well, and never trouble themſelves with any ſuch matter as fruit. This made him lay it anew; to his Agite, to put a Facite; to Agite pœnitentiam, a Facite fructum. Elſe, he diſclaimes fruitleſſe repentance. It is none of his: it will do them no good: it will never quit them of the wrath to come.

Verſe 3.

Where we ſee the good of repentance, what it is: To free us from ira ventura propter peccata præterita: Which, theirs will never do: Which none will ever do, unleſſe, beſide pœnitentiam agite (that is, the Act) there be alſo fructum facite, matter of fact beſides; ſome real fruits. And S. John asks, Who did it? and marvels much that any ſhould do it: teach them any other way, how to eſcape wrath to come. Tels them directly there is no other way: but that they do but beguile themſelves, while they vainly imagine, to ſlip thorow GODS wrath with this fruitleſſe, formal, ſlight kind of repentance.

Ver. 7.

If they will go to it indeed, and do it, and ſo do it, as it may be available to rid them of wrath to come, then muſt it not be barren, but bring forth, and that, fruit: and that, not ſuch ſlight and ſlender fruit, as they commonly poſt it over with, but worthy fruits, and ſuch as may well be-ſeem repentance indeed.

The Summe. The points we are to take into our conſideration, are: 1 That there is wrath to come: but, it is yet but to come. That it will come. There is no falling into it, when it comes: nor no abiding, till it comes. Fly from it we muſt, and fly from it we may. It may be fled from, is in the Text: we may be ſhewen a way, how. Who ſhall ſhew it us? That will S. John here; who well can: He was ſent to prepare it. But (it ſeems) we may be ſhewed a wrong way too; the Phariſees way: But S. Johns is the right. He that takes any other, the wrath of God will come on him, which is to come upon all impenitent ſinners.

The Diviſion. All which may be reduced to theſe two heads, which S. John would have imprinted in them and us: 1. There is no flying Gods wrath, but by a true repentance. 2. There is no true repentance, without fruits, and thoſe worthy, and well becomming it. Bring forth fruits therefore.

Of which words there is not any waſte or to ſpare. Every one of them is verbum vigilans (as Saint Auguſtine ſpeaks) awake all; never an one aſleep among them, Each hath his weight. Nor, never an one out of his place, but (as Salomon ſpeakes) upon his right wheel, ſtanding juſt where it ſhould. We will take them as they lye, 1. Bring forth. 2. Bring forth fruit. 3. Bring forth fruit therefore: wherefore? That you may fly the wrath to come: There, will that fall in. It is the only true way: Let no man teach you any other way to fly it. 4. Then, fruits of repentance. And if, repentance bear fruits, then it is a tree. 2 Of the tree then firſt, that bears them. 2 Then, of the fruits it beares: Repentance's fruits. 5. And laſt, that they be worthy fruits of Repentance. Bring forth fruits therefore, &c. So fall they in order, of themſelves. To order them otherwiſe, were but to diſarray them and do them wrong.

Prov. 25. 11. I. II. III. IV. V.

Bring

BRing forth: At vvhich, at the very firſt, vve ſhall have ſome ſticking, as the vvorld goes. All, in carrying in: little in bringing forth. For, to take our Age at the beſt, and our ordinary Profeſſors in the time of their profeſſion, and this is our vertue; vve carry vvell in, vve are ſtill carrying in: but nothing, or as good as nothing comes from us, bring vve forth. So, this vvord comes very oppoſite to our times. All our time, is ſpent in hearing; in carrying in Repentance-ſeeds, and other good ſeeds many. All, in hearing in a manner: none, in doing vvhat vve hear: None, in bringing forth repentance, or any other good fruit. I. Bring forth: carry not in.

At Athens they ſaid of S. Paul: Nova quædam infers auribus noſtris. It is our caſe right, infers auribus: but it is an infers without a profers; any profers at all. In, at our ears, there goes I know not how many Sermons: and every day more and more, if we might have our wills. Infers auribus, into the ears they go; the ears and all filled, and even farced with them: but there, the ear is all. Act. 17. 20.

It puts me in mind of the great abſurdity, as Saint Paul reckons it. What, is all hearing? (ſaith he) All hearing? Yes: all is hearing with us. But that all ſhould be hearing is as much as if all one's body ſhould be nothing but an ear, and that were a ſtrange body. But that abſurdity are we fallen into. The corps, the whole body of ſome mens profeſſion; all godlineſſe with ſome, what is it, but hearing a ſermon? The ear is all, the ear doth all that is done: and but by our ear-marke, no man ſhould know us to be Chriſtians. They were wont to talke much of Auricular Confeſſion: I cannot tell, but now, all is turned to an auricular Profeſſion. And (to keep us to Proferte:) Our Profeſſion is an inning Profeſſion. In it goes, but brings nothing out; nothing comes from it again. 1 Cor. 12. 17.

But, Proferte, bring forth (ſaith Saint John,) be not alwayes loading in. And there is reaſon for it. As, there is a time for Exiit qui ſeminat ſeminare ſemen ſuum (in the Parable) wherein the Sower goeth forth and carrieth with him good ſeed, and caſts it in. So is there a time too (ſaith the Pſalme:) for Rediit meſſor ferens manipulos ſecum, that the Reaper comes back and brings his ſheaves with him; the ſheaves, which the ſeed (he carried in) brought forth. But, with us, it is otherwiſe. For a wonderful thing it is, how many Sermons, and Sermons upon Sermons (as it were, ſo many meaſures of ſeed) are thrown in daily; and what becomes of them, no man can tell. Turn they all to wind? Or run they all thorow? For, fruit there comes none. Omnia te adverſum, all in: Nulla retrorſum, None out. It went hard (ſaith Aggee) when, for twenty meaſures of ſeed, there came but ten of grain; but half in half: Why, we would think our ſelves happy, if that were our caſe. Nay, it was worſe with Eſay, an Homer of ſeed yeelded but an Epha of corn; that, was but one in ten, It were well with us, might one but ſay that: for that were ſomewhat yet. To be wiſhed we might ſee more: but, till more come, ſee but even that. Chap. 13. 3. Pſal. 126. 6. Aggee 2. 13. Eſay 5. 10.

Now, that ground (ſaith the Apoſtle) that receives ſuch a quantity of Seed, and returns no more for it, is neer a curſe. And that tree (ſaith the Goſpel) that was well leaved, and no fruit found on it, was ſo neer, that it had a curſe. And thoſe ears that have (I know not how many) Sermons and Lectures, and all in a manner ſine fructu, without any fruit that can be ſeen, are not far from it, from a curſe. Heb. 6. 8. Chap. 21. 19.

Which I would not have drawn to be ſpoken any way againſt hearing; but againſt our evil proportioned hearing: Not to ſlake our devotion in receiving good Seed; but to make a conſcience, in ſome degree, to proportion our fruit to our ſeed: To reduce our inferte and our proferte to ſome analogy. For, if there be an analogy of faith; ſo is there of hearing alſo. Sure, if the body thrive not with it, and yet be alwayes hungry, it is no good ſigne. It is a diſeaſe, which they call βουλιμία, or Canina appetentia; and would be looked to.

Well; there hath been old carrying in, and little elſe: let us have ſome bringing forth another while. Be not alwayes lading in: bring forth ſomewhat: Elſe we ſtumble at the very threſhold of the Text, and are not come to the firſt word of it, Proferte, bring forth.

Bring forth fruit. VVith much adoe, at laſt ſomewhat there comes. Forth they bring; but what is it? It is well known, trees bring forth ſomewhat elſe, before fruit. And, ſomewhat brought forth there is, but it is but leaves. Fruit it ſhould be, leaves it is: there is all our product. So that here, we ſhall be ſtaid again. Leaves come of the kernel, as well as the fruit: ſo doth chaffe, of the Seed, as well as good graine, VVhat of that? VVe plant not for leaves; nor we ſow not for chaffe. VVe count that no bringing forth. Quid palea ad triticum? (ſaith the Prophet:) And, Quid foliis ad fructum, may we ſay? It is not chaffe, or leaves; fruit it is, we are willed to Bring forth. II. Bring forth fruit, not leaves. Jer. 13. 28.

Vitis frondoſa Iſrael we find in Hoſee, and Ficus frondoſa, we have in the Goſpel. A Vine and a Fig-tree, that brought forth, both; and ſo paſſed the firſt; but ſtumble at this ſecond: For, fruit it was not: But, as for leaves, well taken both; ſtore of them. And ſo, to many a tree ſhall CHRIST come among us, and find leaves poſſibly; but, that will not ſerve. It is bring forth fruit. VVhat became of Hoſea's Vine we may there read: what, of the Fig-tree, we all know. Hoſ. 10. 1. Chap. 21. 19. Verſe 6, 7.

VVill you know, what theſe leaves be: Saint Auguſtine tells us (No man can do it better:) It is to hear a Sermon, and to praiſe the Preacher: There comes ſomewhat; ſome leaves. His words are: Audiviſtis, laudâſtis, Deo gratias; Semen accepiſtis, verba reddidiſtis. Laudes veſtræ gravant nos potius, & in periculum mittunt. Toleramus illas, & tremimus inter illas. Tamen, fratres mei, laudes veſtræ folia ſunt: modò fructus quæritur. You hear, and you commend (ſaith Auguſtine:) well, thanks What the leaves be.

be to GOD. Good ſeed you receive, good words you give back. Theſe good words profit us not; peradventure, do us hurt other-while. Bear with them we muſt; tremble at them we ſhould. Yet, when all is done (good brethren) good words are but leaves; and it is fruit, fruit is it, we preach for. Not the fruit of your lips; they be but leaves: but, fructus operis, that fruit.

Now if you marke, what it is our beſt Sermons bring forth, we ſhall eaſily obſerve, the moſt is a few good words of ſome point or other in the Sermon, handled (peradventure) not amiſſe: and (hear you) well, if that: but, if that, look for no more; there's all. And this leafe, it laſts not long neither; fades quickly, as did the leaves of Jona's gourd: One day green, the next dry.

Jon. 4. 7.

Chap. 6. 2. And, is this the fruit of our labours? Is not this the Phariſees Accepiſtis mercedem veſtram? If the fruit of our labours be but the fruit of mens lips, we are like to make but a cold reckoning of it,

Prov. 11. 29. to inherit the wind. As if we came hither to bring forth a leaf of praiſe; to preach art, and not Spirit: Art, to draw from men a vain applauſe; And not Spirit, to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit, fructifying to newneſſe of life, by fructus facite; fruit, that may abound to your account and ours: Yours, that did; Ours, that preached to have them done.

The only true praiſe of a Sermon is, ſome evil left, or ſome good done, upon the hearing of it. One ſuch fruit, ſo brought forth, were a more ample commendation, than many mouths full of good words ſpent, and copies taken, and printing, and I wot not what. And ſure it is,

Acts 2. 37. On whom a Sermon works aright, it leaves him no leaſure to ſay much, to uſe many words, but makes him rather full of thoughts. And when all comes to all, fructus factus, the deed done, is it. And, it is no good ſigne in a tree, when all the ſap goes up into leaves; is ſpent that way: Nor, in an auditor, when all is verbal that comes, and nothing elſe: No reality at all.

Verſe 9. Saint John himſelf (in the next words following) tels us, the fruit he meanes, it is not Dicentes: And begin not (ſaith he) to Say: For, it is no matter of ſaying, either to your ſelves, or to others. This is but a green leaf; and, with the fruit, doth not amiſſe; without it, is little worth. It is not repentance in the leaves, but with the fruit, he calleth for.

I wil ſhut up this point with St. Auguſtines prayer, before one of his Sermons: that God would vouchſafe, quod utiliter meditatum eſt cor meum, what my heart hath profitably thought on, to bring it thence into my tongue, and from thence into your ears, and from thence into your hearts, and from thence into your deeds: that ſo all may end in Proferte fructus, Bring forth fruits.

III.

Bring forth fruit, therefore. The Root or Reaſon.

Proferte fructus igitur. Igitur, every where you find, ſlip it you muſt not: the whole weight of the ſentence lyeth upon it. There is in it the ground and reaſon, wherefore; and ſo is indeed the root, all theſe fruits muſt grow from. And the Prophets Rule is, to look to the root downward, before to the fruit upward. Firſt then, to find a wherefore for this therefore. Therefore, is the known note of a concluſion: Then muſt there be a Syllogiſme: and here it is, Quicunque vult, Whoſoever of you will fly from the wrath to come, he is to bring forth fruit worthy of repentance; But you are all of this mind, that you would fly from the wrath to come; Bring forth fruit therefore.

Eſay 37. 31.

Flying from the wrath to come. We muſt then caſt our eye back to this flying from the wrath to come, which is the medius terminus, or cardo, whereupon all the argument runs, and the very life of the whole inducement. There is wrath to come: That muſt you fly from: Fly from it you cannot, but by this igitur: Proferte fructus igitur.

Many are the Therefore's, why we ſhould repent, and of divers natures. The goodneſſe of God

Rom. 2. 4: (ſaith the Apoſtle) doth (even) lead us to repentance: And well is him that will be led. But theſe

Verſe 2. (here) would not lead. St. John had uſed that before (ver. 2.) Do it; Repent, and the Kingdome of heaven is at hand, hard by you. One would think, this would have done it; have even led them to it. It ſtirred them not: He is fain to lay Heaven by, and the life, joy, glory to come; And to take him to Hel, to the anguiſh, tribulation, torments there (for, all theſe are in the wrath to come.) So, to drive them (if it may be) to it, ſince leading will not ſerve.

Strange: but ſuch is our indolet. The Kingdome of Heaven works not with us, as doth Wrath to come: So doth ſin bewitch us. For the loſſe of Heaven if that were all, we would never abſtaine from it: if no ira ventura, never care for the loſſe of Heaven. Repent, or you loſe Heaven, will not: Repent, or you muſt to Hell (the place of wrath to come) that bites ſoon; that makes an Igitur; that will move us: And, to fly from it, makes us fly to Repentance.

Ventura, It is ſomething to come. Saint John takes the courſe to ſhew us ſomewhat to come: He chooſeth ventura: For, the things preſent carry us and keep us from Repentance. Preſent good cheer, preſent ſport and mirth, preſent good company, preſent twenty things elſe, they make us no fit ſoil, for theſe fruits to grow in. But then (as GOD would have it) beſides theſe preſent things, there are ventura, ſome other to come, that would be thought on. For, in all our jollity, before we venture too farre, it will not be amiſſe, to look to thoſe ventura, and what will come of it. There is an ira ventura for peccata præterita.

Deut. 32. 29. Knowing the vertue of this piece of perſpective, Moſes doth wiſh but this, ô Si, O that men would but look לאחריתם, look but that way to the hindmoſt dayes, to the latter end! There is ſomevvhat, there vvorth our ſight. The Prophets do the like: Populus meus dilexit talia (it is Jeremy:)

Jer. 5. 31. My People, this ſin they like; and that ſin they love, Sed quid fiet in noviſſimo, but vvhat will be the end of this? What vvill become of it, at the laſt? Yea, our bleſſed Saviour Himſelf (and He ſhould move

Luke 19. 41, 42. us) moſt earneſtly vvith teares in his eyes: O that thou hadſt known in this thy day! and could not ſpeak out the reſt for weeping: His meaning vvas, the ventura, vvhat vvas to come upon them. So much doth it import us, ſometime to open a vvindovv that vvay. The clapping it to, and the putting them from us out of our ſight, makes us, we care not, never look after the tree, or the fruit. Ventura would much help forvvard this Proferte fructus igitur.

These Ventura (three of them) follow here cloſe in the tenth and twelfth verſes: the Axe, the Fanne, and the Fire: I will onely touch them. The Axe firſt: For ſure, our dayes be numbred: there is a line ſtretched upon every one of our lives, and it is no long line neither, quia velox eſt depoſitio tabernaculi hujus, the taking dovvn of this Tabernacle is not farre hence: death vvill come with his axe and down we go. For it is not (ſaith St. John) laid to the branches, but, to the root; and then, we are paſt fruit-bearing for ever. Proferte fructus igitur.

What that ventura is.

1 The Axe. 2 Pet. 1. 14. Verſe 10.

After the Axe, comes the Fan, to ſhew whether our bringing forth be corn or chaffe; which is our doom after death. So long agoe told of by old Enoch in his Maranatha, that the Lord will come, come to Judgment: Et omnes ſtabimus, and we ſhall all ſtand before His Judgment Seat, and the fan go over us: And there by theſe fruits here; and by theſe fruits only, all ſhall go: for none is in Heaven, but by it. Sinners, both they in Heaven, and they in Hell: only, this difference; they in Heaven had theſe fruits, they in hell had them not. And then, ſeeing they vvill be all in all, Proferte fructus igitur.

2 The Fanne. Verſe 12. Jude 14.

Theſe tvvo ventura, come they vvill to all, and to all alike: vve hear not of wrath yet? But, here it comes. I go further and ask, Ventura, to come: to come, vvhat? Ira ventura, wrath to come. VVhoſe wrath? His, vvho when He hath killed the body, can caſt both body and ſoul into hell fire. Luke 12. 5.

For, after the Fan comes the Fire. The fan divides the corn and the chaffe, ſends each to his ovvn place, the Corn to the Garner, the chaffe to the fire; and every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, thither too. Proferte fructus igitur: Elſe, how will you ſcape the wrath to come (ſaith St. John) How will you ſcape the damnation of Hell (ſaith CHRIST?) and mean the ſame thing. That of CHRIST is but a Commentary of this of St. John. Ire and fire are but one thing.

3 The Fire. Verſe 12. Chap. 21.

Now the noiſe of fire will ſtartle any of us, even at midnight, out of his dead ſleep. Of any fire: but, much more, of this: Non eſt iſte ignis ſicut qui ardet in foco tuo (ſaith Auguſtine.) This fire is another manner fire, than that on our harths. Why? ours may be quenched: that, is (ſaith the twelfth verſe) unquenchable fire. A worm ever gnawing, and never dying: So doth our Saviour deſcribe it: a flame ever burning and never going out. Mar. 9. 44, 46.

Now will I but ask the Prophet Eſay's queſtion, (Chap. 33.) who of us can dwell in conſuming fire? That, is our fire, which as it conſumes, ſo will it be conſumed it ſelf: But then, he comes over again, but who is able to abide in everlaſting burnings? That can none do: Proferte fructus igitur. This (loe) is the wrath, the very dregs of the wrath to come. But who regardeth the power of this wrath? They (I fear me) leaſt, that ſhall feel it moſt. Eſay 33. 14.

I have purpoſely ſtood upon this a little, For that, as upon this day they were wont, by the ceremony of giving aſhes, to put men in mind of this fire. For, aſhes were not given to put men in mind of their mortality: duſt had been more proper to have done that. Our mortality is grounded upon Pulvis es & in pulverem. But, aſhes, they come not without fire: where they are, fire muſt have been firſt. And, ſo they moſt meet to repreſent fire and make us think of it. The aſhes, they be blown away; but, not the memory of them (I hope.) Whatſoever becomes of the ceremony, the ſubſtance would not be blowen away after it. Sure, theſe aſhes laid well to the root of the tree, it hath been thought, will make it bear the ſooner. The preſent fear of future wrath for ſins paſt, will put ſome force into this igitur: If this will not, nothing will. This or nothing make the ſap to aſcend: This, or nothing bring them forth.

[a] Scientes igitur terrorem hunc: you have ſeen the terrour: Shall I open you a [b] door of hope in the valley of Achor? All is not terrour in ventura: there is ſome comfort, that it is but to come (this wrath;) it is yet to come. So, while it is yet to come, there is time given us to take order for it, before it come: that the fruit may come before the wrath, and not the wrath before the fruit: for then we are gone for ever.

The comfort of Ventura, it may be fled from.
a 2 Cor. 5. 11.
b Hoſea 2. 15.

There is another comfort: that though the axe and the fanne ſhall come upon all; and none fly from either of them, ſo ſhall not wrath. That ſhall not come upon all; but all may, and ſome ſhall fly from it. Fly from it (I ſay) for, there is no meeting it, no abiding of it when it comes: No ſtanding it out, but fly from it we muſt (ſaith the Text;) and fly from it we may. There is a right way, if we may be ſhewed it; and there is no right way, but one, and who will ſhew us that? that will St. John teach us. He prepares it, and he is beſt able; and he knows no way but by Proferte igitur.

By Proferte.

But if there be a flight, there is no flying it, not with the wings of an Eagle; not with the ſix wings of a Seraphin, onely the wings of repentance, will fly from it. But, there is no flight intended: Proferte igitur will ſerve: onely ſtand and bear this fruit, and it ſhall be a Superſedeas to all wrath to come. You need not fly; you need not ſtir, no more than a tree; but keep your ſtanding, and bear your fruit, and it ſhall not come neer you, but fly over you, as did the deſtroying Angel, their houſes in Ægypt. To come it is (this wrath:) fly from it we may: this, the way to do it. Exod. 12. 23.

Yea, this is one way: but, is there no way but this? It ſeems, there was ſome body ſhewing ſome other way beſides, that St. John was a little ſtirred, and asked, Who hath ſhewed you it, who? Whoſoever he was, he had ſhewed them a wrong way. So that, even then, even in CHRISTS time and St. Iohns, ſome there were that took a phanſie, they had found a neerer way to cut between, to fly this wrath, and yet let tree and fruit alone, and care for neither. And (as it follows) by a dicentes intra ſe, ſaid within themſelves (ſomewhat ſtrange things men will ſay there) fruits are for them, that have not Abraham for their father, but we have him for our Father: and ſo took themſelves Verſe 9.

Joh. 8. 39. priviledged from fruit-bearing, by that. Christ ſhews them their folly: Have you ſo, have you Abraham to your Father? then do the works of Abraham: that is, bring forth the fruits that he did. For, Abraham himſelf brought forth theſe fruits, went no other way but this, by Proferte igitur.

The ſame may be ſaid to another Dicentes intraſe of ſome of us. We have Abraham to our Father, ſo they: We have CHRIST to our Saviour, ſo we: and make a ſhort cut and ſtep to CHRIST ſtraight, and lay hold on Him by faith, without any more adoe: Thruſt by St. John Baptiſt; Him, and his Repentance, Both. Indeed, ſo ſome goe (but with more haſte than good ſpeed) that vainly imagine to come to remiſſion of ſins, per ſaltum, over repentance head, But, it will not be: Eſay's qui crediderit, ne feſtinet, is good counſel in this ſenſe; Not to caſt away all, with making too much haſte, but take S. John in their way. To him it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt go before His face to prepare His way:
Luke 1. 76. And, but by that way, he prepares, CHRIST will not be come to. If he prepare one way, and you go another, you will never come at Chriſt. Therefore he wonders, Quis oſtendit? who hath ſhewed them any other way. St. John knew it not; CHRIST knew it not: And I cannot tell what to ſay, but, they that goe it, I pray God it deceive them not.

But, for this [of no other way] CHRIST Himſelf is more peremptory than S. John. See you
Luke 13. 3, 5. any, Hear you of any that periſh? Niſi, &c. Unleſſe you repent, and ſcape that way, ſo ſhall you too: that is flat. There is no Iron, no Adamant binds ſo hard as Chriſts Niſi. If any but CHRIST had ſaid it, we might have ſought ſome evaſion: Now when it is He that tels us, there are but two wayes, [1] Repent, or [2] Periſh, chooſe you whether; Repent here, for a time; or periſh there under Gods wrath for ever; Not to repent, and not to periſh, is not poſſible.

VVhich Dilemma of CHRISTS (no way to be avoided) makes of the twain to chooſe this fruit of Repentance, rather than to fall into the Wrath to come: To fly to the one, to fly from the other: which otherwiſe we are of our ſelves but coldly affected to. For, though it be ſomewhat bitter (this fruit) yet (ſure we are) if it were ten times more, the bitter pains of ira ventura are far beyond it. Now, the Phyſick of the body and ſoul ſtand upon one Maxime both, Melior eſt modica amaritudo in faucibus, quàm æternum tormentum in viſceribus: Better the bitter Electuary than a burning Ague: Better a ſhort diſtaſte in the mouth, than a perpetual torment in the bowels: Better Repent
Jon. 3. 4. Ninive for forty dayes, than no Ninive at forty dayes end.
Pſal. 34. 12. Shall we conclude then with the Pſalmiſt, What man is he that would deliver his Soul from the wrath to come? And they all began at once to ſay; that would I: Yea, even they that ſhall not eſcape it, will yet ſay, That would I. VVhy, by the bringing, or not bringing forth of this fruit all goes; depends the comming; or not comming of this wrath: comming if you do not; Not comming, if you do bring them forth. Proferte fructus igitur.

And, now we have been at the root downward, to come upward to [1] the tree, [2] the fruits, [3] the worth of the fruits, (three points yet behind) which will aske more time than is leſt; Nay, more than hath been already ſpent; and ſo the work of ſome other time. A word or two, of Proferte, and I have done.

1 Proferte, a Precept. Mark 1. 21. Chap. 8. 9. First, take it not (this Proferte) by way of advice, or, as the wiſh of a well-willing friend. No; St. John delivers it, quaſi authoritatem habens, as a Precept, or Injunction: the word will warrant it. To ſay, do this, belongs to authority; (the Centurion will tell you ſo:) and requireth obedience, Do this, and He doth it.

2 Profrrteigitur, a Concluſion. Then, beſide authority to enjoyn us, there is reaſon, to conclude us. It is not made a Propoſition barely, Doe; It is (beſide) a binding Concluſion, Bring forth therefore; whereto we in reaſon, to conforme our ſelves, and conclude, vve will ſo bring them.

3 Proferte, an injunction with a penalty. Laſt, beſides both theſe, it bindes the harder by the penalty annexed to it, As you vvill avoid the wrath to come: And falling into it, you fall from the fruition of Heaven to the damnation of Hell. VVhich is pœna pœnarum, the penalty of all penalties moſt penal. This is the three-fold cord that bindes it about: Let ſome, or all of them prevail vvith us to bring them forth.

4 The Time: now, Proferte: in the Preſent Tenſe. But oft it fals out, vvhen vve are agreed of the thing, vve are not ſo, for the time. VVill vve at all bring them forth? If vve vvill, vve vvill take ſome time to do it in. Some time: yes, that vve all agree to. At vvhat time then? It is not proponite, or promittite, purpoſe or promiſe to do it, hereafter to bring them forth; but Proferte. VVhat Tenſe is Proferte? The Preſent: Do it then in Preſent. It requires an act inſtantly to be done, Bring them forth out of hand. This is a ſmall note: but, it is no ſmall matter, to get this ſmall note borne vvell avvay; to get our Repentance into the Preſent Tenſe.

In the Aoriſt. ποίησατε. Nay, then it ſits neerer: for to tell you the truth as it is, The vvord, is not Bring forth, at this time, now; then, it ſhould be ποιεῖτε, in the Preſent: But, it is not: It is ποιήσατε, in the Aoriſt; (a tenſe the Latine hath not, nor our Tongue neither.) It ſignifies rather Have done bringing forth; rather than, Bring forth preſently. And I would to GOD vve had even done ſo: had done bringing them forth; for then, all fear vvere paſt. Ventura is to come, but come it vvill, and, vvhen vve knovv not. Both, are yet to come (for ought I ſee) wrath, and our fruit. If the fruit come before the wrath come, it is vvell: But, if the wrath come, before the fruit come, vvhere are vve then? VVe are paſt recovery.

But, vvhat ſpeaks he to us, of having done? VVe have ſcarce yet begun, ſcarce ſet the root that ſhould bear this fruit: VVell yet, this ſhevvs us, it is time vve vvere about it, ſeeing Saint John ſaith, it is more than time, vve had done bringing them forth.

But

But, well, to take no advantage of that tenſe, we will be content with the preſent, if we may obtaine that. And ſo would he have it, now: For, now (ſaith he) is the axe laid to the root: Now then, or not at all. Nay, not now: this is not a time; we have appointed other buſineſſe which we cannot put off. Well, one queſtion more will make an end; if not at this time; at what time? If not now, when? But then, this muſt be ſet down, now before we ſtir hence; And ſo ſet down, as if it be not now, it be as neer now, as may be, for fear ventura come not too ſoon, and take tree and all. This is ſure; the ſooner the better, becauſe the more likely; the later, the werſe, becauſe the leſſe certain.

But, when we ſpeak of the preſent, we ſhut it not up in ipſo nunc, in a day or two or three. Fruits require a time to bring them forth: who ever heard of fruits brought forth on a ſudden? Saw ever any man ſuch a thing? (It is Eſay) Shall the tree bring, or the fruit be brought forth at once? A Gourd or a Muſhrome may ſhoot up in a night; So cannot fruit: It askes time. I take it to be an errour, and that of dangerous conſequence; teaching repentance, to think it a matter of no more moment, than to be diſpatched in a moment. Commonly, our repentance is too ſoon done. That time more than a moment. Eſay 66. 8.

GOD knew it well; and therefore He allows a time for it: Ecce dedi ei tempus (ſaith He to the Church of Thyatira) He gave a time to repent, to bring forth theſe fruits. VVhat time might that be? He never gave certain time, but to Ninive; and that was forty Dayes. You know, where we are now, and what that means. Application to Lent. Apoc. 2. 21. Jon. 3. 4.

We are not againſt allowance of time, ſo it be not to ſlip the collar, to be ſtill uncertain. But, I like not his ſaying ὅταν εὐκαιρήσω, yea, when I find a convenient time, then He that ſaid it, never found it: had it then, never found it after. Acts 24. 25.

But, if we mean, as we ſay, would do it at a convenient time, we cannot find ſo convenient a time as this. Take it firſt, as the time of the Faſt; that time may ſeem to claim a property in it. They go alwayes together; In the Law, their ſolemn repentance was ever at the time of their general Faſt. Levit. 16. 29. In the Prophets, Joel tells us the beſt turning to GOD (that is, repentance) is cum jejunio. They that had not the Law (as Ninive) Nature it ſelf taught them to do it faſting; when they took this fruit, to taſte nothing. In the Goſpel, John Baptiſt the Preacher of repentance, came neither eating nor drinking. And our Saviour though He did both, yet this faſt He kept, though not for any need He had of it Himſelf, but (as in other) for Exemplum dedi vobis, to give us an example, and to point at us that had need, what time to do it in. Which hath ever ſince, from year to year been religiouſly obſerved; both, as a time of publike penance, and as a time of General abſtinence in the Church of CHRIST, Convenient, for the time of Faſt. Joel 2. 12. Jon. 3. 6. Chap. 11. 18. Joh. 13. 15.

And, convenient, for the time of the year. For, if it will be the tree in the I. Pſalme, to bring forth fruit in due ſeaſon, this way it fits our turn: that ſeaſon is at this ſeaſon. It is now tempus proferendi: when can we better ſay Proferte fructus igitur? You can never bring forth at a better time. The ſeaſon is now come; and bringing forth will ſhortly be in ſeaſon, of which the Poet ſaith —— Nunc omnis ager, nunc omnis parturit arbos, when the trees will fall in travaile, and they and the earth (both) make proffer toward, and give pledges in their buds and bloſſomes, of fruit that is comming, and will follow in due time. Pſal. 1. 3.

We are made theſe offers, chooſe which we will; If we will keep time with the heavens. Now the heavens return again to their firſt degree: It is turning time in heaven. If with the foules of heaven (and them CHRIST bids us look to) they know their times juſt, and juſt at this time make their return; the poor ſwallowes and all; And ſo let us; that the Prophet Ieremy upbraid us not with them. So, whether we will go by heaven and the foules of heaven; or, by earth and the fruits of the earth, they all invite us to the diſpenſation of this ſeaſon. Yea, if we will give our ſouls leave to keep time with our bodies, the time we take phyſick for one, may be (if we will) allowed in like ſort for the other: The opening of the year for both. Equal need is of both: if any odds, on the ſouls ſide. Chap. 6. 26. Jer. 8. 7.

Nay, it hath ſo fallen out, that Repentance, Faſting, and the very ſeaſon of the year (for the moſt part) hit together. That of Ninive the moſt famous: by the ſpringing up of Iona's gourd, we may gueſſe, what time it was: we know what time it is, when gourds ſpring. And, for our Saviour CHRIST, if we will take up His time, it is ſuppoſed, He laid His alſo much about this time. For, when the people were baptized, then was CHRIST alſo with them, as St. Luke ſaith: And immediately after His Baptiſme, He was carried away into the wilderneſſe, and there began His forty dayes faſt. Exemplum dedi vobis, A pattern for us; both for our faſt, and for our time of it. Luke 3. 21. 4. 1.

It is true, the ſolemn faſt in the Law, was in Tiſri, which anſwers our September: But then, take this withal; vvhen it vvas ſo in Tiſri, Tiſri vvas vvith them their firſt moneth. So they alſo began their repentance vvith the beginning of the year.

And, take this beſides, that, in that firſt moneth, the trumpets firſt blaſt of all, vvas to aſſemble them to their Kipher, their great Repentance-day, That, vvas their firſt vvork of all.

Novv I ſhall tell you, hovv it vvas. Betvveen the Faſt and the Sabboth, it is vvell knovvn, there vvas neer alliance, inſomuch as the Faſt is called a Sabboth, and both are ſaid to be ſanctified. Sanctifie a faſt, as vvell as Sanctifie the Sabboth. Their Sabboth vvas the ſeventh day; their Faſt vvas the ſeventh moneth. And it may vvell be thought, by vvhom and vvhen the Sabboth vvas removed from the ſeventh day to the firſt; by the ſame perſons, and at the ſame time, vvas the Faſt removed from the ſeventh moneth to the firſt, from Tiſri to Niſan the firſt moneth of all. Novv Niſan is alſo called Abib of the firſt bringing forth fruits in it. Joel 2. 15.

Novv, in Niſan, vvas the time vvhen their Paſchal Lamb vvas ſlain and eaten. The ſame is alſo the

Joh. 1. 29. 1 Cor. 5. 7. the time of the killing of ours; of St. John Baptists Lamb, the Lamb of God; when CHRIST our Passeover was offered; Offered for us in Sacrifice; Offered to us in Sacrament; to whom St. John Baptist will point us to take special notice of Him, and of His time both.

Exod. 12. 8. And we, now at this time, to set those sowre herbs, and see them come up, wherewith the Passeover is to be eaten; which are nothing else but these fruits of Repentance. Now, to set them; that

2 Cor. 6. 2. then, we may gather them to serve us for sawse to the Paschal Lamb. Thus every way, we may say (with the Apostle) Ecce, &c. Behold this is the due season, Behold, now is the convenient time. Now then; Bring them forth.

And, now all that hath been spoken, would GOD it might bring forth but this; that, seeing the time serveth so well, we can no way except to it, we would not slip it. If we did but truly apprehend

Psal. 132. 3, 4. the words ira ventura, our eyes would not sleep, nor our eye-lids slumber, nor the temples of our heads take any rest, till we had taken straight order with our selves, for the when, when it should be; At what time we should not fail but to do it; and nothing should let us, but perform it once to purpose, and seal to our selves this fruit; that, yet once we may assure our selves, we are in good earnest, and that done it is, and such and such were the fruits, we had of it.

A time, whensoever it shall happen, which will be to us no lesse memorable, than the day of our birth, or the day of our comming to any place or dignity. And as much joy and comfort shall we take in the remembrance of it, as of any of them. The rest and repose, our spirits shall find upon the accomplishment of it, will be worth our paines, and abundantly recompense our going through with it.

And, when come back again to St. John Baptist, and to bring him word, you have brought forth this fruit, he will then shew you Agnus Dei: And, then is (indeed) the shewing of Him in kind, and the right time of Seeing Him. And, that sight shall be worth all: we will think, we never saw Him before.

We shall be sure to fly the wrath to come. Nay, it shall fly from us; by us, or over us, but, from us sure Wrath shall fly; and in stead of it, the Kingdom of heaven shall come neer to us, and we to it. For, Repent, and it is at hand, say St. John and CHRIST, both. It is our daily Prayer, it may come; and, this is the way to make it come. What shall I say? we shall sanctifie thereby this time of fast; and as it hath ever bin counted, make it an holy time: And we in it shall have our fruit in holynesse, and the end everlasting life.

A SER-

A SERMON PREPARED TO BE PREACHED

On the Xth. of Februarie, A. D. MDCXXIV. being ASH-WEDNESDAY.

MATTH. Chap. III. Ver. VIII.

Proferte Fructus igitur dignos pœnitentiæ.

Bring forth Fruits, therefore, worthy amendment of life (or Repentance.)

OF this Text, three points we have gone through; these three, [1] Proferte, Bring forth, be not alwayes carrying in: [2] Proferte fructus, Bring forth fruit; Leaves will not serve: [3] Proferte fructus igitur, Bring forth fruits therefore: Wherefore? that so you may escape the wrath to come. There is no way to escape it, but that. Now we goe on.

Bring forth fruits therefore. What fruits? Fruits of repentance; fruits growing on a tree called Repentance: For, the fruits ever carry us to the tree that carries them. If we be to have fruit, it must be brought forth: If brought forth it must be, there must be a tree to bring it forth. That tree is Repentance.

The reason, that St. John in his whole Sermon runs all upon this metaphor of tree and fruits, and axe, and root; that he, brings in Repentance as a tree, I have touched formerly. It seemes to refer us (this tacere) to another, the forbidden tree. That tree had fruit: This tree to have so too: Tree for tree, fruit for fruit. The worthy fruits of Repentance, for the unworthy fruits of disobedience. The fruit of that tree was our bane; the fruit of this to be our medicine. The fruit of that made ira ventura to come; The fruit of this will turne it away. Gen. 3. 17

It is true; the fruits of this tree of Repentance, they were not primæ intentionis, first or principally intended. There was another more excellent plant, called the tree of innocence; the fruit whereof, Ne peccetis, not to sin at all. There were no fruit to that, if it were to be had. But, where shall we find that? Where growes the tree that beares that fruit? Who is there that sinneth not? The forbidden fruit was no sooner taken, but, that tree withered and died; could never be got to grow in our nature since. No talking of that. Rom. 3. 23.

That tree failing, it pleased GOD, of his great goodnesse, to graft upon a new stock, this second plant, the Plant of Repentance: To the end it might serve for a counterpoyson: the fruit of it against the venome of the forbidden fruit. To the end also that it might serve to supply that other of Innocency (they be Elihu's words in Job, to restore unto man his innocency. For, quem pœnitet peccâsse penè est innocens, (could the Heathen man say) the next degree to Innocence, is Penitency. That if we cannot present God with the fruit of Innocency, at the seat of His Justice, yet, with the fruit of Repentance, we may, at the throne of his grace. Job 3. 26.

And this tree will grow in our soil; our soil will bear it, and with good tending, bring forth fruits, worthy fruits, which we may offer unto God, and He will take it in good worth. And this is the tree we must trust to, now: and blessed be God, that so we may.

The Diviſion. To keep us cloſe to our metaphore. We ſay firſt, that Repentance, if it be right, is no Log, no
I. dry piece of wood: A Tree it is; hath life in it; vegetable life at the leaſt.
II. 2 A Tree, and that no barren tree: Such there be, that for all their root, bring forth no fruit at all. This tree is a bearing tree, you may ſay Proferte to it. It will bring forth.
III. 3 Bring forth, and what? That, it was ſet for. It was not ſet for ſhadow, not for fewel. It was planted for fruit, and fruit it is to bring.
IV. 4 But, will any fruit ſerve? No: trees there be that carry fruit, but fruit, of no worth; porcis comedenda, for ſwine (perhaps) not for men. Neither for meat nor medicine. Neither meet to be preſented to God, nor uſeful for the ſervice of men. So [1] a tree: [2] a bearing tree: [3] a fruit-bearing tree; and [4] the fruit it beares worthy the tree that beares it. [1] If it be a dead ſtocke, and no live tree. [2] If it be a tree, but bare and barren;, No proferte; Bring not forth. [3] If it bring forth, be it what it will, if it be not fruit. [4] If it be fructus and not dignus, fruit, but ſuch as is nothing worth, it comes not hence: St. John acknowledges it not. None of his tree; ſome baſtard ſlip it is: None of his ſetting. His, lies faire before us. Bring forth therefore, &c. Of theſe four we are to proceed. [1] Of the tree, [2] The bearing of the tree, [3] The fruit it beares, [4] The worth of the fruit:
V. and a word (if you will) of the fruit time, the time of all this: which will fall out to be at this very time.

I. Of the Tree. WE are to treat of Repentance, as a tree, firſt. To ſpeak properly: Repentance is a Vertue, a moral Vertue, a branch of Juſtice, of Juſtice corrective; and ſo ſhould be delivered in moral termes, as (in the Ethicks) other Vertues uſe to be. It is not, though: you ſhall ſeldome find it ſo: but moſt-what ſet out in the termes of ſome one paſſion of the mind or other. And why ſo? For no other cauſe, but that we are ſo dead and dull, when, we are about it (this buſineſſe)
Heb. 6. 1. as if Repentance were a very log, and no quick or live tree. Which cannot be; Repentance being from dead works, and therefore cannot be a dead thing it ſelfe, but have life in it. Marke it when you will, the Holy Ghoſt (as it were of purpoſe) ſtill chooſeth to expreſſe it under ſome terme of paſſion (as ſorrow, fear, anger, and the like) rather than the other way: Rather in Pathetical, than in Ethical termes. And this he doth in a manner continually. For, Paſſions be quicke, there is life in them. Therefore, their termes He chooſeth, to put life in us. To ſhew He would have us affectionate, when we are about this worke: and not ſo cold and ſo calme, as we uſe to be. And indeed, theſe affections be the very radical humour or ſap: If they goe up, there is hope of ſome fruit: If down, and riſe not, no proferte to be looked for.

Now, if affections give life, the quicker the affection, the more life it gives. And there is none quicker than that of Anger. For which cauſe, when time was, you may remember, we made it the chief Ingredient into Repentance. Even, Anger at our ſelves, we were ſo evil adviſed as to bring our
Pal. 129. 3. ſelves into the anger of GOD. Whoſe anger when it comes, Quis poterit, who can, who is able? (that is, none can, none is able) to abide. And why found we it ſo? Becauſe moſt life and ſpirit appeares in that: Feare and Sorrow and the reſt, are but dull and heavie in compariſon of it.

And this, I now mention the rather, becauſe the paſſion of Anger (if you marke it) ſtrikes upon ira ventura in the Text: doth even in a manner lead us by the hand unto it. One anger to another: God's anger, to ours: God's to come, to ours for the preſent. For by our anger for the preſent, we turne away His to come. Our anger is a ſuperſedeas to His. Or, if you will have it in termes of Juſtice, judging our ſelves, we ſhall not be judged of the Lord.

But our Anger, and (generally) all our affections, are well compared to lime. Out of the water, where they ſhould be hot, no heat appeares in them: in water where they ſhould be cold, there they boile and take on. Uſed there moſt, where they ſhould be leaſt: and again leaſt, where they ſhould be moſt. For, take me a worldly man, and let him but over-reach himſelf, in ſome good bargaine, in matter of profit, you ſhall ſee him ſo angrie, ſo out of patience with himſelfe, as oft it caſts him into ſome diſeaſe. There (lo) is repentance in kind: there, is that which makes it a tree, the Spirit of life. Ours (for the moſt part) towards GOD is dull and blockiſh; neither life nor ſoule in it.

II. The Bearing of the Tree. But we may not ſtand thus about the tree: We are called on for Proferte, to bring ſomewhat forth: Elſe how ſhall we know, it is a tree, and no log? Small ods or none at all, between a dead ſtocke and a barren tree; one brings forth as much as the other. It is the bringing forth, that makes the difference.

Bringing forth is oppoſite to keeping in, we muſt have no kept-in-repentance. Forth it muſt come, forth it muſt be brought. From whence? from within. Carrying in (before;) Keeping in (now:) all within's are againſt, utterly againſt Proferte.

St. John ſaw well, which way the world would goe: Men would have their repentance prove res intus peragenda, a matter to be ſped, diſpatched, ſhuffled up within, between their conſcience and them (forſooth.) And then they would tell you great matters, what they are within. There, within, they have it, that they have; where no body can ſee what they have. Under the buſhel much, but no-
Matth. 5. 15. thing on the candleſticke, that any man can ſee. So, inſtead of Proferte, we ſhould have Preferte, nothing but pretending. Nay, no Preferte: Proferte (ſaith St. John) No boſome repentance: Bring it out, Iam. 2. 18. ſhew it. For upon St. John's Proferte is grounded St. James Oſtende mihi, Shew me thy faith: And it holds, in repentance too. Tell them not of a repentance under the ground; down in the root; within, in the hollow

hollow of the barke: They will not hear of it, Ut in pœnitentiâ, ſola conſcientia præſentetur; ſed ut aliqua etiam externo actu adminiſtretur: Not only a pretence, or faire ſhew to be made of our conſcience within, but ſome outward thing to be done and executed upon it: Somewhat to be brought forth. Take heed of this errour, as if repentance were a matter meerly mental or intentional. It is not, good notions in the braine, nor good motions in the mind will ſerve, theſe are but the ſap within: Look to the branches; what ſee you there? Look to Proferte, what is brought forth.

III. The fruit it beares.

Bring forth then: And what, Many things doth a tree bring forth, and divers of them as fore-runners to the fruit, as boughs, and leaves, and buds and bloſſomes. Saint John mentions none of them; paſſeth by them all: ſtayes at none, till he come to the fruits. That is it, the tree was planted for. Not to make materials, not to give ſhadow: Not for the green boughs, nor the gay bloſſomes, not for any thing but for the fruit. The tree is for the fruit; and, but for the fruit, there had been no tree. Fruit it was, for which it was firſt ſet, and for which it is let grow: and when there is no longer hope of bringing forth fruit, downe with it (ſaith the Lord of the ſoile) why troubles it the ground any longer? And then comes Ira ventura with his axe, layes it to the root, and down it goes, and into the fire it is caſt: and ſeeing it will not ſerve for fruit, make it ſerve for fewel; the end of all unfruitfull trees. Marke it well, this. It is the fruit of repentance; not repentance it ſelfe, but the fruit it is, is ſought for, That, is all in all. So, not only a bearing, but a fruit-bearing repentance. Luk. 13. 7.

And, good reaſon. For, if the one tree (ſinne) if that have brought forth fruit, ſo muſt repentance (the other tree) doe likewiſe. It is true, in ſinne, the ſenſe (and ſo, the ſoule) is firſt in fault. In at that gate it firſt comes, and out at that, it muſt firſt goe. But, ſinne hath her fruit in the body: So, is repentance to have hers too. Repentance is to be incorporate, and bring forth her fruits in the body. The ſoul alone, not to be put to penance; all laid upon it: The body to ſhare, as in the pleaſure, ſo in the paine.

Perhaps, in the ſinne, that lies ſmothering in the thought within, never comes in actum, there may be ſome queſtion, whether Repentance alone may not ſerve. But, if it have brought forth the forbidden fruit (the body;) the body muſt have her fruit in Repentance alſo. To both, ſaid it is, ſaid it muſt be, Proferte igitur fructus.

That fruit is work.

And what be theſe fruits? To let goe the metaphore, if you would know in plain termes what fruits meane, Saint Paul will tell you without any figure. He ſaith (Acts 26. 20.) he preached; Men ſhould turne to God, and doe workes worthy of repentance. Look ye: St. John's fruits (Saint Paul being his Commenter) are nothing but works. Both mean the ſame thing: Saint Paul's works are Saint John's fruits: fruits and works are all one. In omni opere bono fructificantes (It is the Apoſtles, Col. 1. 10.) Every good work is a good fruit. To doe a worke then of Repentance, is to bring forth the fruits of Repentance.

There is no vertue at all but hath her proper act or worke: but not any vertue of them all, ſo proper as repentance. For, of repentance it is ſaid, agere pœnitentiam: So, it is not, of any beſides. That in a work, it may ſeem to claim a propriety, above and before all the reſt. And that it ſo requires an Act, as, no Act, no Repentance. Now becauſe we have taken up a diſtinction; that an Act is but a thing tranſient, but a fact, that is permanent. Therefore (to make all ſure) beſides pœnetentiam agere, you have quæ fructum non fecerit. So, both agere and facere, Act and Fact both. And the fact, that is the fruit, that, hath ſome reality in it. So ſome fruit is to come; Something to be done: Not, thought, or ſaid; but done, actually done. Otherwiſe, fingitur non agitur pœnitentia (It is Auguſtine) we doe but dally, all is but counterfeit. No ſerious Repentance, if ſomewhat be not done.

For, that ſomewhat is to be done, is ſo ſure, as ye ſhall not find any man in the minde or way to repent, but (ever) his firſt queſtion is, What muſt I doe? And that, even by the very inſtinct of reaſon. Lord what wilt thou have me to doe? (Saint Paul's firſt words, when he began:) Quid oportet me facere? The Gaolers firſt words (being now a Convert) to St. Paul, when he began. As much as to ſay: Somewhat I am to doe, if I knew what. Thrice together you have this queſtion here immediately after, Quid faciemus? Say the Publicans: What ſhall we doe? Say the Souldiers: What ſhall we doe? Say all the people to St. John, when they came to the baptiſme of repentance. All agreeing in this, all implying, ſomewhat there was to be done, whatſoever it was: that the fruit of repentance is in the work. Acts 9. 6, Acts 16. 30; Luk. 3. 10. 12, 14.

And, what is that work? I will anſwer firſt in general. In moral Divinity (if we goe that way) the proper work of Juſtice, is to give to each his due. Of corrective Juſtice, to doe juſtice, to inflict correction, where it is due: And to ſin it is due. The difference only is: Correction (for the moſt part) is done upon others: in repentance, it reflects, and is done upon our ſelves.

If you will put more life into it, and utter it more pathetically, goe by the way of affections; Anger is the predominant affection (we ſaid.) The proper work of anger is to be avenged. What, ſhall I not viſit? ſhall not my ſoul be avenged on ſuch an indignity? ſaith Indignation. As anger then the chief Paſſion; ſo, that, the chief action. The Apoſtle therefore leaves not off, till he have asked, Yea, but quæ vindicta? what revenge? what puniſhment? That is his laſt queſtion: Comes not to his period, till he have ſhut up all with that. For till that be done, all is not done. That is the very Conſummatum eſt of all true repentance. Jer. 5. 6. 2 Cor. 7. 10.

What theſe works are.

To grow to more particulars. We ſort the works of repentance, as they may beſt anſwer and ſuit with the works of ſinne. Now, all ſinnes grow out of theſe three heads, and may be reduced

The Division. To keep us close to our metaphore. We say first, that Repentance, if it be right, is no Log, no dry piece of wood: A Tree it is; hath life in it; vegetable life at the least.

I. 2 A Tree, and that no barren tree: Such there be, that for all their root, bring forth no fruit at all. This tree is a bearing tree, you may say Proferte to it. It will bring forth.

II. 3 Bring forth, and what? That, it was set for. It was not set for shadow, not for fewel. It was planted for fruit, and fruit it is to bring.

III. 4 But, will any fruit serve? No: trees there be that carry fruit, but fruits, of no worth; porcis comedenda, for swine (perhaps) not for men. Neither for meat nor medicine. Neither meet to be presented to God, nor useful for the service of men. So [1] a tree: [2] a bearing tree: [3] a fruit-bearing tree; and [4] the fruit it beares worthy the tree that beares it. [1] If it be a dead stocke, and no live tree. [2] If it be a tree, but bare and barren;, No proferte; Bring not forth. [3] If it bring forth, be it what it will, if it be not fruit. [4] If it be fructus and not digni, fruit, but such as is nothing worth, it comes not hence: St. John acknowledges it not. None of his tree; some bastard slip it is: None of his setting. His, lies faire before us. Bring forth therefore, &c. Of these four we are to proceed. [1] Of the tree, [2] The bearing of the tree, [3] The fruit it beares, [4] The worth of the fruit:

V. and a word (if you will) of the fruit time, the time of all this: which will fall out to be at this very time.

I. Of the Tree. WE are to treat of Repentance, as a tree, first. To speak properly: Repentance is a Vertue, a moral Vertue, a branch of Justice, of Justice corrective; and so should be delivered in moral termes, as (in the Ethicks) other Vertues use to be. It is not, though: you shall seldome find it so: but most-what set out in the termes of some one passion of the mind or other. And why so? For no other cause, but that we are so dead and dull, when, we are about it (this businesse) as if Repentance were a very log; and no quick or live tree. Which cannot be; Repentance being from dead works, and therefore cannot be a dead thing it selfe, but have life in it. Marke it when you will, the Holy Ghost (as it were of purpose) still chooseth to expresse it under some terme of passion (as sorrow, fear, anger, and the like) rather than the other way: Rather in Pathetical, than in Ethical termes. And this he doth in a manner continually. For, Passions be quicke, there is life in them. Therefore, their termes He chooseth, to put life in us. To shew He would have us affectionate, when we are about this worke: and not so cold and so calme, as we use to be. And indeed, these affections be the very radical humour or sap: If they goe up, there is hope of some fruit: If down, and rise not, no proferte to be looked for.

Heb. 6. 1.

Now, if affections give life, the quicker the affection, the more life it gives. And there is none quicker than that of Anger. For which cause, when time was, you may remember, we made it the chief Ingredient into Repentance. Even, Anger at our selves, we were so evil advised as to bring our selves into the anger of GOD. Whose anger when it comes, Quis poterit, who can, who is able? (that is, none can, none is able) to abide. And why found we it so? Because most life and spirit appeares in that: Feare and Sorrow and the rest, are but dull and heavie in comparison of it.

Psal. 129. 3.

And this, I now mention the rather, because the passion of Anger (if you marke it) strikes upon ira ventura in the Text: doth even in a manner lead us by the hand unto it. One anger to another: God's anger, to ours: God's to come, to ours for the present. For by our anger for the present, we turne away His to come. Our anger is a supersedeas to His. Or, if you will have it in termes of Justice, judging our selves, we shall not be judged of the Lord.

But our Anger, and (generally) all our affections, are well compared to lime. Out of the water, where they should be hot, no heat appeares in them: in water where they should be cold, there they boile and take on. Used there most, where they should be least: and again least, where they should be most. For, take me a worldly man, and let him but over-reach himself, in some good bargaine, in matter of profit, you shall see him so angrie, so out of patience with himselfe, as oft it casts him into some disease. There (lo) is repentance in kind: there, is that which makes it a tree, the Spirit of life. Ours (for the most part) towards GOD is dull and blockish; neither life nor soule in it.

II. The Bearing of the Tree. But we may not stand thus about the tree: We are called on for Proferte, to bring somewhat forth: Else how shall we know, it is a tree, and no log? Small ods or none at all, between a dead stocke and a barren tree; one brings forth as much as the other. It is the bringing forth, that makes the difference.

Bringing forth is opposite to keeping in, we must have no kept-in-repentance. Forth it must come, forth it must be brought. From whence? from within. Carrying in (before;) Keeping in (now:) all within's are against, utterly against Proferte.

Matth. 5. 15.

St. John saw well, which way the world would goe: Men would have their repentance prove res intus peragenda, a matter to be sped, dispatched, shuffled up within, between their conscience and them (forsooth.) And then they would tell you great matters, what they are within. There, within, they have it, that they have; where no body can see what they have. Under the bushel much, but nothing on the candlestick, that any man can see. So, instead of Proferte, we should have Praeferte, nothing but pretending. Nay, no Praeferte: Proferte (saith St. John) No bosome repentance: Bring it out, shew it. For upon St. John's Proferte is grounded St. James Ostende mihi, Shew me thy faith: And it holds, in repentance too. Tell them not of a repentance under the ground; down in the root; within, in the hollow of the barke; They will not hear of it, Ut in pœnitentiâ, ſola conſcientia præferatur; ſed ut aliqua etiam externo actu adminiſtretur: Not only a pretence, or faire ſhew to be made of our conſcience within, but ſome outward thing to be done and executed upon it: Somewhat to be brought forth. Take heed of this errour, as if repentance were a matter meerly mental or intentional. It is not, good notions in the braine, nor good motions in the mind will ſerve, theſe are but the ſap within: Look to the branches; what ſee you there? Jer. 5. 6. 2 Cor. 7. 10.

What theſe works are.

To grow to more particulars. We ſort the works of repentance, as they may beſt anſwer and ſuit with the works of ſinne. Now, all ſinnes grow out of theſe three heads, and may be reduced

In particular. 1 Joh. 2. 16. to one of them; the [1] Spirit, the [2] Flesh, and the [3] World: and are corrected each of them, by his contrary. In Physicke it holds, Every thing is cured: In Iustice it holds, Every thing is best corrected, by his contrary. Now, it is contrary, much against each of these, to be deprived of that, it loves and delights in.

1 Prayer, &c. The Spirit loves to be at liberty, to range and to scatter it selfe in many manner of thoughts: Or, if it fix, to doe it, upon some pleasing object. Confine the spirit, make it undertake some task of devotion, set it to pray: to read, to meditate, which is a dry object, and nothing pleasing to it: fix it so, and you punish it. For, nothing is more irkesome. It is vexatio spiritus.

2 Fasting, &c. The Flesh, that loves to fare well, put it to fast: loves to sleep and take her ease; put it to watch, or to lie hard: loves vestiri mollibus; gird it with sackcloth: loves mirth and good company; make it retire and sit pensive: abridge it of these all or any, and you punish it more or lesse, I warrant you.

3 Almes. The World and the Worldling, they love to part with as little as they can. Charge them with any thing that shall be to them chargeable, it punisheth them shrewdly, and is to them a punishment.

Thus then those three, they may be met with, each of them if they have made a fault. For neglect of serving of God, with some task of devotion more than ordinary. For fulnesse of bread, with that truly sacra fames, the exercise of fasting. For loosnesse of life, with works tending to the taking down of the flesh, and making it lesse fleshly. For taking that which was others, to depart with that which is our owne. For want of bowels, with works of mercy. In a word, with suffering that we would not, for doing that we should not. So, punishing our evil concupiscence, in that it is so bent to; and making it leave that; for which it left GOD. So the triplicity stands thus: for spiritual sinnes; Prayer, and works of devotion: for fleshly; works pertaining to castigo corpus meum: for worldly; Almes, and works of charity and compassion. Let me shew you them briefly.

1 Cor. 9. 27.

1 Acts 8. 12. For the first. Simon Magus went not through with his bargaine; did but think the Holy Ghost had been ware for his money; all was but thinking; went no further than the Spirit. St. Peter prescribes him what to do, To fall to prayer: pray (saith he) if it be possible, this thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee. Prayer serves, where it goes no further than thought.

2 Jon. 3. 5. Nahum 1. 1, 3, 4. For the second. The King of Ninive and his people, they fell to fasting on all hands. What was their sin? Nahum will best tell us that: He wrote the burden of Ninive. This it was: Because of the fornications of the harlot. For that kinde of fleshly sin, that was the proper fruit.

3 Dan. 4. 7. For the third. One example shall be the King of Babylon. He had been a mighty oppressor of his people. There have ye now a worldly sinne. Break off thine iniquity with mercy to the poor, is Daniels prescript to him. That is the right fruit for sinnes of that nature. All may be comprised under these three: 1. Works of devotion, as Prayer: 2. Works of chastisement of the body, as Fasting: 3. Works of mercy, as Almes. These three, between them, make up the corrective or penal part of repentance.

1 Psal. 32. 7. Luk. 18. 10, 13. Jer. 3. 25. Jon. 3. 8. Prayer is a fruit of Repentance. For this cause (saith the Penitential Psalme) even for this and for no other cause, shall every one that is so disposed make his prayer unto thee. The penitent Publicans first moving was, he went up to the Temple to pray. Let them pray and say: Spare thy people, O LORD, and give not over thine inheritance to be a reproach unto the heathen: (saith JOEL in his repentance.) Let them cry mightily unto the LORD, (say they of Ninive, in theirs.) And the prayers of DAVID, JONAS, MANASSES, for their own sins: of DANIEL, EZRA, NEHEMIAS, for the sins of the Land; and in a word, the Penitential Psalms shew this, that were chosen for no other end but to be a task for penitential persons. There is one fruit.

2 Prov. 11. 17. Almes is another. A fruit, and so (by the name of fruit) expressly called, Rom. 15. 28. For, by mercy shewed, sins are forgiven (saith SALOMON:) He that seeks mercy is to shew mercy, Prov. 16. 6. DANIEL (you heard) did prescribe it to no lesse person then the King himself at Babylon. Esay 58. 7. And the same at Jerusalem was a fruit too: witnesse, Esay 58. Break thy bread to the hungry, made by him, there a part of true repentance. And Zachee shewed as much in his own happy practice upon himself, of our Saviour CHRIST'S high approbation. Luk. 19. 8. There is another fruit.

3 1 Sam. 12. 16. 1 Reg. 21. 27. Jon. 3. 6. Fasting is a third fruit: and that a special one, and so hath alwayes been reputed. It appeareth by the three Kings, King DAVID, who was a religious Prince: Not only by him, but by King AHAB, who was scarce found in religion. Nor by them only, but by the King of NINIVE a heathen man, who, even by the light of Nature, brought forth this fruit.

Gen. 3. 6. We name it last, but it is (indeed) first: First in Nature: first, quoad nos. First, in nature, as opposite to the first trangression, which was by eating. First, (I am sure) quoad nos, speaking of us and our country. Excesse that way in fare and feeding, hath been and is counted our Gentile vitium, our National fault. So, no fruit, that our Nation is more bound to bring forth, than it. For Esca ventri, and venter escis, meat for the bellie, and the bellie for meat, it no where reigneth so much. This is a third fruit.

A fruit, which if we would frame our selves to bring forth in kind, there would come with it both the other fruits besides. For if we could so fast, as we should, it would abate lust certainly; which otherwise, keep the body high, you shall hardly bring low: (that fruit.) And if we could so fast, it would mend our devotion much; our Prayers would not be so full of yawning as we find them: (that fruit.) And if we could so fast, there would be the more left to enable us to be so much the more plentiful in Almes than we be: (that fruit.) So as a good encrease or yeeld would come of this third fruit well brought forth.

These three in special are chosen out; but in general, any as well as these. ¶ There is a way, how howv it is poſſible, there is not a vertue of them all, but you may make the work of it a fruit of Repentance. In moral matters it holds ever. Finis dat formam, the end (that) gives the form, and ſo the true eſſence to every work: inſomuch as the work is reckoned a fruit, not of that vertue from vvhence it proceeds, by vvhich it is done; but of that vertue to vvhich it refers, for vvhoſe end it is done. What theſe Works are in general.

Nay, it fals out often ſo, as an act of vertue (as Prayer, Faſtings, Alms,) done for a vitious end, (ſuppoſe, vain glory) looſeth his ovvn kind, and becomes the proper act of that vice, it is done for. So povverful a thing is the End, in moralibus. VVhereby it comes to paſſe, the vvork of any vertue, be it vvhat it vvill, undertaken vvith a mind and intent (or, as vve ſay) animo corrigendi, conjoyned eo nomine, referred to that, alters the nature, and becomes a vvork of Iuſtice corrective, and ſo a fruit of repentance.

For even in theſe three before remembred, ſo it goes. Alms, of it ſelf, is a vvork of charity: Faſting (properly) an act of the vertue ἐγκράτεια, abſtinence: Prayer of his ovvn nature, a vvork of religious worſhip. But, Alms done ſome vvay to amerce our ſelves: Faſting done animo caſtigandi corpus: Prayer impoſed as a taskwork, to ſpent ſo much time, to ſtand ſo long bend at it: all theſe thus referred ſtill vvith an eye to that, change their nature and become acts penal, and ſo fruits of Repentance.

Of fruits, vve ſaid at firſt, two Uſes there are: Firſt, to be offered as a preſent: So, JACOB ſent them to the * Governour of Egypt. For the firſt: vve have (in all) but three things to offer unto GOD, to preſent, to honour Him vvith; The [1] Spirit (or Soule) [2] the Body, and [3] our worldly goods. [1] The offering of the ſoul is, the pouring it out in prayer, and other works of that kind. [2] Of the body the chaſting it by exerciſes that vvay tending. [3] Of our goods, by diſtributing and doing good vvith them in Alms and offerings. The Uſe of this fruit. 1. As an offering. * Gen. 43. 11.

Suppoſing the ſin-offering in the Law beſt to ſuit vvith repentance (as it doth.) [1] A ſorrowful ſpirit is a ſacrifice to GOD (that we knovv;) [2] and no reaſon but a chaſtned body ſhould be ſo likewiſe, [3] and why the price and charges of the ſacrifice ſhould not come into the reckoning, I ſee not, which was part of their worldly State; which being diſtributed and done good withal, in meat and drink offerings, this the Apoſtle calls a ſacrifice wherewith GOD is well pleaſed. The firſt Uſe of theſe fruits brought forth. Pſal. 51. 17. Phil. 4. 18.

The ſecond Uſe we ſpake of was, as they are medicinable. This difference there is between the puniſhment of Iuſtice, and Repentance. Iuſtice otherwhiles deſtroyes the delinquent; ſo doth repentance never, but ſaves alwayes. So, it is more like the puniſhment of Phyſick than of Law. For, Phyſick though it be a cure, yet a penance it is to the body, if we deal with it throughly, and go through with it. And repentance is the Phyſick of the ſoul and body both. Sit obſecro ſanatio (ſaith DANIEL) Let there be a cure done, when he exhorteth him to repent. Both are a cure: as Corrective of what is paſt, ſo preſervative (or if you will, you may call it corrective too) of what is to come. When the ſinner is corrected, hath correction given him, for the former, he correcteth his wayes, amends his life for ever after. Caſtigo corpus ſerves for what hath been done: In ſervitutem Redigo ſerves, that he do it no more. Both to wreak our ſelves for ſo often offering ſo foul indignities to Heaven and the GOD of Heaven, in our former bad courſe of life: And to keep under the fleſh, and hold the concupiſcence in awe, that it runne not again into the former ryot. This latter, we call amendment of life; which is not repentance, for it perteins rather to μετάνοια, than to μεταμέλεια, (being yet to come) but it never fails to follow it infallibly, in ſo much as if it do not, nothing is done. 2. As a medecine. Dan. 4. 27. 1 Cor. 9. 27.

For I report me to you: Let it be but known to the fleſh that this ſame light or ſlight repentance ſhall not ſerve the turn, but to a round reckoning it ſhall come and make full accompt to taſte of theſe fruits throughly, without hope of being diſpenſed with; whether it will not take off the edge of our appetite, and make it more dull and fearful to offend? On the other ſide, let it be conſidered, whether this be not to lay the bridle on the neck of concupiſcence to power it ſelf into all riot, if (ſinning) it know, it ſhall be diſpatched with any repentance, never ſo ſhort and ſhallow, as do no more ſo; and all is well? Whether (I ſay) this will not make all the ſap go down, as we ſhall never ſee fruit come: Nay, whether it be not to deſtroy fruit and tree and all?

Verily, they that for pure zeal and indignation at themſelves for their ſins, never ſhew a tear, nor miſſe a meal, nor break a ſleep, nor do, nor ſuffer, nor part with ought; it may ſeem a queſtion, whether they think not S. Iohn here over-ſeen in preſſing that for ſo needful, which they can ſo eaſily diſpenſe with.

But if when we come to Caſtigo Corpus, there we leave S. Paul; when to neither eating nor drinking, there we leave S. Iohn; and when to flevit amarè, there we leave S. Peter, and when to πένθος and κλαῦσαι changing our mirth into perſiveneſſe, there we leave S. Iames, I marvel, what manner of repentance we will leave before we have done, or what ſhall become of our fruits here? 1 Cor. 9. 27. Mat. 1. 18. 26. 75.

In our repenting (commonly) we make ſuch haſte, as we take away before the fruits come. But if there happen to come any, is not this even our caſe? Our tears, if any, dry ſtraight: Our prayers, if any, quickly tedious: Our alms, indeed pityful: Our faſts, faſt or looſe, upon any the leaſt occaſion: And ſo our repentance (if any) pœnitentia pœnitenda, a repentance needing another, a new, a ſecond repentance, to repent us of it. To repent us, of our repentance, no leſſe than of our ſin it ſelf. IV. The worth of this fruit.

So

[1] Cor. 5. 10. So that, if any fruit, fruit of no worth. And if the fruit be of no worth, no more is the tree: unworthy one, unworthy both. Thus we are not yet where we ſhould be, till unto fructus we have added dignos.

Nay then, if you fall to talk of worthineſſe, we ſhall have ſatisfaction up again. And had we not beſt then to aſk firſt, are there any worthy? for, if there be none ſuch, bid S. JOHN beware how he talk of worthy fruits: bid Saint PAUL beware how he ſpeak of worthy works of repentance. If none ſuch be, they did ill to cleg the bill with any ſuch word. But they knew well, what they ſaid: therefore, ſuch there be (ſure) get them where we can.

Act. 26. 20.

How it is worthy.

Only, when we ſay worthy, it would be underſtood cum grano ſalis. How worthy? in what ſenſe? whither referred? that we miſtake nor. I demand then firſt, ſhall we put them into the balance, to weigh the worthineſſe of our fruits; with the unworthineſſe of our ſins, and the conſequent of our ſins the wrath of GOD? the dignity of the one, with the indignity of the other, and think by their dignity to ſatisfie GODS great indignation? I trow not. At this beam, no fruits of curs will hold weight: None, ſo, found worthy: No, not if we could (I ſay not, ſhed, or poure out, but) even melt into tears, and every tear a drop of blood. No: Non ſunt condigna paſſiones (ſaith the Apoſtle) we can ſuffer nothing worthy our ſins, but (that, we cannot ſuffer) ira ventura, the wrath of God. The infinite incomparable high worth of Him, that in our ſin is wronged; the foul contempt that is therein offered, are far above the worth of any our fruits; weigh them down as any feather. Why, all Lebanon (ſaith the Prophet) is not ſufficient to find wood; nor, all the [a] beaſt upon a thouſand hils not enough for [a] ſacrifice, [b] Tekel, tekel, toſight all. Take them out of the ſcales, away with them, Non ſunt digni; in that ſenſe. In which ſenſe, not the wicked [c] prodigal child only, but even the good [d] Centurion; nay then, even S. John Baptiſt here himſelf, cry all, [e] Non ſum dignus; neither their fruits, nor they. The honour of dignos (in this ſenſe) belongs to the fruits of no tree, but the tree of the Croſſe of Chriſt; to His ſufferings, and to none but His.

[b] Dan. 5. 27.
[c] Luk. 15. 21.
[d] Mat. 8. 8.
[e] Verſe 11.

Yet (I wot well) there hath been another manner of eſtimate by ſome men of their own fruits; but they weighed them with their own falſe weights, and made them a diſcharge both from pœna and from culpa, and that toties quoties. Nay then, inventus eſt plus habens, they found a further ſurpluſſage too of I know not what beſides. What of that? CHRISTS Caveat is here to take place: that weeding out the tares, we take heed, we pluck not up together good corne and all. That to avoid certain wormes, that may hap breed in the fruit, if it be not the better looked to, we beat not all the fruit off the tree, and leave it all naked and bare; no fruits at all: and, for fear of teaching a proud, teach a fruitleſſe repentance. Well: though not ſo compared, not this way, yet muſt we have fructus dignos.

How, worthy then? referred whither? As worthy, as the poſſibility of our Nature will reach to; as our ſoil will bear, or hath ever yeelded; as the Saints and Servants of GOD are reported to have brought forth in former ages: what ſay you to that dignos? That (indeed) were ſomewhat worth, if it might be had. They? they have become [a] like bottles in the ſmoke, their [b] knees have grown weak through faſting, they have [c] alſo wet their pillowes with their teares; they have [d] reſtored bribes, and that four-fold; given in almes at once, half of all that ever they had. This were (indeed) ſomewhat worth: But, of this (I doubt) our worthineſſe will be found ſhort: or rather I dare not put it upon this dignos neither.

And yet, were there in us any portion of that heroical free ſpirit, of that Chriſtian magnanimity that was in the Fathers of our Faith; (the Apoſtle bears them witneſſe, that to their powers, nay, and beyond their powers they ſhewed themſelves willing;) any never ſo poor fruit would not content us. But we, neither to our power, nor a great deal ſhort of it, endeavour our ſelves: any never ſo ſlight, and ſlender will ſerve us well enough.

2 Cor. 8. 3.

I wonder what we think? Do we think to poſt God off with any, it ſkils not what fruit? with windfals, with worm-eaten ſtuff? ESAYES ſowre grapes? JEREMIES rotten figs? Nothing comes amiſſe. Hold we Him in ſo vile account, as any is good enough for Him, it is well with Him, if He get any? Malachie tels us otherwiſe, That He holds us in great ſcorn: bids us go offer ſuch fruit to our Prince: and ſee if He will take it well. Zachary tels us ſo likewiſe: A goodly price (ſaith he) they value me at. Goodly fruit, is it not, they preſent me with? Nay (ſure) we muſt have dignos too: Some worth there would be.

Eſay 5. 2.
Ierem. 24. 1.
Mal. 1. 8.
Zac. 11. 13.

Is there any other way to take our dignos by? Compared with the juſtice of God, Not ſo: Nor with the great Heroes of our nature; Not ſo neither. Nor (indeed) are they ſaid worthy of either of theſe; but how? Only, fruits worthy of Repentance: that is, ſuch as may well beſeem perſons, as be truly penitent. Referred not to ought, but to Repentance it ſelf. Laying by ſin, as it is an averſion from an infinite good (for ſo it is infinite; admits no meaſure or degree;) but conſidering it, as it is a converſion to the creature, and that more or leſſe; ſo, it fals within compaſſe of more or leſſe worthy.

Say I this of my ſelf? Saith not GODS Law the ſame ſecundùm menſuram eſtimationemque delicti, and pro menſurâ peccati? Is it not a clauſe there repeated more than once? If there be a meaſure of the one, ſo is there of the other: If an analogy of Faith, of Repentance too, why not? And, to that, we do apply our ſelves, in the magis or minus dignos of our fruits. This is once: Repentance may be too much, one may go too far in it: That, will be granted (I know.) And if too much, then too little: and we may fall too ſhort the other way (that I am ſure of.) Which part we ſhould offend on (to chooſe) ἀγὰν in ἀγανάκτησις will ſoon teach us, that it would be home: rather, with the more than with the leſſe. In the Corinthians caſe there it was too much; he was in danger to be ſwallowed up with ſorrow. In Miriams caſe again, it was too little: for, though ſhe were right penitent for her folly committed, yet becauſe the quality of her offence required a larger and more worthy Repentance, ſhe was ſhut out of the hoſt yet ſeven dayes longer, and then, and not before, received to pardon. If there be an ultra and a citra, then is there a tenus. If too much, and too little, then is there a ſufficit, enough. And, that, is the dignus we ſeek for.

But who ſhall tell us, this tenus what it is? Who ſhall ſay ſufficit? I think it is not beſt to ſay it to our ſelves; it is not ſafe, that. We are like enough to give ear to propitius eſto tibi, to ſpare and favour our ſelves, and to think that worthy, that is not: to diſmiſſe the matter with a do no more ſo, never to follow it to ſentence. Or, if we do, to reprive our ſelves; and ſtay the execution. It hath been held no way ſafe for us, to make our own aſſeſſement: and as ſafe a way as could be, would ever be taken for the ſoul. Better, ſome other body do it: and, who ſhall that other body be? Mat. 16. 23.

In the Law, every may was not left to himſelf. The offering for ſin, which was to them a fruit of Repentance) it vvas rated ever, ever taxed בערכך by the Prieſt. According to his ordering, ſo it went: he made the eſtimate, hovv much vvas enough, vvhat vvould ſerve. And here novv, in Saint John's time (vvhich vvas the interval or paſſage, as it vvere, betvveen the Law and the Goſpel) at the baptiſme of John, they knevv not vvhat to do, they vvere not ſo vvell skilled; to Saint John, they come with their quid faciemus? VVhat ſhall vve do? And vvhat ſhall vve do? All three one after another, the Publicans, the Souldiers, the Common ſort; and they had all their anſvvers ſeverally. One anſwer ſerved not all. Several kinds of ſin required ſeveral ſorts of fruits. And, under the Goſpel; there (we ſee) for the Corinthian, S. Paul ſaid, Sufficit viro huic: Thus much is enough, this ſhall ſerve: his conſcience may be quiet; I reſtore him to the Churches peace. And the Canons penitential which were made in the times under perſecution, the very beſt times of the Church, lay forth plainly, what is to be followed and obſerved in this kind. Levit. 5. 18. Luk. 3. 10. 12. 14. 2 Cor. 2. 6.

And (ſure) I take it to be an errour added to the former, to think, the fruits of Repentance and the worth of them to be a matter, any common man can skill of well enough; needs never ask S. John, or S. Paul, what he ſhould do; knows what he ſhould do, as well as S. Paul, or S. John either: And that is not rather a matter, wherein we need the counſel and direction of ſuch, as are profeſſed that way. Truly it is neither the leaſt nor the laſt part of our learning, to be able to give anſwer, and direction in this point. But, therefore laid aſide, and neglected by us, becauſe not ſought after by you. Therefore not ſtudied, but by very few, quia nemo nos interrogat, becauſe it is grown out of requeſt quite.

We have learned (I know not where) a new, a ſhorter courſe, which fleſh and blood better likes of; to paſſe the whole courſe of our life, and, in the whole courſe of our life not to be able to ſet down where, or vvhen, or what we did, when we did that, which we call Repenting: what fruits there came of it; vvhat thoſe fruits might be worth. And but even a little before our death (and, as little as may be) not, till the world have given us over, then (lo) to come to our quid faciemus? to ask, what we ſhould do? when we are able to do nothing. And then muſt one come, and (as we call it) ſpeak comfortably to us, that is, miniſter to us a little Divinity Ladanum, rather ſtupefactive for the preſent, than doing any ſound good: and ſo, take our leaves to go meet with ira ventura.

This way, this faſhion of repenting, S. John knew it not: it is far from his fructus dignos: S. Paul knew it not; it is far from his opera digna: and I can ſay little to it, but I pray GOD it deceive us not. It is not good trying concluſions about our ſouls. Here is the plain way, this is the ſtraight path laid out before us, by him that was ſent to prepare the wayes of the Lord, and to make his paths ſtraight: and go we which way we will, we ſhall hear the voyce behind us, crying to us, Hac eſt via, ambulate in eâ. Set your tree; bring forth your fruits; ſee to them: altogether unworthy they would not be; Somewhat worth, raiſed to ſome degree of worthineſſe. Eſay 40. 3. 30. 11.

Quod potuit fecit, did CHRIST accept of Mary Magdalens caſe; and quod habuit dedit, in the poor Widowes caſe, with her (but) two mites. We doing our endeavours to raiſe them, to what degree we can, He for His part, will not be behind, but relieve and help us out. For expectat Dominus, ut miſereatur noſtri; God (even) waits that He may have mercy on us: And therefore laying away His rigour, will not go exactly to work, but be ready to relieve and repute that worthy, that is not all our ſo. So in the Church of Sardi, we find, He ſaith, Non invenio opera tua plena, their works were not found to have the full poiſe, yet notwithſtanding He ſaith, digni enim ſunt, the Parties found worthy for all that. Mark 14. 8. Mark 12. 44. Eſay 30. 18. Revel. 3. 2. 4.

All the worth is not intrinſecal, to the thing it ſelf: VVhen all is ſaid that can be ſaid, that which makes all full, the chief part of their worth lyeth in digni habebuntur. It is therefore CHRISTS counſel, Orate, ut digni habeamini, Pray, they may be found in ſo good a degree towards it, as God may count them, and ſo accounting make them: Quanquam ſat digni ſi quos dignatur (ſaith the Chriſtian Poet,) in one Chapter, we have them both in the 2 Theſ. 2. counted worthy, at the 5 verſe: made worthy at the 11 verſe. Both come to one. Two words there are in the Greek ἀξίωσις and ἀξίωσις: Two in Latine, dignitas, and dignatio: And, as there is dignatio ex dignitate; So is there dignitas ex dignatione. And that is it: Worthy is the fruit, He ſo eſteemeth; But, upon the point, rather dignatione Ejus, than dignitate ſuâ, rather by His deigning or dignifying them; than by the intrinſecal, by their own dignity, they have in themſelves. Luke 20. 35. 21. 36.

Yet, let us never think, be ſo baſe as to conceive, He will hold for ſuch, any at all, let them be what they will, it skils not how worthleſſe, how far from all degrees toward it. No: But ſuch, as wherein He ſeeth ſome conſcience made, ſome care taken, ſome zealous deſire, ſome earneſt endevour appear. Some proffers (at leaſt) towards thoſe ſeven degrees, in 2 Corinth. 7. which may ſerve to aſſure our ſelves and to ſhew the world we dally not with Repentance, but make a ſerious matter of it, and go to it in 2 Cor. 7. 11.

good earneſt; In witneſſe whereof this and this fruit we have brought forth. Somewhat like yet, ſomewhat beſeeming perſons truly penitent, whereto he would ſay, ſufficit tibi gratia mea, My grace is 2 Cor. 12. 9. ſufficient for thee. And, in that we may reſt.

It remains, vve examine our ſelves, touching theſe points: [1] Our Repentance, is it like a live tree, and not a dull heavy mood, neither life nor ſoul in it? [2] Have vve ſet it on growing, brings it forth at all [3] Is it fruit, it brings forth? For, whatſoever elſe it is, it is not for S. Johns turne. [4] The fruit it brings, is it ought worth, for the quantity, the quality, the well laſting of it? GOD grant it be ſo, and thanks be to GOD, if it be ſo.

V. The fruit-time.

But this proferte will ask ſome time. Ionas Repentance vvas not like Ionas gourd. His gourd was up in a night, ſuddenly: trees come not up ſo quickly: they require more time than ſo. Never truſt a Repentance repentine; no ſudden flaſh or brunt. It is altogether an errour, to think; Repentance is a matter of no more moment, than to be diſpatched in a moment.
Ionah 4. 6:

There be tvvo vvords (words of vveight:) one is S. Peters, and that is σχολῆσαι τῆς μετανοίας to withdraw, go aſide, to retire, and be private, to ſequeſter our ſelves to our Repentance: The other S. Pauls
2 Pet. 3. 9. σχολάζειν προσευχῇ καὶ νηστείᾳ, to take us a time, nay, to make us a time, a vacant time, a time of leaſure to intend faſting and prayer, tvvo fruits of Repentance. I ask then, did vve never σχολῆσαι, withdraw our ſelves to that end? vvhat vvas the place, vvhere vve ſo did? did vve at any time σχολάζειν,
1 Cor. 7. 5. take any ſuch vacant time? vvhat vvas the time and vvhen, vve ſo did? I doubt ours hath been rather a flaſh, a qualme, a brunt, than othervviſe; rather, a gourd of Repentance, than any growing tree, A time there muſt needs be taken for this Proferte.

Now the time, S. JOHN gives, is, but while Ira ventura, the wrath to come is in comming. Ira ventura are two words: In that it is wrath, and GODS wrath, there is juſt matter of fear: In that it is ventura, to come, but to come, and not yet come; there is hope yet, ſome good may be done, before venit qua ventura, that come, that is to come.

If theſe fruits come, the wrath (when it comes) ſhall not come upon us, but paſſe by us, and not touch any fruit-bearing-tree. To take a time then.

Now, there cannot be a fitter time than that the Church hath ſet us forth; that is, (now) at this time of the year. For, now, is the time of the year to plant in it. In the picture of the moneths, the next moneth at hand, you ſhall ſee nothing but men grafting and ſetting trees: it is the Husbandry and buſineſs of the moneth: wonderful fitly choſen therefore, that this tree may keep time with the reſt. And, now is the time that the ſap goes up: So as there could not be a fitter time for S. JOHN to call upon us. Look abroad, they begin now to bring forth: now beſt ſpeaking for Proferte. To which Proferte, Differte is clean contrary. Defer it not then, but take the time while it is in ſeaſon.

And with high wiſedom is this time ſo ſet, that the time of our Repentance, the forty dayes of it end in the Paſſeover, in the paſſing of ira ventura over us, as did the deſtroying Anger over the houſes in Egypt. That the mortifying of ſin might end in the riſing of CHRIST in us. The uſe
Exod. 12. 12. of fruit is fruition: And this is the fruition in this life, even the fruits of the Spirit, fear and love and joy in the HOLY GHOST. And in the life to come, the fruit of the Tree of Life in the midſt of Paradiſe: in ſtead of Ira ventura, vita ventura, gaudia ventura, the glory and joy eternal of the life to come.

To which Life, Glory and Joy, brings us Almighty GOD.

PSALME LXXV. Ver. III.

Liquefacta eſt terra, & omnes qui habitant in ea: Ego confirmavi Columnas ejus.

The earth, and all the Inhabitants thereof are diſſolved: but I will eſtabliſh the Pillars of it.

IT was MOSES the Man of God, that, by ſpecial direction from GOD, firſt began, and brought up this order, to make Muſick the conveigher of mens duties into their minds (Deut. 31. 19.) And DAVID ſithence hath continued it, and brought it to perfection, in this Booke, as having a ſpecial grace and felicity in this kind: He, for Songs; and his Sonne SALOMON for Proverbs. By which two (that is) by the unhappy Adage, and by a wanton Song Satan hath ever breathed moſt of his infection and poiſon into the mind of man. Deut. 31. 19.

In which holy and heavenly uſe of his Harpe, he doth, by his tunes of Muſicke teach men how to ſet themſelves in tune (Pſal. 15.) How not onely to tune themſelves, but how to tune their houſholds (Pſal. 101.) And not onely there, but (here) in this Pſalme, how to preſerve harmony, or (as he termeth it) how to ſing Ne perdas, to a Common-wealth. So ſaith the Inſcription, which St. Auguſtine very fitly calleth the key of every Pſalme.

For, the time of ſetting this ſong (by general conſent of all Expoſitors) being the latter end of the long diſſenſion, between the Houſes of David and Saul; evident it is, the eſtate of the Land was very neare to a Perdas, and needed ne Perdas to be ſung unto it.

For, beſides the great overthrow in the Mountains of Gilboa, given by the enemy, wherein the King and three of his ſonnes were ſlain, and a great part of the Countrey ſurpriſed by the Philiſtin;
1 Sam. 31. 7. the Deſolation of a divided Kingdome, was come upon them too. For, within themſelves, they were at Cujus eſt terra? (2 Sam. 3. 12.) even at civil-wars: At the beginning, but a play; (So Abner termeth it, 2 Sam. 2. 14.) but bitterneſſe at the end, as the ſame Abner confeſſeth, verſ. 26. Surely, it was a weake State and low brought: So much doth David imply (in the fore-part of the verſe) that he found the Land a weak Land, by meanes, the ſtrength and Pillars of it, were all out of courſe, by the miſ-government of Saul. But then withal (in the latter part of the verſe) he profeſſeth, he will leave it a Land of ſtrength, by re-eſtabliſhing the Pillars, and re-edifying the State new again. The earth, &c.

The ſtile whereof runneth in the terms of Architecture: very aptly reſembling the government, to a frame of building; the ſame ſet upon and borne up by certain Baſes and Pillars (the ſtrength whereof aſſureth, or the weakneſſe endangereth the whole:) and David himſelf to a skilful Builder, ſurveying the Pillars, and ſearching into the decays; repairing their ruines, and ſetting them into courſe again.

The Diviſion.

Whereout ariſeth naturally the entreaty of theſe four points:

1 That the weakneſſe, or ſtrength of a Land, is a point of important conſideration.

2 That the ſtrength of a Land, is in the Pillars: And, what they are.

3 That the upholding of thoſe Pillars appertaineth to David.

4 How, and in what ſort Saul weakned them in his time; and David, in his, made them faſt.

I. Firſt, David had read, that among the inſtructions delivered by Moſes to the ſpies (Numb. 13. 19.) the very firſt and chief of all was, Whether the Land were weak or ſtrong. So he had read; and ſo he believed it to be: and, ſo it is. For ſure in ſuch Lands, where this is their ſong, The Earth is weak; their Muſick is all out of tune, For, the note is ſuch, as affecteth the Inhabitants with Pſal. 22. 14, 15. fear. 1. Fear, in the inhabitant, for theſe two, [1] Virtus teſtacea, and [2] Cor cereum, ſtrength like a potſheard; and a heart like wax: A weak Land, and a fearful Inhabitant go together. 2. Courage, in the enemie: For, where Rabſaketh knoweth but ſo much, that the Land is weake, you ſhall not intreat him to ſpeak any thing but Hebrew, (Eſay 36. 12.)

This Muſick is heavie: and therefore David ſaw, the ſong muſt be new ſet. And ſo he doth ſet it new, changeth it into a more pleaſant note, But I will ſtrengthen it. And when the note is ſo changed, in that day ſhall this Song be ſung in the Land of JUDA, We have a ſtrong City;
Eſay. 26. 1. Salvation hath GOD ſet, for the walls and bulwarks of it.

This Muſick hath life in it, and heartneth the inhabitant afreſh; quaileth the enemie, and reſolveth the neighbour to ſay, (1 Samuel 12. 18.) Thine are we, O David, and on thy ſide, thou ſonne of JESSE. When a Prince may ſay of his Land, as Moſes did of Juda, Deut. 33. 7. His own hands are ſufficient for him (if the Lord help him) againſt all his enemies: And the Land may ſay of the Prince, that which Salomon ſetteth down, as the high commendation of a Prince, that he is Rex
Prov. 30. 31. Alkum (that is) Ne ſurgito, riſe not; No riſing, againſt him; for that, they which have riſen, had better have ſate ſtill. And they both may ſend word to the enemie (if he threaten to come and viſit them) the word that Joas ſent (2 Reg. 14. 10.) Tarry at home, and provoke not evil againſt thy ſelfe. This Muſick is bleſſed; and ſuch hath hitherto been the ſong of our Nation.

What Samuel ſaid, when he pitched the Stone of Help (1 Sam. 7. 12.) we cannot deny, but we may ſay the ſame, Thus far hath God holpen us: whoſe arme is not ſhortned, though Pharaoh's heart be hardned. Hitherto, Salvation hath GOD ſet for our wals and bulwarks, and our Prince, Prince Alkum; and our enemie hath not boaſted himſelf at the putting off his armour, as at the 1 Reg. 20. 11. buckling it on: and our Neighbours glad to lay hold of our skirts and ſay, We will be yours, for we ſee, GOD is with you; (Zach. 8. 10.) The great bleſſing of GOD having been upon us (Deut. 28. 12.) Thou ſhalt lend to many Nations, but ſhalt borrow of none. Such hath hitherto been our ſong: and, ſuch may it long be; yea, ever, O LORD. And, that it may ſo be, David teacheth the way of keeping it ſo ſtill; Namely, by Setting faſt the Pillars of it. Which is the ſecond principal point: What this ſtrength is; and what the Pillars are that bear it up.

II. The HOLY GHOST ſpeaking of ſtrength, nameth two (Gen. 32. 28.) as (indeed) the Scripture knoweth no more: [1] The ſtrength of Jacob; and [2] the ſtrength of Iſrael: [1] Of Jacob, ſupplanting, or prevailing over men: [2] and of Iſrael, prevailing with GOD.

1 JACOB'S ſtrength I call, whatſoever the counſel or might of man affordeth; His prudent forecaſt, whereby he over-reached ESAU (Gen. 27. 36.) and LABAN (30. 37.) And his bow and ſword, whereby he wanne from the Amorite (Gen. 48. 10.) Under theſe two, I comprehend all humane ſtrength, the ſtrength of Jacob.

2 But, when all is done, we muſt reſerve and keep a ſtrength for GOD, ſaith David (Pſal. 59. 9.)
Nahum 3. 8. Who if he forſake Alexandria, though it have the Sea for his Ditch, it ſhall be carried captive: who if he he forſake Ephraim, though they be well harneſſed and carry bowes, they ſhall turn themſelves back in the day of battaile. Therefore, ever DOMINUS commeth in: (Deut. 33. 7.) Juda's own hands are ſufficient to help, Si tu DOMINE, If thou Lord help him againſt the enemie: And Niſi Dominus, If that the LORD doe not keep the houſe, and watch the houſe, and make faſt the Pillars, all is in vain (Pſal. 127. 1.) Joyn (ſaith the Wiſeman) Ittiel (that is, Dominus mecum;) and then, Veal (that is Prevalebo) will not tarry from you: Veal and He go ever together. Sever (ſaith David) Hii in curribus, Hii in equis, from in nomine Domini, the next newes, you ſhall hear of them, is, * Ibi ceciderunt, There they are brought down and fallen. Therefore we muſt allow Iſrael a ſtrength, alſo; without which, Jacobs fore-caſt ſhall fail: (for, He caſteth out the counſels of Princes, Pſal. 33. 10.) and his ſword too: For, He can rebate the edge of the ſword Pſal. 89. 43.

Pſal 77. 9.

* Pſal. 20. 8.

Two ſtrengths then there are: and theſe two DAVID (here) termeth two Pillars (that we may know what be the Pillars of the Land. For, ſuch was the manner of the Jewiſh building; archwiſe, upon two main pillars to ſet it. We may ſee it by Sampſons deſire, Judg. 16. 29. ſo to be placed, as the two Supporters of the Temple might be in his two hands, that bowing them, all the Church might come down upon their heads. Such an arch of government doth David here deviſe, and two Pillars bearing it up. He telleth us, they be two: and he telleth us, what they be; for, he hath already named them, in the two former Uſes: [1] Celebrabimus te JEHOVA in the firſt: And, [2] Juſtitias judicabo, in the ſecond. GOD, and Right, the pillars, The worſhip of God; and the execution of Juſtice or right. With theſe two he beginneth; and with theſe two again he taketh his farewel; the regard of Religion (in the ninth:) and the care of Juſtice (in the laſt.) Theſe two he teacheth us: For, theſe two (he ſaith) GOD taught him (2 Sam. 23. 3.) GOD (ſaith he) the ſtrength of Iſrael ſpake to me and ſaid, thou ſhalt bear rule over men, [1] Doing Juſtice, and [2] guiding them in the fear of God. So that theſe two are the Pillars: [1] GOD, and [2] Right, Juſtice, and the feare of God. Theſe two give ſtrength, to that, and to all Lands: [1] Celebrabimus te JEHOVA; and [2] Juſtitias judicabo. Theſe two decay all, and weaken the Land, [1] Neglegimus te Jehova; and [2] Injurias judicabo.

GOD is a Pillar; So, is His moſt common name, in the Hebrew ADONAI; My Pillar: and His Sonne, a Rock; Not onely Peters Rock (Matthew 16. 19.) but, Davids Rock too (2 Sam. 22. 2.) the Rock both of Church and Kingdome: And His Spirit, a Spirit, not of Holineſſe only and Truth; but, a Spirit of Judgment, to them that ſit on the Throne; and a ſpirit of ſtrength for them that keep the battaile from the gate, Eſay 28. 6. And his favour a ſhield, Pſalm 5. 10. and his NAME, turris fortiſſima, Proverbs 18. 10. And therefore Celebrabimus te JEHOVA, we will praiſe thy name. For, the neerer thy name is to us and we to it, the more wondrous works wilt thou declare towards us. Ariſe O God into thy Reſting place, Thou and the Arke of thy Strength, Pſal. 132. 8. therefore the Arke ſendeth forth a Strength. And Salomon when he called the two Pillars (which he ſet at the Temple gate) Strength and Steddineſſe, meant, that, out of that Gate, there proceeded Strength and Stabliſhing to the whole Realme; 1 Reg. 7. 21.

Jachin and Boaz.

Even the Strength and Stabliſhing of Si crediderit is Stabilientini, Eſay 7. 6. By which, not only the Devils darts are repelled in the Spiritual, Epheſ. 6. 16. but the armes of the aliens are put to flight in the earthly warfare, (Heb. 11. 34.) Therefore Moſes made ſuch reckoning of Celebrabimus, that having recounted (as the ſtrength of Cain's progeny) their inventing of the Tent, making of the Flute of braſſe, and iron works, Gen. 4. 20. he oppoſeth to them all, as able to match them all (in the poſterity of the Sons of God) the Invocation of his Name, begun and ſet on foot, firſt, by Enoch, verſe 26. as the main pillar of ſtrength which the People of God truſt to. And Saint Paul is bold, 1 Tim. 2. 1. Where, laying (as it wer) the Chamber-beames and ſtories of each Chriſtian Government; (Princes, firſt, by whoſe meanes Peace and Quietneſſe, from thence knowledge of the truth; from it, godly and honeſt life; and from them, Salvation;) As the baſe or Pillar of all, and that which beareth up, and giveth Strength to all, ſetteth prayer: prayer to be made, that ſo, Princes preſerved; that ſo, peace maintained; that ſo, knowledge intended; that ſo, a godly and honeſt life practiſed; that ſo, Salvation atteined. Reckoning invocation as a ſpecial pillar of each ſtate; And as a Prerogative Royal, prayer for all men, but above all men, for Princes. Thus doth Religion ſtrengthen us, and is Iſrael with God: And not with God onely, but is Jacob alſo, and prevaileth with men too.

Heb. 11. 34.

Indeed, nothing prevaileth ſo much, nor worketh ſo deep, with man, as doth it: And, no men more faſt and faithful, than quorum DEUS corda tetigit, 1 Samuel 10. 26. DAVID therefore, undertaking, in this verſe, to ſtabliſh the pillars; ſheweth, how he will doe it, in the next: Dicam, by telling them their duty out of Divinity; by laying before them Deus eſt judex, GODS judgement, and the dregges of the cup which He holdeth in His hand. To make ſo many men ſo many pillars, well and wiſely ſaid the Heathen man, Odium oportet peccandi non metum facias: To hate ſinne, is the pillar; to fear it, is not: for, fear will fall away, if his underſtanding be removed, and where the duty is not grounded on Deus eſt judex, it is no pillar to be built on. Certain it is, that (except GODS Law) all Lawes, fear of ſinne they breed; but a kind hatred or conſcience of ſinne, they breed not. Well may they binde the hand, fetter the foot, and impriſon the body; there is nothing can impriſon the heart or thought, ſave Arma militiæ noſtræ. And thus is Religion, a Pillar among them alſo.

For

1 Cor. 10. 4. For ſure, the Chriſtian duty of bearing wrong (where it is well perſwaded) doth mainely ſtrengthen the Civil, of doing no wrong: And, the Chriſtian, of departing with our own charitably, doth ſtrengthen the Civil of not taking other mens injuriouſly: And ſo, of the reſt. That he called it not amiſſe, that called Divinity the Back-bone of the Princes Law; and conſequently, Religion of the Common-wealth. So that, not only Moſes and Paul, by calling on the name of God; but, Elias and 2 King. 12. Jeremie, by teaching the will of God (Not by Prayer only, but by Preaching) are the one, an Iron Pillar (Ier. 1. 48) the other, the chariot and horſmen of Iſrael, in his time.

2 Now, if all men had faith, Dicam would have ſerved, and this one Pillar have been enough: But, becauſe all men have not Religion, but there be in the world evil and abſurd men (2 Theſ. 3. 2.) therefore needed the ſecond, therefore needed Juſtitias judicabo. Indeed, meliores ſunt, the better part be they quos dirigit amor, whom love leadeth: but plures ſunt, quos corrigit timor, the greater by far, that feare driveth: Even ſuch as will not be led with the cords of a man (that is,) inducements of Religion and reaſon, (Hoſ. 11. 4.) but they muſt be held with bit and bridle (that is) the curb of Juſtice, Pſal. 32. 9.

VVhich kind of men are of two ſorts (therefore is it Juſtitias.) 1. The enemie or Egyptian ſmi- Exod. 2. 11. 13. ting Iſrael, from without. 2. The Injurious Iſraelite wronging his brother; from within. VVhy then, Sit nobis Rex, ſay the people, 1 Sam. 8. 20. (which is a perfect comprehenſion of this pillar of Juſtice) to do them right: And to defend them by VVar, when need is, againſt the forreine enemie; by Juſtice, when cauſe is, againſt the domeſtical oppreſſor. Againſt the one, Iehoſaphat placeth garriſons (2 Chro. 17. 2.) that is, againſt outward hoſtilitie: Againſt the other, he ordaineth Iudges (2 Chron. 19. 5.) that is, inward injury.

Dicens Cyro (ſaith God) Paſtor meus, &c. (Eſay 44. 28.) which ſay to Cyrus (the mighty Monarch) thou art my Shepheard. A Shepheard, by paſtoral Juſtice, To ſee the flock ſafe from without, and quiet from within. From without, To keep the wild Boar of the Forreſt from ſpoiling our lives and goods (Pſalm 80. 13.) and from within, the ravenous Wolfe from making havock of our ſoules (Acts 20. 29.) Will you know, what theſe two mean? O my people, (ſaith God) Remember what Balak the King hath deviſed againſt you (ſpeaking of a forreine Prince, of the Bore.) And what Balaam hath Mic. 6. 5. anſwered him (ſpeaking of a falſe Prophet, of the Wolfe.) The caſe is very like ours, and God grant us a thankful remembrance and meditation of it: Of the long intelligence between Balack and Balaam, for our overthrow; and how graciouſly and marvellouſly God hath delivered us:

Verſ. 45. 3. Now, as without the fold, theſe beaſts be buſie, and God therefore hath girt the Prince with a Ezek. 34. 20. ſword: So, within, alſo, there are certain fed Rammes (ſaith Ezekiel) that with their hornes, puſh; and with their heeles, lay out againſt the poore weake ſheep (that with vis and fraus, deceit and violence, keep evil rule within;) againſt whom He hath given into their right hand a Scepter, That, by Pſal. 4. 5, 6. the arreſt of the Scepter, they might be quiet from within; and by the edge of the ſword, ſafe from without: So intending the myſterie of godlineſſe, and the knowledge thereof, and after it, the exer- 1 Tim. 3. 9. ciſe of godlineſſe, and the practice thereof; that ſo after Stabiliatur Regnum meum in this life, by 4. 7. Juſtice, we may come to Adveniat Regnum tuum in the life to come, by Religion. And this is the ſecond pillar yeelding us Jacobs ſtrength, who (as we ſaid) was furniſhed both with his Staffe, to ſee Gen. 32. 10. 48. good order in his flock, and with his ſword and bow againſt the Amorite.

Thus have we the two pillars of the earth, each ſtrengthening other: Religion rooting Juſtice within; Juſtice fencing Religion without, and they both making an arch of government irremovable.

III. Yet, theſe two Pillars as ſtrong and as ſteady as they are, except they be looked to, and upheld; except they have an Upholder; and that a good one, Religion will cleave, and Juſtice bend, and they both ſinck, and the whole frame with them. Therefore mention is made here of a perſon, put in truſt, with the bearing them up; which is the third point.

Which Perſon, is here, Ego autem, the firſt; that is, David; the firſt and the chiefe Perſon in any government. He it is upon whom both theſe leane: He is the Head, that guideth theſe two armes. 2 Sam. 15. 17. He the breath of life in both theſe noſthrils: Yea, of all the body (ſaith Ieremy of Ioſias.) Even Chriſtus Lam. 4. 20. Domini, the Annointed of the Lord, is the breath of all our noſthrils.

Familiar it is, and but meane, but very full and forceable, the Simile of Eſay: wherein he compa- Eſay 22. 23. reth the Prince to a naile driven into a wall, whereon are hanged all both the veſſels of ſervice, and the Inſtruments of Muſick; (that is) He beares them up all. And great cauſe to deſire God, faſt may it ſtick and never ſtirre (this naile:) for, if it ſhould, all our Cuppes would batter with the fall, and all the Muſick of our Quire be marred: (that is) both Church and Countrey be put in danger. VVhich GOD willing to ſhew (ſaith Philo Iudæus) he did place the fifth Commandement (which is the Crown-commandement) ὡς ἐν μεσορίῳ, as it were, in the middle, and confines of both Tables. Thoſe touching Religion, and thoſe touching Juſtice; that, with one arme He might ſtay Religion, and with the other ſtay Juſtice, and ſo uphold both.

And, where ſuch ſupport hath wanted, both have lyen on the ground. For, both of Mica's Idolatrie (that is, corrupt Religion) and of the villany offered at Gibeah, and of the outrage committed by them of Dan, both in rifling houſes, and ſacking whole Townes (that is) of open injuſtice, God rendereth no cauſe but this, Non erat Rex: the Pillars went down: Ego wanted. VVithout which (that is, an eſtabliſhed government) we ſhould have no Common-wealth, but a wild forreſt, where

Nim-

Nimrod and his crew would hunt and chase all others: No Commonwealth, but a Pond, where the great fish would devoure the small: Nothing but a sort of sheep scattered without a Shepheard (saith Moses.) No more Oves Pascuæ, sheep of the Pasture, when their Governour is gone, but Oves occisionis, sheep for the slaughter. Non populus, sed turba, No People, but a rout. No building, nor Pillars, but a heap of stones. Therefore a joyful noise is the shout of a King among them. Gen. 10. 9. Abac. 1. 14. Num. 27. 17. Psal. 95. 7. Psal. 44. 22. Num. 23. 21.

Joyful indeed every way; but joyful especial, if this Ego, be not Saul, but David. David, which giveth strength unto the Pillars, and not Saul, an impairer or Hinderer of them. It is David's complaint, in the fore-part, he found the land weak, when he came to it. So, Saul had left it. It is his promise that, as Saul by his slackness, had brought the estate low: So he, by his vigilancy, would raise it up again. And this is the last point, how Saul decayed, and David restored the Pillars again.

The Wiseman saith, that evil looking to, will decay the principals of any building: and that was Saul's defect (as the Scripture recordeth.) Religion first: Instead of Celebrabimus, Negligimus JEHOVAM. King David, in his oration to the States of his Realm before his first Parliament, testifieth, the Ark was not sought to in the dayes of Saul: That Pillar, was not looked to. Sought to it was, after a sort (Religion:) but nothing so as it should. Come let us bring the Ark (saith he.) And then, Go to, if it like not greatly; carry it back again: which, what was it, but to play fast and loose with Religion? To mock God (as Felix saith) at our idle time; and not to Redeem time, to that end? Judge of Religion's case, by the reverence of the Ephod: A daughter of his own bringing up (Mical) saw David, for honour of the Ark, wear it, and despised him in her heart. Judge of it by the regard of the Priest, the keeper of the Ark: For very love to it, that calling was kept so low and base, that they were tied to the allowance of their Shew-bread, the High priest had not a loaf in his house besides. This was the first foot of his kingdome: The Ark not sought to: The Ephod in contempt, the Priest-hood impoverished: Et Saulo nihil horum curæ, and Saul regarded not any of these things. IV. Eccl. 10. 18. 1 Chr. 13. 3. 1 Sam. 14. 18. 19. Act. 24. 25. 2 Sam. 6. 20. 1 Sam. 21. 42 Act. 19. 27.

Such another indifferency for Church matters, we find in Jeroboam. Tush (saith he jestingly) let them kisse the calves, and spare not. Let it go which way it will. But therefore God sends him word by Abijah, that Israel should be like a reed in the water, bowing to and fro, at the devotion of every wave, and every wind, without any steadinesse. And was it not so? Search the Chronicles. So GOD saw this mind in Saul to His Ark, and was wroth; with-drew from him his religious and good spirit, and sent upon him a prophane and furious spirit; which carried him on, first to a sinful life; and never left him, till it had brought him to a shameful death. And God was even saying his disperdar, to the Kingdom, but David (here) entreated for a (Ne perdas) and promised a better care of Celebrabimus Jehovam. Hos. 13. 2. 1 Reg. 14. 15. Deut. 33. 27.

Now where Religion thrives not, the other (of Justice) will not hold long: when one staffe is broken, the other holdeth not whole, long after. And surely his Justice was suitable to the former, to his weak regard of Religion; That also was weak too. Zach. 11. 4.

1 Weak toward the enemy: It is said, there was want of necessary furniture of armour and munition, in his dayes. And there had been defect, in teaching them to shoot: which David supplied at his entrance. 1 Sam. 13. 19. 2 Sam. 1. 18.

2 Weak at home too: where, he did not justitias, but injurias judicare.

The parts of Justice are two (as we find in the tenth Verse.) To exalt the horns of the righteous; and to break the horns of the wicked:

1 For the first. Reason was, and so was promised too, that David should have been rewarded with Merob his eldest daughters mariage. I know not how, one Adriel (an obscure fellow, never to have been nam'd; but to shew, such a one put David by) had his horn exalted above him. This for reward. 1 Sam. 28. 17, 19.

2 And his punishment was no better. Merciful to Agag (whose hornes should have been broken) and in Abimelechs case, too rigorous, putting him, and eighty four more, to the sword for a dozen of bread. 1 Sam. 15. 9.

And whereas, in kindly justice, the rigour of frangam cornua commeth not at first, but Clemency giveth gracious warning, with Dicam imprudentibus (verse 4.) So without regard hereof, as upon any displeasure, without any word at all, his Iavelin went straight to nail men to the wall, they knew not, wherefore. Thus did justice decay after Religion, and one Pillar fall upon another, whereof ensued his overthrow, and the Land dangerously sick of the Palsey. Whereof David complaineth, and prayeth; Heal the sores thereof, for it shaketh. 2 Sam. 22. 17. 1 Sam. 18. 11. 19. 10. 20. 33. Psal. 60. 2.

Now, David, as when he read Abimelechs mishap in the Book of the Iudges, he made his use of it as appeareth, 2 Sam. 11. 21. So here, when he saw, what had turned Saul to damage, took warning by it (Ruina precedentium, admonitio sequentium,) and to make the Land strong, falleth to underset the Pillars.

And first, of the first (that is) the stone which Saul and his builders cast aside. For, comming to the Kingdome, he consecrates all his Laws, with his Act De Archa reducendâ: whereat he would needs be present in his own person, because it touched Celebrabimus Iehovam; and that with some disgrace, as Mical imagined: but he was resolute in that point, He could receive no dishonour, by doing honour to God's Ark. And, when it was brought back, set such an order for the service of it, by the Levites; for maintenance so bountiful; so reverend for regard; so decent for order; so every way sufficient, as the care of the Temple might seem to reign in his heart. As indeed it did; and as he professeth, he could not sleep, till he had set a full order for Gods matters, and brought this Pillar to perfection. 1 Chron. 13. 1 Chron. 26.

For, dicam is the charme he ſpeaketh of: which (if the viper ſtop not

Thus did David repaire Sauls ruines; theſe are his ſteppes, thus did he ſhew Himſelfe as good as his promiſe (here) a Skilful Upholder of theſe two maine Pillars, which beare up and give ſtrength to every Land. And by this meanes, he changed both the Nature and Name of his Country; finding it Iebus (that is) conculcata, (and ſo, indeed, it was a City contemned and trodden downe with every foot:) And leaving it a new name, Ieruſalem; and ſo it was Salem Ieru; a City to be feared and envied of all round about it. So, the land grew ſtrong, and the Pillars faſt; and David, for his faſting, in favour with God and man. GOD, whom he praiſed, graciouſly aſſiſting him; and men, whom he preſerved, willingly ſerving him.

The LORD who hath ſent forth the like ſtrength for our Land, ſtabliſh the good thing which He hath wrought in us. The LORD ſo faſten the Pillars of our earth, that they never be ſhaken. The LORD mightily uphold the Upholder of them, long and many years. That we may go forth rejoycing in his ſtrength, and make our boaſt of his praiſe, all our life long. Which our gracious God, &c.

A SER.

A SERMON PREACHED BEFORE QU. ELIZABETH AT GREENVVICH.

On the Four and twentieth of February, An. Dom. 1590.
Being St. MATTHIA's Day.

PSALM LXXVII. VER. XX.

Thou didſt lead thy People like Sheep, by the hand of Moſes and Aaron.

SOme, either preſent or imminent danger, and that no ſmall one, had more than uſually diſtreſſed the Prophet at the writing of this Pſalm; wherewith his ſpirit, for a while being toſſed to and fro in great anguiſh (as may appear by thoſe three great billows in the 7, 8, 9, Verſes) yet at laſt he cometh to an Anchor (in the tenth Verſe) upon the remembrance of the right hand of the moſt High: Which right hand in one even tenor, throughout all ages, not onely to that of Davids, but even to this of ours, hath ever ſhewed it ſelf a right hand of pre-eminence and power, in the two points in the latter part of the Pſalm ſpecified, the ſpecial matter of his and all our comfort. 1. The final confuſion of his enemies, though for a while exalted (until this Verſe.) 2. The final deliverance of his people, though for a while diſtreſſed (in this Verſe.) Which twain, of many Pſalms are the ſubſtance, and of this now before us; and indeed, all the whole ſtory in a manner is nothing elſe but a Calender of theſe two. That the Lord of Hoſts, the God of Iſrael, is El Nekamoth, a God of Vengeance againſt his enemies; and but a letter changed, is El Nechamoth, a God of Comfort unto his people: That his Cherubims hold a flaming ſword to repreſs the one, and have their wings ſpread to ſhadow and ſuccor the other: That his Creatures; the cloud from above is a miſt of darkneſs to confound the Egyptians; and the ſame cloud a pillar of light to conduct the Iſraelites: That the water from beneath, to the Egyptian is a gulf to devour them, but to the Iſraelite, a wall of defence on their right hand and on their left. We need not to ſeek far; in the Pſalm next before, and again in the Pſalm next after this, you ſhall finde theſe two coupled; as (indeed) for the moſt part they go ſtill together. Exod. 14. 22.

And as they go ſtill together, ſo ſtill they end in the ſafeguard of the Church. Of all Prophecies, of all judgment, of all miracles, paſt or preſent, new or old, that is the Key and Concluſion. The laſt Verſe (if I may ſo ſay) of the Deluge was the Rainbow; of the Egyptian bondage, was the Feaſt of Paſſover; and even here in this Pſalm, after it hath, in the four Verſes next before, rained and poured down, and lightned and thundred, and Heaven and Earth gone together, there doth in this Verſe enſue a calm to Gods people. This is the bleſſed period that ſhutteth up the Pſalm: Thou that hated thy people, or dealt unkindly with thy ſervants, them thou drowneds̄t and deſtroyeds̄t. But, Thy people thou leadeſt like ſheep by the hands of Moſes and Aaron.

And in theſe two, may all Kingdoms and Countreys read their own deſtinies, what they are to hope for, or to fear, at the hands of God. If they be Lo-ammi not his people, they may look back, what they finde in the Verſes before, and that is ſtorm and tempeſt. If they be his (and we I truſt are his; and more and more his, he daily make us) this Verſe is for us, that is, ſafe and quiet conduct: Thou didſt lead thy, &c.

The Sum. In which Verſe there is mention of three perſons: 1. God. 2. Gods hand. 3. Gods people. 4. And of a bleſſing of benefit iſſuing from the firſt (that is) God; conveyed by the ſecond (that is) Gods hands, Moſes and Aaron; and received by the third (that is) Gods people; and it is the benefit of good guiding or government. This is the ſum of the Verſe.

The Diviſion. As for order, I will ſeek no other, than as the Holy Ghoſt hath marſhalled the words in the Text it ſelf; which of it ſelf is right exact; every word in the body of it containing matter worth the pauſing on.

1. Firſt, in the foremoſt word. Tu, God, who vouchſafed this benefit.
2. And ſecondly, in Duxiſti: The benefit it ſelf of guiding from him derived.
3. And thirdly, Derived to his people the parties that receive it.
4. And fourthly, Derived to his people by his hands, which hands are Moſes and Aaron, the means that convey it.

I. Thou leadeſt thy people, &c.

The firſt part. Thou. TO begin with God; who beginneth the Verſe, by whom and to whom we lead and are led, and in whom all right leading both beginneth and endeth.

It is Thou (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) that leadeſt thy people; and (in the next Pſalm) it is He that carried his people in the Wilderneſs like a flock; who is that He, or this Thou? It is God, ſaith the Prophet in the ſixteenth Verſe.

That is; whoſoever be the hands, God is the perſon, he is the Tu. Whoſe names ſoever we hear; whoſe hands ſoever we feel; whoſe countenance ſoever we behold; we muſt yet look up higher, and ſee God in every Government. To him we muſt make our Apoſtrophe, and ſay, Thou leadeſt, &c. For he it is leadeth properly; and, in ſtrict propriety of ſpeech, Moſes and Aaron lead not; but God, by the hands of Moſes and Aaron. And that thus it is, that God is the perſon that leadeth, and all other but hands under him and unto him, the Prophet giveth us in this ſame Verſe, matter of three marks of difference, between him and them.

1. The firſt is in Duxiſti, Thou didſt lead (ſaith the Prophet:) Didſt and doeſt lead; didſt then, and doeſt ſtill: But, Thou didſt lead by Moſes and Aaron; ſo doeſt thou not now. The hands are changed: then, Moſes and Aaron; after, Joſhua and Eliazar; after, Othoniel and Phinees; after, others: Sed tu Idem es, But thou art the ſame ſtill, and thy years ſhall not fail: As if he ſhould ſay, Their years (indeed) fail, and come to an end; within ſo many years they were not ſo led, and within ſo many more they ſhall not be. But God hath a Prerogative, That he is Rex à Sæculo, and Rex in Sæculum; Was our King of old, and ſhall be our King for ever and ever.

Pſal.102. 27. Pſal.74. 12. & 146. 10.

2. The ſecond is in Populum tuum, Thy people; another limitation. For, this people are (in the fifteenth Verſe before) ſaid to be the ſons of Jacob and Joſeph: So far ſtretcheth Moſes line, and no further. But, Tu Duxiſti, Gods line, ivit in omnem terram, goeth over all Nations, even to the uttermoſt parts of the world. Gods leading hath no marches: This people, and all people are his; and he by ſpecial Prerogative is Rex univerſæ terræ, King (not of one people, or of one Country or Climate, but) of all the people of the whole earth.

Pſal. 19. 4. Pſal.47. 7.

3. The third is, Per manus, By the hands. For as he guideth the people by the hands, ſo he guideth the hands themſelves, by whom he guideth: Ruleth by them, and ruleth them; ruleth by their hands, and ruleth in their hearts: Is both the Shepherd of Iſrael, leading them like ſheep; and further leadeth Joſeph alſo (their Leader) tanquam ovem, like a ſheep: That is, they be Reges Gentium, Kings of the Nations, but he is Rex Regum, King over Kings themſelves. Moſes and they with him be ἡγεμόνοι, Guides (as St. Paul calleth them;) but Jeſus Chriſt is ἀρχηγός, the Arch-guide. Aaron and his family be ποιμένες, Shepherds (as St. Peter termeth them;) but Jeſus Chriſt is ἀρχιποίμην, the High and Soveraign Shepherd over all. Why then, Dicite in Gentibus, Tell it out among the Nations (ſaith the Prophet) that God is King; that he is the Tu, the Leader, the perpetual, the univerſal, principal Leader of his people.

Pſal.80. 1. 1 Tim.6.15. Heb. 13. 14. & 12. 2. 1 Pet. 5. 4. Pſal.96. 10.

From which plain note (that the Lord is Ruler) the Pſalmiſt himſelf draweth a double uſe, containing matter both of comfort and fear.

Pſal.97. 1. 1. Of Comfort; (in the ninety ſeven Pſalm) Dominus regnavit, exultet terra: The Lord is Ruler (or Leader) let the earth rejoyce.

2. Of

2. Of fear (in the Ninety nineth Pſalme) Dominus regnavit, contremiſcat Populus: The Lord is Ruler (or Leader) let the people tremble. Pſal. 99. 1.

First, From Gods ruling, matter of joy. For if we will be ruled by him, he will appoint over us, a Ruler according to his own heart, he will prevent her with the bleſſings of goodneſs: He will deliver the power of Siſera into her hands: He will cloath her enemies with ſhame, and make her crown flouriſh on her head, and ſet the days of her life as the days of Heaven. 1. 1 Sam. 13. 14. Pſal. 21. 4. & 132. 18. & 89. 29.

Secondly, Matter of fear too. The Lord is Ruler, let the people tremble: For if they fall to be unruly, he can vindemiare ſpiritum principum, as eaſily gather to him the breath of a Prince, as we can ſlip off a clutter from the Vine. He can ſend them a Rehoboam without wiſdom; or a Jeroboam without Religion; or Aſſour (a ſtranger) to be their King; or (which is worſt of all) Nullum Regem, a diſordered Anarchy; quia non timuimus Jehovam. Therefore exultantes & trementes in joy and trembling, let us acknowledge God and his ſupream leading, that our parts may be long in Dominus regnavit, exultet terra. The Lord doth lead us, let the Land rejoyce. 2. Pſal. 99. 1. & 96. 13. Hoſ. 10. 3.

Yet one point more, out of this Tu. By comparing it with the Verſes before, on which it dependeth: That as it is the Perſon, and Power of God that is chief in every rule; ſo, not every power, but even that very power of his, whereby he worketh wonders. For the Prophet (in the Fourteenth Verſe) having ſaid of God; Thou art the God that doeſt wonders, and ſo particularizing, Thou thundreſt from Heaven; Thou ſhakeſt the Earth; Thou divideſt the Sea; at laſt cometh to this Thou, Thou leadeſt the people. Very ſtrange it is, that he ſhould ſort the leading of the people with Gods wonders, and that not onely among them all, but after them all, as chief of all. Recount the Government of the people, as if it were ſome ſpecial miracle: And indeed, a miracle it is; and whoſoever ſhall look into the nature and weight of a Monarchy, will ſo acknowledge it. The Rod of Government is a miraculous Rod; both that of Moſes, for it would turn into a Serpent, and back again; and Aarons Rod too, for of a dry and ſear ſtick, it came to bloſſom again, and to bear ripe Almonds: To ſhew, that every Government is miraculous, and containeth in it matter of wonder, and that in two reſpects. Verſ. 14, 18, 19. Exod. 4. 3. Numb. 17. 8.

For, whereas there is naturally in every man a ſeeking his own eaſe; to lie ſoaking in his broth (as Ezekiel ſpeaketh;) not to be cuſtos fratris, nor to afflict and vex his ſoul with the care of others: It is ſurely ſupernatural, to endure that cark and care which the Governors continually do (a matter that we inferiors can little skill of;) but to read Eâ nocte dormire non potuit Rex: Such a night the King could not ſleep: And again, ſuch a night no meat would down with the King, and he liſted not to hear any Muſick. To endure this (I ſay) is ſupernatural, and it is God, which above all nature, by his mighty Spirit worketh it in them. 1. Ezek. 11. 3. Gen. 4. 9. Eſther 6. 1. Dan. 6. 18.

Again, whereas there is, in every inferior, a natural wildneſs or unwillingneſs to brook any Ruler, or Judge over them (as was told Moſes flatly to his face;) for, by nature, the people are not like ſheep: It is not (certainly) any power of man, but a meer ſupernatural thing, to keep the Nations of the Earth in ſuch aw and order, as we ſee them in. Quis poteſt (ſaith Solomon) who is able to manage this mighty multitude, ſo huge in number, ſo unruly in affection? Nonne poteſtatem habeo? Have not I power (ſaith Pilate) but our Saviour Chriſt very fitly telleth him, Power he hath indeed, but it is not innata, but data deſuper: and except it were given him from above, he ſhould have none at all. It is Tu duxiſti that doth it; Even thou, O Lord, and thine Almighty power that holdeſt them under. And very fitly from the wonder in appeaſing the Sea (in the laſt verſe before) doth the Prophet paſs (in this) to the leading of the people: Their natures are alike; himſelf in one Verſe matcheth them, Thou ruleſt the raging of the Sea, and the noyſe of the Waves, and the madneſs of the people. That is, no leſs unruly and enraged, by nature, is the multitude, than the Sea. No leſs it roareth, Dirumpamus vincula eorum, and Nolumus hunc regnare ſuper nos, when God unlooſeth it. Of one and the ſame power, it proceedeth to keep them both within their banks: thou that calmeſt the one, charmeſt alſo the other. 2. Numb. 16. 13. 1 Reg. 3. 9. John 19. 10. & 19. 11. Verſ. 19. Pſal. 65. 7.

Wherefore when we ſee that careful minde in a Prince (I will uſe Moſes own words) to carry a people in her arms, as if ſhe had conceived them in her Womb, as no Nurſe, nor Mother more tender: And again, when we ſee the tumultuous and tempeſtuous body, this ſame Sea of popularity kept in a quiet calm, and infinite millions ebbing and flowing (as it were) that is, ſtirring and ſtanding ſtill, arming and diſarming themſelves, killing and being killed, and all at the monoſyllables of one perſon. Go, and they go; Come, and they come; Do, and they do it: Let us ſee God ſenſibly in it, and the power of God, yea, the miraculous power of God, and ſay with the Prophet, Thou art the God that doeſt wonders; thou leadeſt thy people like ſheep, by the hands of Moſes and Aaron And ſo much for the firſt part, firſt word, and perſon. Numb. 11. 12. Matth. 8. 9.

The ſecond word compriſeth the benefit iſſuing from God, which is a leading or conduct, the ſecond part. A word of great compaſs, and includeth many leadings under it. For, to be our Jehovah Niſſi, our Standard-bearer, and to lead our forces in the field; to be our Wonderful Counſellor, and to lead that honorable Board; to ſit in the midſt of our Judges, and to lead them in giving ſentence: All theſe, and more than theſe, are all in duxiſti; and all theſe are eſpecial favors; but the chief of all, and that whereof all theſe are but the train, is the leading us in his heavenly truth, and in the way of his Commandments, to the Land of the living. All the reſt attend upon this; this is chief, and therefore the leading of principal intendment. II. The ſecond part. Duxiſti. Exod. 17. 15. Iſai. 9. 6. Pſal. 82. 1.

And in his leading there be theſe four points. For that it be a leading, it muſt be orderly without ſtraying, skilfully without erring, gently without forcing, and certainly without miſſing our journeys end. Firſt, Orderly without ſtraying: Led, and not wandered. Secondly, skilfully without erring: Led, and not miſled. Thirdly, gentle without forcing: Led, and not drawn. Fourthly, certainly without miſſing: Led, and not led about, ever going, but never coming to our place of repoſe.

1. In the first whereof, we are but let see, the wandring and stay-less state we were in, till God vouch-

Sap. 1. 12. World, wandring in vanity, picking up straws, and things that shall not profit them, Seeking death in the error of their life, till God look mercifully upon them, and from this wilde wandring, reduce them into the right way.

2. Which right way is the second point; for else, it is not Duxisti, but Seduxisti; and as good no leadVerse 13. ing at all, as misleading. Now this right-way, if we ask where it lieth, the Prophet will tell us, Thy way, O God, is in the Sanctuary; that is, It is the Word of God which is the Loadstar, when God is the Leadsman. Sicut Oves it must be, and this is the voice of the true Shepherd, to be listned to of all his Exod. 14. flock, that will not rove and run headlong into the Wolfs den. This is the Pillar of the Cloud, in regard of this people here, to be kept in view of all those that will not perish in the Wilderness, wherein is no path. Indeed it is both; first, the Pillar of the Cloud before, directing us in the day; secondly, and the Voice of the Shepherd behinde us (as Isaiah saith) telling us when we miss, and crying, Hæc est via,
Isai.30. 21. ambulate in eâ, This is the way, the right way, walk in it.

3. And in this way, our guiding must be milde and gentle: Else it is not Duxisti, but Traxisti; drawing and driving, and no leading. Leni spiritu, non durâ manu, rather by an inward sweet influence to be led, than by an outward extream violence to be forced forward: So did God lead this people here. Not
Deut. 1. 2. the greatest pace (I wis) for they were a year marching that, they might have posted in eleven days, as Exod.13. 18. Moses saith. No, nor yet in the nearest way neither, as Moses telleth us: For, he fetched a compass divers times; as all wise Governors by his example must do, that desire rather safely to lead, than hastily Isai.63. 14. to drive forward. The Spirit of God leadeth this people (saith Isaiah) as an Horse is ridden down the Hill into a Valley; which must not be a gallop, lest Horse and Ruler both come down one over another; but warily and easily: And Sicut Oves still giveth us light, seeing the Text compareth it to a sheep-gate.
Gen.33. 13. Touching which kinde of Cattel to very good purpose, Jacob (a skilful Shepherd) answereth Esau (who would have had Jacob and his flocks have kept company with him in his hunting pace.) Nay not so Sir, (said Jacob) it is a tender Cattel, that is under my hands, and must be softly driven, as they may endure; if one should over-drive them but one day, they would all die, or be laid up for many days after. Indeed,
1 Reg.12. 11. Rehoboam left ten parts of his flock behinde, onely for ignorance of this very point in Duxisti. For, when in boisterous manner he chased them before him, telling them what yokes he would make for them (a far unmeet occupation for a Prince to be a yoke-maker) they all shrunk from him presently, and falsified his propheste clean. For whereas he told them sadly, His little finger should be as big as his Fathers whole body, it fell out clean contrary; for, his whole body proved not so big as his Fathers little finger. A gentle leading it must be; and in the beginning, such was the course. Therefore ye have the Kings of Canaan in Numb.12. 3. Genesis, for the most part called by the name of Abimeleth, that is, Pater Rex, a King in place, a Father in affection. Such was Moses our Leader here, a meek man above all the men on the earth: Such was 2 Sam.3. 39. David himself, who full bitterly complaineth, Ah these sons of Zervia are too hard, too full of execution
Psal. 72. 6. for me. And (to end this point) thus describeth he his good Prince (in the Seventy two Psalm) He shall come down (not like hail-stones on a house top, but) like the dew into a fleece of wooll; that is, sweetly and mildly, without any noise or violence at all.

Last of all. All this reducing and right leading and gentle leading, must end in an end; they must Psal.23. 2. not go and go still in infinitum, that is, no leading but tyring out-right. It must be Sicut Oves, whom the good Shepherd (in the Three and twentieth Psalm) leadeth to a place, and to a place meet for them, where there is green pasture by the waters of comfort: So was it in this people here. They were led out of Egypt to sacrifice to God, and to learn his Law in the Mount of God, Sinai; and from thence also to Sion it self, his own rest, and holy habitation. And even so our people are led from the wandrings of this world, unto Psal.73. 24. the Folds of Gods Church, where (as the Prophet saith in the Seventy third Psalm) first, God will a while guide them with his counsel, and after will receive them into his glory. And this is the end of all leading:
Eccles.1. 2. To bring us all from the vain proffers of the world, which we shall all finde (as Solomon found it) vanitas vanitatum & omnia vanitas, to the sound comfort of His Word in this Book, which is indeed veritas veritatum & omnia veritas: In the knowledge and practice whereof when they shall have fulfilled their course here, God will bring them to his own rest, to his heavenly Jerusalem, where is and ever shall be felicitas felicitatum & omnia felicitas.

Psal.78. 54. But in this life here, we come no further than the borders of his Sanctuary, (as he telleth us in the next Psalm) in the way whereof, if God lead us constanter, constantly; not after our wanton manner, out and in when we list, all the other inferior leadings shall accompany this one; for, this leading leadeth them all. He shall lead our Counsellors, that they shall advise the counsels of his own heart: He shall lead our Judges, that they shall pronounce the judgments of his own mouth: He shall lead our forces into Edom, the strong Cities and holds of the enemy: He shall lead our Navy in the Sea, by unknown paths, to the place it would go; and I can say no more. Thorow all the dreads and dangers of the world, thorow the perils of the Red Sea, thorow the perils of the Desart, thorow the malice of all our enemies: He shall Psal.27. 17. safely lead us, and surely bring us to his promised Kingdom, where we shall see the goodness of the Lord, in the Land of the living. And this is the benefit, and thus much for that part.

The third part. Populum tuum. Populum Deut.32.6. The value of which benefit we shall the better esteem, if we consider the state of the parties, on whom it is bestowed, set down in these words, Populum Tuum; which is the third part. That all this good is for the people, worthy not so much as the least part of it. For, what is the people? Let Moses speak (for,

(for, he knew them) Siccine populo ſtulte & inſipiens? And Aaron too (for, he had occaſion to try them) This people is even ſet on miſchief; and (if you will) David alſo, Inter Beſtias populorum. And to conclude, God himſelf, Populus iſte dura cervicis eſt. This is the people. We may briefly take a view of all theſe. Exod. 32. 22. Pſal. 68. 30. Exod. 32. 9. & 33. 3.

Will you ſee the folly and giddineſs of this multitude? Ye may, Acts 19. there, they be at the Town-houſe, ſome crying one thing, ſome another; and the more part knew not why they were come together. Therefore Moſes truly ſaid, it was a fond and giddy-headed people. Acts 19. 32.

Will ye ſee the brutiſhneſs of the people? In Acts 22. you ſhall ſee them taking up a cry, upon a word ſpoken by St. Paul, and caſting off their cloaths, and throwing duſt into the air, as if they were quite decayed of reaſon; that David truly might ſay, Inter beſtias populorum. Acts 22. 23.

Will ye ſee the ſpight and malice of the people? In the Sixteenth of Numbers, for Corahs death they challenge Moſes and Aaron, ye have perſecuted and killed the people of the Lord. Yet neither did Moſes once touch them, but God himſelf from Heaven, by viſible judgment, ſhewed them to be as they were. Neither were Corah and his crew, the people of God, but the ſons of Belial. But that is their manner, in deſpight of Moſes, if for ought they like him not, preſently to canonize Corah and his complices, and make them the Saints of God. That Aaron ſaid truly of them, This people is even ſet on miſchief. Numb. 16. 41.

Laſtly, If ye will ſee their head-ſtrongneſs, look upon them in the Eighth of the Firſt of Samuel, where having phanſied to themſelves an alteration of eſtate, though they were ſhewed plainly by Samuel, the ſundry inconveniences of the Government, they ſo affected, they anſwer him with: No (for that is their Logick, to deny the concluſion) but we will be like other Countreys about us, and be guided as we think good our own ſelves. That (of all other) Gods ſaying is moſt true, It is a ſtiff-necked and head-ſtrong generation. 1 Sam. 8. 19, 20.

And yet, for all theſe wants, ſo well weening of themſelves, as they need no leading, they: Every one among them is meet to be a leader, to preſcribe Moſes and control Aaron in their proceedings: So that, where God ſetteth the ſentence thus, Thou leadeſt thy people like ſheep by the hands of Moſes and Aaron; might they have their wills, they would take the ſentence by the end, and turn it thus, Thou leadeſt Moſes and Aaron like ſheep by the hands of thy people.

And this is the people, Populus: And ſurely, no evil can be ſaid too much of this word people, if ye take it apart by it ſelf, Populus without Tuus, The people, and not Thy people. But then, here is amends for all the evil before, in this word Tuus; which qualifieth the former, and maketh them capable of any bleſſing or benefit. Tuum.

A common thing in Scripture it is, thus to delay one word with another. Si peccaverit in te frater tuus: Peccaverit ſtirs our choler ſtraight; but then, Frater makes us hold our hand again. Tolle feſtucam ex oculo: Feſtucam, a mote? Our zeal is kindled preſently to remove it; but then Ex oculo, the tenderneſs of the part tempers us, and teacheth us to deal with it in great diſcretion. And ſo it is here: Populus ſo unruly a rout, as Moſes and Aaron would diſdain once to touch them; but when Tuus is added, it will make any of them, not onely to touch them, but to take them by the hand. For, it is much that lieth upon this pronoun Tuus; indeed, all lieth upon it: And put me Tuus out of the Verſe, and neither God reſpecteth them, nor vouchſafeth them either Moſes to govern, or Aaron to teach, or any heavenly benefit elſe. For, Populus is unworthy of them all; but for Tuus, nothing is too good. Matth. 18. 15. Luke 6. 41, 42.

For there is in Tuus, Not onely that they be men, and not beaſts; Freemen, and not Villains; Athenians or Engliſhmen (that is, a civil) not a barbarous people (the three conſiderations of the Heathen Ruler;) but that they be Gods own people and flock; and that is all in all. His people, becauſe he made them; and ſo, the lot of his inheritance. His people again, becauſe he redeemed them from Egypt with his mighty arm, and ſo his peculiar people. His people, the third time, becauſe he redeemed their Souls by his ſufferings; and ſo, a people purchaſed moſt dearly, purchaſed even with the invaluable high price of his moſt pretious blood. This is that, that ſets the price on them: For over ſuch a flock, ſo highly prized, ſo dearly beloved, and ſo dearly bought, it may well beſeem any to be a Guide. Moſes with all his learning; Aaron with all his eloquence; yea, even Kings to be their Foſter-fathers, and Queens to be their Nurſes. No leading, no Leader too good for them. I conclude (with St. Auguſtine upon theſe words) Quamdiu minimis iſtis feciſtis fratribus meis, feciſtis & mihi: Audis minimis (ſaith he) & contemnis; Thou heareſt they be the baſe people, the minims of the world, and thou ſetteſt thy foot on them: Audi & fratribus, take this with thee too. That they be Chriſts brethren, thou leadeſt: Et mihi crede, non eſt minima gloria horum minimorum ſalus: And truſt me, it is no poor praiſe to protect this poor flock, but a high ſervice it is, and ſhall be highly rewarded. Chriſt will take and reward it, as done to himſelf in perſon. Pſal. 100. 3. Verſe 15. 1 Pet. 1. 9. Iſai. 49. 23.

Sicut Oves ſtandeth doubtful in the Verſe; and may be referred, either to the manner of leading, thus; Thou leadeſt like ſheep: Or, to the perſons led, thus; Thy people like ſheep. There we touched it before, in Duxiſti, in every of the four manners of leading; and here now we take it in again, with the people, to whom it may have reference. And indeed there is no term, that the Holy Ghoſt more often ſendeth for (than this of his flock) to expreſs his people by; for in the eſtate of a flock, they may beſt ſee themſelves. As here it is added reſpectively to Duxiſti, to let them ſee, both what intereſt they have in it, and what need they have of it. I mean of Government. Sicut Oves.

First, as a note of difference between Ammi and Lo-ammi: Thy people, and the people: Gods people, and ſtrange children: Every people is not Sicut Oves, nor every one among the people. There is a people (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks) Sicut Equus & Mulus, like the untamed Horſe or Mule, in whom is no underſtanding: And among the people there be too many ſuch. Surely by nature we are all ſo; 1. Lo-ammi. Pſal. 32. 9.

Job 11. 12. wilde and unbroken, as the Aſs-colt (ſaith Job.) Which wildeneſs of nature when they are untaught, and taught to ſubmit themſelves to Government; to become gentle, and eaſie to be led, Sicut Oves, led to feeding, led to ſhearing, to feed thoſe that feed them; tractable of nature, and profitable of yeeld: It is a good degree, and a great work is performed on them. For, by it, as by the firſt ſtep, they become Gods people: For, his people are populus ſicut oves, and they that are not his, are populus ſicut Hirci, a people like He-Goats, in nature intractable, in uſe unſerviceable.

Now, being his people, they come to have an intereſt in Duxiſti, the benefit: For, populus ſicut oves, muſt be led gently; but populus ſicut hirci, muſt be driven forcibly. Duxiſti is not for both; it is a priviledge: And if there be any retain their wilde nature, or degenerate from ſheep into goats (as divers do daily:) For them, Aaron hath a Rod to ſever them from the Fold, by cenſure of the Church. And if that will not ſerve, Moſes hath another, which he can turn into a Serpent and ſting them; yea, if need ſo require, ſting them to death by the power ſecular. For Nachah is leading, and (the ſound remaining) Nacah is ſmiting; and a neceſſary uſe of both. The one, for thy people like ſheep, who will be led; the other, for the ſtrange children like goats, who will not ſtir a foot, further than they be forced. And this is the intereſt.

2. But now again, when they be brought thus far, to be like ſheep; they are but like ſheep, though; that is, a weak and unwiſe cattel, far unable to guide themſelves. Which ſheweth them their need of good Government; and though they be the people of God, yet that Moſes and Aaron be not ſuperfluous. For a feeble poor Beaſt (we all know) a ſheep is; of little or no ſtrength for reſiſtance in the world, and therefore in danger to be preyed on by every Wolf; and, as of little ſtrength, ſo of little reach. None ſo Matth. 24. 23, 24. eaſily ſtrayeth of it ſelf; none is ſo eaſily led awry by others. Every ſtrange whiſtle maketh the ſheep; every Ecce hic maketh the people caſt up their heads, as if ſome great matter were in hand.

These two defects do mainly enforce the neceſſity of a Leader: For, they that want ſight (as blind-men) and they that want ſtrength (as little children) ſtir not without great peril, except they have one to lead them: And both theſe wants are in ſheep, and in the people too.

If then they be ſicut Oves, like ſheep: What is both their wiſdom? Sure, to be in the unity of the flock; and, what is their ſtrength? truly, to be under the conduct of a Shepherd: In theſe two is their ſafety. For, if either they ſingle themſelves and ſtray from the fold, or if they be a fold, and yet want a Iſai. 53. 6. Shepherd; none more miſerable than they. And indeed, in the Holy Ghoſts phraſe, It is the ordinary Matth. 9. 36. note of a private mans miſery, to be Tanquam ovis erratica, as a ſtray ſheep from the flock; and of the miſery of every Eſtate Politick, to be Tanquam grex abſque Paſtore, as a flock without a Shepherd: Zach. 11. 7. therefore guiding they need: Both the ſtaff of unity (Bands) to reduce them from ſtraying, and the ſtaff of order (Beauty) to lead them ſo reduced. And would God they would ſee their own feebleneſs and ſhallowneſs, and learn to acknowledge the abſolute neceſſity of this benefit; in all duty receiving it, in all humility praying for the continuance of it, that God break not the fold, and ſmite not the Shepherd, for the flocks unthankfulneſs.

Duxiſti ſicut Oves.
Ducti ſumus ſicut Oves.

The fourth part. Per manus Moſis & Aaronis. By the hands of Moſes and Aaron.] This part of the Verſe that is behinde, and containeth the means by whom God conveyeth this benefit to his people, had had no uſe, but might well have been left out, and the Verſe ended at populum tuum, if [Author alienæ potentiæ perdit ſuam] had been Gods rule. For, he needed no means, but immediately from himſelf, ſine manibus, could have conveyed it, without any hands (ſave thoſe that made us; that is, his Almighty power, but) without any arm or hand of fleſh; without Moſes or Aaron, without Men or Angels, he was able (himſelf) to have led us. And à principio fuit ſic; for a time, he did ſo; of himſelf immediately, and of his own abſolute ſoveraignty, held he court in the beginning, and proceeded againſt Adam, Eve, Cain, the old World; and there was none Pſal. 74. 12. joyned in commiſſion with him. He onely was our King of old (ſaith the Pſalmiſt;) and for a ſpace, the juſtice that was done on earth, he did it himſelf. And as he held court before all, ſo will he alſo hold one after all. Veniet, Veniet qui male judicata rejudicabit dies: There will come a day, there is a day coming, wherein all evil judged caſes, ſhall be judged over again. To which all appeals lie, even from the days of affliction in this world (as ſometimes they be) to the day of Judgment in the world to come.

This eſtate of guiding being wholly inveſted in him, there being but one God and one Guide, he Pſal. 105. 26. would not keep it unto himſelf alone, as he might, but it pleaſed him to ſend Moſes his ſervant, and Aaron whom he had choſen, to aſſociate them to himſelf, in the Commiſſion of leading, and to make hominem homini Deum. One man a guide and god to another.

Per manum. And thoſe whom he thus honoreth, Firſt, the Prophet calleth Gods hands, by whom he leadeth us; and ſecondly, telleth us who they be; Moſes and Aaron.

Gods hands they be: For that, by them he reacheth unto us Duxiſti, and in it, Religion, and Counſel, and Juſtice, and Victory, and whatſoever elſe is good. He ſendeth his Word to Moſes firſt, and by him Pſal. 103. 7. (as it were through his hand) his Statutes and Ordinances unto all Iſrael.

And not good things onely, but (if they ſo deſerve) ſometimes evil alſo. For as, if they be vertuous (ſuch as Moſes and Aaron) they be the good hand of God for our benefit, ſuch as was upon Ezra: ſo, if they be evil (ſuch as Balaac and Balaam) they be the heavy hand of God for our chaſtiſement, ſuch as was upon Job. Put the hand of God they be both. And a certain reſemblance there is between this Government and the Hand: For, as we ſee the hand it ſelf parted into divers fingers, and thoſe again into ſundry joynts, for the more convenient and ſpeedy ſervice thereof; ſo is the eſtate of government, for eaſe and expedition, branched into the middle Offices, and they again (as fingers) into others under them. But the very meaneſt of them all, is a joynt of ſome finger of this hand of God. Nazianzen (ſpeaking of Rulers, as of the Images of God) compareth the higheſt, to Pictures drawn clean thorow, even to the feet; the middle ſort, to half Pictures drawn but to the Girdle; the meaneſt, to the leſſer ſort of Pictures drawn but to the Neck or Shoulders. But all, in ſome degree, carry the Image of God.

Rulers,

Out of which term (of the hands of God) the people firſt are taught their duty; ſo to eſteem of them, as of Gods own hands: That as God ruleth them by the hands of Moſes and Aaron (that is) by their miniſtery; ſo Moſes and Aaron rule them by the hands of God (that is) by his authority. It is his Name, they wear; it is his Seat, they ſit in; it is the Rod of God, that is in Moſes and Aarons hands. If we fall down before them, it is he that is honored; if we riſe up againſt them, it is he that is injured; and that Peccavi in cœlum, & inte muſt be our confeſſion, againſt Heaven and them: But firſt, againſt Heaven and God himſelf, when we commit any contempt againſt Moſes or Aaron. Luke 15. 21.

1. And the Rulers have their leſſon too. Firſt, That if they be Gods hands, then his Spirit is to open and ſhut them, ſtretch them out, and draw them in, wholly to guide and govern them; as the hand of man is guided and governed by the ſpirit that is in man. Heavenly and divine had thoſe hands need be, which are to be the hands, and to work the work of God.

2. Again, they be not onely hands, but manus per quam (that is) hands in actu. Not to be wrapped up in ſoft Furr, but by which an actual duty of leading is to be performed. Moſes own hand (in the fourth of Exodus) when he had lodged it in his warm boſom, became leprous; but being ſtretched out, recovered again. Hands in actu then they muſt be: not looſly hanging down, or folded together in idleneſs; but ſtretched out; not onely to point others, but themſelves to be foremoſt in the execution of every good work. Exod. 4. 6.

3. Thirdly, Manus per quam ducuntur: That is, as not the leprous hand of Moſes, ſo neither the withered hand of Jeroboam ſtretching it ſelf out againſt God, by miſleading his people, and making them to ſin. Leading back again into Egypt (a thing expreſly forbidden) either to the oppreſſion and bondage of Egypt; or to the ignorance and falſe worſhip of Egypt, from whence Moſes had led them. For as they be not entire bodies of themſelves, but hands; and that not their own, but Gods: So, the people they led, are not their own, but his, and by him, and to him to be led and directed. So much for Gods hands. 1 Reg. 13. 4. Deut. 17. 16.

This honorable title (of the hand of God) is here given to two parties, Moſes and Aaron, in regard of two diſtinct duties performed by them. Ye heard how we ſaid before, The people of God were like ſheep, in reſpect of a double want: Firſt, Want of ſtrength, by means of their feebleneſs; ſecondly, and want of skill, by means of their ſimpleneſs. For this double want, here cometh a double ſupply, from the hand, firſt, of ſtrength; and ſecondly, of cunning: For, both theſe are in the hand. Moſes and Aaron.

1. It is, of all members, the chief in might; as appeareth by the diverſity of uſes and ſervices, it is put to. In Potentatibus dextræ (ſaith the Prophet.) Pſal. 20. 6.

2. And ſecondly, It is alſo the part of greateſt cunning; as appeareth by the variety of the works, which it yieldeth by the Pen, the Penſil, the Needle, and Inſtruments of Muſick. In intellectu manuum (ſaith the Pſalmiſt, in the end of the next Pſalm; and let my right hand forget her cunning.) Pſal. 78. 72. & 137. 5.

This hand of God then, by his ſtrength affordeth protection to the feebleneſs of the flock; and again by his skill affordeth direction to the ſimpleneſs of the flock. And theſe are the two ſubſtantial parts of all leading.

Theſe twain (as two arms) did God appoint in the wilderneſs, to lead his people by. Afterward, over theſe twain did he yet ſet another, even the power and authority Regal, in place of the Head (as himſelf termeth it;) and to it, as ſupream, united the regiment of both. The conſideration of which Power, I meddle not with (as being not within the compaſs of this Verſe) but onely with the hands of regiments Eccleſiaſtical and Civil. Which (as the two Cherubims did the Ark) over-ſpread and preſerve every eſtate. One (ſaith Jehoſaphat) diſpenſing Res Jehovæ, the Lords buſineß; the other dealing in negotio Regis, the affairs of eſtate. One (ſaith David) intending the worſhip of the Tribes; the other, the Thrones for Juſtice. One (ſaith Paul) being for us in τὰ πρὸς Θεὸν, things pertaining to God; the other in τὰ βιωτικὰ, matters of this preſent life. The one Pro aris, the other Pro focis, as the very Heathen acknowledge. 1 Sam. 15. 17. 2 Chro. 19. 6. & 19. 11. Pſal. 122. 4, 5. Rom. 15. 17. 1 Cor. 6. 3.

1. Theſe two are the hands, neceſſary to the body, and neceſſary each to other. Firſt, they be (both) hands; and the hands (we know) are pairs. Not Moſes the hand, and Aaron the foot; but either, and each the hand. And as they be a pair of hands, ſo be they alſo a pair of brethren. Not Moſes de primis, and Aaron de noviſſimis populi; not Moſes the head, and Aaron the tail; not Moſes a quis (as St. Jerome ſpeaketh, out of the Two and twentieth of Iſaiah) and Aaron a quaſi quis; but, both of one parentage, both one mans children. Iſai. 22.

2. Being (both) hands, neither of them is ſuperfluous; no more to be ſpared, then may the hands: But both are abſolutely neceſſary; and a maimed and lame eſtate it is, where either is wanting. The Eſtate of Iſrael (in the Seventeenth of the Judges) without a Civil Governor, proved a very maſs of confuſion. The very ſame Eſtate (in the Second of Chronicles, chap. 15.) Sine ſacerdote docente, no leſs out of frame. Miſerable firſt, if they lack Joſhua, and be as ſheep wanting that Shepherd. And miſerable again, if they lack Jeſus, and be as ſheep wanting that Shepherd. Moſes is needful, in the want of Water, to ſtrike the rock for us, and to procure us ſupply of bodily relief. Aaron is no leſs; for he in like manner reacheth to every one food of another kinde (which we may worſe be without) even the Bread of Life, and Water out of the Spiritual Rock, which is Chriſt Jeſus. Moſes we need; to ſee our forces led againſt Amaleck, for ſafeguard of that little we hold here in this life: And Aaron no leſs, to preſerve our free-hold in everlaſting life: For the great and mighty Κοσμοκράτορες; the legions of our ſins, the very forces of the Prince of darkneſs are overthrown by the Spiritual Judg. 17. 6. 2 Chro. 15. 3. Weapons

Weapons of Aarons warfare. Moſes may not be ſpared from ſitting and deciding the cauſes which are brought before him. No more may Aaron, whoſe Urim giveth anſwer in doubts no leſs important; and who not onely with his Urim and Thummin, giveth counſel, but by his incenſe and ſacrifice obtaineth good ſucceſs for all our counſels. In a word, If Moſes Rod be requiſite to ſting and devour the wicked; Aarons is alſo, to receive the good, and to make them to fructifie. If Moſes hand want, with the Sword, to make us a way: Aarons hand wants too, with a Key to give us an entrance. And thus much will I ſay for Aaron (for the Devil hath now left to diſpute about Moſes body, and bendeth all againſt him) that, the very firſt note of difference in all the Bible, to know Gods people by, is, that as Cain and his race begun at the City walls firſt, and let Religion (as it might) come after, any it skilled not what: So the poſterity of Seth (the people of God) begun at the Church (Ex pœctum eſt invocari) at the worſhip of God and his Tabernacle; as the point of principal neceſſity in their accompt, and (as Chriſt reckoned it) Unum neceſſarium. And truly, if we be not Populus, a people, but Populus tuus, Gods people, we will ſo eſteem it too. For, as for Juſtice and Law and execution of them both, Taliter fecit omni populo, it is every where to be had, even among the very Heathen and Turks themſelves. So is not Gods Truth and Religion and the way of righteouſneſs. No: Notus in Judæâ Deus (ſaith the Prophet in the laſt Pſalm) that is onely to be had in the Church, and Non taliter fecit omni populo, he hath not dealt ſo with every people. Every people have not knowledge of his Laws. So that, if the Governor be not meerly Paſtor agreſtis, a Rural Shepherd, ſuch as are in the Fields, and the people of God, in his eyes, no better than Pecora campi; ſo that, if he keep them one from goring another with their Horns, and one from eating up the others Lock of Hey, all is well and no more to be cared for of Gallio: But, that he be like the great Shepherd, the good Shepherd, the Prince of Shepherds, who was Paſtor animarum (as St. Peter calleth him) a Shepherd of Souls; to ſee alſo that they be in good plight, that they be led in the way of Truth. It will eaſily be yielded to, that per manum Moſis, is no full point, but needeth [and Aaron] to be joyned to it. Moſes himſelf ſaw this, and therefore (in the fourth of Exodus) when he had divers times ſhifted off this ſole leading; while God ſtood ſtill upon Ecce mittam te; at laſt, when God came further and ſaid, Ecce Aaron frater tuus, mittam eum tecum, that contented him, and then he undertook it; as knowing, theſe were like hands, maimed, the one without the other; but that, Moſes and Aaron make a compleat Government.

Exod. 4. 14.

3. And what ſhould I ſay more? They be hands, and the body needeth them both: They be hands, and they need each other. Moſes needeth Aaron: For, Moſes hands are heavy, and need a ſtay: And Aaron it is, that keepeth them ſteddy, by continual putting the people in remembrance, that they be ſubject to principalities; by winning that at their hands by his continual dropping his Word upon them, which Moſes, for the hardneſs of their hearts, is fain to yield to. By ſtrengthning mainly Moſes, debita legalia, duties of Parliament and Common Law, by his Debita moralia, duties of Conſcience and Divinity. And whatſoever action Moſes doth impriſon, Aaron impriſoneth all the thoughts any ways acceſſary to the action. Which thoughts, if they may, run at liberty, the action will ſurely be bailed, or make an eſcape, and not be long kept in durance. And ſo many ways doth Aaron ſupport and make both more eaſie, and more ſteady, the hands of Moſes.

And Moſes (for his part) is not behinde, but a moſt jealous preſerver of Aarons honor and right every where. Every where milde, ſave in Aarons quarrel, and with thoſe onely that murmured againſt Aaron, and ſaid, He took too much upon him. Take but his Prayer for all (becauſe I would end;) his Prayer made for Aaron by name (in the 33. Deut.) and theſe three points in it. Bleſs, O Lord, his ſubſtance; therefore he would never have heard, Ut quid perditio hæc? That all is loſt that is ſpent on Aarons head. Then, Accept the work of his hands; therefore he would never eaſily have excepted to, or with a hard conſtruction ſkanned all the doings of Aaron. Laſt of all, Smite through the loyns of them that riſe up againſt him; therefore he would never have ſtrengthned the hand of his evil willers, or ſaid (with Saul to Doeg) Turn thou and fall upon the Prieſts.

1 Sam. 22. 17.

To conclude, Moſes and Aaron (both) have enemies: As Aaron hath Corah and Dathan, that repine at him; ſo hath Moſes (too) Jannes and Jambres, that would withſtand him: And he that at one time diſputes about the body of Aaron, may alſo hereafter (for he hath done it heretofore) diſpute about the body of Moſes. It is good therefore they be reſpective each to other: Aaron help Moſes in his lot; and Moſes, Aaron in his; that they ſtand in the gap one for another, that ſo their unity may be hand in hand, as the unity of Brethren, ſtrong and hard to break, as the bars of a Palace.

2 Tim. 3. 8 & Jude 9.

The Lord, by whoſe Almighty power all Governments do ſtand, thoſe eſpecially wherein the people are led in the way of his Sanctuary; as he hath graciouſly begun to lead us in that way, ſo leave us not, till we have finiſhed our courſe with joy. Knit the hearts of Moſes and Aaron, that they may joyn lovingly: Teach their hands, and fingers of their hands, that they lead skilfully: Touch the hearts of the people, that they may be led willingly: That by means of this happy conduct, ſurely without error, and ſafely without danger we may lead and be led forward, till we come to the fruition of his promiſe, the expectation of our bleſſed Hope, even the eternal joys of his Celeſtial Kingdom, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. QU. ELIZABETH

St. JAMES'S,

On Wedneſday, being the Thirtieth of March, An. Dom. 1593.

MARK Chap. XIV. Ver. IV, V, VI.

Erant autem quidam indigne ferentes intra ſemet-ipſos, & dicentes, Ut quid perditio iſta unguenti facta eſt? &c.

Therefore ſome diſdained among themſelves, and ſaid, To what end is this waſte of oyntment?

For, it might have been ſold for more than three hundred pence, and been given to the poor: And they grudged againſt her.

But Jeſus ſaid: Let her alone; why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on me.

THis action of waſte, (which by ſome is brought, and by Chriſt our Saviour, traverſed) was againſt a Woman (ſaith St. Mark, the Verſe before;) which Woman (as St. John hath it, Chap. 11. Verſ. 2.) was Mary Magdalen; now a glorious Saint in Heaven, ſometime, a grievous ſinner upon Earth.

St. Auguſtine noteth, Of all thoſe that ſought to Chriſt, ſhe was the onely ſinner, that for ſin onely, and for no bodily grief or malady at all ſued and ſought to him. Of whom being received to grace, and obtaining a quietus eſt for her many ſins (a benefit ineſtimable, Et quod nemo ſcit, niſi acceperit, which they onely know, and none but they, that have received it) as, much was forgiven her, ſo, much ſhe loved. And ſeeking by all means to expreſs her multam dilectionem propter multam remiſſionem (as Chriſt ſaith, Verſ. 8.) Luke 7. 47. ὁ ἔχεν ἐπόησεν; nothing ſhe had, was too dear. And having a precious confection or oyntment of Nardus, the chief of all oyntments; and, in it of πίστικῆ, the chief of all Nardi; and in it too, not of the leaf, but (of the very choice part thereof, of) the Spike, or flower; both, for the making, true; and for the value, coſtly; that did ſhe beſtow. And that frankly: For ſhe did not drop, but pour; not a dram or two, but, a whole pound; not reſerving any, but breaking box and all: And that, not now alone, but three ſeveral times one after another.

Pſal. 45. 7. 1 John 2. 20. 2 Cor. 2. 25.

This ſhe did; and (as it may ſeem) the coherence fell out not amiſs. This outward ointment and ſweet odor, ſhe beſtowed on Chriſt, for the oyl of gladneſs; for the ſpiritual anointing (as St. John;) and the comfortable ſavor of his knowledge (as St. Paul calls it) he beſtowed on her.

This as it was well done, ſo was it well taken of Chriſt; and ſo ſhould have been, of all preſent, but for Judas (ſaith St. John.) Who, liking better odorem lucri ex re qualibet, than any ſcent in the Apothecaries ſhop, ſeeing that ſpent on Chriſts head, that he wiſhed ſhould have come into his purſe; repined at it. But that, ſo cunningly, in ſo good words, with ſo colourable a motion, (1. That it was a needleſs expence, indeed a waſte: 2. That it might have been beſtowed much better to the relief of many poor people;) as that he drew the Diſciples (ſome of them) to favor the motion, and to diſlike of Mary Magdalen and her doing. So that, both they and he joyned in one Bill: But he, of a wretched covetous minde; they, of a ſimple plain intent and purpoſe, thinking, all that was well ſpoken, had been well meant.

Which action of theirs, for that it was brought, Not onely againſt her that beſtowed it, but even, againſt Chriſt alſo that admitted it, though not ſo directly, (as it were, againſt her, with Ut quid perditio? againſt him, with Ut quid permiſſio?) For that alſo, it might be a dangerous preſident in ages to come, if nothing were ſaid to it; and ſhut all boxes, and bar all oyntments for ever: Our Saviour himſelf taketh on him to plead her cauſe; not onely excuſing it (in Simile illam) as no waſte, but alſo commending it (in bonum opus) as a good work: That the oyntment was not ſo pleaſant to his ſenſe, as her thankfulneſs acceptable to his Spirit: That the oyntment, which then filled the houſe with the ſent, ſhould fill the whole world with the report of it; and as far and wide as the Goſpel was preached, ſo far and wide ſhould this act be remembred, as well for her commendation that did it, as for our imitation that ſhould hear of it.

We ſee both the occaſion and ſum of theſe words read. Which may aptly be ſaid to contain in them a diſputation or plea about Mary Magdalens act, whether it were well done, or no: Whereof there are two principal parts; Judas, with ſome other ad oppoſitum againſt it; to have Mary Magdalen reformed, and her box converted to better uſes. Chriſt for it, and againſt them: Simile, that he would have it ſtand, yea, that he would have it acknowledged for that it was Bonum opus.

The Diviſion.

I. In the intreating whereof, theſe three points I purpoſe. Firſt, Of Judas his motion; and in it, firſt, The ſpeech it ſelf, Ut quid perditio, &c? ſecondly, The Speaker, ſome of them; thirdly, The minde or affection, though much.

II. Secondly, Of Chriſts Apology: And in it, 1. That it is ſufferable: 2. That it is commendable: 3. The reaſon of both, in me; for that on him.

III. Laſt of all, Laying both together; (the former, That it is a good work; the latter, That yet grudged at:) That good actions oft-times meet with evil conſtructions; therefore, firſt, though we do well, yet we ſhall be evil ſpoken of; and again, ſecondly, though we be evil ſpoken of, yet we muſt proceed to do well. The uſe, we ſhall make, is (briefly) Ex factis facienda diſcere, by report of that which hath been done heretofore, to learn what to do in like caſe hereafter. Whereof, that I may ſpeak, &c.

I. Judas motion. 1. The ſpeech. Ut quid perditio.

OF the tongue, the Pſalmiſt ſaith, it is the beſt member we have, (Pſal. 108. 1.) and S. James (Chap. 3. 6.) it is the worſt, and that it marreth all the reſt. The nature of the tongue (thus being both good and bad) maketh, that our ſpeech is of the ſame complection, Good and bad likewiſe. Whereof this ſpeech, (here) is a pregnant example, Good in ſubſtance, as I ſhall ſhew preſently: Evil, in circumſtance (as we ſhall afterward ſee) as neither well meant, nor well applied.

In the ſpeech, I commend two good things: 1. The Abuſe noted, Ut quid, &c. 2. The Uſe ſet down, Potuit, &c. Not only the Defect; Not thus waſted: but the Proviſion how; Turned into money, and diſtributed to the poor.

We begin with the firſt: Ut quid perditio, &c? Surely a good ſpeech, and of good uſe, and to be retained. Religion and Reaſon (both) teach us, In all things, to regard both Quid, and Ut Quid: No leſs to what end, we do, than what we do: And both of them cenſure, Not only what is done to an evil end, wickedly; but, what is done to no end: vainly, Quem fructum, What fruit? (ſaith S. Paul) A good queſtion: and, if it have none, Ut quid terram occupat, Why troubleth it the ground? (ſaith Chriſt) So that Religion alloweth not waſte; cenſureth idleneſs: and in all things calleth us to our Ut quid hæc?

Rom. 6. 21. Luke 13. 8.

And this, as in all things (in waſt of time, waſte words, addle queſtions:) ſo yet chiefly, in that which we call Bonum mile. The very goodneſs of which things is, in their uſe; and they, no longer good, than they have an uſe, which if they loſe, they ceaſe to be good. So that in them, not only thoſe things that are miſpent upon wicked uſes; but, even thoſe alſo that are idly ſpent to no uſe, they are loſt, laviſhed, and no good cometh of them. And therefore in them, Ut quid perditio, indeed? is well ſaid. This they learned of Chriſt himſelf: who in the gathering of the broken meat, gave charge ut ne quid perdatur, that no waſt ſhould be made. Indeed, Ut quid perditio nulla? whereto, either this or any waſte at all? So that, Religion is an enemy to riot; and good husbandry is good Divinity.

It is Gods will, that, of our goods Juſtitia condus ſit, Juſtice ſhould be Purveyor; and they rightly gotten: Temperantia promus; Temperance the Steward; and they not waſtfully ſpent. Conſequently, Neither waſte, in buying: (but as Chriſt) οὐκ χρείαν ἔχουσιν (Not οὐκ χρῆσι, but οὐ χρείαν; Not, whereof we may have uſe, but, whereof we have need, and cannot be without it.) 1. John 13. 29.

Neither waſte in ſpending: Οἰκονομία a diſpenſation, not a diſſipation; a laying forth, not διασκορπισμός, a caſting away; a wary ſowing, not a heedleſs ſcattering; and a ſowing χερσὶ ὑ δράξι, by handfuls, not by basketfuls (as the Heathen man well ſaid.) 2.

Neither waſte in giving; Not, making χαίρειας πορνας, the Graces (which be Virgins) not proſtituting them and making them common; but (as the Apoſtles rule is) καθότι τις χρείαν εἶχε, as need ſhall require. So that, to all, to needleſs laying out, to ſuperfluous expence, to unneceſſary largeneſs, Ut quid perditio? may be ſaid. The reaſon whereof is well ſet down: That, if we waſte it in needleſs expences, we ſhall not have enough for neceſſary charges: if we laviſh out in waſting, we ſhall leave but little for well doing. Whereof, our times do yield plenteous teſtimony; In which, Nabals waſte; which being a ſubject, makes a feaſt like a King; the Aſſyrians waſte, every mean perſon, in apparel like a young Prince; Eſaus Gen. 34. 1. waſte, in carrying a retinue of four hundred at his heels; Shallums waſte, in incloſing our ſelves in cedar, Jer. 22. 15. and lifting up our gate on high: (Once for all, I proteſt, and deſire it may be graciouſly received, I do not, ſo much as in thought, once aim at the eſtate of the Higheſt, whoſe glory I wiſh to match, yea, to ſurpaſs Solomon in all his royalty: but) This riotous miſ-ſpending, where no need is, hath eaten up our Chriſtian beſtowing, where need is. Leſs waſt we muſt have, if we will have more good works. It is truly called perditio: It is the loſs and deſtruction of all our good deeds; and I pray God, it be not alſo, of our reward for them. 3. Acts 2. 45. 1 Sam. 25. 36.

Ut quid perditio, is a fault: But, ut quid perditio hæc, is a greater. For [hæc] wanteth not his emphaſis; but is, as if he ſhould ſay: If the ſum had been little, or the value ſmall, it might have been born: if twenty or thirty pence, it might have been winked: But, if it come once into the hundreds; ſo great a ſum, ſo much; verily, it may not, it ought not to be ſuffered.

Thus much for Perditio, the idle waſt, the abuſe. Now followeth Judas plot, the uſe he wiſheth it put too, For firſt, he maketh a perfect valuation and eſtimate of what it would riſe to; (and it may ſeem ſtrange how he ſhould be ſo skilfull an Auditor of the price of rich oyntments; But, he hit it well; for, ſo (ſaith Plinie) the beſt Nardus was ſo worth: And that is a material point. For the greater the ſum, the more colour of complaint; Ut quid perditio nulla; but ſpecially, Ut quid perditio hæc unguenti, of ſo rich an oyntment? Then, from his audit, he commeth to his Motion, Potuit vendi, &c. Sale to be made, the mony to be divided, and the poor to be relieved. This is his ſupplication: and this ſecond is better than the former. Indeed, Ut quid perditio, may be the ſpeech of a Niggard: But this ſecond that followeth, cannot but proceed from a liberal mind, Potuit vendi, &c. In that he ſpeaketh not to have it ſpared; but to have it converted to better uſes. And, this is a bleſſed conjunction, when honeſt ſparing, and charitable relieving; when frugality and liberality go together. Such is this Motion: whereto no man can take exception. Naturally, our bowels yern, and we have an inward compaſſion, at the miſery of our brethren: and, Gods Law willeth not to hide our ſelves from our own fleſh, but, when we have ſerved our need, to give to the poor.

The motion then, is both frugal and charitable: and beſides, if we look more narrowly into it, there appeareth great zeal in it. All waſte things, he wiſheth, the poor had. Yea, it ſeemeth, he reckoneth it waſte, that the poor is not the better for: that, to be miſpent, that might be better ſpent, and is not. And very exactly driveth to this point: That our goods may go, not, to ſome end; nor to ſome good end; but to the very beſt end of all, The relief of the poor. Sure, when I conſider the ſobriety, bounty, zeal of the ſpeech, I think, many wiſe heads could not in ſo few words, have contrived a better or more pithy motion: That that which is otherwiſe laviſhed upon one, may be imployed to the benefit of many: that theſe ſo many hundreds may be beſtowed rather in nouriſhment, than in ointment; rather on neceſſary relief, than upon needleſs delight: rather on a continual good, than on a tranſitory ſmell: rather, that many hungry bellies filled, than that one head anointed. Sure howſoever it was meant, or applied, the ſpeech (in it ſelf conſidered) is to very good purpoſe: even Judas ſpeech, without Judas application.

We be now to enquire, of the perſon, by whom; and after of the intent, wherewith it was ſpoken. 2.

We are naturally carried, of a good ſpeech to enquire the author: partly, in an honeſt inclination (as Salomon ſaith) to kiſs the lips of him that anſwereth upright words: Partly, becauſe it is a matter of importance, not only to weigh quid dicatur, but alſo quis dicat. Τρόπῳ ἰδεῖ ὁ πείθων τὸν λέγοντα ἢ λόγῳ. Many times, we be more perſwaded with the mind of the ſpeaker, than with the body of the ſpeech; and their Poſitions move not ſo much, as do their Diſpoſitions. It is very material, in all (and ſo, in this) to ask, quis hic loquitur? For, who can chooſe, but ſpeak all good of the ſpeech? Surely, if we had not been told otherwiſe, Zelotæ vocem, we muſt needs have thought it, to have been Simon Zelotes. Zelotæ vocem putas, Iſcariotæ eſt: One would imagine, it was Simon the Zealous: It is not ſo, it was Judas the covetous. Some of them (ſaith St. Mark:) Of his Diſciples (ſaith St. Mathew:) and namely Judas (ſaith St. John) who firſt ſtood up, and took his exception; and, after him, ſome others. So that, it was Judas; and, by his perſwaſion, Some beſides: For, if he had not ſtirred, they would have taken it well enough: Such is the danger of ſiniſter ſpeaches. Let us begin with Judas. The Perſons that ſpeak. Some of them. Pro. 24. 26. Mat. 26. 8. John 12. 4.

And here first we begin somewhat to suspect: that it cometh from Judas. Judas, it is well known what he was. At that very instant, that this Ut quid was in his mouth, his fingers were in Christs coffers, and one might have said it to him, Ut quid, &c. And, for all he spake against waste, he wasted and made hovock of his Masters goods: And a little after, he might have been charged, with a worse matter: And yet, he prefers motions. Christ telleth us, what he was (John 7. 12.) Filius perditionis: and this term marreth all; that the child of perdition should find fault with perdition. The case is like, when they that have wasted many pounds, complaine of that peny waste which is done on Christs body, the Church. Or, when they, that in their whole dealings (all the world sees) are un-reformed, seriously consult, how to reform the Church. When they, that do no good with their own, devise what good may be done with Mary Magdalens: they, that have spent and sold and consumed themselves, and never in their whole lives shewed any regard of the poor; when they talk of charitable uses, O dolor! (saith Augustine) Quis tuleris? (saith the Poet.) Ut quid perditio? doth but evil fit their mouthes. God help us, when Judas must reform Mary Magdalen.

This, is a grief: would, this alone. But, a greater grief it is to see, how he is matched in this complaint: That, in this murmuring, some other; divers well disposed and of the better sort of Christs Disciples joyn with him, and take part against Mary Magdalen, who, rather carried with the speech, than heeding the Speaker, were drawn into the society of the same repining. And this (sure) is Scandalum magnum, when evil counsel meeteth with easie belief, and subtilty findeth credulity. When the Pharisees can Mark 2. 18. perswade Johns Disciples to muster with them, and say, Why do we and Johns Disciples fast? whom you cannot but say, are good men, whatsoever you think of us. When Judas can say: Why do I, and Christs own Disciples reprove this? So it is with us; Not, to see homines perditos queri de perditione, them speak of waste, that have wasted themselves; (for, that might be digested:) but, to see grave and good men erre the same error, and draw in the same line with them. But (no doubt) that which carried these here, leadeth them too, Pretences: that, which was able to deceive Christs Disciples, deceiveth them too. And this is the difference: That the Disciples, in a good meaning, went with him; because they saw, he said well: But Judas, upon a greedy covetous mind, to have his own turn served. For, cui bono? If it had come to the poor, who should have had the distribution? It was his office: so that it may be, he spake for himself. Which did plainly appear by the issue. For, upon better information given by Christ, the Disciples were answerd, and remained content. But Judas grew enraged, and fell from evil to worse; from covetise, to malice; from sacriledg, to treason: Even to this dangerous resolution, Vendere nondum, (or if not) Vendere Christum; and to subvert Him, that he might not spoile. For all the world, as some in our time, that sought help of authority, while they had hope, that way to prevail: but, when that came not; since, begin to hold, they will and may do it, without stay for authority; and seek to subvert the State, they cannot form to their phansie. My hope is, and so is my prayer; That those which have hither to been carried with their plots and pretences, now they be informed and see what the truth is, may do (as the Disciples) leave Judas in his murmuring, and let Mary Magdalen be quiet.

1. That which we learn of this part, is: 1. From Judas; That a good speech may drop out of an
Gen. 27. 22. evill mouth. As (sure) setting aside that the hands be Esau's; the voice might become Jacob well enough. This instruction we have from Judas; It was Gods will, that even he should preach, and we learn some good lessons by him. And, this we may learn: That, No waste is to be made: And if we learn it, even he shall co-operate to our good. And, as from him we have this speech for our Oeconomy; so, from John 11. 50. Caiphas (as bad as he) we have another full as good, for our Policy. That speech (which St. Bernard can never enough commend:) Melius est ut pereat unus quàm unitas. Both evil meant (I grant:) but, both
Mat. 11. 19. well spoken, where their place is. So it pleaseth God, that we should hear His wisdom justified (not only out of the mouth of her own children, but) even out of the mouthes of the children of folly. That he might Luke 19. 22. condemn evil things, even by evil men, and evil men non ex ore suo, not from His own, but from their own mouths; and so their condemnation be just.

From the Disciples too easie belief, we learn Credit omni verbo, not to trust phrases and oyled speeches
Prov. 14. 15. too fast: Never, by the list, to conclude of the cloath. Seeing, not only Vasa electionis, but filii perditionis, say well. But, if we hear much ado about Ut quid perditio, to stay and think; May not this be Judas that speaketh now, as once it was? And if it be, to suspect, when he speaks well. Of this assuring our selves (what St. Paul telleth us of sadly;) that not only Mary Magdalen shall be reformed, and her Phil. 1. 18. ointment maligned, and the poor opposed, but even Christ Himself preached, obtentu, under pretence. Therefore, it standeth us in hand, to look to the Disposition, as well as the Position; and not to run headlong, to say straight Ut quid, as fast as they. So much for the Speaker.

2. With the Person by whom, we propound the affection, wherewith it is spoken. For, as the Person
The affection wherewith it was spoken: indigne ferentes, & intra se dicentes. is a presumption: So, if this can be had, it maketh a full evidence. And that is in these words, ἀγανάκτησεν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, that he thought much with himself.

The speech, for the poor (if it be kindly) doth naturally come from the compassion of Charity, and not from the grudging of a greedy desire; as this is said to do. And so should we have conceived of this; that, from the care of the poor (no doubt:) but that, the Spirit of God maketh a window in his breast, and lets us see the secrets of his heart; and telleth us, it was not the care of the poor; Non, quia pertinebat ad eum de pauperibus, but, quia fur erat, because he bare the bagge, and took order, it should never be
John 12. 6. over heavy, but that he might well bear it; and thought all too much that went beside it.

Which is a point of great use to be understood. It is one of the mysteries of iniquity, that ever there be two Quia's belonging to bad purposes (as S. Mark saith:) One, ἐν ἑαυτοῖς within, in heart: the other, λέγοντες without, without, in ſpeech. Another quia, they think in their hearts; and another, they ſpeak in our ears, which is the non quia. 1. The one, a true cauſe inwardly intended: 2. The other, onely a colour, outwardly pretended. As, in this: the true quia (ἐν ἑαυτοῖς) a wretched humour to provide for himſelf: The pretenced quia; (λέγοντες) a charitable affection to provide for the poor. All ſins have ſo. Mundus ſequitur eum, the true cauſe (envie ἐν ἑαυτοῖς;) but, they told another quia; (λέγοντες) Venient Romani, the ſafety of the State. Herod would learn where he might find Chriſt; the cauſe (indeed) to murder him; the cauſe (in ſhew) to worſhip him.

John 12.19. John 11.48. Mat. 2. 6, 8.

It is no new thing but common and uſual, in all exceptions to Religion, the true cauſe is ὑπερβάλλησις, a thinking all too much; a thinking, all is perditio, all loſt that cometh not to us, that we gain not by. We ſee, it was the true reaſon, the men of Sichem made among themſelves, why they would become of Jacobs Religion, and be circumciſed: Nonne omnia quæ habent, noſtra erunt? Shall not all they have be ours? It was the very reaſon, whereby Haman went about to perſwade Aha ſuerus to ſuppreſs the Jews Religion: Let it be done, and I will weigh ſo many thouſands to the Kings coffers. And in the New Teſtament, it was the very reaſon, Demetrius there uſeth: O, crie for Diana, Magnifie her, Quia inde nobis erit acquiſitio, we ſhall be all gainers by it. God knows this is the true cauſe, and the Analogie of Religion to many: It was ſo to Judas: and, God grant, the like be not found in Iſrael.

Intra ſe. Gen. 34. 34. Eſter 3. 9. Acts 19. 25.

Now though this be the true, yet this in no wiſe muſt come into λέγοντες, and be ſpoken. If Judas had dealt plainly, he ſhould thus have framed his ſpeech: Ut quid perditio: potuit vendi & nummi in ærumnam meam: but, that had been too harſh; for, that had been plain ſacriledge: And, of Sacriledge, S. Paul ſeems to ſay, Rom. 2, 22. it is (if not worſe, yet) as bad as Idolatry: Thou that pulleſt down Idols, committeſt thou ſacriledge? As if he held, as good a falſe Religion, as a ſpoiling Religion. Therefore, that muſt be kept ἐν ἑαυτῷ and not come into λέγοντες, but it muſt be ſhrowded; as indeed, the Heathen man ſaid, Μόνον δεῖται προσδοκίας ἡ πονηρία, Bad attempts need onely an handſome pretence: for, with the reſt they can diſpenſe with God, and His Word, and fear, and conſcience and all: and, ſo a pretence had, it is all they deſire.

Dicentes. Rom. 2. 22.

Now, no pretence more fit (to make them perfect Maskers) than S. Pauls vizor μόρφωσις εὐσεβείας; and S. Peters cloke ἐπικάλυμμα; the vizor of godlineſs, and the cloke of Religion. And, ſuch was Judas here; a charitable, carefull proviſion for the relief of the poor. Whom though (the Holy Ghoſt ſaith expreſly) he cared not for one jot, yet maketh he them his ſtalking-horſe; and Pauperibus is the point: that, is it, he ſeeketh for, and (God knoweth) nothing elſe.

2 Tim. 3. 5. John 12. 6.

This his ſacrilegious wicked humour he covereth under zeal of the poor. And ſo, to hide one fault, committeth two. Firſt, Sacriledge; then, hypocriſie.

And, it is no new thing under the Sun (as Solomon tels us) to gild a potſheard with gold-foile, (that is) to over-lay a falſe heart, with zealous lips. Abſoloms vow was the maſk for his conſpiracy againſt David. Jezabels faſt, her vizor, for the oppreſſing of Naboth. And here, we have an invective againſt waſte, a ſupplication for the poor, in Judas mouth, and yet ſeven abominations in his heart.

Prov. 26. 23. 2 Sam. 15. 7. 1 Kin. 21. 9. Prov. 26. 25.

Is it not heavineſs unto death, to conſider this? Well ſaid the Wiſeman: O wicked abomination, whence art thou come to cover the earth with deceit?

But more need had we to beware, than complain. And indeed, all we learn from this point, is Noviſſe & Odiſſe, to know and avoid. To know, ſuch there be, as cover ſacriledge with zeal; and with good uſes, cover no good intents. To know them and to avoid them. And, the better to do that, to mark the end of him, that here uſed it, and ſee, what became of him: How, from this ſin, by Gods juſt judgement, he fell to perditio; and from it (after) to make away himſelf. To whom, in that caſe, truly might have been ſaid, Ut quid perditio, indeed: But this was his end in this life, and in the other, he hath his portion with hypocrites, and they, with him, in the lake of fire and brimſtone.

Mat. 24. 51.

So much for the 1 Speech it ſelf; 2. For the Speaker; and, in him, both his perſon, 3 And his intent.

II. CHRISTS Apologie.

Now, as Juſtice would, let us hear alteram partem. Theſe are ſhrewd preſumptions: yet let us not reſolve, but ſtay, till Chriſt have ſaid; And if he miſlike it too, Sell it and ſpare not.

But Jeſus, &c. There was (ſaith Saint Gregory) no errour of the Diſciples, præſente Magiſtro, while Chriſt was preſent with them, but it was Salutaris error, quia totius Mundi ſuſtulit errorem, a wholeſome and profitable errour, for it rid the world of an errour for ever after. We may well apply it to this. We ſhould have been of Judas minde; and, that that carried the Diſciples, have gone for currant, had not our Saviour Chriſt over-ruled the caſe, and ſtayed the ſale of Mary Magdalens ointment; and in ſtaying it, ſaid enough to ſtop their mouths for ever, that make the like motions.

Which to do the more firmly, albeit Chriſt might well have excepted to Judas perſon, as unfit: (what, the ſon of perdition, talk of perdition?) Or laid open his intent, as wicked and execrable (Ut quid hoc ſacrilegium? Ut quid hæc hypocriſis?) Yet, the more ſufficiently to do it, He waves both, and joyns iſſue upon the very point it ſelf; admitting, all had been ſimply and honeſtly both ſaid and meant.

Wherein, He keepeth this order: Firſt, propoundeth that, what was done, it was ſufferable, and ſhe not to be troubled for it: Sinite illam, &c. Secondly, it was a good work: and therefore ſhe not only to be excuſed, but to be commended, for it. Thirdly, the reaſon and warrant of both, (In me) for that, it was done upon Him: On whom, nothing that is beſtowed can be ſaid to be loſt, but muſt and ought to be ſaid, to be well beſtowed. So that, there is a full anſwer to every point of Judas bill; Ut quid for Ut quid:

Ut

Ut quid moleſtia hæc? for Ut quid perditio? Potuit vendi, is anſwered with Sinite, let alone: Perditio, with bonum opus: and pauperibus, with In Me, who is of more value than many poor; after whom it may well become the poor to be ſerved.

1. It is ſufferable: Sinite illam.

To begin then, with the firſt. Sinite illam (ſaith Chriſt) Not, as they hoped, ſiſtite illam, Stay her, indeed it is but a waſte work ſhe is about: but Sinite illam, let her alone, the work is good, ſuffer her to proceed. His meaning is: Such acts as this was, are to be let alone, and they, that ſo diſpoſed, not to be troubled. Sure, He foreſaw, many would be medling; many Ut quid's would be framed, and many Potuit's deviſed, and much buſineſs be made, about Mary Magdalens oyntment, and about works of that nature: That every other while, ſome Motions, Petitions, Plots would be framed about the altering of it. To this day they will not let her alone, but diſquiet her ſtill. He hath therefore left in his Goſpel theſe words, as a fit anſwer, to ſtay their hands and ſtop their mouths, for ever: Sinite illam, let them be; ſuffer them to remain: Ut quid moleſtia hæc? a meet reply to Ut quid perditio hæc? to the worlds end.

And this requeſt (to my poor conceit) is very reaſonable: (If in this kind, any thing may be allowed for reaſonable. It is not, Immitamini illam; or, adjuvate illam: Do ye the like, contribute to her charge; further and help her, what you may; (which yet, He would have us:) That, would Judas never be got to: If Chriſt had wiſhed him to like coſt, what ado then would there have been? But this: do but let her alone. If you will not further, yet hinder her not; trouble her not. That ſhe hath ſpent, of her ability ſhe hath done it, ſhe hath not had of you, one penny toward her three hundred; nor ſhe asketh you none. Seeing you are at no coſt, why ſhould it grieve you? If you like not to follow her, yet let her alone.

And, may not the ſame in like reaſon be ſaid and entreated, at this day? That what our Fathers and Elders in the Chriſtian Faith bounteouſly imployed on Chriſt; what they (I ſay) have that way dedicated, if we will not add to it and imitate them, yet we will let it alone, and not trouble them; and at leaſt be not with Judas, if we like not or liſt not to be with Mary Magdalen. (On Chriſt, it is, I dare boldly ſay; and if I ſay it, I ſhall have all the ancient Fathers on my ſide, and if I ſay it, St. Paul will warrant me; who in (1 Cor. 12. 12.) expreſly calleth the Church Chriſts Body: And he might well do it, the firſt ſpeech, Chriſt ever ſpake to him, himſelf calleth the Church, Me (the word he here uſeth.) On Chriſt, it is ſpent, any part of Chriſt, be His glory more then other; and, on that Office and calling of the Church, which St. Paul (who beſt knew the dignity of it) calleth the glory of Christ. This (I ſay) under correction, is, as me thinketh, not unreaſonable; that ſeeing, what ſuperſtition hath defiled, is removed and gone; touching that which is remaining, it be ſaid, Sinite illam.

2 Cor. 8. 23.

2. It is Commendable. Bonum opus operata eſt.

From this firſt degree of Sinite, our Saviour Chriſt aſcendeth to a higher: and leſt we ſhould miſtake as if He bare with her good mind and meaning, rather than allowed the work; he tels us, the very work it ſelf is good: and ſo pleads and juſtifies it, not as ſufferable only, but as commendable. For, that is the meaning of bonum opus operata eſt.

Wherein, firſt He anſwereth the principal reaſon, Perditio eſt. You may ſell, (ſaith Judas) it is but waſte: You muſt let it alone, (ſaith Chriſt) it is bonum opus, So that, as His former (of Sinite) croſſed the Motion; So this (of bonum opus) overthroweth the Reaſon, perditio.

In which our Saviour Chriſt looſeth the knot, and teacheth us a point: to enquire firſt, Ecquid perditio, whether it be a waſte? before we come to Ut quid, to what end is it? If it be Waſte, it is well and truly ſaid: but, this (He pleadeth) is not any: unleſs (which God forbid) good works be waſte, with us. And therefore joyneth iſſue upon the word hæc: that is, that is done upon Him, is no Waſte, at all, as Judas termeth it; but (as he chriſteneth it by a new name) bonum opus. Therefore, his reproof is nothing, tanquam cadens in materiam indebitam, as lighting upon an unmeet matter, which deſerveth no reproof, but rather commendation.

Indeed if Judas, ſometime before, had ſaid it to Mary Magdalen, in the dayes of her former vanity, when ſhe waſted thus much and (paradventure) many penny more on her riot and wantonneſs; then (indeed) Ut quid perditio hæc? had hit right. But, now it was not on her ſelf, but on Chriſts head, it is out of ſeaſon. As, if our age (now) would apply to Nabals riotous feaſts; to the Aſſyrians ſuperfluous ſuits; to Eſau's ſuperfluous retinue; to the endleſs building, Jeremie findeth fault with; to our manifold idle exceſſes, many wayes; to every and each of theſe, an Ut quid perditio? there now, it were right: there indeed were the true place of Ut quid perditio? But, this is (among many) a ſtrong illuſion of theſe days: that whereas there are abroad in the world, ſo many true waſtes; ſo much, in oyntments, and perfumes, upon our ſelves; ſo many hundred denarii (indeed, no man can tell, what) daily laviſhed; we can neither ſee (our ſelves) nor patiently hear of others, ut quid perditiones hæ? Here, all is well, all is well beſtowed. Neither Ut quid, nor potuit dari pauperibus; the poor, never comes in our head. No where, but in Chriſt ought is amiſs. Only, in that that is meant to Him, and ſpent on him, there comes out our Ut quid, there comes the poor into our mind. No way, to provide for them, but by ſale of Chriſts oyntment. That, is the Waſte: and, none but that: and, none but that is maligned. We are perfect auditors, we can exactly reckon, how many hundreds Chriſt Waſteth: but who keepeth any account of his own? To our ſelves too much is too little: To Him, too little is too much. And three hundred pence, that way beſtowed, is a greater eye-ſore than three hundred pounds (I dare be bold to ſay) to not ſo good uſes.

Thus it is: and, it is to be lamented, that thus it is. But Chriſt teacheth us better, if we will learn of Him, and let Judas go, that we may better beſtow our Ut quid any where, than upon upon him. And we ſhall find it true: The day will come, when that only, that goeth to him, ſhall be found to be no perditio; and all elſe perditio indeed, whatſoever, or upon whatſoever. To be loſt indeed, and no fruit to come of it. That, which is ſowen in the fleſh, to be loſt in corruption; that, which on the belly, εἰς κοιλίαν; that, which on the back, in rayges; that which on building, in rubbiſh; that, which to our heires, in prodigallity, riot and exceſs: And that, which is In Me, ſhall prove no perditio, waſte, loſs, or laviſh, but bonum opus, a good deed; to be rewarded with a bleſſed remembrance on earth, and with a Crown of glory, in the Kingdom everlaſting. Gal. 6. 8.

Thus (you ſee) Judas is anſwered, and the work quit from the name of perditio. So far from Perditio, that it is Bonum opus. A good work, indeed; as, proceeding from a good mind, poſſeſſed with the vertue of vertues, thankfullneſs. For, mercy beſtowed on Him, who only is good, and goodneſs it ſelf, who here alloweth it for good; cauſeth it to be regiſtred in His Goſpels, for good; in the day of Judgment ſhall pronounce it, good: Rewardeth it for good, in this World, with a good name; in that to come, with all the good of his Kingdom, where no good is wanting.

The third remaineth [Upon me] wherein (properly) is meant His natural body of fleſh, which ſhould not alway be with us. But they, of whom we have learned to interpret the Scripture (in a manner, all) extend it to his Myſtical body too: and (as they think) by good conſequence. That ſeeing He gave His natural body to be bought and ſold, rent and torn, crucified and ſlain for his body myſtical; His body myſtical is (certainly) dearer to him, and better He loveth it: And then, if he will accept that, is done to the leſs, and make it Bonum opus; He will much more, that, which is done to the more beloved; and it ſhall never go for leſs: Never did I am ſure. The Scriptures record (as a good work) that that was laid down at the Apoſtles feet, no leſs than this that was laid upon Chriſts own head: And, in them, Ananias a Church-robber, and Judas a Chriſt-robber, both, in one caſe. Satan is ſaid to have filled both their hearts in that act: And like evil end came to both: And both are good remembrances for them, that ſeek and ſay as they did. Yea, which would not be content to detain a part (Ananias and Judas went no farther:) but would ſeaze of all gladly, if a Gracious Lady did not ſay, Sinite. 3. The reaſon. In Me. Acts 5. Luke 22. 3. Acts 5. 3.

To conclude: It is St. Auguſtine (and, ſo ſay all the reſt:) Tu intellige & de Eccleſiâ, Quia qui aliquid de Eccleſiâ prædatur Judæ perdito comparatur: Underſtand this of the Church, and ſpare not: For he that taketh any thing (I ſay, any thing) from it, is in Judas caſe: For the ſin, certainly; for the puniſhment, as it pleaſeth God.

Now, we know what is meant by In Me, it is no waſte Word. We will conſider it (firſt) as a reaſon of the two former: and then, as a ſpecial anſwer to that, of the poor.

It anſwereth Ut quid: To what end? Why, In me, to me, and for my ſake.

It anſwereth Perditio: In Me, why, it is ſpent on Chriſt, on Me; on whom nothing that is ſpent, is miſ-pent.

It yieldeth a reaſon of Sinite: ſpare her; if not her, yet ſpare Me, trouble Me not. Ye cannot ſcrape off the oyntment, but with My trouble.

And a reaſon of Bonum opus eſt: For, His [In Me] is warrant ſufficient, why the work is to be reckoned good. Yea, in ſaying, it is not only good done, but done to Him, He giveth it a dignity, and lifteth up this work above.

But eſpicially, it anſwereth the weight of Judas reaſon (Pauperibus, the Poor.) Our Saviour Chriſt plainly ſheweth, that Judas is miſtaken, and draweth a diameter, and maketh oppoſition between devotion toward CHRIST, and Alms to the poor. Tabitha was good to the poor: Mary Magdalen, to CHRIST. Muſt we put Mary Magdalen to death, to raiſe Tabitha again? and is there no other way? Yes indeed: Sinite illam (ſaith CHRIST, in this verſe) let this ſtand: and yet, do thoſe good too, Date eleemoſynam (in the next.) There be other means to provide for the poor, than by ſale of Chriſts oyntment: And we are not, in pretence of them, to omit this or any office or duty unto Chriſt. Verſe 7.

Pauperibus, is not the only good work: this, is alſo. And, of the two, if any, to be preferred, it is In Me: He (certainly) to be ſerved firſt. To which work, not only thoſe of wealth (Mary Magdalen with her three hundred pence;) but, even poor and all (the poor Widow with her mites) is bound, as we ſee: Even, to add ſomething even to the offerings of GOD: And, if not, with Nardus, yet with oyle to anoint his head, as himſelf requireth. This, I ſay: if both could not ſtand. But, thanks be to God, there be ways, they may both ſtand; and not one fall, that the other may riſe. Malachi telleth us a way; and it is a ſpecial one: to do as this vertuous woman here, Inferte in Apothecas meas, bring into mine (that is, My Churches) treaſures, and I will break the windows of heaven and ſend you ſuch plenty, as you and the poor (both) ſhall eat and have enough, and yet leave in abundance. So that (we ſee) the next and kindlieſt way, to have Judas complaint redreſſed, is, to ſpeak and labour, that Mary Magdalens example may be followed. Mark 12. 42. Mal. 3. 10.

Secondly, by In Me, it plainly appeareth, how Chriſt ſtandeth affected to works of this kind, For, permitting them; ſtanding for them; defending and commending them, He ſheweth plainly, He will be content with ſuch as it is. For albeit He were the very pattern of true frugality, and an enemy to all exceſs, yet this ſervice (chargeable as it was) he well alloweth of. Shewing us this: that as He is Chriſtus Patris, anointed by GOD His Father (quem unxit Dominus, Act. 10) ſo alſo He will be Chriſtus noſter (and that, paſſively) anointed by us (Quem unxit Maria, John 11.) That, as here He comendeth Mary Magdalen, for the ſupply of it: So (in Luke 7.) He giveth Simon an item (oleo caput meum non unxiſti) for being defective in this duty. Acts 10. 38. John 11. 2. Luke 7 46.

I would gladly ask this queſtion: If the oyntment may be ſold (as Judas ſaith) and bought lawfully; and they that buy, may lawfully uſe; if they may uſe it, why may not Chriſt? Num ſolis ſtultis apes melliſicant, mellificant, do Bees make honey, and Nardus bear oyntment for wicked men only? May any that payes for it, and may not Christ? Is He only, of all other, uncapable or unworthy?

If it be, becauſe it is more than needs; Let that be a reaſon of all. Let the law hold us, as well as Him. But, if no man, but allowes himſelf a more liberal diet and proportion of port, than in ſtrict terms is needfull, for all the poor; why ſhould we bind Chriſt alone to that rule? Except we mean to go further with Him; and not only except to Maries oyntment, but even to Simons feaſt alſo: Ut quid unguentum hoc? then. Ut quid convivium hoc, too? ſeeing a ſmaller repaſt might ſerve, and the reſt be given to the poor. So that, His allowance ſhall be juſt as much, and no more than will ſerve to hold life and ſoul together. But, as He, without any barr to Ut quid, alloweth us, not only indumenta for nakedneſs, but ornamenta for comelineſs; not only alimenta for emptineſs, but oblectamenta for daintineſs: So good reaſon it is, we think not much of his Nardus, and tye Him only to thoſe rules, from which our ſelves plead exemption.

I demand again, if oyntment might be ſpent on Aarons head, under the Law; ſeeing a greater than Aaron is here, why not on His too? I find, that neither under the Law, He liked of their motion, What ſhould the Temple do with Cedar? neither, under the Goſpel, of theirs, What ſhould Chriſts head do, with Nardus? But that, to his praiſe he is recorded in the Old Teſtament, that ſaid; Shall I dwell in my ſeeled houſe, and the Ark of God remain under Goats-skins? And ſhe, in the New, that 1 Chron. 17. 1. thought not her beſt oyntment too good for Chriſts head, Surely, they, in Egypt, had their ſervice of God, it may be in a barn, or in ſome corner of an houſe. Yet when Moſes moved a coſtly Tabernacle, no man was found that once ſaid, Our Fathers ſerved God well enough, without one, Ut quid perditio hæc? After that, many Judges, and Prophets, and righteous men were well, when they might worſhip before the Arke: yet, when Solomon moved a ſtately Temple, never any was found that would grudg and ſay, Why the Arke is enough; I pray God, we ſerve God no worſe than they, that knew nothing but a Tent; Ut quid perditio hæc? Only, in the days of the Goſpel (which, of all other, leaſt ſhould) there ſteps up Judas, and dareth to ſay that againſt Chriſts Church, that no man durſt ever, either againſt Moſes Tent, or Solomons Temple.

And if Chriſt had taken it well, or paſſed it in ſilence, or ſaid Sinite illam, ſuffer Judas motion to take place; we might have had ſome ſhew. But ſeeing He ſaith Moleſtus eſt, to Judas; Sinite illam, ſuffer Mary to go forward; and not that only but, Bonum opus, too: why ſhould any, after Judas, be thought worth the anſwering.

Surely, as the Goſpel (in this duty) hath, and ſo ought to exceed the Law; So, in the Goſpel, we here and our Country above all other. I will but ſay with Chryſoſtome Appende Chriſtum ô homo: do but conſtrue theſe two words [In Me] aright: Poize and prize Who it is; Et ſufficit. It is Chriſt Jeſus: Who hath not ſpared to anoint us with his own bloud; and our ſouls, with all the comforts and graces of His Holy Spirit. If towards us, neither bloud nor life were too dear, on His part; ſhall, on ours, any Nardus be too dear, or any coſt too much, that is on Him beſtowed?

Perhaps, our particular will more move us. It is Chriſt, that created for us Nard and all other delights whatſoever, either for uſe and neceſſity, we have; or, for fruition and pleaſure, we enjoy. It is He, that hath enriched us, that we be able to beſtow it, by this long proſperity, plenty and peace, as no other Kingdom under Heaven: Is there any good mind can think, that this is an indignity? that He is not worthy, hath not deſerved, and double deſerved this, and ten times more at our hands?

An extraordinary conceit is entred into the World (by a new found gloſs) to make whatſoever we like not, or liſt not to do our ſelves, extraordinary: and ſo ſome deem of this, as extraordinary, and whereof no example is to be made. (No ancient Writer is of that mind; but that, for us it was written; Luke 11. 37. and that, Vade tu & fac ſimiliter, may be written upon her box) But, be it ſo. Why may not I wiſh on our parts, Let us be extraordinary? For, God hath not dealt ordinarily with us of this Land: He hath not been to us, a Wilderneſs or a barren Land: but hath (even our enemies being Judges) been extraordinary in his goodneſs towards us all. And ſure, in us, ordinary common thankfulneſs is not enough. Shall I ſet my ſelf to recount His benefits? An eaſie matter to find entrance; but when then ſhould I make an end? In one, I will abridge them all. We ſpeak of oyntment: Verily, Chriſt hath anointed over us, and given us a moſt Gracious Soveraign, by whoſe happy and bleſſed reign, we long have (and longer may we, He grant) enjoyed both the inward and outward anointing: the inward, the Pſal. 45. 7. holy and heavenly comfort of Gods truth, and true oyle of gladneſs, the outward, of earthly plenty and delight, which Nard or any rich confection may afford; and (in a word) whatſoever happineſs can Pſal. 133. 2. fall to any Nation under heaven. From the holy oyle of whoſe anointing (as the dew of Hermon on Sion, and as Aarons oyntment upon the Skirts of his cloathing) there daily droppeth upon this whole Realm, pure Nard, and if any thing elſe be more precious, whether, in theſe earthly, or in thoſe heavenly bleſſings. I ſpeak no more then we all feel. This, is that one, I ſpeak of; and in this one, is all, Even the Lords anoynted. Whom (I make no queſtion, but) the Lord hath, and will more and more bleſs for that Her Highneſs hath ſaid, as Himſelf ſaid, Sinite illam. And, bleſſed be God, that hath put into Her heart, ſo to ſay; to like well of Ut quid perditio; but, to have it ſo applied. I doubt not, but this Heroical vertue, among many others, ſhall make Her Scepter long to flouriſh; ſhall make her remembrance to be in bleſſing to all poſterity, and ſhall be (among other) her rejoicing in the day of the Lord, and an everlaſting crown of glory upon Her head.

Pſal. 147. 20. This is that oyntment, I ſpeak of; that it ſelf alone may make us all confeſs, we have received from Chriſt, extraordinary mercy, and are therefore to return more then ordinary duty. Non taliter fecit omni; Nay, Non taliter fecit ulli populo: He hath not dealt ſo with every; Nay, not ſo with any people, as with us: and therefore not any people, to deal ſo thankfully with Him again.

This,

This if it were extraordinary. Howbeit, if Antiquity may be admitted judg, this (as a good work) is to be ordinary with us. Since every thing done in this kind to Christs Church, only upon a thankfull regard, is (with them) reckoned a dram of Mary Magdalens oyntment.

At least if we will not come so far as operata est, we do yet thus far favor it, as to yield a Sinite illam: Seeing, Mary Magdalen that gave it, paid for it; and it never came out of our purse

And now, this question being thus dilated, it is every mans duty (saith Theophylact) to set down, cujus partis sit, whose part he will take, whose mind he will be of. Whether, with Judas, Perdito est; or, with Christ, Bonum opus est: whether Potuit vendi; or Sinite illam.

But (I trust) we will stand to Christs Judgment; and rather take part with Him, for Mary Magdalen, than with Judas, against her: that we may be with Mary Magdalen, that are of her mind; which, at the hour of death, we all shall desire.

III.

The entrance I make. From this unhappy conjunction of Marie's work and Judas evil speech, this first consideration offereth it self (nothing pleasant, but wholsome and requisite to be called to mind, of all that mean to do well.) That, things well done shall be evill taken: and often, good affections have no good constructions; and that received with the left hand, that is reached with the right.

The Doctrine. 1 That Good works are maligned.

For this her act, that was well done, (if Christ knew, what it was to do well) Yet, we see, it is disdained, grudged at, and she molested for it: (all three, are in my Text.) Whence we learn: Be a thing done to never so good purpose, yet some Judas will mutter, and maligne, and come forth with his Ut quid? Some Judas will cast his dead flie into Mary Magdalen's box of oyntment.

No one creature had so good experience of this, as this poor woman had. Three special vertues of hers, the Gospels record: and in every one of the three, she was repined at. 1. When in the bitterness of her soul, she shewed her repentance with tears, Simon the Pharisee did what he could to disgrace her, (Luke 7.) Luke 7. 39.

2. When in a hungry desire to receive comfort, by the word of grace she shewed her devotion in sitting at Christs feet, Martha (her own sister) made complaint of her. 3. And now here again, the third time: when, in an honest regard of her duty, she sheweth her thankfulness for comfort received, Christs own Disciples both grudge and speak against her. So that, if she washeth His feet with tears, it contents not: if she anoint His head with balm, it is matter of mislike: if she sit still, and say nothing; it is all one: Still, Mary is found fault with; ever her doings stand awry. Luke 10. 40.

This is the lot and portion of all those, that will follow their steps. Not only we of private estate, but even great Personages, As, Nehemias by Geshem, to bring detriment to the state, by favouring the Churches case. Even Princes: David by Shemei, to be a bloody Persecuter, when (if in any thing he offended) it was, in too much lenity. Even Christ Himself the Son of God; who neither could have His feet, but Simon the Pharisee; nor His head anointed, but Judas (His Apostle) maligne and speak against it. Neh. 6. 6. 2 Sam. 16. 7.

So that, not only Regium est (as the Heathen said) bene cum feceris, audire male, to have evil speech for good deeds; but Divinum, a heavenly thing (as Christ saith) de bono opere lapidari. John 10. 32.

This, is their lot. And it serveth us to two purposes: 1. For judgment: to see this evil disease under the Sun: The evil aspect which the world looks with, on Mary Magdalen. Whereby many times that which is commended in Heaven, is condemned on earth: and Judas bag carrieth away even from Christs. Whereby many times, all good is said of them, by whom little good is done, and some mens flagitia (which the heathen story lamenteth, in Drusus) shall find more favor and be better rewarded than Drusus's optimè cogitata, the good counsel and course of many a better man.

Such is the deceitfulness of the sons of men upon the weights. It serveth us (I say) to see and to sorrow at and to say with Augustine: Va tibi miser, bonus odor occidit te, Miserable man that thou art, how art thou choked with so good a sent? To sorrow it and to prepare our selves to it, and resolve, that though we do well, yet we shall be evil spoken of. Psal. 62. 10.

That, first: and second, this, for practise. That though we be evil spoken of, yet not to be dismayed or troubled with this hard measure; but to go on and do, as Mary Magdalen did; not once, or twice, but three several times one after another: Neither to hold our hand, or shut our box, not spare our oyntment, if things well done be evil taken. To look, not to Judas on earth, who disliketh; but to Christ in heaven, who approveth it, and in all three cases made answer for Mary Magdalen, against Martha, Simon and Judas and all her accusers. To know, that that, which in Judas divinity is perditio, in Christs divinity, is bonum opus. In regard therefore of our own duty, to be resolute with the Apostle, Quod facio, hoc & faciam, what I do, that will I do: In respect of misconstruction with them, Mihi pro minimo est: because we may truly say and in the sight of God, Sicut deceptores, & veraces, As deceivers, yet true: Or, (with Mary Magdalen) as wasters, yet well-doers. Assuring our selves, that it is well done; and shall be both commended on earth, and rewarded in heaven. On earth: For, posterity shall better like of the shedding, than of the sale of this Oyntment. In heaven: for the day will come, qui malè judicata rejudicabit, when all perverse judgments shall have judgment against them, and Mary Magdalen shall look cheerfully on him, on whom she bestowed it; and Judas rufully behold Him, from whom he sold it.

Yet, to be done.

1 Cor 4. 3. 2 Cor. 6. 8.

This is Mary Magdalens part, as Christ telleth: that howsoever Mary Magdalen be, in Simons house or in a corner, found fault with, amends shall be made her; and as wide as the world is, and as far as the Gospel shall sound, she shall be well spoken of. Ye, when the great and glorious acts of many Monarchs shall be buried in silence, this poor box of Nardus shall be matter of praise, and never die. And contrary, howsoever Judas motion may find favor and applause in the present, yet Posterity shall dislike and discommend it: and he be no less infamous and hatefull, than Mary famous and well spoken of, in all ages to the end of the world. Verse 9.

This is her portion from Christ: her soul refreshed with the sweet joyes of Heaven; and her name, as Nardus throughout all generations. This is his lot from the Lord: A name odious and lothsome to all that hear it; and his portion with hypocrites, in the lake of fire and brimstone. From which, &c. To which, &c. Mat. 24. 51.

LUKE Chap. XVII. Ver. XXXII.

Memores eſtote Uxoris LOT.

Remember LOTS Wife.

A Part of the Chapter read this Morning, by order of the Church, for II. Leſſon.

THE words are few, and the ſentence ſhort; no one in Scripture ſo ſhort. But it fareth with Sentences as with Coines: In coines, they that in ſmalleſt compaſs contain greateſt value, are beſt eſteemed: and, in ſentences, thoſe that in feweſt words compriſe moſt matter, are moſt praiſed. Which, as of all ſentences it is true; ſo ſpecially of thoſe that are marked with Memento. In them the ſhorter, the better; the better, and the better carried away, and the better kept; and the better called for when we need it. And ſuch is this here; of rich contents, and withall exceeding compendious: So that, we muſt needs be without all excuſe, it being but three words, and but five ſyllables, if we do not remember it.

The Sentence is our Saviours, uttered by Him upon this occaſion. Before, (in Verſ. 28.) He had ſaid: that the dayes of the Son of man ſhould be as the dayes of Lot, in two reſpects: 1. In reſpect of the ſuddenneſs of the deſtruction that ſhould come: 2. And in reſpect of the ſecurity of the people, on whom it ſhould come. For, the Sodomites laughed at it; and Lots Wife (it ſhould ſeem) but ſlightly regarded it. Being then in Lots ſtory; very fitly, and by good conſequence, out of that ſtory, He leaveth us a Memento, before he leaveth it.

There are in Lots ſtory, two very notable monuments of Gods Judgment. 1. The Lake of Sodome. 2. and Lots Wives Pillar. The one, The puniſhment of reſolute ſin; the other, of faint vertue. For, the Sodomites are an example of impenitent wilfull Sinners: and Lots Wife of imperſeverant and relapſing righteous perſons.

Both theſe are in it: but Chriſt, of both theſe, taketh the latter only. For, two ſorts of men there are, for which theſe two Items are to be fitted: 1. To thoſe in ſtate of Sin that are wrong, the Lake of Sodome: Deut. 32. 32. 2. To thoſe in ſtate of Grace, that are well (if ſo they can keep them) Lots wives Pillar. To the firſt in ſtate of Sin, Moſes propoundeth the Vine of Sodome, and grapes of Gomora, quæ contacta cinereſcunt, that that if yee but touch them, turn to ashes. To the other in state of grace, Christ here, Lots wives Pillar. To the one, Jeremy crieth, Qui vecidit, adjicit ut resurgat, To the other, Saint Paul: Qui stat, videat ne cadat, Agar, that is departed from Abrahams house, with her face toward Egypt, the Angel calleth to return, and not to persevere: Lots wife, that is gone out of Sodome, and in the right way to Zoar, the Angell willeth to persevere and not to return. So that, to them this Memento is by Christ directed, that being departed from the errors of Ur, are gone out from the Sins of Sodome, are entred into the profession of the truth, or into the course of a vertuous life. So that, if we lay it to our selves, we shall lay it aright; that Lots Wife be our example, and that we sprinkle our selves with the Salt of her Pillar, ne putrescamus, that we turn not again to folly, or fall away from our own stedfastnesse. And, if it be meant to us, needful it is, that we receive it. A point (no doubt) of important consideration and necessity, as well for Religion, to call on; as for our Nature to hear of. First, for Religion: her glory it is, no less, to be able to shew antiquos Discipulos, old Professors, as Mnason was, then daily to convert and make new Proselytes. And therfore, with Christ, we must not ever be dealing with Venite ad me; but somtimes too, with Manete in me; That, hath his place: Nor ever with stimuli, goades to incite them to; but, other while, with Clavi, nails to fasten them in. For as nature hath thought requisite as well the Brests to bring up, as the Womb to bring forth: And Philosophy holdeth tueri of no less regard than querere: And with the Lawyers, Habendum is not the only thing, but Tenendum needfull too: And the Physitian as carefull of the regiment, and fearfull of the recidivation, as of the disease and cure. So Divinity is respective to both; both, to lay the ground-work surely; Ne corruat, that it shake not with Esay's Nisi credideritis; and, to roof it carefully, Ne perpluat, that it rain not thorow and rot the principals, with Pauls, Si permanseris, alioquin excideris & tu.

Mat. 11. 28. John 15. 4. Esay. 7. 9. Rom. 11. 22.

Needfull then for Religion, to call on this vertue: and, as for Religion, to call on; so, for our Nature to be called on: Wherein, as there is tenellum quid, a tender part not able to endure the cross, for which we need the vertue of Patience: So is there also ἐλλειψίν τι, a fitting humor, not able to endure the tediousnesse of any thing long; for which we no less need the vertue of Perseverance. The Prophet (in the 78 Psalm) saith, our Nature is as a Bow, which when it is bent to his full, except it be followed hard, till it be sure and fast, starts back again, and is as far off as ever it was. The Apostle compareth it to flesh (as it is) which will sine sale putrescere and if it be not corned, of it self bring forth corruption. And to help this our evil inclination forward, there be in all Ages dangerous examples, to draw on. The Israelites after they had passed the red Sea and all the perils of the desert, and were now come even to the borders of Canaan, even there say, Bene nobis erat in Ægypto, we were better in Ægypt: Let us make a Captain and return thither The Romans (in the New) as the first, so glorious Professors, that Saint Paul saith, All the world spake of their faith: After, when trouble arose, and Saint Paul was called coram, of the same Romans he saith, Nemo mihi adfuit: sed omnes deseruerunt, None stood by me, All shrunk away. And in these dangerous daves of ours. The falling away quite of divers, and some such, as have said of themselves (with Peter) Etsi omnes, non ego; and others have said of them, Etsi omnes, non ille: the declining of others, which (as Daniels image) decay by degrees; from a head of fine Gold fall to a silver brest, and from thence to loyns of brass, and thence to legs of iron, and last to feet of clay: The wavering and amaze of others that stand in the Plain (with Lots wife) looking about, and cannot tell, whether to go forward to little Zoar, or back again to the ease of Sodome; shew plainly that Lots wife is forgotten, and this is a needfull Memento, Remember Lots wife. If then it be ours, and so nearly concern us, let us see, quantum valent hæ quinque Syllabæ.

Esay. 6. 2. Rom. 1. 8. 2 Tim. 4. 16 Mat. 26. 33. Dan. 2. 32. Exod. 16. 3. Numb. 11. 18. 14. 4.

The Division

1. First, Christ sending our memory to a story past; of the use of remembring stories in general. I.
2. Secondly, Of this particular of Lots wife, and the points to be remembred in it. II.
3. Thirdly, How to apply those points, that (as S. Augustine saith) Condiant nos, & sal Sirena sit nobis condimentum vitæ, that the Salt of this Pillar may be the Season of our lives. III.

THe Prophet Esay doth call us, that stand in this place, the Lords remembrancers: As to God, for the people, by the office of Prayers; So from God, to the People, by the office of Preaching. In which office of Preaching, we are imployed as much about recognosce, as about cognosce; as much in calling to their minds the things they know and have forgot, as in teaching them the things they know not, or never learnt. The things are many, we have commission to put men in mind of. Some touching themselves: For, it is many times, too true, which the Philosopher saith: Nihil tam longè abest à nobis quàm ipsi nos, Nothing is so far from our minds, as we our selves. For, naturally (as saith the Apostle) we do παραρυῶμεν, leak, and run out; and when we have looked in the glass, we straight forget our fashion again. Therefore we have in charge to put men in mind of many things, and to call upon them with divers Memento's, Memento quia ficus latum tu, Remember the baseness of our mould what it is: Memento quia vita ventus, Remember the frailness of our life how short it is: Memento tenebrosi temporis, Remember, the dayes of darkness are comming, and they be many. All which we know well enough, and yet need to be put in mind of them.

I. The Use of stories in general.

Hob. 2. 1. James 1. 23. Job. 10. 9. Job. 7. 7. Eccles. 11. 8.

But, the storehouse, and the very life of memory, is the History of time; and a special charge have we, all along the Scriptures, to call upon men to look to that. For, all our wisdome consisting either in Experience or Memory; Experience of our own, or Memory of others; Our dayes are so short, that our Experience can be but slender, Tantùm heesterni sumus (saith Job;) and our own time cannot afford us observations enough for so many cases, as we need direction in. Needs must we then (as he here adviseth) interrogare generationem priſtinam, ask the former age, what they did in like case: search the Records of former times; wherein, our cases we ſhall be able to match, and to pattern them all. Salomon ſaith excellently, Quid eſt quod fuit? Quod futurum eſt; What is that that hath been? That that ſhall be: and back again, What is that that ſhall be? That that hath been, Et nihil novum eſt ſub Sole, and there is nothing under the Sun of which it may be ſaid, it is new, but it hath been already in the former generations. So that, it is but turning the wheel, and ſetting before us ſome caſe of Antiquity, which may ſample ours, and either remembring to follow it, if it ſell out well; or to eſchew it if the ſucceſs were thereafter. For example, by Abimelechs ſtory, King David reproveth his Captains, for purſuing the enemy too near the wall, ſeeing Abimelech miſcarried by like adventure; and ſo making uſe of remembring Abimelech. And by David's example that, in want of all other bread, refuſed not the Shew-bread, Chriſt our Saviour defendeth His Diſciples in like diſtreſs, and ſheweth, that, upon ſuch extremity, Neceſſitas doth even legem Legi dare, give a Law, even to the Law it ſelf.

Job. 8. 9.

Job. 8. Eccl. 1. 9. 2 Sam. 11. 21. Mark. 2. 25.

Seven ſeveral times we are called upon to do it: 1. Memento dierum antiquorum, (ſaith Moſes) 2. Recordamini prioris ſeculi, (Eſay.) 3. State ſuper vias antiquas, (Jeremy.) 4. Inveſtiga patrum memoriam (Job.) 5. Exemplum ſumite Prophetarum, (James.) 6. Reminiſcimini dies priſcos, (Paul.) 7. Remember Lots wife, Chriſt, here; that is, To lay our actions to thoſe we find there, and of like doings, to look for like ends. So to read ſtories paſt, as we make not our ſelves matter for ſtory to come.

1 Deut. 33. 7. 2 Eſay 46. 9. 3 Jer. 9. 16. 4 Job. 8. 8. 5 James 5. 10. 6 Heb. 10. 32.

II. Of this of Lots Wife.

Now, of and among them all, our Saviour Chriſt after a ſpecial manner commendeth unto us, this of Lots Wife. Of which thus much we may ſay, That it is the only one ſtory, which of all the ſtories of the Old Teſtament, He maketh His choiſe of, to put in His Memento; which he would have them, which have forgotten, to remember, and thoſe that remember, never to forget. Oft to repair to this ſtory, and to fetch ſalt from this Pillar: that they do not that they have done, and ſo periſh in the recidivation of Lots wife.

Then to deſcend into the particulars: I find, in ſtories, two ſorts of Memoranda: 1. Memento ſequi, Remember to follow: 2. Memento fugere, Remember to ſhun the like. Mary Magdalen unguent, an example of one; Lots wives ſalt-ſtone, an example of the other. Of (to keep us, to this ſtory) Lot looked not back, till he came ſafe to Zoar: memento ſequi. Lots wife did, and died for it: memento fugere. The verſe before ſheweth, why Chriſt laid the memento upon her. Non reſpexit, Ne reſpexerit, that we ſhould not turn or return back; as ſhe did: that we ſhould not follow her, but, when we come at this Pillar, turn at it and take another way. That is, we ſhould remember Lots wife, but follow Lot; remember her, but follow him.

Now in either of both memorials, to follow, or to flie, we alway enquire of two points (and ſo here) 1. quid fecit, 2. quid paſſa eſt: what they did, whoſe ſtory we read; and, how they ſped: The Fact, and the Effect. The Fact, Vice or Virtue: The Effect, Reward or Puniſhment.

Gen. 19. 26.

Both which, concerning this unfortunate woman, we ſet down in one verſe (in the XIX of Geneſis) what ſhe did; that She drew back, or looked back: this was her Sin. The effect, that She was turned into a Salt-ſtone: this was her puniſhment. And theſe two, are the two Memorandum's concerning her, to be remembred. First of her fault.

I. Her faults.

The Angel had given charge to Lot and his company, (in the ſeventeenth of that Chapter) Scape for thy life: Stay not in the Plain: Look not once behind thee leſt thou periſh. Scape for thy life: She ſtuffed for all that, as if no peril were. Stay not in the Plain: ſhe ſtayed ſhe behind. Look not back leſt thou die; ſhe would, and did look back, to die for it. So that, here is all that ſhe was forbid, and regarded none of the Angels words, but deſpiſed the counſel of God againſt her own ſoul. This was her ſin, the ſin of diſobedience; but conſiſteth of ſundry degrees, by which ſhe fell: needful all, to be remembred.

1 Wavering.

1. The firſt was: That ſhe did not Severè cuſtodire mandatum Dei, ſtrictly keep her to the Angels charge, but, dallied with it, and regarded it by halves; that is, ſay what he would, ſhe might uſe the matter as ſhe would; go, or ſtay and look about as ſhe liſt. Such like regard is like enough to have grown of a wandering diſtruſt; leſt happily, ſhe had left Sodome in vain, and the Angel feared them, with that which never ſhould be. The Sun roſe ſo clear, and it was ſo goodly a morning, ſhe repented, ſhe came away. Reckoning her Sons in Law more wiſe in ſtaying ſtill, than Lot and her ſelf in ſo unwiſely departing. Which is the ſin of unbelief, the bane both of Conſtancy and Perſeverance. Conſtancy, in the purpoſe of our mind, and Perſeverance in the tenure of our life.

2 Fainting.

2. From this grew the ſecond, That ſhe began to tire, and draw behind, and kept not pace with Lot and the Angels. An evil ſign, or Foul way: fainting is next hop to forſaking. Sequebatur à longe, a preparative to a giving clean over. Occaſionem quærit (ſaith Solomon) qui vult deſidere ab amico, He that hath not liſt to follow, will pick ſome quarrel or other to be caſt behind.

Prov. 18. 1.

3 Looking back.

3. This tiring, had it grown of weakneſs, or wearineſs, or want of breath, might have been both with; but, it came of another cauſe, which is the third degree. It was (ſaith the Text) at leaſt to look back, and to caſt her eye to the place, her ſoul longed after. Which ſheweth, that the love of Sodome ſticked in her ſtill: that though her feet were come from thence, her heart ſtayed there behind: and that, in look and thought ſhe returned thither, whither in body ſhe might not; but (poſſibly) would in body too, if, as Ninive did, ſo Sodome had ſtill remained.

4 Preferring Sodome to Zoar.

4. Looking back might proceed of diverſ cauſes: So might this of hers, but that Chriſt's application directs us. The verſe before ſaith, ſomewhat in the houſe, ſomething left behind affected her: Of which he gives us warning. She grew weary of trouble, and of ſhifting ſo oft: From Ur to Haran; thence, to Canaan; thence, to Egypt; thence, to Canaan again; then to Sodome; and now to Zoar; and that, in her old old daies, when ſhe would faineſt have been at reſt. Therefore, in this wearisome conceit of new trouble now to begin; and withal remembring the convenient ſeat, ſhe had in Sodome, ſhe even deſired to dye by her fleſh-pots, and to be buried in the graves of luſt: wiſhed them at Zoar, that would, and her ſelf at Sodome again: deſiring rather to end her life with eaſe in that Stately City, than to remove, and be ſafe, perhaps not, in the deſolate mountains. And this was the ſin of reſtineſs of ſoul, which affected her eyes and knees, and was the cauſe of all the former. When men weary of a good courſe, which long they have holden, for a little eaſe or wealth, or (I wote not what) other ſecular reſpect, fall away in the end: ſo looſing the praiſe and fruit of their former perſeverance, and relapſing into the danger and deſtruction, from which they had ſo neer eſcaped.

Behold, theſe were the ſins of Lots wife; A wavering of minde: Slow ſteps: the convulſion of her neck: all theſe cauſed her wearineſs and fear of new trouble, ſhe preferred Sodoms eaſe before Zoars ſafety. Remember Lots wife.

This was her ſin: and this her ſin, was in her, made much more hainous by a double circumſtance; well worth the remembring: as (ever) weighty circumſtances are matter of ſpecial regard, in a ſtory ſpecially. 1. One, that ſhe fell, after ſhe had ſtood long. 2. The other, that ſhe fell, even then, when God, by all means offered her ſafety, and ſo forſook her own mercy. The aggravation of her fall.

Touching the firſt. Theſe (a) winter brooks, (as Job termeth flitting deſultory Chriſtians) if they dry; theſe (b) Summer fruits (as Amos) if they putrifie: theſe (c) morning clouds (as Hoſea) if they ſcatter; theſe (d) ſhallow-rooted corn, if they wither and come to nothing, it is the leſs grief. No man looked for other. (e) Pharaoh with his fits, that at every plague ſent upon him, is godly on a ſudden, and, O pray for me now; and when it is gone, as profane as ever he was, beginning nine times, and nine times breaking off again; he moves not much. To go further: Saul, that for two years; Judas, that for three; Nero, that for five kept well, and then fell away, though it be much, yet may it be born. But this woman had continued now thirty years (for, ſo they reckon from Abrahams going out of Ur, to the deſtruction of Sodome:) This, this is the grief, that ſhe ſhould perſiſt all this time, and after all this time fall away. The rather, if we conſider yet further, that not onely ſhe continued many years, but ſuſtained many things in her continuance, as being companion of Abraham and Lot, in their exile, their travel, and all their affliction. This is the grief, that after all theſe ſtorms in the broad Sea well paſt, ſhe ſhould in this pittifull manner, be wracked in the haven. And when ſhe had been in Egypt, and not poiſoned with the ſuperſtitions of Egypt; when lived in Sodome, and not defiled with the ſins of Sodome; not fallen away for the famine of Canaan, nor taken harm by the fulneſs of the City of the Plain; after all this ſhe ſhould looſe the fruit of all this, and do and ſuffer ſo many things all in vain. This is the firſt: Remember it.

a Job 6. 15.
b Amos 8. 1, 2.
c Hoſea 6. 4.
d Mat. 13. 23.
e Exod. 8.

The ſecond is no whit inferiour: That, at that inſtant ſhe wofully periſhed, when Gods ſpecial favour was proffer'd to preſerve her: and that, when, of all other times ſhe had means and cauſe to ſtand; then of all other times, ſhe fell away. Many were the mercies ſhe found and felt at Gods hand, by this very title, that ſhe was Lots wife. For, by it, ſhe was incorporated into the Houſe and Family, and made partaker of the bleſſings of the faithfull Abraham. It was a mercy, to be delivered from the errors of Ur; a mercy, to be kept ſafe in Egypt; a mercy, to be preſerved from the ſin of Sodome; a mercy, to be delivered from the Captivity of the five Kings; and this the laſt and greateſt mercy, that ſhe was ſought to be delivered from the periſhing of the five Cities. This (no doubt) doth mightily aggravate the offence, that, ſo many waies before remembred by God in trouble, ſhe ſo coldly remembred Him: and that now preſently being offered grace, ſhe knoweth not the day of her viſitation: but being brought out of Sodome, and warned of the danger that might enſue; having the Angels to go before her, Lot to bear her company, her daughters to attend her, and being now at the entrance of Zoar, the haven of her reſt; this very time, place and preſence, ſhe maketh choice of, to periſh in, and to caſt away that, which God would have ſaved; in reſpect of her ſelf, deſperately; of the Angels, contemptuouſly; of her huſband and daughters, ſcandalouſly; of God and His favours, unthankefully; forſaking her own mercy, and periſhing in the ſin of wilfull defection. 2. Now, when beſt means of ſtanding.

Remember Lots wife and theſe two, 1. That ſhe looked back, after ſo long time, and ſo many ſufferings: 2. That ſhe looked back, after ſo many, ſo mercifull, and ſo mighty protections. And remember this withall, That ſhe looked back onely, and went not back: Would, it may be but that it was all on fire. But, whether ſhe would or no, or whether we do or no, this fore-thinking our ſelves, we be gone out, this faint proceeding, this ſtaying in the plaine, this convulſion of the neck, and writhing the eyes back; this irreſolute wavering whether we ſhould chooſe, either bodily pleaſures in periſhing Sodome, or the ſafety of our ſouls in little Zoar, was her ſin; And this is the ſin of ſo many as ſtand as ſhe ſtood, and look as ſhe looked, though they go not back: but, if they go back too, they ſhall juſtifie her, and heap upon themſelves a more heavie condemnation. So much for the ſin, which we ſhould remember, to avoid.

Now for her puniſhment, which we muſt remember, to eſcape. 2 Her Puniſhments.

This relapſe in this manner, that the world might know it to be a ſin highly diſpleaſing his Majeſty, God hath not onely marked it for a ſin, but ſalted it too, that it might never be forgotten.

The wages and puniſhment of this ſin of hers, was it, which is the wages of all ſin, that is, Death. Death, in her (ſure) worthily, that refuſed life with ſo eaſie conditions, as the holding of her head ſtill, and would needs look back and dye. Death. Rom. 6. 23.

The ſound of Death is fearfull, what death ſoever: yet it is made more fearfull four waies; which all be in this of hers.

1. We

1. Sudden. 1. We desire to die with respite; and sudden death, we fear and pray against. Her death was sudden, back she looked, and never looked forward more. It was her last look.

2. In the act of sin. 2. We desire to have remorse of sin ere we be taken away; and death in the very act of sin, is most dangerous. Her death was so. She died in the very convulsion; She died with her face to Sodome.

3. Unusu. 3. We would die the common death of mankinde, and be visited after the visitation of other men: and an unusual strange death is full of terrour. Hers was so. Gods own hand from Heaven, by a strange and fearfull visitation.

4. Without burial. 4. Our wish is, to die, and to be buried, and not to remain a spectacle above ground which Nature abhorreth: She so died, as she remained a spectacle of Gods wrath and a by-word to posterity, and as many as passed by. For until Christs time, and after, this monument was still extant, and remained undefaced so many hundred years. Josephus (a Writer of good account, which lived after this) saith ἱστόρηκα ἀυτὴν ἔτι καὶ νῦν διαμένουσαν: I my self have seen and beholden it, for it stands to be seen to this day. A reed she was, a Pillar she is; which she seemed to be, but was not. She was melting water: She is congealed to salt. Thus have we both her fault and punishment: Let us remember both: To shun the fault, that the penalty light not on us.

III. Now, this Pillar was erected, and this verdure given it, for our sakes. For, among the many waies

Our Lesson from it is. that the wisdome of God useth to dispose of the sin of man, and out of evil to draw good, this is one, and a chief one, that he suffereth not their evil examples to vanish as a shadow, but maketh them to stand as Pillars for Ages to come, with the Heathen mans inscription, Ἐς ἐμὲ τὸν ὁρῶντα φόβος ἴσχω: Look on me, and learn by me, to serve God better.

And, an high benefit it is for us, that He not onely embalmeth the memory of the Just for our Imitation; but also powdreth and maketh brine of the Evil, for our admonition: that, as a Scent from Mary Magdalens ointment; So, a relish from Lots wives pillar, should remain to all posterity.

Profane persons, in their perishing, God could dash to pieces, and root out their remembrance from off the earth. He doth not, but suffereth their Quarters (as it were) to be set up in stories, Ut pœna Impii sit eruditio Justi, that their punishment may be our advertisement. Poureth not out their blood, nor casts

Psal.58.10. it away, but saves it for a Bath, Ut lavet Justus pedes in sanguine peccatoris, that the Righteous may wash their footsteps in the blood of the ungodly: that all (even the ruine of the wicked) may cooperate to the good

Rom.8.28. of them that fear God. This woman, in her inconstancy, could He have sunk into the earth, or blown up as salt-petre, that no remembrance should have remained of her: He doth not; but, for us, and for our sakes, He erecteth a Pillar: And not a Pillar onely, to point and gaze at; but a Pillar or rock of salt, whence we may and must fetch, wherewith to season whatsoever is unsavoury in our lives. And this, this, is the life and soul of memory: this is wisdome. The art of extracting salt, out of the wicked; Triacle, out of vipers; our own happiness, out of aliena pericula: and to make those that were unprofitable to themselves, profitable to us. For (sure) though Lots wife were evil, her salt is good. Let us see then, how to make her evil, our good: see, if we can draw any savoury thing from this example.

1 Perseverance. 1. That which we should draw out, is perseverance, Muria virtutum (as Gregory calleth it) the Preserver of vertues, without which (as Somer fruits) they will perish and putrifie: The Salt of the Covenant; without wh ch, the flesh of our Sacrifice will take wind and corrupt. But S. Austine (better) Regina virtutum, the Queen of vertues; for that, however the rest run and strive, and do masteries, yet, Perseverantia sola coronatur. Perseverance is the onely crowned vertue.

2. Care. 2. Now perseverance we shall attain, if we can possess our souls with the due care, and rid them of Security. Of Lots wives security, as of water, was this Salt here made. And, if security (as water) do

Phil.3.13. but touch it, it melts away presently. But Care will make us fix our eye, and gather up our feet, and, forgetting that which is behind, tendere in anteriora, to follow hard toward the prize of our high calling.

3. Fear. 3. And, to avoid Security, and to breed in us due care, S. Bernard saith. Fear will do it: Vis in timore securus esse? securitatem time; The onely way to be secure in fear, is to fear security. S. Paul had gi-

Rom.11.22. ven the same counsel before, that, to persevere: Si permanseris, no better advice, than Noli altum sapere, sed time.

Considerations out of her fatth. Now, from her Story, these considerations are yeelded, each one as an handfull of salt to keep us, and to make us keep.

First, that we see; as of Christs twelve, which he had sorted and selected from the rest, one miscarried; Et illum gregem non timuit lupus intrare, and that the Wolf feared not to seize, no, not upon that Flock: and as of Noahs eight that were saved from the Flood, one fell away too; So, that of Lots four, here, and but four in all, all came not to Zoar, one came short. So that, of twelve, of eight, of four; yea, a little after (*ver.*35.) of two, one is refused: that we may remember, few there be that scape from Sodome in the Angels company; and of those (few though they be) all are not safe neither: Who would not fear, if one may perish in the company of Angels?

2. Secondly, That as one miscarrieth; so, not every one, but one that had continued so long, and suffered so many things, and after all this continuance, and all these sufferings, falls from her estate, and turns all out and in; and, by the inconstancy of one hour, maketh void the perseverance of so many years,

Ezek.18.24. and (as Ezekiel saith) In the day, they turn away to iniquity, all the former righteousness they have done, shall not be remembred.

3. Thirdly, That as she perisheth; So, at the same time, that Sodome: She, by it; and it, by her. That, one end cometh to the sinner without repentance, and to the just, without perseverance. One end, to the abomination of Sodome, and to the recidivation of Lots wife; Et non egredientes, & egredientes reſpicientes: They that go not out of her, periſh; and they that go out of her, periſh too, if they look back. Lacus Aſphaltites, is a monument of the one, Lots Wives ſalt ſtone, a memorial of the other.

to

Laſtly, That as one periſheth, and that ſuch an one; So, that ſhe periſheth at the gates, even hard at the entry of Zoar: which of all other, is moſt fearfull: So near her ſafety, ſo hard at the gates of her deliverance. Remember, that near to Zoar gates, there ſtands a ſalt ſtone. 4.

Theſe very thoughts, what her caſe was, theſe four waies; and what ours may be (who are no better than ſhe was) will ſearch us like ſalt, and teach us; that as, if we remember what we have been, we may (ſaith S. Bernard) erubeſcere; ſo, if we remember what we may be, we may contremiſcere: that, we ſee our beginnings, but ſee not our ending: we ſee our Stadium, not our dolichum. And that as we have great need to pray (with the Prophet) Thou haſt taught me from my youth up, until now, forſake me not in mine old age, now when I am gray-headed; So, we had need ſtir up our care of continuing, ſeeing we ſee it is nothing to begin, except we continue; nor to continue, except we do it to the end. Pſal. 71. 18.

Remember, we make not light account of the Angels Serva animam tuam: bleſſing our ſelves in our hearts, and ſaying, Non fiet tibi hoc; we ſhall come ſafe, go we never ſo ſoft: Zoar will not run away. Mat. 16. 22.

Remember, we be not weary to go whither God would have us; not to Zoar, though a little one, if our ſoul may there live; and never buy the eaſe of our body, with the hazard of our ſoul, or a few daies of vanity with the loſs of eternity.

Remember, we ſlack not our pace, nor ſtand ſtill on the Plain. For, if we ſtand ſtill, by ſtill ſtanding, we are meet to be made a Pillar, even to ſtand ſtill, and never to remove.

Remember, we look not back, either with her, on the vain delights of Sodome left; or with Peter, on S. John behind us, to ſay, Domine, Quid iſte? both, will make us forget our following. None that eaſteth his eye th'other way, is διάθετος, meet as he ſhould be, meet for the Kingdom of God. John 21. 20. Luke 9. 62.

But ſpecially remember we leave not our heart behind us, but that we take that with us, when we go out of Sodome: for if that ſtay, it will ſtay the feet, and writhe the eye, and neither the one nor the other will do their duty. Remember, that our heart wander not, that our heart long not. This Care, if it be fervent, will bring us Perſeverance.

Now, that we may the better learn ſomewhat out of her puniſhment too: Let us remember alſo, that as to her, ſo to us, God may ſend ſome unuſual viſitation, and take us ſuddenly away, and in the act of ſin too. Out of her puniſhment.

Remember the danger and damage: It is no leſs matter we are about, than perdet animam. Which if we do, we fruſtrate and forfeit all the fruit of our former well-continued courſe; all we have done, is vain. Yea, all that Chriſt hath done for us is in vain; whoſe pains and ſufferings we ought ſpecially to tender, knowing, that Supra omnem laborem labor irritus, No labour to loſt labour; and Chriſt then hath loſt his labour for us.

Remember the folly: that beginning in the ſpirit we end in the fleſh: turning our backs to Zoar, we turn our face to Sodome: joyning to a head of fine gold, feet of clay, and to a precious foundation, a covering of thatch. Gal. 3. 3.

Remember the Diſgrace: that we ſhall loſe our credit and accompt, while we live, and ſhall hear that of Chriſt, Hic homo; and that other, Quid exiſtis in deſertum videre? A reed ſhaken with the wind. Luke 14. 14. Mat. 11. 7.

Remember the Scandal: That, falling our ſelves, we ſhall be a block for to make others fall: a ſin no lighter; nor leſs, nor lighter than a mil-ſtone. Mat. 18. 6.

Remember the Infamy: That we ſhall leave our memory remaining in ſtories, among Lots Wife, and Jobs Wife, Demas and Eebolius, and the number of Relapſed, there to ſtand to be pointed at, no leſs than this heap of Salt.

Remember the Judgement that is upon them after their relapſe; though they live, that they do even (with her here) obrigeſcere, wax hard and numb, and ſerve others for a caveat, wholly unprofitable for themſelves.

Remember the difficulty of reclaiming to good: Seven evil ſpirits entring in ſtead of one, that their laſt ſtate is worſe than the firſt. Mat 12. 45.

And laſtly, Remember that we ſhall juſtifie Sodome by ſo doing; and her frozen ſin ſhall condemn our melting vertue. For, they in the wilfulneſs of their wickedneſs perſiſted till fire from heaven conſumed them: And, they being thus obdurate in ſin, ought not ſhe (and we much more) to be conſtant in vertue? And, if the drunkard hold out, till he have loſt his eyes; the unclean perſon, till he have waſted his loyns; the contentious, till he have conſumed his wealth, Quis pudor quòd infelix populus Dei non habet tantam in bono perſeverantiam, quantam mali in malo! What ſhame is it, that Gods unhappy people ſhould not be as conſtant in vertue, as theſe miſcreants have been, and be in vice?

Each of theſe by it ſelf; all theſe put together, will make a full Memento: which if ſhe had remembred, ſhe had been a Pillar of light in heaven, not of ſalt in earth. It is too late, for her: we, in due time yet, may remember it.

And, when we have remembred theſe, Remember Chriſt too, that gave the Memento: that He calleth Himſelf Alpha and Omega; not onely Alpha for His happy beginning; but Omega, for his thrice happy ending. For that he left us not, nor gave over the work of our redemption, till He had brought it to Conſummatum eſt: And that, on our part, Summa Religionis eſt, imitari quem colis, The higheſt act of Religion, is, for the Chriſtian to conform himſelf, not to Lots wife, but to Chriſt, whoſe Name he weareth. And though Verus amor non ſumit vires de ſpe, True love (indeed) receiveth no manner of ſtrength from hope; Apoc. 1. 8.

but,

but, though it hope for nothing, loveth nevertheleſs; yet, to quicken our love, which oft is but faint, and, for a full Memento, Remember the reward. Remember, how Chriſt will remember us for it, which ſhall not be the wages of an hireling, or (Leaſe-wiſe) for time, and tearm of years, but αἰῶνες αἰωνῶν, Eternity it ſelf, never to expire, end, or determine, but to laſt and endure for ever and ever.

Ezek 9.4. But this reward (ſaith Ezekiel) is for thoſe, whoſe foreheads are marked with Tau, which (as Omega in Greek) is the laſt letter in the Hebrew Alphabet, and the mark of conſummatum eſt, among them: They onely ſhall eſcape the wrath to come. And this crown is laid up for them, not of whom it may be

Gal 5.7. ſaid, Currebatis bene, Ye did run well; but, for thoſe that can ſay (with S. Paul) Curſum conſummavi,

2 Tim.4.7. I have finiſhed my courſe well.

And (thanks be to God) we have not hitherto wanted this ſalt, but remembred Lots wife well. So that, this exhortation, becauſe we have prevented and done that which is called for, changeth his nature, and becometh a commendation, as all others do. A commendation (I ſay:) yet not ſo much of the people (whoſe onely felicity is to ſerve and be ſubject to one that is conſtant; for otherwiſe, we know how wavering a thing the multitude is) as of the Prince, whoſe conſtant ſtanding giveth ſtrength to many a weak knee otherwiſe. And Bleſſed be God and the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that we ſtand in the preſence of ſuch a Prince: who hath ever accounted of Perſeverance, not onely as of Regina virtutum, the Queen of vertues; but, as of virtus Reginarum, the vertue of a Queen. Who (like Zorobabel) firſt, by Princely magnanimity, laid the Corner-ſtone, in a troubleſome time: and ſince, by Heroical conſtancy, through many both alluring proffers and threatning dangers, hath brought forth the Head-ſtone alſo, with the Prophets acclamation, Grace, grace, unto it. Grace, for ſo happy a beginning; and Grace, for ſo thrice happy an ending. No terrors, no enticement; no care of her ſafety hath removed her from her ſtedfaſtneſs: but, with a fixed eye, with ſtraight ſteps, with a reſolute minde, hath entred her ſelf, and brought us into Zoar. It is a little one, but therein our ſouls ſhall live; and we are in ſafety, all the Cities of the Plaine being in combuſtion round about us. Of whom it ſhall be remembred, to her high praiſe,

2 Cor.13.5. not onely that of the Heathen Illaque virgo viri; but, that of David, that, all her daies ſhe ſerved God, with a covenant of Salt, and with her Iſrael, from the firſt day until now. And of this be we perſwaded, that He which began this good work in her, will perform it unto the day of Jeſus Chriſt, to her everlaſting praiſe, comfort and joy, and, in her, to the comfort, joy and happineſs of us all.

Yet it is not needleſs, but right requiſite, that we which are the Lords Remembrancers put you in minde, that as Perſeverance is the Queen of vertues, quia ea ſola coronatur; ſo is it alſo, quia Satanas ei ſoli inſidiatur, for that, all Satans malice, and all his practices are againſt it: The more carefull need we to be, to carry in our eye this example. Which God grant we may, and that our hearts may ſeriouſly regard, and our memories carefully keep it. Ut hæc columna fulciat nos, & hic ſal condiat nos, that this Pillar may prop our weakneſs, and this ſalt ſeaſon our ſacrifice; that it may be remembred, and accepted, and rewarded in the day of the Lord. Which, &c.

Preached in the

RICHMOND,

On Tueſday, being the Fifth of March,

An. Dom. 1596.

LUKE Chap. XVI. Ver. XXV.

Fili, recordare, &c.

Son, remember that thou, in thy life time, receivedſt thy pleaſure (or good things,) and likewiſe Lazarus pains: Now therefore is he comforted, and thou art tormented.

THis Scripture hath the name given it in the very firſt words, Recordare Fili, Son remember: It is a Remembrance.

There be many Sermons of remembrance here on earth: this, is one from Heaven, from the mouth of Abraham. Not now on earth, but in heaven, and from thence beholding (not in a glaſs of darke ſpeech, but) intuitive, that which he telleth us: and He that ſaw it bare witneſs, and his witneſs is true. 1 Cor. 13 2. John. 19. 35.

Which may ſomewhat move attention: Or, if that will not, let me ad farther, That it is ſuch a remembrance, that it toucheth our eſtate in everlaſting life; That is, the well or evil hearing of this Recordare, is as much as our eternal life is worth. For, we find both in it. That our Comfort or Torment eternal (Comfort, in Abrahams boſome; Torment, in the fire of hell) depend upon it: and therefore as much as we regard them, we are to regard it.

The Remembrance is directed to a Son of Abrahams; not ſo much for him, as for the reſt. For, it is to be feared, that both the ſons of Abraham, and the daughters of Sarah forget this point overmuch; and many of them (with this party here, to whom it is ſpoken) never remember it till it be too late.

To Abrahams ſons then, all and every one. But ſpecially, ſuch of his ſons, as preſently are in the ſtate that this ſon (here) ſometime was, of whom it is ſaid: He had received good things in his life. By vertue whereof, I find, this Recordare will reach home to us; for that we are within the compaſs of this Recepiſti. For truly, the ſum of our Receipt hath been great; No Nation ſo great: And, our Recordare, little; I will not ſay, how little, but (ſure) too little for that, we have received.

Now, albeit it be all our caſe (for, we all have received) yet, not all our caſe alike; but of ſome, more than other. For, ſome have received in far more plentiful manner, than other ſome; and they therefore more deeply intereſſed in it. And look, who among us have received moſt, them it moſt concerneth: and they (of all other) moſt need to look to it.

If you ask, Why they more than others? For that (beſides the duty) to whom a great Recepiſti is given, of them a great Recordare will be required. The danger alſo helps them forward. For, ſo it oft happeneth unhappily: that, whereas Recepiſti is made (and ſo may well be) a motive, for us to remember: ſo croſs is our nature, none is ſo great an enemy to Recordare as it. Our great receiving is oft occaſion of our little remembring. And as a full diet in the veſſels of our body; ſo, a plenteous receipt breeds ſtoppings in the mind, and memory, and the vital parts of our ſoul.

We have hereof a lively example before our eyes: : And ſuch an one, as if it move us not, I know not what will. A receipt, for memories that ſuffer obſtructions.

Our Saviour Chriſt unlocked hell gates to let us ſee it. In diſcovering what ſighes and what ſufferings are in the other world, he ſheweth us our lying in them, to whom Abraham objecteth, that this frank receiving had marred his memory. And as he ſheweth us his fault, ſo (withal) what came to him for it, in that ſtrange and fearfull conſequent: Now therefore thou art tormented.

Verſe 9. This example is told by our Saviour (in the XIIII. verſe) to other rich men, and troubled with the ſame lethargie. Who, when he put them in mind, it would not be amiſs, while they were here, to make them friends of that they had received, that, when this failed them (as fail them it muſt) that might receive them into everlaſting tabernacles: forget themſelves ſo far, as they derided His counſel; not, in words, but per myſteriſmum. Which maketh Him fall from Parables, to a plain ſtory (for, ſo it is holden by the beſt Interpreters, both old and later:) and, from everlaſting tabernacles, to everlaſting torments: That, howſoever they regarded not His Recordare on earth, they had beſt give better ear to Abrahams, from Heaven.

It is his intent, in reporting of it, that our remembring of it ſhould keep us from it. Non vult mortem, & minatur mortem, ne mittat in mortem, (ſaith Chryſoſtome:) He would not have us in that place; yet he telleth us of that place, to the end we never come in that place.

Yea, it is Abrahams deſire too, we ſhould not be overtaken, but think of it in time; and prevent it, before it prevent us. And therefore he lifteth up his voice and cryeth out of Heaven, Recordare fili.

And, not only Abraham, but he that was in the place it ſelf, and beſt knew the terror, becauſe he felt it; felt that, in it, as he heartily wiſheth and inſtantly ſueth, that they, whom he loveth, or any way wiſheth well to, may ſome way take warning, Ne & ipſi veniant, That they alſo come not into that place of torments. Verſe 27. 28.

This uſe, Chriſt on earth, Abraham from Heaven, and he out of hell, wiſh we may have of it. And we (I truſt) will wiſh our ſelves no worſe than they: and therefore look to our Recordare, carry it in mind, and (in Recordare, there is Cor, too) take it to heart; and by both, in time take order, Ne & ipſi venamus.

The Diviſion The verſe it ſelf (if we mark it well) is in figure and proportion, an exact croſs. For, as a Croſs, it conſiſteth of two barrs or beams ſo ſituate, as the one doth quarter the other. Thou receivedſt good things, and Lazarus received evil. Theſe two lye clean contrary: But meet both, at the middle word, Now therefore: and there, by a new Antitheſis, croſs each other: ὁ δὲ, He that received evil, is comforted: and σὺ δὲ, thou that didſt receive good, art tormented. And, to make it a perfect Croſs, it hath a title or Inſcription too, ſet over it: and this it is, Recordare fili. And ſure, next to the Croſs of Chriſt and the memory thereof, this croſs of Abrahams invention and exaltation is (of all others) moſt effectual. And I verily perſwade my ſelf, if we often would fix it before our eyes, and well mark the inſcription, it would be a ſpecial preparation to our Paſſeover (meaning, by our Paſſeover, our end) whereby paſs we muſt, yer long, into another ſtate, either of miſery or bliſs: but, whether of miſery, or bliſs, it will lye much in the uſe of this word Recordare.

I. First then we will treat, 1. of the Croſs: After, 2. of the Title.

II. We have in the Croſs two Barres: But, with both, we will not meddle. For, why ſhould we deal with Lazarus? This place is not for him; nor he no room in this Auditory. Therefore, waving his part, in this other (of the Rich mans) we have two quarters, repreſenting unto us two eſtates: [a] The upper part, or head, Recepiſti bona in vitâ, his eſtate, in this life, [b] The nether, or foot, jam verò torqueris: his eſtate, in the other.

Of theſe two: 1. That, two they are: 2. which they be: 3. and how they be faſtened, or tenanted the one to the other, with the Illative, therefore.

I. Of the Croſs. TWO quarter out this Croſs: Two parts it ſtands of; which two parts are two eſtates; 1. One paſt, 2. The other, preſent: The one, in Memory: The other, in experience. Now, both memory and experience (memory of things paſt, and experience of things preſent) are (both) hand-maids to providence, and ſerve to provide for things to come. And, of all points of providence, for that which is the higheſt point of all, that our memory of it, keep us from experience of this place, this concluſion.

1. The upper part of it; the preſent eſtate. In vitâ tuâ re-gnicolæ. Theſe two are ſet down: 1. The one eſtate, in the words Vitâ tuâ: 2. The other, in the words Jam verò, but now. The former, paſt with him, and yet peſent with us: For, we yet receive. The latter, preſent with him, but (with us) yet to come, or rather (I truſt) never to come: Jam verò torqueris.

1 The firſt is the life in eſſe, which we all now live: which though it be one and the ſame, yet is there in it a ſenſible difference, Pauper & dives obviaverunt, of ſome poor, and ſome rich, every day meeting each other.

2 But, Nemo dives, ſemper dives: and again, Nemo pauper, ſemper pauper. They that be rich in it, ſhall not ever be rich; nor they that are poor, poor alway. It came to paſs (ſaith the Scripture) that the begger died (verſe 22) Mortuus eſt etiam & dives, and the rich man (for all his riches) died alſo. There ends the firſt eſtate.

3 But, that end is no final end. For, after Vitâ tuâ there is a Jam verò, ſtill: a ſecond ſtate in reverſion, to take place when the firſt is expired. Our hearts miſgive us of ſome ſuch eſtate: and (as the Heathen man ſaid) they, that put it off with quis ſit? who can tell, whether ſuch eſtate be? ſhall never be able to rid their minds of quid ſit? but, what if ſuch a one be, how then? But, to put us (that be Chriſtians) out of all doubt, our Saviour Chriſt, by this ſtory, openeth us a Caſement into the other life, and ſheweth us, whither we go, when we go hence.

1. Firſt, That, as in this life (though but one, yet) there are two diverſe eſtates; to death (though it be, but one neither) hath two ſeveral paſſages: And, thorow it, as thorow one and the ſame City gate, the honeſt ſubject walketh abroad for his recreation, and the lewd malefactor is carried out to his execution.

2 Two ſtates then there be, after death; and theſe two diſ-joned in place, diſſlike in condition: both ſet down within the verſe; 1. One, of comfort: 2. The other, of torment.

3 And, that both theſe take place jam, preſently. For, immedialy after his death, and, while all his five brethen yet lived, and yet any of them were dead, he was in his torments, and did not expect the general Judgment, nor was not deferred to the end of the world.

4 And (to make it a compleat croſs, for ſo it is) as the poor and rich meet here, ſo do they, there, alſo, otherwiſe; and go two contrary wayes, every one to his own place. Lazarus to his boſome, the rich man to his gulf: and, ones miſery endeth in reſt; the others purple and fine linnen in a flame of fire. Verè ſtupendæ vicis (ſaith Chriſoſtome) verily a ſtrange change, a change to be wondred at: to be wondred at and feared, of thoſe whom it may concern any manner of way, and (at any hand) to be had in remembrance.

To apply theſe two, to the party, we have in hand, and to begin with the firſt eſtate, firſt. Two things are in it ſet down by him: 1. The one, in the word Fili: 2. The other, in the word Recepiſti. 1.

Firſt, that he was Abrahams ſon, and ſo, of the religion only true: and one, that (as himſelf ſaith of himſelf) had had Moſes and the Prophets, though tanquam non habens, as though he had them not. For, little he uſed, and leſs he regarded them; yet, a Profeſſor he was. 1 Fili.

Secondly: as by nature, Abrahams ſon: ſo by condition or office, one of Gods Receivers. Receivers we are, every one of us, more or leſs: but yet, in receipts, there is a great latitude. Great, between her, that received two mites; and him, that received a thouſand talents. Between them, that receive tegumenta only, covering for their nakedneſs; and them, that receive ornamenta, rich attire alſo, for comlineſs: and again, that receive alimenta, food for emptineſs; and oblectamenta, delicious fare for daintineſs. Now, he was not of the pety, but of the main receipt. It is ſaid: He received good things, and it is told, what theſe good things were, Purple of the faireſt, and linnen of the fineſt: and quotidie ſplendidè, every day a double feaſt. Which one thing, though there were nothing elſe, asketh a great Receipt alone. Here, Rich; in this life; and who would not ſue to ſucceed him in it? One would think, this wood would make no croſs, nor theſe premiſes ſuch a now therefore. But, to him, that was thus and had thus, all this plenty, all this pleaſure; poſt tantas divitias, poſt tantas delitias; to him, it is ſpoken, but now thou art tormented. Which firſt eſtate, as it was rich, ſo it was ſhort: therefore, I make ſhort with it, to come to cruciaris. Which, though in ſyllables, it is ſhorter, yet it is in ſubſtance, that peece to which he is faſtened, in length of continuance far beyond it. 2 Recepiſti.

Cruciaris is but one word, but much weight lieth in it: therfore it is not ſlightly to be paſſed over, as being the ſpecial object of our Recordare, and the principal part of the croſs indeed. Two wayes our Saviour Chriſt expreſſeth it: 1. One while under the term βασανὸς, which is torture: 2. Another, under the term ὀδύνη, which is anguiſh of the ſpirit: referring this, to the inward pain: and that, to the outward paſſion. The ſoul being there ſubjected by Gods juſtice, to ſenſual pain, for ſubjecting it ſelf willingly to bruiſh ſenſuality, in this life, it being a more noble and celeſtial ſubſtance. 2. The nether part of the croſs. The ſecond ſtate, Cruciari.

Of which pain, Saint Chryſoſtome noteth, that becauſe many of us can skill, what torment the tongue hath, in extremity of a burning ague; and what pain our hand feeleth, when from the hearth ſome ſpark lighteh on it: Chriſt choſe to expreſs them in theſe two. Not, but that they be incomparably greater than theſe: yea, far above all we can ſpeak, or think: but that fleſh and blood conceiveth but what it feeleth, and muſt be ſpoken to, as it may underſtand. And it is a ground, that, in termes (here and elſ-where) proportioned to our conceit, torments are uttered farre beyond all conceit: which, labouring to avoid, we may; but labouring to expreſs, we ſhall never do it.

Yet, to help them ſomewhat, we ſhall the more deeply apprehend them, if we do but campare them: as we may; and never go out of the confines of our own verſe.

With Recepiſti, firſt. To conſider this: that his torment is in the preſent tenſe, now upon him, Cruciaris, His good, all paſt and gone, Recepiſti. Mark (ſaith S. Auguſtine) of his pleaſure, omnia dicit de præterito; Dives erat, veſtiebatur, Epulabatur, Recepiſti: He was rich, did go, did fare, had received: was, did, and had; all paſt, and vaniſhed away; all (like the counterpane of a Leaſe) expired, and our Abraham likneth it to wages, received and ſpent before-hand. 1.

2. Secondly, If we lay together his torments, and bona tua in vitâ. For, we ſhall finde, they are of a diverſe ſcantling. The one had an end with his life; and ô quam ſubito! The other, when it beginneth once, ſhall never have an end. That life is not like this. No: if all the lives of all, (I ſay not of men, women, and children, but of all) and every of the creatures, that ever lived upon the earth, or ſhall live to the worlds end, were all added one to another, and all ſpun into one life, this one exceedeth them all. This then (I make no queſtion) will make another degree, to think, quod delectabat fuit momentaneum, quod cruciat eſt æternum.

3. Thirdly, If we match it with Lazarus autem; that is, with the ſight of others in that eſtate, whence he is excluded: and in them, with ſorrow to conſider, what himſelf might have had and hath loſt for ever. Chap. 13. 28. There ſhall be (ſaith Chriſt of this point) weeping, and gnaſhing of teeth, to ſee Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and all the Prophets in the Kingdom of God, and your ſelves thruſt out of doors. Not onely weeping, for grief that themſelves have loſt it; but gnaſhing of teeth alſo, for very indignation, that others have obtained it. And, of others, not ſome other; but, that Lazarus iſte, one of theſe poor people, whom we ſhun in the way, and drive our coaches apace to eſcape from: that, of them, it may fall, we may ſee ſome in bliſs, when Pſal. 84. 15. they ſhall lye in hell like ſheep (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) that walked on earth like Lions. Will not this bear a third?

4. But beyond all theſe, If we counterpoiſe it with the word παρακαλεῖται, is comforted, with which Abraham hath ſet it in oppoſition: Torment oppoſed to comfort: (that is) torment comfortleſs, wherein, no manner hope of any kind of comfort. Neither of the comfort of mitigation; for (in the verſe next before) all hope of καταψυξις, relief is denied, even to a drop of water: Verſe 24. Neither of the comfort of delivery at laſt; for (in the verſe next following) Verſe 26. he is willed to know, that by reaſon of the great partition, their caſe is ſuch, ut non poſſunt, that they cannot preſently, or for ever, look for any paſſage from thence, but muſt there tarry in torments everlaſtingly. So, neither comfort of relief, nor of delivery: nor the poor comfort, which, in all miſeries (here) doth not leave us ——dabit Deus his quoq; finem; An end will come: Nay, no end will never come. Which [never] is never deeply enough imprinted, nor ſeriouſly enough conſidered. That this [now] ſhall be ſtill now, and never have an end: and this cruciaris be cruciaris for ever, and never declined into the preter tenſe, as Recepiſti was. This is an exaltation of this croſſe, above all elſe: None ſhall ever come down from it: none ſhall ever beg out body, to lay it in our ſepulchre.

5. Fifthly, If we lay it to Recordare. For, may I not adde to all theſe, that, being in this caſe, he heareth Recordare, and is willed to remember, when his remembring will do him no good: but though he remember it, in ſorrow, and in the bitterneſs of his ſoul: yea, though his ſorrow be above meaſure ſorrowfull, it will profit him nothing? I ſay, Grief both utterly comfortleſs, and altogether unprofitable.

Theſe five make him that feels it (here) wiſh, that none of thoſe, he wiſheth well, may ever come there to know, how hot that fire, or how terrible that torment is.

Theſe five words are (all) within the compaſs of the Verſe it ſelf; and may ſerve (every one) as a nail to faſten our memory to this croſs: that, we may ever remember it and never forget it, and, never forgetting it, never feel it.

This then is his croſs. We long (I know) to have it taken down; our ears are dainty, and the matter melancholike, and we little love to hear it ſtood on ſo long. But, Chryſoſtome ſaith well of that fire: Nunquid, ſi tacuimus, extinximus? If we ſpeak not of it, will it go out? No, no: ſive loquamur, ſive taceamus, ardet ille: ſpeak we, or keep we ſilence, it burneth ſtill, ſtill it burneth. Therefore, let us ſpeak, and think of it, and let it ſtand in the Name of God: Et exerceamus auditum (ſaith the good Father) ne ita molleſcat, and keep our ears in exerciſe, that they grow not nice. If, to hear of it, be painfull; to feel it will be more. The invention is to keep the exaltation, to take it up. For, none ſo near it as they, qui non tollunt, donec ſuper imponitur, that take it not up, till it be laid upon them.

3. Thus, we have ſeverally ſeen the counter-points of this croſs: the top, which is in vitâ, in this life; and the foot, which reacheth ad noviſſima inferni, to the bottom of hell. It remaineth we tenon both theſe together, as antecedent and conſequent: Thou didſt receive: Now therefore. The joyning, or Tenon. Jam vero. 1. That they may be. 2. And then, how they may be joyned.

1. Firſt then we find, that Recepiſti is, and it ends; and that, by this example, it may end in cruciaris, and prove the one end of an heavy Croſs. Which firſt bringeth us out of admiration of the riches of this life. When we ſee, that theſe good things, which (after the tax of the world) are counted, and (in a manner) ſtiled the only good things, and in the deceitfull ballance of this world, weigh down Abrahams boſome; be not ever demonſtrative ſigns of Gods ſpecial liking: Nor they, ipſo facto higheſt in His favour, that receive them in greateſt meaſure: Nor peradventure (as Chriſt ſaith) Verſe 15. ſo highly accompted of in Heaven, as they be on earth. Therefore, they that have them, not to reflect too much on them; nor be ideò inflati (as ſaith Saint Auguſtine) quia obſericati; as much pride in their ſoul, as purple on their body. And they that have them not, not to æmulari, vex and grieve themſelves at Nabals wealth, Hamans preferment, this mans table; ſeeing there cometh a Jam verò; and when that cometh, we ſhall ſee ſuch an alteration in his ſtate, as he that wiſheth him worſt, ſhall wiſh, that for every good thing, he received here, he had received a thouſand; and (with S. Bernard) Ut omnes lapides converterentur in roſas, that every ſtone under his feet here had been turned into a roſe. Such is his caſe, now: and ſuch theirs, that come where he is.

2. Is this all? No. But, as it bringeth us out of admiration; ſo it bringeth us into fear. For, two things it offereth, either of which is, or may be matter of fear. 1. Firſt, in that he is Abrahams ſon. That Abraham hath hath of his ſeed in hell: and that all his ſons ſhall not reſt in their Fathers boſome. Which offereth us occaſion to fear, for all our Profeſſion. For, though he were a ſon too, and ſo acknowledged by Abraham, yet, there he is now.

2. In that he is of Abraham's rich ſons, and one that received good things in his life. Which miniſtreth new matter of fear: that (as the Prophet ſaith) Tophet is prepared of old, and that even for great ones; for ſuch as go in purple, and wear fine linnen, and fare full daintily: Even for ſuch, it is prepared. Not, as every priſon, for common perſons; but, as Tophet (or the Tower) for great Eſtates. So that it may ſeem, either of both theſe have their danger at their heels; For, that, they to him were; to many, they are: and to us they may be, as Antecedents to an evil Conſequent. Eſay 30. 33.

Men verily may flatter themſelves: But ſure, I can never think but there is more, in this Now therefore, than the World will allow. And that this Recordare or Abraham's is not a matter ſo ſlightly to be ſlipped over. There is ſome danger (no doubt) and that more than will willingly be acknowledged, to ſuch as are wealthy, and well at eaſe in Sion. Saint Gregory confeſſeth by himſelf, that never any ſentence entred ſo deep into his ſoul as this. And that, as Surgite mortui was ever in Saint Hieroms ear: And Non in comeſſationibus, not in ſurfeiting, in Saint Auguſtines, by which he was firſt converted: So, this was with him; and he could not get it out of his mind. For, he ſitting in the See of Rome, when he was grown rich and of great receipt, was (as he ſaith) ſtill in doubt of Recepiſti: whether his exalting into that Chair might not be his recompence at Gods hands, and all that ever he ſhould receive from Him, for all his ſervice. And ever he doubted this Recepiſti (which we ſo eaſily paſs over) and whether his caſe might not be like. Thus did the good Father; and (as I think) not unwiſely: And, would God, his example herein, might make due impreſſion, and work like fear, in ſo many as have, in the eyes of all men, received the good things in this life. For, this may daily be ſeen every where, that divers, that received them, if ever any did; and that, in a meaſure heaped up and running over; carry themſelves ſo without remembrance or regard of this point, as if no ſuch Simile were in the Scripture, as that of the Needles-eye: No ſuch example, as of this Rich-man: No ſuch Recordare as this of Abraham, which we have in hand. It ſhould ſeem, they have learned a point of divinity, Abrahams never knew: Balaams divinity (I fear) to love the wages of unrighteouſnes and a gift in the boſome, and yet to cry Moriatur anima mea, his ſoul ſhould go ſtraight into Abraham's boſome for all that: And ſo, in effect, to deny Abraham's Conſequence. Amos 6. 1. Rom. 13. 3. Mat. 19. 24. 2 Pet. 2. 15. Numb. 23. 1.

We muſt then joyn iſſue upon the main point, we cannot avoid it: To enquire, how this Now therefore commeth in: And how far, and to whom, this Conſequent holdeth. I demand then: Was he therefore tormented, becauſe he received good things? Is this the caſe of all them that wear purple and fare well in this life? Shall every one, to whom God reacheth ſuch good things as theſe, be quit for ever from Abraham's boſome? By no means, For, Cujus eſt ſinus, whoſe is the boſome? Is it not Abrahams? And, what was Abraham? Look Geneſis XIII. ver. II. Abraham was rich in cattel, in ſilver and gold. There is hope then for rich men, in a rich mans boſome. Then, the boſome it ſelf is a rich mans, though a Lazarus be in it. Yea, though we find here Lazarus in it: Yet elſe-where, we find, he is not all. For, the great Lord that bare rule under Queen Candaces: The eleſt Lady: Joſeph of Arimathea, and the Areopagite (grave and wiſe Counſellors:) The Purple-ſeller (and if the Purple-ſeller, why not the Purple-wearer?) Yes, the Purple-wearer too, were in earth, Saints (as we read) and are (we doubt not) in Abraham's boſome alſo. Acts 8. 27. 2 John 1. Acts 17. 34. 16. 14. Dan. 5. 29.

It was not therefore, becauſe he was rich: for then muſt Abraham himſelf have been ſubject to the ſame ſentence, Nay, one may be ſo rich, and ſo uſe his riches together, as they ſhall conclude in the other figure and end in ſolaris; and no wayes hinder, but help forward his accompt; and bring him a ſecond receipts of the good things of that eternal life. And (if you mark it well) we have here, in this Scripture, two rich men: 1. One, that giveth the Recordare: 2. The other, to whom it is given. The example of a rich man, which rich men to avoid. The ſentence of a rich man, which rich men to remember.

It is evident: It was not, for that he had received good things in this life: Seeing as truly as Abraham ſaid to him, Son remember, thou didſt receive good things: So truly might he have rejoyned, Father remember, thou didſt receive, &c. It was not that. 1.

Neither was it, becauſe he came by them unduely, by ſuch wayes and means, as the ſoul of God abhorreth: For, it is (ſaith Bernard) Recordare quia recepiſti: not quia rapuiſti, or quia decepiſti, by ravin or deceipt. 2.

Neither was it, becauſe he received them, and wrapped them up. For, as his receipts are in this verſe: So his expences in the XIX. So much in purple, and linnen; So much in feaſting. 3.

Neither was it, becauſe receiving plenty, he took his portion of that, he received, in apparell or diet. For, Num ſolis ſtultis apes mellificant (ſaith the Philoſopher) do Bees make honey, or Worms ſpin ſilk for the wicked or reprobate only? (Howbeit, it cannot be excuſed, that being but Homo quidam, he went like a Prince: for, purple was Princes wear.) Or, that he feaſted, and that not meanly, but λαμπρῶς, in all ſumptuous manner: and that, not at ſome ſet times, but καθ' ἡμέραν, day by day: (for, this portion was beyond all proportion.) 4.

None of theſe it was. Yet we hold ſtill, ſome danger there is; there is ſome: and this Recordare is not idle or needleſs.

What was it then, that brought him thither, or (as S. Bernard calleth it) what was his Scala inferni, the ladder by which he went down to hell? that we may know, what is the difference between Abrahams receipt and his: and when Recepiſti ſhall conclude with Cruciaris.

Saint

Saint Chryſoſtome doth lay the weight on the word Recepiſti, in his natural or proper ſence. For, it is one thing (ſaith he) λάβειν (that is, accipere) to receive or take; another, ἀπολάβειν, (that is, recipere) to receive it, as it were in full diſcharge and final ſatisfaction. (And the ſame diſtinction doth Chriſt Himſelf obſerve in ἔχειν and ἀπέχειν, in the VI. Chapter of Saint Matthew.) Both have, and both receive: But, they that do λάβειν, receive them, as a pledge of Gods further favor: But they that do ἀπολάβειν, receive them, as a full and compleat reward, and have no more to receive, but muſt thereupon releaſe, and quit claim all demands, in whatſoever elſe. Tanquam arrham, and tanquam mercedem is the diſtinction in Schools.

Mat. 6. 16.

1. With God verily it is a righteous thing, to let every man receive, for any kind of good, he hath done here. Yea, even the Heathen for their moral vertues (as S. Auguſtine holdeth of the Romanes, and the victories they received.)

2. But, the righteous it is alſo, that the Reubenites, which chooſe their lot in Gilead on this ſide of Jordan, and there ſeat themſelves, ſhould not after claim their part too, in the Land of Promiſe. Even ſo that they that will have, and have their receiving time, here, ſhould not have it here, and elſe-where alſo.

3. Then, all is in the choice, where we will lay our Recepiſti: whether here or there, in this or that life: In Purple, and Silk, and the delights of the world: or, in the reſt and comfort of Abrahams boſome. Whether we will ſay: Lord, if I may ſo receive, that I may be received: If I may receive ſo the good of this life, that I be not barred the other to come; tanquam arrham, as the earneſt of a better inheritance, Ecce me. But if my receiving here, ſhall be my laſt receipt: If I ſhall receive them tanquam mercedem, as my portion for ever; I renounce them, Put me out of this receipt, and reſerve my part in ſtore for the Land of the living. And of evil: If it muſt come here, or there (with S. Auguſtine) Domine, hic ure, hîc ſeca; Ibi parce: Let my ſeering and ſmart be here; there let me be ſpared: And from Cruciatis, the torment to come, Libera me Domine.

To very good purpoſe ſaith the Ancient Father: Quiſq; dives, quiſq; pauper, nemo dives, nemo pauper: Animus omnia facit. It is ſomwhat, to be rich, or poor; it is nothing, to be rich, or poor; it is, as the mind is: The mind maketh all. Now (ſaith S. Chryſoſtome) what mind he caried, is gathered out of Abrahams doubling, and trebling, Tu, tua and tuâ: Recipiſti tu, bona tua, in vita tua: which words are working words (as he taketh them) and contain in them great Emphaſis. Underſtanding (by tua) not ſo much that, he had in poſſeſſion; as that he made ſpecial rockoning of: For, that, is moſt properly termed ours: Animus omnia facit.

1. This life is called his life; not becauſe he lived in it, but becauſe he ſo lived in it, as if there had been no other life but it. And in his accompt, there was no other; Δὸς μὸι τὸ σήμερον λάβε σὸι τὸ αὔριον,

John 8. 56. Give him this life; let this day be his day; take to morrow who will. This did not Abraham: For, he ſaw a day, and that after this life, that rejoyced him more than all the days of his life.

This life as it was His life; So the good of it, His good, Bona tua. This, His life, theſe the portion of His life: theſe He choſe for His good: they, His; and He, theirs. They that make ſuch a choiſe, their Recepiſti may well end in Cruciaris.

This way, S. Chryſoſtome: by the mind. S. Auguſtine taketh another, by the memory, more proper to the Patriarch's meaning: and that four wayes:

1 For (ſaith he) Abraham willing him to remember, he had received ſuch things; implieth (in effect) that he had clean forgotten, that any ſuch things he had ever received. Look how Eſau ſpeaketh, Habeo bona plurima, I have enough, my Brother: And, as his pew-fellow here, Luke 12. Anima habes, Soul, thou

Gen. 33. 9. Luke 12. 19. haſt goods enough: Even ſo for all the world, it ſeemeth, this party here, he had them: Sure he was, he had them: but that he received them, he never remembred. Now he is put in mind, quia recepiſti: Now therefore thou art tormented.

2 Now, not remembring he had received them, no marvel if he forgat, why he received them, or with what condition: Forgetting God in heaven, no marvel if he remembred not Lazarus on earth. Verily, neither he or any man receive them, as Proprietaries; but as Stuarts, and as Accomptants, as Chriſt telleth us, above in this Chapter. Not, for our ſelves only, or for our own uſe; but, for others too; And among others, for Lazarus by name. If Lazarus receive not, it was his fault, and not God's, who gave him enough to ſupply his own uſes, and Lazarus want too. For both which too, he, and all receive, that receive at God's hand: But he (it ſeemeth) received them to and for himſelf alone, and no body elſe: that Abraham ſaith truly, Recepiſti tu; tu & nemo alius: You, and yours, and no body beſides. For, his Recepiſti ended in himſelf, and he made himſelf Summam omnium receptorum. For, if you call him to accompt by the writ of Redde rationem, this muſt be his Audit: In purple and linnen, ſo much; and in belly-cheer, ſo much: So much on his back, and ſo much on his board, and in them endeth the total of his Receipt: Except you will put in his hounds too, which received of him, more than Lazarus might. This is indeed Recepiſti tu ſolus. This did not Abraham: For, his receipt reacheth to ſtrangers, and others beſides himſelf; and, Lazarus he received in his boſome on earth, or elſe he had never been in heaven, to have him there.

Will you ſee [now therefore] the Conſequent in kind? Therefore is this party now in the Gulf, becauſe (living) himſelf was a gulf: It is now Gurges in gurgite, but one Gulf in another. While he lived, he was a Gulf ſwallowing all: Now therefore, the gulf hath ſwallowed him. Remember this, for it is a ſpecial point. For, if our purple and fine linnen ſwallow up our alms: If our too much laſhing on, to do good to our ſelves, make us in ſtate to do good, to none but our ſelves: If our riotous waſting on expences of vanity, be a gulf and devour our Chriſtian Imploying in works of charity, There is danger in Recepiſti, even the danger of [Now therefore] Gurges eras & in gurgitem projicieris, a Gulf thou wert, and into the gulf ſhalt thou go. Ever, for the moſt part, you ſhall find theſe two coupled. In Sodome; Pride, and fulneſs of bread, with not ſtretching the hand to the poor. In Juda: Great bouls of wine, and rich beds of ivory, with little compaſſion on the miſery of Joſeph. And here: Going richly, and faring daintily, with Lazarus boſome and belly, both empty. The ſaying of S. Baſil is highly commended, that ἀκόνη τῆς ἀστοτίας ἡ φιλοτιμία, Pride is Prodigalities whetſtone. And ſo it is (ſure;) and ſets ſuch an edge upon it in our expences, that it cuts ſo deep into our receipt, and ſhares ſo much for purple and linnen, as it leaves but a little for Lazarus portion. Sure, ſo it is, leſs purple muſt content us; and ſomewhat muſt be cut off from quotidie ſplendidè, if we will have Lazarus better provided for. Ezek. 16. 49. Amos 6. 4.

This, I have ſtood a little on, that it may be remembred. It is Chriſt's ſpecial drift, both in the Parable before, and in this Story here: and remember it we muſt, if either (as, in that) we will be received into everlaſting Tabernacles; or (as in this) we will be delivered from everlaſting torments.

3 Now I add, that in thus forgetting Lazarus, to remember himſelf, he remembred not himſelf neither, but failed in that too. For, whereas he conſiſted of two parts, 1. a body, and 2. a ſoul, he remembred the one ſo much, as he quite left the other out of his memento. For, his Recepiſti tu was his body, and nothing elſe. Now reaſon would, the body ſhould not take up the whole receipt; but that the poor ſoul ſhould be thought upon too. Purple and ſilk, and Ede, bibe, they are but the bodies part: But almes and works of mercy, they, they be the ſouls. May not our ſouls be admitted ſuitors, that we would remember them (that is) remember Lazarus? for, that is the ſouls portion: For, the other part, he and we all remember faſt enough.

4 Thus, remembring neither God nor Lazarus, nay, nor his own ſoul, his memory thus failing him, God provided and ſent ſome, to put him in mind. Sure as he had received thoſe former good things, ſo alſo had he received Moſes and the Prophets, by his own confeſſion: And in receiving them, he had received a great benefit, and (peradventure) greater in this than the other: And Moſes had told him as much as Abraham tels him now: Utinam noviſſima providerent, Would God (ſaith Moſes) men would remember the four Noviſſima; 1. That there is a death; 2. There is a Judgement: 3. There is a Heaven: 4. There is a Hell: But of all the four, Noviſſima inferni (in the ſame Chapter) the nethermoſt; Nunc igitur cruciaris, the place of torments. The Prophets ſaid as much: Jeremy, Ever think, that an end there will be Et quid fiet in noviſſimo, what ſhall become of us in that end? Who amongſt us (ſaith Eſay) can endure devouring fire? Who can dwell with ardores ſempiterni, everlaſting burnings? theſe he had: and if he had heard theſe, it is plainly affirmed, Audiant ipſos would have done it; they would have kept him, for ever comming in that place. But, theſe alſo living he ſtrove to forget, and (as ingenderers of melancholly) to remove them farre away. And, that he might the more eaſily do it, it was thought not amiſs, to call their authority in queſtion, whether they were worth the hearing or no. It is (in effect) confeſſed by him: that his five brethren and he were of one opinion; that the hearing of Moſes and the Prophets was a motive far unworthy to carry ſuch men as they. An Angel from heaven, or one from the dead might (perhaps:) but, the Books of Moſes ſhould never move them. It was not, for nothing, he complaineth of his tongue: Illâ linguâ, with that tongue, he had ſcorned the Holy Oracles: peradventure, that place, wherein he now lay, with that tongue which, in that place, feeleth the greateſt torment; and, from that place, the ſmalleſt comfort: both which it had before prophanely derided. Deut. 32. 29. Deut. 32. 22. Jer. 5. 31. Eſay 33. 14.

Thus then you ſee his Scalam inferni, the brief of his faults, for which his Receipt endeth in this bitter receipt of torments without end. 1. Epicuriſme: no life but this: No good but theſe here, Good attire, good cheer. 2. This was his reward: Amen, dico vobis, recepiſtis. (Saint Chryſoſtome too) 1. Remembring neither God in heaven, nor Lazarus on earth; 2. but being a Gurges, a Gulf of all that he received, himſelf: 3. No not his own ſoul; 4. nor (laſt of all) this place of torments, before he was in it; and ſcorning at Moſes for remembring him of it. This you ſee, And, in him, you ſee who they be, over whom Abraham ſhall read the like ſentence, Qui habet aures, &c. Mat. 6. 2.

II.

Now then, we have ſet up both ſides of this Croſs, and faſtened each part to other with Now therefore: Let us affix the Inſcription, and ſo an end. That, is Recordare fili: The want of which brought him thither; The ſupply of it ſhall keep us thence. The title. Recordare fili.

Fili recordare: Optimè dictum, ſed ſerò, Excellently well ſaid, but too late (ſaith Saint Bernard.) For, alas! commeth Abraham in now, with Recordare? Doth he now affix the title? why, it is too late. True, it is ſo; But, till now, he would not ſuffer any to ſet it up. Before, while it was time, and when it might have done him good, then he would not endure it: Now he is fain (when it is out of time) to know, what in time might have done him good: and may do others, if (in time) they look to it. Indeed, to him now, it is of no uſe in the world; but only to let him ſee, by what Juſtice he is where he is; and what he ſuffereth, he ſuffereth deſervedly. The beſt is, Abraham had more ſons than this ſon; and they may take good by it, and have uſe of that, whereof he had none. With this ſon it is too late; with ſome other, it is not. Not with us: we are yet upon the ſtage: Our Jam verò is not yet come. And for us, is this inſcription ſet up, and for our ſakes, both Chriſt reported, and S. Luke recorded this Recordare.

If you ask, What good is that? What is the good of exemplary Juſtice? What good is it to ſee a malefactor puniſhed, or to read in a paper the crime wherefore? What, but only that by reading what brought him thither, we may remember what will keep us from thence. The neglect of Recordare is the cauſe, he is there: why then, Recordare fili, and keep thee from thence. So, with one view of this inſcription, we read both his ruine and our own remedy.

This is the right uſe of this title; God forbid we ſhould have no uſe of it, till we come where he is. But, it is therefore ſet over his head in that life, that we may read it in this: read it, and remember it: remember it and never have title ſet over ours.

It

It will be good then, ſomtimes to keep ſome day holy to the exaltation of this Croſs, and to ſet this title before our eyes: to approach it and read it over: Yea, not once, but often to record this Recordare. Indeed, it is that S. Gregory ſaith: Recordatione magis eget verſus iſte quàm expoſitione: Indeed, it more needs a diſpoſition to remember it, than an expoſition to underſtand it.

We are yet: how long we ſhall, we know not, nor how ſoon vita tua will be gone, nor, how quickly this Jam verò will come in place. This we know: between his ſtate and ours, there is only a puff of breath in our noſtrils. That this life (ſhort though it be, and in a manner, a moment, yet) hoc eſt momentum, unde pendet æternitas: On it, no leſs matter dependeth than our eternity: or bliſs or bane, comfort or torment. That in that place, without all hope either of relief, eſcape or end: and that from thence, neither our profeſſion of truth, nor the greatneſs of our receiving ſhall deliver, but only this Recordare. It ſtandeth us then in hand, to take perfect impreſſion of this Recordare: and (as S. Auguſtine ſaith) Obliviſci quid ſimus, attendere quid futuri ſimus, to forget, what we now be; to conſider, what we ſhall be without all queſtion yer long, but we know not how ſoon: but, oft it falleth, the ſhorter and ſooner, the leſs we think of it.

Three things then I wiſh, for concluſion: 1. that we may remember: 2. remember in time: 3. remember effectually. That we may remember the fire, the thirſt, and the torments; and know what they mean, by memory rather than by ſence. Abraham, from heaven cals to us to that end: The party in hell crieth, Ne veniant & ipſi.

1. That we do it in time? that we be not in this eaſe, never lift up our eyes, till we be in hell; nor remember that may do us good, till it be too late.

2. That we do it effectually from the heart: For, there is a heart in Recordare: And that, this being our greateſt buſineſs, we make it not our leaſt care.

3. Our Remembring will be effectual, if we pray to God daily, we may ſo receive, as we may be received. And our remembring ſhall be effectual, if it have the effect, that is, make us remember Lazarus. Quotidiè Lazarus: You may find Lazarus, if you ſeek him, every day: Nay, you ſhall find him, though you ſeek him not. Our preſent eſtate, by preſent occaſion of the dearth now upon us, makes the memory more freſh, than at other times it would be. Remember then our being remembred there, lyeth on this their remembrance here; and, upon their receiving, our recipies, or rather recipieris. And remember that day, wherein what we have received ſhall be forgotten; and what He hath received of us ſhall be remembred; and nothing elſe ſhall be remembred, but quod uni ex minimis. The attaining everlaſting tabernacles, the avoiding everlaſting torments lye upon it. That which we remember now in Lazarus boſome, ſhall be remembred to us again in Abrahams boſome. To which, &c.

II Cor. Chap. XII. Ver. XV.

Ego autem libentiſſime impendam, & ſuper-impendar ipſe pro animabus veſtris: etſi licet plus vos diligens, minus diligar.

And I will moſt gladly beſtow, and will be beſtowed for your ſouls; though, the more I love you, the leſs I am loved.

THE words be S. Pauls; and to the Corinthians. And, if we neither knew whoſe they were, nor to whom; yet this we might know by the words themſelves, that it is Love that ſpeaks, and unkindneſs, that is ſpoken to. Impendam; ſuperimpendar; libentiſſimè: this muſt needs bee love, and that unkindneſs, that requiteth ſuch love, with ſuch an Etſi, Etſi minus diligar, Though the more I love, the leſs I be loved.

Many wayes it may be manifeſt, that S. Paul loved the Church of Corinth more than many other (loved them, for he laboured more for them.) By the time he ſpent with them, a year and a half full: Scarce with any ſo much. By his viſiting them three ſeveral times: Not any ſo oft. By two of his largeſt Epiſtles ſent to them: Not, to any the like. 1 Cor. 5. 10. Acts 18. 11. Verſe 14.

Now there ſhould be, in love, the vertue of the Load-ſtone, the vertue attractivè, to draw like love to it again. There ſhould be: but was not. For, their little love appeared by their many unloving exceptions which they took to him. To his Office: That, he was but an Apoſtle of the ſecond head, and no wayes to be matched with the chief Apoſtles, verſe 11. To his Perſon: That he was one of no preſence: Somewhat good at an Epiſtle, but his Perſon (or preſence) nothing worth (Chap. 10. 10.) To his preaching: th it he was but ἰδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ, not ſo eloquent by much, as divers of them were; nor his Sermons ex operè Corinthiaco, of the Corinthian faſhion. Indeed, I know not how, but he could not hit on their vein. 2.

This cold infusion of so faint regard on their parts, might have quenched his love. It did, Apollo's, for Apollo was once at Corinth, but found them so diverse to please, as he waxed weary and got him away; and when he was moved to return to them πάντως ἐν τῷ θέρει. his mind was not at all to come
1 Cor. 16. 12. there again as yet, saith S. Paul (1 Cor. 16) It made Apollos give over. So might it S. Paul too. But him it did not: Charitas qua ædificabat, the love wherewith he built, was like lime, slaked not, but rather kindled with water. For, notwithstanding all these, such was his zeal, and he Tantus zelator animarum, that we see his affection, that we hear his resolution what it is: unkind they might be, but no unkindness of theirs, or verdict never so hard, or censure never so sharp; no minus diligar should move him, or make him love their souls a whit the less.

4. Wherein, lest they might be jealous, he sought to Corinth so oft, for the ore of it, because the soil was rich, there was good to be done (as men are ever that way quick-eyed) he appealed to all his former course with them, that he had sought nothing hitherto. Nothing he had sought, nor nothing he would
Chap. 11. 8, 9. seek: And (to come to this our verse) not only seek nothing; 1, But he would bestow, 2. Bestow, and be bestowed himself; 3. and that, most willingly (indeed it is higher, ἥδιστα, most gladly) 4 and all this (to use Chrysostomes words) not τοῖς τὰ πολλὰ φιλοῦσιν, for those that had not begun to love him first, but τοῖς καὶ ἅπαξ ἀντιφιλήσασιν, for those that being loved first did not love him again. 5. And that not κατ' ἴσα in equal measure (that, is not his complaint) but such as the more (it is fuller, in the Greek, περισσοτέρως, the more abundantly) they were loved, loved him the less for it. The degrees are many: and look how many degrees, so many several points of elevation.

5. All which when I consider, I cannot chuse but marvel at his love; which truly is right admirable: And more at their minus, than his magis: But, at his heroical spirit, most of all, whom such and so great unkindness could not over-come. The rather, when I lay it to, and compare it with ours in these times: in which, a kind of love we have (such as it is) but such as will not endure Saint Pauls assay; Or, if in some degrees it do, if it be not respected straight (not as it deserveth, for so haply it is, but as it supposeth it self to deserve) if it be crossed with any unkindness, it groweth abrupt. Every minus diligar
Chap. 11. 12. makes it abate; and far we are from this Christian magnanimity, to resolve with him (in the 11 Chap.) quod facio, hoc & faciam, what I do, that will I do still: Or, here, Love I will still, though, the more I love, the less I be loved.

The thing loved, is the Corinthians souls. And (as Corinth it self was situate in a narrow land, between two Seas) so are they, in the verse; having, on the one side, the Sea of self-love (in the former part:) and, on the other, the Gulf of unkindness (in the latter.) Through either of which, S. Paul maketh a first and second navigation, if haply he may so adire Corinthum, gain their souls to Christ, more precious to him, than Corinth it self and all the wealth in it.

The Division. In the Love two things are offered. For, in the former moity of the verse, he is encountred with self-love,
I. 1. which bestoweth nothing; 2. but, least of all, his life: 3. Or if it do, it is not most gladly; nay, not gladly at all. These three he beateth down: the first, with Impendam; the second, with Impendar: the third, with libentissimè. Thus having vanquished the love of himself in the former; in the latter moity, Unkindness riseth up. Unkindness, in them, for whom he had done all the former. Over which second enemy having a second conquest also, and triumphing over it, with his Etsi; he sheweth his love to be a love of proof, to have all the perfections and signatures of Love: all which are within compass of this verse, Amor (as in Schools we reckon them) 1. Impensivus; 2. Expensivus; 3. Intensivus; and 4. Extensivus. The two former, in the two verbs; 1. Active, Impendam; and 2. Passive, Impendar; Bestowing, or spending; Bestowed, or spent it self. The two latter, in the Adverb and the Conjunction: 3. Intensive, straining it self to the highest degree, most gladly: and 4. Extensive, stretching it self to those that are farthest from love, and least deserve it Etsi minus diligar. 1. To spend; 2. To spend and be spent; 3. To spend and be spent most willingly. If the full point were there, it were enough. 4. But, not only Libentissimè But, Libentissimè, Etsi; most gladly, yea, though the more he, the less they, that is all in all.

II. But then, lest we mistake our term of love (as, easily we may, and confound it with lust) we must
Gal. 5. 22. look to our pro in the second part. It is, Pro animabus; soul-love, he meaneth all the while. Love, the fruit
Job. 17. 14. of the spirit; Not lust, the weed of the flesh. Not, of this flesh sister to worms, and daughter to rottenness;
2 Pet. 1. 4. but, of the Spirit allied to the Angels, and partaker, in hope, of the Divine nature it self. And, not of one only; but animabus, of souls: more than love of one soul; many souls, many thousands of souls, of a whole State or Countrey. Them to love, and to them thus to prove our love, is it, which S. Paul would teach; and it, which we need to learn. These be the two parts. Whereof, &c.

I. TO enter the treaty of the first part. We begin at the four points, 1. Impendam, 2. Impendar,
The Love. 3. Libentissimè, and 4. Etsi. If Love be an Ensign (as, Can. 6.) the Colours; if it be a Band
Cant. 6. 3. (as Hos. 11.) the twists; if a Scale (as, Chrysostome) the ascents; if an Art, (as Bernard) the Hosea 11. 4. Rules of it. Indeed, they talk much of an Art of Love, and Books of verses have been written of it: but, above all verses, is Carmen hoc amoris. This verse hath more art than they all: and of this it may be said, Me legat, & lecto carmine doctus erit: I learn it, and say you learned Love. To take them as they lye, and with the first, first. Ego verò Impendam.

1 There

1 There was a world when one ſaid, da mihi cor tuum, & ſufficit: Beſtow your heart on me, and I require no further beſtowing; and the beſtowing of love, though nothing but love, was ſomething worth. 1. Amor imperſivus: Impendi.

2 Such a world there was: But, that world is worn out. All goeth now by Impendam: Love and all is put out to intereſt; the other empty-handed love, is long ſince baniſhed the Court, the City and the Countrey. For, long ſince it is, that King Saul ſaw it, and ſaid it to his Courtiers, that he was not regarded, but becauſe he gave them fields, and vineyards, and offices over hundreds and thouſands. Nor yet Diana in the City of Epheſus, magnified there by the Crafts-men, but, becauſe by her Silver Shrines, they had their advantage. Nay, nor Chriſt Himſelf neither, in the Countrey, but becauſe they ate of the loves and were filled. For, many miracles had they ſeen much greater than that, yet never profeſſed they ſo much, Sicut tunc ſaturati, as when he beſtowed a good meal on them. 1 Sam. 22. 7. Act. 19. 24. John 6. 16.

3 Such is now the worlds love, but ſpecially at Corinth, where they do cauponari amorem indeed; ſet love to hire, and love to ſale; and at ſo high a rate, as ſome were forced to give over, leſt paying for love, they might buy repentance too; and both too deer. dear

4 There is no remedy then: Saint Paul muſt apply himſelf to time and place, wherein (as all things elſe, ſo) love depends upon impendam, Yielding and Paying.

5 Now, there is nothing ſo plaint as Love; ever ready to transform it ſelf, to whatſoever may have likelyhood to prevail; and if it be Liberality, into that too. For, that love is liberal (nay prodigal) the Greek Proverb noteth it, that ſaith, The Purſe-ſtrings of love are made of a Leek-blade; eaſily in ſunder, and wide open with no great ado. ſolicit

6. Saint Paul therefore commeth to it; and as he maketh his caſe a Father's caſe towards them (in the verſe next before:) So he ſaith with the kind Father, (Luke 15.) Eccè omnia mea tua ſunt. Fathers love, and all muſt be prooved by Beſtowing. Verſe 14. Luke 15. 31.

7 Yea, I will beſtow: Now alas, what can Paul beſtow? Eſpecially upon ſo wealthy Citizens? What hath he to part with, but his books and his parchments? Ware, at Athens perhaps ſomewhat; but at Corinth, little uſed and leſs regarded. Indeed if ſilver and gold be all, and nothing elſe worth the beſtowing, nothing will come under Impendam, but it: his beſtowing is ſtalled. But, by the grace of God, there is ſomthing elſe. There be talents (ſo, the world will call them when they liſt, howſoever they eſteem them ſcarce worth pence a peece.) And there be treaſures of wiſdom and knowledg, in Chriſto Jeſu (ſaith Saint Paul) Indeed ſo had Saint Paul need ſo ſay; he had beſt magnifie his own Impendam, for he hath nothing elſe to make of. Nay, it ſhall not ſtand upon his valuation. They that had both, both the wealth of Corinth and the wiſdom of Paul, and both in abundance, as being both of them Prophets: The one of them (King David) preferreth this Impendam of Paul's before gold, fine gold, much fine gold; and that we may know how much that much is, before thouſands of gold and ſilver. This, was no poor Apoſtle. The other (King Solomon) ſaith directly: There is gold, and a multitude of rich ſtones; but the lips of knowledg, that, is the precious Jewel. And, not Policy; but Scientia Sacrorum, prudentia: the knowledg of holy things, is the wiſdom he meaneth. And, it was no flouriſh: he was in earneſt: For, it is well known he himſelf choſe them before the other, when he was put to his choice; and, that his liking in that choice, was highly approved, by God's own liking. The truth is, Men have no ſenſe of their ſouls, till they be ready to part with them; and then is S. Pauls impendam called for (and never ſeriouſly before;) when their caſe is ſuch as they can little feel, what the beſtowing is worth. 2 Tim. 4. 13. Col. 2. 3. Pſal. 19. 10. 119. 72. Prov. 20. 15. Prov. 9. 10. 1 Reg. 3. 9. 12.

And, becauſe they would not ſeek to feel it before, it is God's juſt puniſhment they feel it not then. But, if men will labour to have ſenſe of that part in due time, they ſhould find and feel ſuch an eſtate of mind, as none know, but ſuch as have felt: ſurely ſuch, as they would acknowledg to be worth an Impendam. Indeed, this it is, Saint Paul can beſtow; and this it is, Corinth needs; and the more wealthy it is, the more. The other, as he hath it not, ſo they need it not, that is, Aurum & Argentum: Quod autem habet, but that he hath, he is ready to beſtow What would we have more? Fecit quod potuit, ſaith our Saviour in Mary Magdalens caſe; and dedit quod habuit, in the caſe of the poor Widdow's mites; and, that is as much as God doth, or man can require. But, be it little, or be it much, he that giveth all, leaveth nothing ungiven, and therefore his impendam is at the higheſt. Acts 3. 6. Mark. 14. 8. 12. 44. Luke 21. 4.

But, when it is at the higheſt, the Paſſive Impendar, is higher than it. Much more, to beſtowed, than to beſtow. And therefore it hath a Super-Impendar beſtowed on it. 1 For firſt, they that beſtow, give but of their fruits; but, he that is beſtowed, giveth fruit, tree, and all. In that, the beſtower remained unbeſtowed: here, he himſelf is in the deed of gift too. 2 Secondly, before there was but one act (of beſtowing only;) here, in one, are both beſtowing and being beſtowed; and there being both muſt needs be better than one. 3 Thirdly, before, that which was beſtowed, what was it? our good, not our blood; our living, not our life: Nondum ad ſanguinem, nor yet ſo far as to the ſhedding of blood: Then, there is ſomewhat behind: But, if to the ſhedding of that, then is it love at the fartheſt: if it be as Salomon ſaith, Fortis ſicut mors; dare throw death his gauntlet. Majorem hoc nemo (ſaith Chriſt) greater love hath no man, than this, to beſtow his life. 4. And indeed, we ſee, many can be content to beſtow frankly; but at no hand, to be beſtowed themſelves: Yea, that they may not be beſtowed, care not what they beſtow. For Self-love crieth to us, ſpare our living; but in any wiſe, Propitius eſto tibi, to ſpare our life. Skin for skin is nothing but impendere ne impendamur; to ſpend all we have to ſpare our ſelves. But hither alſo will S. Paul come from Δαπανᾶν, to ἐκδαπανᾶσθαι, without any reſervation at all of himſelf: To do or ſuffer; to ſpend or to be ſpent. 2. Amor expenſivus, Impendar. Heb. 12. 4. Cant. 8. 6. John 15. 13. Mat. 16. 25. Job. 2. 4.

How to be ſpent? will he die? Yea indeed: What preſently here at Corinth? No; for at this time, and long after he was ſtill alive: and yet he ſaid truly impendar for all that. For, as before we ſaid, ſo ſay we in this: If there be no way to be beſtowed, but by dying out of hand: they that, in field, receive the bullet; or they that, at the ſtake, have the fire ſet to them; they, and they only may be ſaid to be beſtowed. That, is a way indeed, but not the only way: but other wayes there be beſides them too. As that is ſaid to be beſtowed, not only that, is defrayed at one entire payment; but, that, which by ſeveral ſums is paid in; eſpecially, if it be, when it was not due; nor could not be called for. This I mean: The Patriarch Lot, or the Prophet Jeremie, that dwelling where ſin abounded, and ſeeing and hearing
2 Pet. 2. 7, 8. vexed their righteous ſouls with the daily tranſgreſſions of the people, and for their unkindneſs too; and thereby prevented their term and paid Natures debt, yet their day came, beſtowed themſelves (ſay I) though, not at once. (For, hearts grief and heavineſs do more than beſtow, for they even conſume and waſte a mans life.) And Timothie, that he giving attendance to reading, meditation, and ſtudie, grew
1 Tim. 4. 13. into an ἀσθένια and often infirmities, and thereby ſhortned his time by much, beſtowed himſelf (ſay I)
5. 23. though not at one inſtant. He that knew it bare witneſs, that that courſe of life is a wearying, yea, and a wearing of it too; and ſpends another manner ſubſtance than the ſweat of the brows. This then,
Eccleſ. 12. 12. for the preſent, was S. Pauls impendar: By intentive meditation (for his books and parchment took ſome-
2 Cor. 11. 20. what from his ſum;) By ſorrow and grief of heart; for Quis ſcandalizatur, & ego non uror? and that
1 Cor. 15. 31. he ſaid (and ſaid truly) Quotidiè morior, he beſtowed himſelf by inch-meale; and might avow his impendar before God or man. And ſo far, it is the caſe of all them that be in this caſe: Sal terræ, as Chriſt termeth them; which ſalt, by giving ſeaſon, melteth it ſelf away, and ceaſeth in ſhort time to be that it
Mat. 5. 13, 14. was. Lux mundi, the light of the world. Aliis miniſtrando, ſeipſos conſumendo, Lightning others, and waſting themſelves: that is, abridging their natural courſe, and drawing on their untimely diſeaſes and death, before their race be half run.

1 Cor. 9. 9. But, to make it a perfect impendar, and to give it his Super; after all this, he came to that other too. For ſo he did: in that point, like the poor labouring Ox (to which, in the IX Chapter of the former Epiſtle, he reſembleth his ſtate) ſpending his time, in eating the ground for corn, in inning the corn, in treading out the corn; his Neck yoked, and his mouth muzzeled; and in the end when all is done, offered on the Altar too, and made a Sacrifice of. It was his caſe, and thither he came at laſt: and therefore in both caſes he might truly ſay impendar, and Super-impendar both.

Amor intenſivus: Libentiſſimè. But to elevate it yet a point higher, we ſay, that as either of theſe are much; and both exceeding much: yet above both theſe is that, which (though we handle third, it) ſtandeth firſt, the Adverb Libentiſſimè. True it is which in Divinity we ſay; With God, the Adverb is above the Verb, and the inward affection (wherewith) above the outward action or Paſſion of Impendam or Impendar, either. With men, it is ſo too: When a diſpleaſure is done us, ſay we not, We weigh not ſo much the injury it ſelf, as the malicious mind of him that did offer it? And, if in evil it hold, why not in good much more? not ſo much Impendar, the thing which; as Libentiſſimè, the good heart, wherewith it is beſtowed. And, will you ſee the mind wherewith S. Paul will do both theſe? By this adverb ἥδιστα, you may look into his very heart. Beſtow he will, and be beſtowed too; and that, not Uncunque, in any ſort, be contented to come to it; but willingly: willingly, nay, readily; readily, nay, gladly, (and the degree is ſomewhat, ἥδιστα) moſt gladly, in the very higheſt of all, in the Superlative degree. To ſpend, and ſpending to make no more reckoning of it, than of chaff: nay (it is more) to be glad of our loſs; more glad, than others would be of their gain. To be ſpent, and in being ſpent, not to hold our life precious: Nor ſo, but to rejoyce in it, and as if death were advantage; In hoc eſt charitas, certainly. Death (of it ſelf) is bitter, and loſs is not ſweet: Then, ſo, to alter their natures, as to find ſweetneſs in loſs, whereat all repine; and gladneſs in death, which maketh all to mourn; verily, herein is love: Or, if not here, where? Nay, here it is indeed; and before now, we had it not. For, in flat terms, he avoweth (in the XIII. Chapter before, of his former Epiſtle) if we ſever this from the other two: One may part with all his goods to feed the poor, and yet have no love: One may give his body to be burnt, and yet have no love: And then, though he do impendere, beſtow all he hath; and though he do impendi, be beſtowed himſelf, nihil eſt, he is nothing, if he want this affection, which is love indeed, the very ſoul of love, and the other but σκιαγδία, but the skin and bones, and indeed nought elſe but the carcaſſe, without it. Therefore it was, that S. Paul ſet this in the firſt place before the other two, becauſe the other two be but cyphers, and after this (the figure) ſet, they be tens and hundreds, and have their valuation: but without it of themſelves they be but cyphers, juſt nothing. Thus much S. Paul hath ſaid, in ſaying theſe three words, 1. Impendam, 2. Impendar, 3. Libentiſſimè. Thus much they amount to.

And now muſt we pauſe a little, to ſee, what will become of all this, and what theſe three will work in the Corinthians.

We marvel at the Love: we ſhall more marvel, when we ſee, what manner of men, on whom it is beſtowed. What his proofs are, we have heard; how large and how loving; and thus far is he come, only to win favour and like mutual love at their hands, without eye to any other thing in the world. No Veſtra: (no) but Vos only. This is all. And, not this; not ſo much; Nay not ſo little, as this will
Ver. 14. come. Which if it did come, what ſingular thing were it? ſince the very Publicans do the like; love
Mat. 5. 46. him, that loveth them. Which we gather by his Etſi. Wherein (as he may) in no loud and bitter manner he complaineth, but complaineth though; that, ſeeking their love, and nothing elſe, ſo hard was his hap, he found it not: Not, in a greater, or as great a meaſure, as his; but, minùs for magis, and ſo he a great loſer by it. The more, the higher, the nearer his; the leſs, the lower, the further off, theirs: ſo that, little likelihood of ever meeting.

This

This is S. Pauls case, to meet with unkindness: and not only his, but Christ met with nine for one, too. Indeed, it is common, and not to be noted, but for commonness. They that are unkind themselves inveigh against the unkindness of others. And, as it was said of them that made Cæsar away; Odêrunt tyrannum, non tyrannidem, so may it truly here: The Persons (that are unkind) they hate, rather than the vice it self. Yet, even to know this, doth no hurt, what Saint Paul met with in the Corinthians; and this too, that all unkind persons dwell not at Corinth. And, as he to be pitied, so they to be blamed. All other commodities return well from Corinth; only love is no traffick. Saint Paul cannot make his own again, but must be a great loser, withal. We cannot but pity the Apostle in this Minus of his. Saint Augustine saith well: Nulla est major ad amorem provocatio, quàm prævenire amando. Nimis enim durus est animus, qui amorem non vult impendere, nisi debitum reponderet. No more kindly attractive of love, than in loving to prevent: For, exceeding stony is that heart, which, though it like not to Love first, will not Love again neither; neither first, nor second. Yet so hard were theirs that neither one way nor other, recta, nor reflexa, would either begin, or follow. No not provoked by all those so many forcible means, that S. Chrysostome maketh a wonder at it, Quomodo non convertuntur in amorem, that they were not melted and resolved into love it self.

Luke 17. 14, 15. &c.

Which cold success openeth a way to the last point, the point indeed of highest admiration, and of hardest imitation of all the rest, in the conjunction Etsi: Which Conjunction is situated (much like Corinth it self) in a narrow land (as it were) between two Seas; beaten, upon the one with self-love, upon th'other with unkindness. Hitherto we had to do, but with self-love, and his assaults: but now, unkindness also is up. These Corinthians (saith Saint Paul) my affection standeth toward them in all love; Love them and spare not (saith Self-love) but tene quod habes. Nay sure, Impendam, I will bestow it. Well; if there be no remedy: But (hear you?) Propitius esto tibi, for all that. Nay, not that neither: Impendar, I will be bestowed my self too. Potest fuo bibere calicem hunc (saith Self-love?) and can you get it down, think you? Yea: Libentissimè exceeding gladly. There is the Conquest of Self love.

4. Amor extensivus. Etsi minus diligar.

Mat. 16. 22. Mark. 10. 46.

But, all this while, he lived still under hope, hope of winning their love, for whose sakes, he had trod under foot the love of himself: Hope, that it had been but Impendam, all the while; he should have had returned his own again at least. But; at this Etsi, all is turned out and in. For, this is as much to say, as, All is to little purpose: for (to his grief) he must take notice, they care for none of them: nor for him ever a whit the more: yea, rather the less by a great deal. So that, all three be in vain: Et supra omnem laborem labor irritus, No labour to lost labour; Nor expence of life or goods, to that is spent in vain. For, that is not Impendam, but perdam, not spent, but cast away. Therefore the former, though it were funiculus triplex, a three-fold cord, and not easily broken, would not hold, but flie in pieces, but for this Etsi. To have then an Etsi in our love: this Etsi, this εἰ καὶ νῦν, though in vain, though our Impendam, prove a perdam: That is it. To be able to turn the sentence and say, Though the more I love, the less I be loved, Yet will I bestow; yea, be bestowed, and that most gladly, for all that. It is hard, I confess: but Solus amor erubescit nomen difficultatis, Love endureth not the name of difficulty, but shameth to confess any thing too hard, or too dangerous for it. For verily, unkindness is a mighty enemy, and the wounds of it, deep. Nay there be, that of themselves are most kind, in all the three degrees before remembred, as was King David, and as all noble natures are: why Self-love is nothing in their hands. But let them be encountred with unkindness (as David was in Nabal) they cannot stand the stroke; it woundeth deep: and the festter of Discontentment more dangerous than it. Indeed (saith David) this fellow, I see, I have done all in vain for him, for he rewardeth me evil for good: So and so do God to me, if he be alive to morrow by this time. Mark it in him; and in others infinite; and you shall see, whom self-love could not, unkindness hath overcome: and who passed well along the other three, at minùs diligar their Love hath wracked, and from kind love, been turned to deadly hate.

1 Sam. 25. 15. 21. 22.

But neither can this appall the Apostle, or dislodg his love: but thorow all the rest, and thorow this too, he breaketh with his Etsi, and sheweth he will hold his resolution, maugre all unkindness. Minus diligar shall not do it; Unkindness must yield, Love will not.

And now we are come the highest, and never till now: but, now we are; that further we cannot go. The very highest pitch of well-doing, the Heathen man saw in part: for, he could say, Beneficium dare & perdere, to bestow love, and lose it, is well done: but, that is not it. This is it; Beneficium perdere & dare, to lose the first, and yet bestow the second; Etsi, yea, though the first were lost

Seneca.

Yea, the Love of Loves, Christs own love, what was it? Majorem hâc charitatem nemo habet, quàm ut vitam quis ponat pro amicis. Whereto Saint Bernard rejoyneth well, Tu majorem habuisti Domine, quia tu vitam posuisti etiam pro inimicis: Greater love than this hath no man, to bestow his life for his friends: Yet Lord (saith S. Bernard) Thou hadst greater, for thou bestowedst thy life for thy very enemies. And, to this love it is, that S. Paul aspireth; and neer it he cometh; that in some sort we may likewise say to him, Tu majorem habuisti Paule, yes, thy love (Paul) was greater: for, thou art ready to do the like; not for thine enemies, but for thy unkind friends, the next degree to professed enemies. 1. To spend, 2. To spend, and be spent, 3. To spend, and be spent, and that most gladly: 4. Not only most gladly, but most gladly, Yea though.

John 15. 13.

Thus you have now his double conquest: Over the Love of himself first; and now, over Minùs diligar, an unkind repulse too. And, in sign of victory, he setteth up his colours, even these four: 1. Impendam, 2. Impendar, 3. Libentissimè, and 4. Etsi, But Etsi is the chief; it is Christs colour; and, that no perfect Love, that wanteth Etsi.

Thus

II. The object of his Love.

Thus we have ſeen Love in his higheſt aſcendent, and heard Love in his Magiſterium, the hardeſt and higheſt, and indeed the Maſter-point of this Art. Which ſetteth us new on work, to paſs over into the ſecond part, and to enquire, what this object may be, ſo amiable, whereon Saint Paul hath ſet his affection ſo, that for it, he will do and ſuffer all this; and that ſo willingly without any exception, ſo conſtantly, without any giving over. All this is nothing but the zeal of ſouls; Zelus animarum facies hoc: It is, for their ſouls, all this. For their ſouls; and let their bodies go.

1. Pro animabus, for your ſouls.

Which (firſt) draweth the diameter that maketh the partition between the two Loves: The love which S. Paul found; and the love which S. Paul left at Corinth. For, he found that which is Zelus corporum, the bodies unruly Affection, and infection too otherwhile; (if ever in any place, there it abounded) but, he left Zelus animarum, the Souls perfection. Indeed, it falleth out ſometimes, that in carnal love (or rather luſt, than love) we may pattern all the former; and find (as the Wiſeman ſpeaketh) ſome one deſtitute of underſtanding, waſting his whole ſubſtance, hazarding his life (and that, more willingly than wiſely) perhaps to gain nothing but a ſcorn for his labour; and yet perſiſting in his folly ſtill: and all this in the paſſion of concupiſcence, to a vain creature; pleaſing his phanſie to the diſpleaſing of God, and to the piercing of his ſoul one day with deep remorſe for it: and except it do, to the utter ruine both of body and ſoul. We, have here at Corinth, a ſtrange example of it, of * one,—Ad cujus jacuit, Græcia tota fores, at whoſe doors, ſundry of all ſorts waited, ſuing and ſeeking, and (as one of them ſaid) buying repentance at too dear a rate. But what need we ſail to Corinth? even in our own age, we have enow fond examples of it: of Love ſet awry and ſorted amiſſe; diverted from the ſoul, where it ſhould be beſtowed, and laviſhed on the body, where a great deal leſs would ſerve. It is S. Auguſtines wiſh: O ſi excitare poſſemus homines & cum iis pariter excitari, ut tales amatores, &c! O that we could in this kind ſtir up others, and our ſelves (with them) be ſtirred up, but even to beſtow ſuch love on the immortal ſoul, as we ſee daily caſt away on the corruptible body! What, but ſo much? and no more? Abſit ut ſic: ſed minam vel ſic: Till it might be more, would God, it were but as much in the mean time. Yet more, and much more it ſhould be. Sed infelix Populus Dei non habet tantum ſervorem in bono, quantum mali in malo, is S. Hierom's complaint. But the people of God (unhappy in that point) hath not that courage or conſtancie in the love of the Spirit, that the wicked world hath, in the luſt of the fleſh. That courage? Nay, nothing like: Ad erubeſcentiam noſtram dico, to our ſhame it muſt be ſpoken. Look but to the firſt point, Impendam: doth not the body take it wholely up? And, if we fail in the loweſt, what ſhall become of the reſt? Well: S. Pauls love is, and ours muſt be, if it be right, pro animabus, Soul-love, which may ſerve for the firſt point of the ſequeſtration.

* LAIS. Demoſthenes.

1 Cor. 6.5.

2. The Reaſon.

But, why Pro animabus? what is there in the ſoul ſo lovely, that all this ſhould be ſaid or done for it? Why for ſouls? Why, take the ſoul out of the body which ſo much we dote on, but even half an hour, and the body will grow ſo out of our love, ſo deformed, ſo ugly, ſo every way loathſome, as they that now admire it, will then abhor it; and they that now cannot behold it enough, will not then, indure once to come near it, nor within the ſight of it. This a natural man would anſwer: The ſoul is to be regarded of the body, for it maketh the body to be regarded. 2. But, a Chriſtian man will ſay more for it. That the Love of Chriſt muſt be the rule of the love of Chriſtians, and ours ſuitable to His. And Chriſt hath valued the ſoul, above the world it ſelf, in direct affirming, That he, that to win the world, hazards his ſoul, makes but an unwiſe bargain: which bargain were wiſe enough, if he world were more worth. Appende animam homo (ſaith Chryſoſtome) & Impende in animam: If you would prize your ſouls better, you would beſtow more on them. This is nothing: Chriſt hath valued your ſouls; valued and loved them above Himſelf; Himſelf, more worth than many worlds, yea, if they were ten thouſand. I come now to the point. Is Chriſt to be loved? Why, all that S. Paul hitherto hath profeſſed, all and every part of it, it was but to the Souls at ſecond hand. His eye was upon Chriſt all the time of his profeſſion. But, becauſe Chriſt hath, by Deed enrolled, ſet over His love to mens ſouls, and willed us, toward them to ſhew, whatſoever to Him we profeſs; therefore, and for no other cauſe, it is, that he ſtandeth thus affected. For that, thoſe ſouls Chriſt ſo loved, that He loved not Himſelf, to love them. Dilexiſti me Domine plus quàm te, quando mori voluiſte pro me (It is Auguſtine:) Dying for my ſoul (Lord) thou ſhewdſt, that my ſoul was dearer to thee, than thine own ſelf. In love then to Chriſt, we are to love them that Chriſt loved; not ſicut ſeipſum, as Himſelf, but pluſquam ſeipſum, more than himſelf: and therefore, hath changed the Sicut of the Law, Sicut teipſum, as thy ſelf, into a new Sicut, Sicut ego vos, as I have loved you. And, how did He love us? Even that He was the firſt that ever profeſſed theſe four to us, 1. did beſtow, 2. was beſtowed, 3. moſt gladly, 4. yea though, the more He loved, the leſs we loved Him. Or (to give Him His right) a degree higher than Paul: Not, when we loved Him little, as faint friends; but hated Him greatly, as ſworn enemies. For, He it was, that profeſſed this art firſt. The words are indeed Chriſts own: The primitive and moſt proper uttering them, belongeth to Him. None ever ſo fully or ſo fitly ſpake or can ſpeak them, as the Son of God, on the Croſs, from the chair of his profeſſion. And, of Him there, Saint Paul learned Hoc carmen amoris. Himſelf confeſſeth as much (in the V. chapter of this Epiſtle) that it was love; not, his own love, but Chriſts love (Charitas Chriſti extorſit) that brought theſe words from him. His, they be not, but ore tenus: the tongue his, but Chriſt the ſpeaker: His they were; His they are, out of whoſe mouth, or from whoſe pen ſoever they come.

Mat. 16.26.

Mat. 19. 26. John 13.34.

Joh. 15.2.4.

Luke 23. 34.

Were are come then now, where we may read Love in the very Original: even in the moſt complete perfection, that ever it was: Profitente Chriſto, Chriſt Himſelf, the Profeſſor ſaith, 1. Impendam firſt: Beſtow he will. If you will make port-ſale of your love, none ſhall out-bid Him. Even whatſoever Himſelf is worth, He will beſtow; His Kingdom, and the fulneſs of joy and glory in it for ever.

2. Impen-

2. Impendar. That? Why Conſummatum eſt; it is done already: all, hands and feet, head and heart opened wide; and all, even to the laſt drop of blood beſtowed for us, on His Croſs: where the love of ſouls triumphed over the love of His own life. Joh. 19. 30.

3. Libentiſſimè, moſt gladly. Witneſs that ſpeech: A Baptiſme I have to be baptized with, and quomodo coarctor, how am I pained, till I be at it! And, that too, That, to him that moved Him, not to beſtow, but favour himſelf, he uſed no other terms than to the devil himſelf, Avoid Satan. Proof enough (ſay I) how willingly He went, and how unwillingly He would be kept from it. Luke 12. 50. Mat. 16. 23.

4. And for His Etſi: would God, it were not too plain: Both at His Croſs; where the lowder their Crucifige, with the more ſtrong crying and tears He prayed, Pater Ignoſce: And ever ſince, uſque hodie, till now, when (all may ſee) our regard is as little, as His love great; and he reſpected, as if he had done nothing for us. Every part of his Love, and the profeſſion of his Love, but eſpecially the Etſi of his Love paſſeth all. For, Chriſt, by deed enrolled, hath ſet over his love to them. Which is that ſetteth ſuch a price upon them, and maketh them ſo amiable, if not in their own kindneſs and lovelineſs, yet in the love of Chriſt himſelf. And it is the anſwer, that David, when he loſeth his ſleep, to think upon the people of God; that Moſes, when he wearieth himſelf in hearing cauſes from morning to night; that Joſhua, when he fighteth the Lords battels, and jeopards his life in the high places of the field; that any, that weares and ſpends himſelf in the common cauſe, may make, as well as S. Paul: Why, it is pro animabus, it is for ſouls, for ſafeguard of ſouls, thoſe ſouls, which Chriſt hath ſo dearly loved, and ſo dearly bought, and to our love ſo carefully commended: Sicut ego vos, as he did or ever ſhall do for us, that we do for them. Whereto, if not the ſouls themſelves (for the moſt part unthankful) yet this motive of love, of Chriſts love, doth in a manner violently conſtrain us. For, though nothing is leſs violent in the manner, yet, in the work, nothing worketh more violent than it. Luk. 23. 34. Pſal. 132. 4. Exod. 18. 14. 18. &c.

I conclude then with S. Bernards demand: Qua vero utilitas in ſermone hoc? What uſe have we of all that hath been ſaid? For, he that wrote it is dead; and they to whom it was written, are gones. But the Scripture ſtill remaineth, and we are to take good by it. The Application.

It ſerveth firſt, To poſſeſs our ſouls of that excellent vertue, Major horum, the greateſt of the three; nay, the vetrue, without which, the reſt be but Cyphers; the vertue which ſhineth brighteſt in Chriſts example, and ſtandeth higheſt in his commendation, Love. 1 Cor. 13. 31. 2.

But, Love, the action of vertue, not the paſſion of vice. Love, not of the body, the vile body (So the Holy Ghoſt termeth it, Phil. 3.) but of the ſoul, the precious ſoul of man, Pro. 6. Love of ſouls; the more, the more acceptable: If of a City, well; if of a County, better; if of a Country or Kingdome, beſt of all. Phil. 3. 21. Prov. 6. 26.

And for them and for their love to be ready to prove it by S. Pauls trial; to open our Impendam, to vow our Impendar, and as near as may be, to aſpire to the ſame degree of Libentiſſimè. Verily, they that neither (as the Apoſtle) for the winning of ſouls, or for the defence and ſafety of ſouls, many thouſands of ſouls, the ſouls of an whole Eſtate, in high and heroical courage, have already paſt their Impendam, and are ready to offer themſelves every day to Impendar, and with that reſolute forwardneſs, which we all ſee (for, it is a caſe preſently in all our eyes:) They that do thus, no good can be ſpoke of their love anſwerable to the deſert of it. Heavenly it is, and in heaven to receive the reward. 3.

But, when all is done, we muſt take notice of the worlds nature. For, as Saint Paul left it, ſo we ſhall find it (that is) we ſhall not perhaps meet with that regard, we promiſe our ſelves. Saint Pauls Magis diligam met with a Minus diligar. 4.

Therefore above all remember his Etſi. For to be kinde, and that to the unkind: to know, ſuch we ſhall meet with; yea, to meet with them, and yet hold our Etſi, and love nevertheleſs. This certainly is that love, Majorem quâ nemo; and, there is on earth no greater ſign of a ſoul throughly ſetled in the love of Chriſt, than to ſtand thus minded: Come what will come, Magis or Minus, Si or Etſi; frown or favour, reſpect or neglect; Quod facio, hoc & faciam, What I do, I will do, with eye to Chriſt, with hope of reward from Him, let the world be as it is, and as it ever hath been. Chap. 11. 12.

Samuel (this day in the firſt Leſſon) when he had ſpent his life in a well ordered Government, that his very enemies could no way except to, in his old dayes was requited with Fac nobis Regem; only upon an humour of innovation. What then? Grew he diſcontent? No: non obſtante, for all their ingratitude (Good man) this he profeſſeth: God forbid (ſaith he) I ſhould ſin in ceaſing to pray for you; yea, I will ſhew you the good and right way of the Lord, for all that. That may ſerve to match this, out of the Old Teſtament. For, here in like ſort, we have Paul's Minùs diligar, before our eyes; and we ſee, he is at his Libentiſſimè, Etſi, for all that. You learn then; as, that Minùs diligar may come; ſo, in caſe it do come, what to do; even to conſummate your Love with a triumph over unkindneſs. Learn this, and all is learned: Learn this, and the whole Art is had. 1 Sam. 8. 5. 12. 23.

And we have, in this verſe, and in the very firſt word of it, that, will enter us into this leſſon.

Firſt, from Ego verò: from his and from our own perſons, we may begin to raiſe this duty. When we were deep in our Minùs diligar, and ſmally regarded Chriſt; nay, Cum inimici eſſemus (to take as we ſhould) when we were his enemies, of his over-abundant kindneſs it pleaſed him to call us from the blindneſs of error, to the knowledg of his truth: and from a deep conſumption of our ſouls by ſin, to the ſtate of health and grace. And if S. Paul were loved, when he raged, and breathed Blaſphemy againſt Chriſt and his Name, is it much, if for Chriſts ſake, he ſwallow ſome unkindneſs at the Corinthians hands? Is it much if we let fall a duty upon them, upon whom God the Father droppeth his rain, and God the Son drops, ye ſheds His blood, ὑπερ ἀχαρίςους καὶ πονηρούς, upon evil and unthankful men. Rom. 5. 10. Act. 9. 1. Luk. 6. 35.

Surely, if Love or well doing or any good muſt periſh (which is the ſecond Motive) and be loſt through ſome ſome bodies default (where it lighteth) much better it is, that it periſh in the Corinthians hands, than in Pauls; by them, in their evil receiving, than by him, in his not beſtowing: through their unkindneſs, than through our abruptneſs. For, ſo, the ſin ſhall be theirs, and we and our ſouls innocent before God. Impendatur per nos: Pereat per illos.

But, periſh it ſhall not (which is the third point) though for them it may. For howſoever of them it it may be truly ſaid, The more we love, the leſs, they: Of Chriſt it never can, nor ever ſhall be ſaid. For, S. Paul, for the little love at their hands, found the greater at His. Though the more he loved, the leſs they loved him; yet the leſs they loved, the more more Chriſt loved him. Of whom to be loved, even in the leaſt degree, is worth all the love of Corinth and Achaia too. So that, here we find (that we miſſed all this while) a tamen for our Etſi: Though not they, yet Chriſt. Which tamen maketh amends for all. Et vigilanti verbo uſus eſt Apoſtolus; that S. Paul ſpoke not at adventure, but was well adviſed when he uſed the word Impendam. For, it is Impendam indeed, not Perdam; Not loſt, but layed out: Not caſt away, but imployed, on Him, for whoſe love, none hath or ever ſhall beſtow ought, but he ſhall receive a ſuperimpendar of an hundred-fold. And indeed, all other loves, of the fleſh, or world, or whatſoever elſe, ſhall periſh and come to nothing: and of this, and this only, we may ſay Impendam, truly.

So that (to make an end) though true it be, that S. Bernard ſaith, Perfectus amor vires non ſumit de ſpe, Perfect love receiveth no manner ſtrength from hope; yet, for that our love is not without his imperfections, all under one view, we may with one eye behold Chriſts magis diligam, when we were ſcarce in our minùs, nay ſcarce loved him at all: and with the other, look upon Impendam: that, what we do herein, though at mens hands we find no return, at Chriſts we ſhall, and it ſhall be the beſt beſtowed ſervice, that ever we beſtowed, that we beſtow in this kind.

Now, would God the ſame Spirit, which here wrote this verſe, would write it in our hearts, that thoſe things are thus; That ſuch a Rependam there ſhall be, and we well aſſured of it, ut & nos converteremur in amorem, that we might be transformed into this Love. Which bleſſing, Almighty God beſtow on that which hath been ſaid, for Chriſts, &c.

Preached at the

COURT

On the Five and Twentieth of March, being Good Friday.

An. Dom. 1597.

ZACH. Chap. XII. Ver. X.

Reſpicient in Me, quem transfixerunt.

And they ſhall look upon Me, whom they have pierced.

THat great and honorable Perſon the Eunuch ſitting in his Chariot, and reading a like place of the Prophet Eſay, asketh. St. Philip. I pray thee, of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this? of himſelf, or ſome other? A queſtion very material, and to great good purpoſe; and to be asked by us, in all Prophecies. For, knowing who the Party is, we ſhall not wander in the Prophets meaning. Acts 8. 34.

Now, if the Eunuch had been reading this of Zachary (as then he was, that of Eſay) and had asked the ſame queſtion of Saint Philip, he would have made the ſame anſwer. And as he, out of thoſe words took occaſion; ſo may we, out of theſe, take the like, to preach Jeſus, unto them. For neither of himſelf, nor of any other, but of Jeſus, ſpeaketh the Prophet this: and the teſtimony of Jeſus is the ſpirit of this Prophecy. Apoc. 19. 10.

That ſo it is, the Holy Ghoſt is our warrant; who, in S. John's Goſpel reporting the paſſion, and the laſt act of the paſſion (the opening of the ſide, and piercing the heart of our Saviour Chriſt) ſaith plainly, that in piercing, the very words of the propheſie were fulfilled, Reſpicient in Me quem transfixerunt. John 19. 37.

Which term of piercing we ſhall the more clearly conceive, if with the ancient Writers, we ſort it with the beginning of Pſalm 22. the Pſalm of the Paſſion. For, in the very Front or Inſcription of this Pſalm, our Saviour Chriſt is compared Cervo matutino, to the morning Hart: that is, a Hart rouſed early in the morning, (as from his very birth he was by Herod) hunted and chaſed all his life long, and this day brought to his end, and (as the poor Deer) ſtriken and pierced thorow ſide, and heart and all: which is it, we are here willed to behold.

There is no part of the whole courſe of our Saviour Chriſt's life or death, but it is well worthy our looking on; and from each part in it, there goeth vertue to do us good: But, of all other parts, and above them all, this laſt part of his piercing, is here commended unto our view. Indeed how could the Prophet commend it more, than in avowing it to be an act of grace, as in the fore-part of this verſe, he doth: Effundam ſuper eos ſpiritum Gratiæ, & Reſpicient, &c. as if he ſhould ſay: If there be any grace in us, we will think it worth the looking on.

Heb. 12. 2. Neither doth the Prophet only, but the Apostle also, call us unto it, and willeth us ἀφορᾶν to look unto, and regard Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith. Then specially, and in that act, when for the Joy of our Salvation set before Him, He endured the Cross, and despised the shame; that is, in this spectacle, when he was pierced.

Which (sure) is continually, all our life long, to be done by us; and at all times, some time to be spared unto it: But, if at other times, most requisite at this time; this very day, which we hold holy to the memory of His Passion, and the piercing of his precious side. That, though on other dayes, we imploy our eyes otherwise, this day at least, we fix them on this Object, Respicientes in Eum. This day (I say) which is dedicated to none other end, but even to lift up the Son of Man, as Moses did the serpent in the wilderness, That we may look upon Him and live: When every Scripture that is read soundeth nothing but this unto us: when by the office of preaching Jesus Christ is lively described in our sight, and (as the Apostle speaketh) is visibly crucified among us? when in the memorial of the Sacrament, His death is shewed forth till He come, and the mystery of this His piercing, so many wayes, so affectually represented before us. This Ppophecy therefore, if at any time, at this time to take place. Respicient in Me, &c.

John 3. 14.

Gal. 3. 1.

1 Cor. 11. 26.

The Division The principal words are but two, and set down unto us, in two points: 1. The sight it self, that is, the thing to be seen: 2. and the sight of it; that is, the act of seeing or looking. Quem transfixerunt is the Object, or spectacle propounded. Respicient in Eum, is the Act, or duty enjoyned.

Of which, the Object though in place latter, in nature is the former, and first to be handled: for that there must be a thing first set up, before we can set our eyes to look upon it.

1. The sight or Object generally.

OF the Object, generally first. Certain it is, that Christ is here meant: Saint John hath put us out of doubt for that point. And Zachary (here) could have set down His name, and said, Respice in Cristum: for, Daniel (before) had named his name, Occiditur Messias; and Zachary being after him in time, might have easily repeated it. But, it seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to him, rather to use a circumlocution; and suppressing his name of Christ, to express Him by the stile or term, quem transfixerunt. Which being done by choice, must needs have a reason of the doing, and so it hath.

1 Christ. Dan. 9. 26.

Esay 53. 10. Dan. 9. 26.

First, the better to specifie and particularize the Person of Christ, by the kind, and most peculiar circumstance of His death. Esay had said, Morietur, Die He shall, and lay down His soul an offering for sin, 2. Dye, but what Death? natural, or a violent? Daniel tels us. Occidetur: He shall dye not a natural, but a violent death. 3. But many are slain after many sorts; and divers kinds there be of violent deahts; the Psalmist the more particularly to set it down, describeth it thus: They pierced my hands and my feet: which is only proper to the death of the Cross. 4. Dye, and be slain, and be crucified: But, sundry else were crucified; and therefore, the Prophet (here) to make up all, addeth. that He should not only be crucifixus, but transfixus; not only have his hands and His feet, but even his heart pierced, too. Which very note severs Him from all the rest, with as great particularity as may be. For that, though many besides at other times, and some at the same time (with him) were crucified; yet, the side and the heart of none was opened, but His, and His only.

Psal. 22. 16.

2 Christ. pierced.

2 Secondly, as to specifie Christ Himself in Person, and to sever Him from the rest, so in Christ Himself and in His Person to sever from the rest of His doings and sufferings, what that is, that chiefly concerneth us, and we specially are to look to: and that, this dayes work, Christ Pierced. Saint Paul doth best express this: I esteemed (saith he) to know nothing among you, save Jesus Christ, and Himself crucified: That is, the perfection of our knowledg is Christ. The perfection of our knowledg in, or touching Christ, is the knowledg of Christ's piercing. This; the chief Sight; Nay (as it shall after appear) in this sight, are all sights: So that, know this and know all. This generally.

1 Cor. 2. 2.

2. The Object specially.

Now, specially: In the Object, two things offer themselves: 1. The Passion, or suffering it self; which was, to be pierced, 2. And the Persons, by whom. For, if the Prophet had not intended, the Persons should have had their respect too: he might have said Respicient in Eum qui transfixus est, (which passive would have carried the Passion it self full enough:) but, so, he would not; but rather choose to say, quem transfixerunt; which doth necessarily imply the Piercers themselves too. So, that we must needs have an eye in the handling, both to the fact, and to the Persons, 1. quid, and 2. quibus, both what, and of whom.

1. The Passion it self Quid.

1 The Degree thereof: Transfixerunt.

In the Passion, we must consider the degree: for, transfixerunt, is a Word of gradation: more than fixerunt, or suffixerunt, or confixerunt: either. Expressing unto us the piercing, not with whip and scourges; nor of the nailes and thornes, but, of the spear-point. Not, the whips and scourges, wherewith his skin and flesh were pierced; nor the nailes and thornes, wherewith His feet, hands and head were pierced; but, the Spear-point, which pierced and went through his very heart it self: for, of that wound, of the wound in his heart, is this spoken (Jo. 19. 34) Therefore trans, is here a transcendum; through and through: through skin and flesh; through hands and feet, through side and heart and all: the deadliest and deepest wound, and of highest gradation.

Secondly,

Secondly, as the Preposition (Trans) hath his gradation of diverse degrees; so, the Pronoune (Me) hath his generality of divers parts, best expressed in the Original. Upon Me: not, upon my body and soul: Upon Me, whose Person, not whose parts, either body without, or soul within; but Upon Me, whom wholly, body, and soul, quick and dead, they have pierced. 2 The Extent Me.

Of the bodies piercing, there can be no question; since, no part of it was left unpierced. Our senses certifie us of that, what need we further witness? 1 His Body.

Of the Souls too, it is as certain; and there can be no doubt of it neither: that we truly may affirm, Christ, not in part, but wholly was pierced. For, we should do injury to the sufferings of our Saviour, if we should conceive by this piercing, none other but that of the Spear. 2 His Soul.

And may a soul then be pierced? Can any Spear point go through it? Truly Simeon saith to the Blessed Virgin, by way of prophesie, that the sword should go through her soul, at the time of His Passion. And as the sword through her's, so, I make no question, but the spear through His. And, if through her's, which was but anima compatientis; through His, much more, which was anima patientis; since Compassion, is but Passion at rebound. Howbeit, it is not a sword of steel, or a spear-head of iron, that entreth the soul, but the metal of another temper: the dint whereof no less goreth and woundeth the soul in proportion, than those do the body. So that, we extend this piercing of Christ further, than to the visible gash in his side, even to a piercing of another nature, whereby, not his heart only was stabbed, but his very spirit wounded too. Luke 2. 35.

The Scripture recounteth two: and of them both, expressly saith, that they both pierce the soul. The Apostle saith it, by Sorrow: And pierced themselves through with many sorrows: The Prophet, of Reproach: There are, whose words are like the pricking of a sword: and that, to the Soul, both: for, the body feels neither. With these, even with both these, was the Soul of Christ Jesus wounded. 1 Tim. 6. 10. Psal. 64. 34.

For sorrow: it is plain through all four Evangelists; undiq; tristis est anima mea usq; ad mortem; My soul is environed on every side with sorrow, even to the death: [a] Capit Jesus tædere & pavere, Jesus began to be distressed and in great anguish. [b] Factus in agonia, being cast into an agony, [c] Jam turbata est anima mea; Now is my soul troubled: Avowed by them all; Confest by Himself. Yea, that His strange and never else heard of sweat; drops of bloud plenteously issuing from Him all over His body, what time, no manner of violence was offered to body, no man then touching him, none being neer him; that blood came certainly from some great sorrow, wherewith his soul was pierced. And, that his most dreadfull cry, which at once moved all the powers of heaven and earth, My God, My God, &c. was the voyce of some mighty Anguish, wherewith his soul was smitten; and that in other sort, than with any material spear. For, Derelinqui à Deo, the body cannot feel it, or tell what it meaneth. It is the Souls complaint; and therefore without all doubt, his soul within him was pierced, and suffered, though not that, which (except charity be allowed to expound it) cannot be spoken without blasphemy; Not so much (God forbid:) yet much, and very much; and much more than others seem to allow; or how much, it is dangerous to define. With sorrow. * Mat. 26. 38. Mark 14. 34. a Mark 14. 33. b Luke 24. 44. c John 12. 27. Mat. 27. 46.

To this edge of sorrow, if the other of piercing despight, be added as a point (as, added it was) it will strike deep into any heart; especially, being wounded with so many sorrows before. But, the more noble the heart, the deeper; who beareth any grief more easily than this grief, the grief of a contumelious reproach. To persecute a poor distressed soul, and to seek to vex Him that is already wounded at the heart, why, it is the very pitch of all wickedness; the very extremity that malice can do; or affliction can suffer. And to this pitch were they come, when after all their wretched villanies and spitting, and all their savage indignities in reviling Him most opprobriously, He being in the depth of all his distress, and for very anguish of soul crying, Eli, Eli, &c. they staied those that would have relieved him; and (void of all humanity) then scorned; saying: Stay, let alone, let us see, if Elias will now come and take Him down. This barbarous and brutish inhumanity of theirs, must needs pierce deeper into His Soul, than ever did the iron into his side. With reproach. Psal. 69. 26. Mat. 27. 49.

To all which if we it adde, not only that horible ingratitude of theirs, there by Him seen; but ours also no less than theirs by Him foreseen at the same time; (Who make so slender reckoning of these His piercings, and (as they were a matter not worth the looking on) vouchsafe not so much as to spend an hour in the due regard and meditation of them: Nay, not, that only, but further, by unceasant sinning, and that without remorse, do most unkindly requite those His bitter Pains, and as much as in us lies, even crucifix afresh the Son of God, making a mock of Him and His piercings.) These, I say (for, these all and every of them in that instant were before His eyes) must of force enter into, and go thorow and thorow His Soul and Spirit; that, what with those former sorrows, and what with these after indignities, the Prophet might truly say of Him, and He of himself, In Me, Upon Me; not whose body, or whose soul, but, whom entirely and wholly, but in body and soul, alive and dead. they have pierced and passioned this day on the Cross. Heb. 6. 6.

Of the Persons: which as it is necessarily implied in the word, is very properly incident to the matter it self. For, it is usual, when one is found slain (as here) to make inquiry, by whom he came by his death. Which so much the rather is to be done by us, because there is commonly an error in the Word, touching the Parties that were the causes of Christs Death. Our manner is, either to lay it on the Souldiers, that were the Instruments; Or if not upon them, upon Pilate the Judg that gave sentence; Or if not upon him, upon the people that importuned the Judg; Or lastly, if not upon them, upon the Elders of the Jews that animated the people: And this is all to be found by our Quest of Inquiry. 2 The Persons, à quibus.

But

But the Prophet here inditeth others. For, by saying, They shall look, &c. Whom They have pierced, he intendeth by very construction, that the first and second (They,) are not two, but one and the same parties: And that they that are here willed to look upon Him, are they, and none other; that were the authors of this fact, even of the murther of Jesus Christ. And (to say truth) the Prophet's intent is no other but to bring the malefactors themselves that pierced Him, to view the body and the wounded heart of Him whom they have so pierced.

In the course of Justice, we say and say truly; when a party is put to death, that the Executioner cannot be said to be the cause of his death; nor the Sheriff, by whose commandment he doth it; neither yet the Judge by whose sentence; nor the Twelve men, by whose verdict, nor the Law it self, by whose authority it is proceeded in. (For God forbid we should indite these, or any of these, of murther:) Solum peccatum homicida: Sin, and Sin only is the murtherer. Sin (I say) either of the party that suffereth: or of some other, by whose means, or for whose cause, he is put to death.

Now, Christs own sin it was not, that he died for. That is most evident. Not so much by His own challeng, Quis ex vobis arguit me de peccato? as by the report of his Judge, who openly professed, That he had examined Him, and found no fault in Him: No nor yet Herod; for, being sent to Him, and examined by Him also, nothing worth death was found in Him: And therefore, calling for water, and washing his hands, he protesteth his own innocency of the blood of this Just Man: thereby pronouncing him Just, and void of any cause, in himself, of his own death.

Iob.8.46. Luk.23.14.15. Mat.27.24.

It must then necessarily be the sin of some others, for whose sake Christ Jesus was thus pierced. And if we ask, who those others be? or whose sins they were? the Prophet Esay tells us, Posuit super Eum iniquitates omnium nostrum, He laid upon Him the transgressions of us all: who should (even for those our many, great, and grievous transgressions) have eternally been pierced, in body, and soul: with torment and sorrows of a never-dying death, had not he stept between us and the blow, and receiv'd it in his own body; even the dint of the wrath of God to come upon us. So that it was the sin of our polluted hands, that pierced his hands: the swiftness of our feet to do evil, that nailed His feet: the wicked devises of our heads, that goared His head: and the wretched desires of our hearts, that pierced his heart. We that look upon, it is we that pierced Him: and it is we that pierced Him, that are willed to look upon Him. Which bringeth it home to us; to me my self that speak, and to you your selves that hear; and applieth it most effectually to every one of us, who evidently seeing that we were the cause of this his piercing, if our hearts be not too too hard, ought to have remorse, to be pierced with it.

Esay 53.3.4.

When for delivering to David a few loaves, Abimelech and the Priests were by Saul put to the sword, if David did then acknowledg with grief of heart, and say, I, even I am the cause of the death of thy Father and all his house, (when he was but onely the occasion of it, and not that direct neither:) may not we (nay, ought not we) much more justly and deservedly say of this piercing of Christ our Saviour, that we, verily, even we, are the cause thereof: as verily we are, even the principals in this murther; and the Jews and others, on whom we seek to derive it, but only accessaries and instrumental causes thereof. Which point, we ought, as continually, so, seriously to think of; and that no less than the former. The former, to stir up compassion in our selves, over him that thus was pierced: the latter to work deep remorse in our hearts, for being authors of it. That he was pierced; will make our bowels melt with compassion, over Christ. That he was pierced by us, that look on Him, if our hearts be not flint (as Job saith) or as the nether Mil-stone, will breed remorse over our selves, wretched sinners as we are.

1 Sam.22.22.

Iob.41.15.

II. The Act. To looke upon Him.

The Act followeth in these words: Respicient in Eum. A request most reasonable, to look upon Him; but to look upon Him; to bestow but a look and nothing else; which even of common humanity we cannot deny, Quia non aspicere, despicere est. It argueth great Contempt, not to vouchsafe it the cast of our eye; as if it were an Object utterly unworthy the looking toward. Truly, if we mark it well, nature it self, of it self enclineth to this act. When Amasa treacherously was slain by Joab, and lay weltering in his blood by the wayes side, the story saith, That not one of the whole Army, then marching by, but when he came at him, stood still and looked on him.

2 Sam.22.12.

In the Gospel, the parry that going from Jerusalem to Jerico was spoiled, and wounded, and lay drawing on, though the Priest and Levite that passed near the place relieved him not, as the Samaritan after did; yet it is said of them, they went near and looked on, and then passed on their way. Which desire is even natural in us: so that even Nature it self enclineth us to satisfie the Prophet.

Luk.31.32.

Nature doth, and so doth Grace too. For, generally we are bound to regard the work of the Lord, and to consider the operation of his hands: and specially this work; in comparison whereof God himself saith, the former works of His, shall not be remembred, nor the things done of old once regarded.

Psal.28.5. Esa.43.18.

Yea Christ himself, pierced as he is, inviteth us to it. For in the Prophet here, it is not In eum; but In me: not, on Him; but, on Me, whom they have pierced. But more fully in Jeremy: for to Christ himself do all the ancient Writers apply (and that most properly) those words of the Lamentation: Have ye no regard all ye that pass by this way? Behold and see if there be any sorrow like my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me, in the day of his fierce wrath.

Lam.1.12.

Num.21.8,9

Our own profit (which is wont to perswade well) inviteth us: for that, as from the Brazen Serpent no vertue issued to heal, but unto them that stedily beheld it; so neither doth there, from Christ, but upon those, that with the eye of faith have their contemplation on this object who thereby draw life from him; and without it may and do perish, for all Christ and his Passion.

And, if nothing else move us, this last may: even our danger. For, the time will come, when we our selves shall desire, that God looking with an angry countenance upon our sins, would turn his face from them them and us, and look upon the face of his Christ, that is, respicere in Eum: which shall justly be then denied us, if we our selves could never be gotten to do this duty, respicere in eum, when it was called for of us. God shall not look upon him, at ours, whom we would not look upon, at his request.

In the Act it self are enjoyned three things. 1. That we do it with attention: for, it is not Me, but in Me: Not onely Upon Him, but Into Him. 2. That we do it oft, again and again; with iteration: for, Respicient, is re-aspicient. Not a single act, but an act iterated. 3. That we cause our nature to do it, as it were, by virtue of an Injunction, per actum elicitum, as the Schoolmen call it. For in the Original, it is in the Commanding Conjunction, that signifieth, facient se respicere, rather than Respicient.

First then, not slightly, superficially or perfunctorily, but stedfastly, and with due attention, to look upon him. And, not to look upon the out-side alone, but to look into the very entrails; and with our eye to pierce him that was thus pierced. In Eum beareth both. 1. With Attention a Respicient In Eum

1. Upon him, if we look, we shall see so much, as Pilate shewed of him, Ecce Homo, that He is a Man. And, if he were not a man, but some other unreasonable creature, it were great ruth to see him so handled.

2. Among men we less pitie Malefactors, and have most compassion on them that be Innocent. And, he was innocent, and deserved it not (as you have heard) his enemies themselves being his Judges.

3. Among those that be innocent, the more noble the person, the greater the grief, and the more heavy ever is the spectacle. Now, if we consider the Verse of this Text well, we shall see, it is God himself, and no man that here speaketh (for, to God only it belongeth, to powr out the Spirit of Grace; it passeth mans reach, to do it:) so that, if we look better upon him, we shall see as much as the Centurion saw, that this party thus pierced is the Son of God. The Son of God slain! Surely, he that hath done this deed is the Child of death, would every one of us say: Et tues homo, Thou art the man, would the Prophet answer us: You are they, for whose sins the Son of God hath his very heart-blood shed forth. Which must needs strike into us remorse of a deeper degree than before: That, not only, it is we that have pierced the Partie thus found slain; but, that this Party, whom we have thus pierced, is not a principal person among the children of men, but even the Only begotten Son of the most high God: Which will make us cry out (with S. Augustine) O amaritudo peccatis mei, ad quam tollenda necessaria fuit amaritudo tanta? Now sure, deadly was the bitterness of our sins, that might not be cured, but by the bitter death and blood-shedding passion of the Son of God. And this may we see looking upon Him. Mat. 27. 54. a Sam. 12. 7.

But now then, if we look In Eum, into Him, we shall yet see a greater thing; which may raise us in comfort, as far as the other cast us down. Even the bowels of compassion and tender love, whereby he would and was content to suffer all this for our sakes. For that, whereas (a) no man had power to take His life from Him, (for he had power to have commanded (b) twelve Legions of Angels, in his just defence: and, without any Angel at all, power enough of himself, with his (c) Ego sum, to strike them all to the ground.) He was content, notwithstanding all this, to lay down his life for us sinners. The greatness of which love passeth the greatest love that man hath: for (d) greater love than this hath no man, but to bestow his life for his friends; whereas, He condescended to lay it down for His enemies, even for them that sought His death, to lay down His life, and to have His blood shed for them that did shed it; to be pierced for His piercers. Look how the former In Eum worketh grief, considering the great injuries offered to so great a Personage; So, to temper the grief of it, this latter In Eum giveth some comfort, that so great a Person, should so greatly love us, as, for our sakes, to endure all those so many injuries, even to the piercing of His very heart. a Ioh. 10. 18. b Mat. 26. 53. c Ioh. 18. 6. d Ioh. 15. 13.

Secondly, Respicient (that is) Re-aspicient: Not, once or twice, but oftentimes to look upon it: that is (as the Prophet saith here) iteratis vicibus, to look again and again: or (as the Apostle saith) Recogitare, to think upon it, over and over again, as it were to dwell in it for a time. In a sort, with the frequentness of this our beholding it, to supply the weakness and want of our former attention. Surely, the more steadily and more often we shall fix our eye upon it, the more we shall be enured: and being enured, the more desire to do it. For, at every looking, some new sight will offer it self, which will offer unto us occasion, either of godly sorrow, true repentance, sound comfort, or some other reflection, issuing from the beams of this heavenly mirror. Which point, because it is the chief point, the Prophet here calleth us to; even, how to look upon Christ often, and to be the better for our looking. It shall be very agreeable to the Text, and to the Holy Ghosts chief intent, if we prove how, and in how diverse sorts, we may with profit behold and look upon Him, whom thus we have pierced. 2. With Iteration respicient. Heb. 12. 3.

First, then, looking upon Him, we may bring forth for the first effect, that which immediately followeth this Text it self, in this Text, Et plangent Eum: Respice & plange. First, look and lament, or mourn: which is indeed the most kindly and natural effect of such a spectacle. Look upon Him that is pierced; and with looking upon Him, be pierced thy self: Respice & transfigere. A good effect of our first look, if we could bring it forth. At least wise, if we cannot Respice & transfigere look and be pierced; yet that it might be Respice & compungere, that with looking on Him, we might be pricked in our hearts; and have it enter past the skin, though it go not clean through: Which difference in this Verse the Prophet seemeth to insinuate, when, first he willeth us to mourn, as for ones onely son, with whom all is lost. Or, if that cannot be had, to mourn, as for a first begotten son; which is, though not so great, yet a great mourning: even for the first begotten, though other sons be left. 1 Respice & transfigere. Acts 2. 37.

And, in the next Verse, if we cannot reach to natural grief; yet he wisheth us to mourn with a Civil; even with such a lamentation, as was made for Josias. And Behold a greater than Josias is here. Comming Verse. 11 ming not (as he) to an honoured death in battel; but to a moſt vile death, the death of a Maleſactor: And not (as Joſias) dying without any fault of theirs; but mangled and maſſacred in this ſhameful ſort, for us; even for us and our tranſgreſſions. Verily, the dumb and ſenſeleſs creatures had this effect wrought in them (of mourning) at the ſight of His death; in their kind ſorrowing for the murther of the Son of God. And we truly ſhall be much more ſenſeleſs then they, if it have in us no work to the like effect. Eſpecially, conſidering it was not for them, He ſuffered all this; nor they no profit by it: but, for us it was; and we by it ſaved: And yet, they had compaſſion, and we none. Be this then the firſt.

2. Reſpice & transfige.

Now, as the firſt is Reſpice & transfigere, Look upon Him, and be pierced: ſo, the ſecond may be (and that fitly) Reſpice & transfige; Look upon Him, and pierce, and pierce that in thee, that was the cauſe of Chriſts piercing: (that is) ſin and the luſts thereof. For, as men that are pierced indeed with grief of an indignity offered, withal are pricked to take revenge on him that offers it: ſuch a like affection ought our ſecond looking to kindle in us; even to take a wreak or revenge upon ſin, quia fecit hoc, becauſe he hath been the cauſe of all this. I mean (as the Holy Ghoſt termeth it) a mortifying or crucifying; a thruſting through of our wicked paſſions and concupiſcences, in ſome kind of repaying thoſe manifold villanies, which the Son of God ſuffered by means of them. At leaſtwiſe (as before) if it kindle not our zeal ſo far againſt ſin; yet, that it may ſlake our zeal and affection to ſin: that is, Reſpice, ne reſpiceas: Reſpice Chriſtum, ne reſpicias peccatum. That we have leſs mind, leſs liking, leſs acquaintance with ſin, for the Paſſion-ſake. For that, by this means we do in ſome ſort, ſpare Chriſt; and (at leaſt) make His wounds no wider: Whereas by affecting ſin anew, we do, what in us lieth, to crucifie Him afreſh, and both increaſe the number, and enlarge the wideneſs of His wounds.

It is no unreaſonable requeſt, That, if we liſt not wound ſin: yet, ſeeing Chriſt hath wounds enough, and they wide and deep enough, we ſhould forbear to pierce Him further, and have (at leaſt) this ſecond fruit of our looking upon Him: either to look and to pierce ſin; or to look, and ſpare to pierce Him any more.

3. Reſpice & dilige.

Now, as it was ſin that gave Him theſe wounds: ſo, it was love to us that made Him receive them, being otherwiſe able enough to have avoided them all. So that, He was pierced with love, no leſs then with grief: and it was that wound of love, made Him ſo conſtantly to endure all the other. Which love we may read in the palms of His hands (as the Fathers expreſs it, out of Eſay 49.16.) For, in the Palms of His hands, He hath graven us, that he might not forget us. And the print of the nails in them, are as Capital letters to record his love towards us. For, Chriſt pierced on the Croſs is liber charitatis, the very book of love laid open before us. And again, this love of His we may read in the cleft of His heart, quia clavus penetrans factus eſt nobis Clavis reſerans (ſaith Bernard) ut pateant nobis viſcera per vulnera. The point of the Spear ſerves us in ſtead of a Key, letting us through his wounds, ſee his very bowels, the bowels of tender love and moſt kind compaſſion, that would for us endure to be ſo entreated. That, if the Jews (that ſtood by) ſaid truly of him, at Lazarus grave, Ecce quomodo dilexit Eum! when He ſhed a few tears out of his eyes; much more truly may we ſay of him, Ecce quomodo dilexit nos! ſeeing him ſhed, both Water and Blood, and that in great plenty; and that, out of his heart.

Joh. 11.36.

Which ſight ought to pierce us with love too, no leſs than before it did with ſorrow. With one, or with both: for, both have power to pierce; but ſpecially Love: Which except it had entred firſt and pierced him, no naile or ſpeare could ever have entred. Then let this be the third, Reſpice & dilige: Look, and be pierced with love of him, that ſo loved thee, that he gave himſelf in this ſort to be pierced for thee.

4. Reſpice & crede.

And foraſmuch as it is Chriſt his own ſelf, that, reſembling his paſſion on the Croſs to the Brazen Serpent lift up in the wilderneſs, maketh a correſpondence between their beholding and our believing (for ſo it is Joh. 3.14.) we cannot avoid, but muſt needs make that an effect too: Even Reſpice & crede: And, well may we believe and truſt him, whom looking a little before, we have ſeen ſo conſtantly loving us. For, the ſight of that love maketh credible unto us, whatſoever in the whole Scripture, is affirmed unto us of Chriſt, or promiſed in his name: So that, believe it, and believe all. Neither is there any time, wherein with ſuch cheerfulneſs or fulneſs of faith we cry unto him, My Lord, and My God, as when our eye is fixed upon the print of the nails, and on the hole in the ſide of him that was pierced for us. So that, this fourth duty Chriſt Himſelf layeth upon us, and willeth from his own mouth, Reſpice & Crede.

Joh. 20.28.

5. Reſpice & ſpera.

And, believing this of him, what is there, the eye of our hope ſhall not look for from him? What would not he do for us, that for us would ſuffer all this? It is Saint Pauls argument, If God gave his Son for us, how ſhall he deny us any thing with Him? That is, Reſpice & Spera. Look upon him, and his heart opened, and from the gate of hope promiſe thy ſelf, and look for all manner of things that good are. Which our expectation is reduced to theſe two: 1. The deliverance from the evil of our preſent miſery: 2. and the reſtoring to the good of our primitive felicity. By the death of this undefiled Lamb, as by the yearly Paſſeover, look for, and hope for a paſſage out of Egypt: which ſpiritually is our redemption from the ſervitude of the power of darkneſs. And, as by the death of the Sacrifice, we look to be freed from whatſoever evil: So, by the death of the High Prieſt, look we for, and hope for reſtitution to all that is good; even to our forfeited eſtate in the land of Promiſe, which is Heaven it ſelf, where is all joy and happineſs for evermore. Reſpice & Spera, Look, and look for: by the Lamb that is pierced, to be freed from all miſery; by the High Prieſt that is pierced, fruition of all felicity.

Rom. 8.32.

Now,

Now, inasmuch as His heart is pierced, and His side opened; the opening of the one, and the piercing of the other, is, to the end, somewhat may flow forth. To which end (saith Saint Augustine) Vigilanti verbo usus est Apostolus, the Apostle was well advised when he used the word opening; for, there issued out water and blood which make the sixt effect, Respice, & Recipe. Marke it running out, and suffer it not to run waste, but receive it. Of the former (the water) the Prophet speaketh in the first words of the next Chapter, that out of his pierced side (a) God opened a fountain of water to the house of Israel for sin and for uncleanness: Of the fulness whereof we all have received, in the Sacrament of our Baptism. Of the latter (the blood) which the Prophet (in (b) IX Chapter before) called the blood of the New Testament, we may receive this day: for, it will run in the high and holy Mysteries of the Body and Blood of Christ. There may we be partakers of the flesh of the [c] Morning-Heart, as upon this day killed. There may we be partakers of the (d) Cup of Salvation, the precious blood (e) which was shed for the remission of our sins. Our part it shall be, not to account the (f) blood of the Testament an unholy thing, and to suffer it to run in vain for all us; but with all due regard to receive it so running: for, even therefore was it shed. And so to the former, to add this sixt, Respice & Recipe.

6. Respice & Recipe

[a] Zach. 13. 1.

[b] Zach. 9. 11.

[c] Psal. 116. 13. Heart

[d] 1 Pet. 1. 19.

[e] Mat. 26. 28.

[f] Heb. 10. 29.

And shall we alwayes receive grace, even streams of grace issuing from Him that is pierced, and shall there not from us issue something back again, that he may look for and receive from us, that from him have and do daily receive so many good things? No doubt there shall; if love which pierced him, have pierced us aright. And that is (no longer to hold you with these effects) Respire & Retribue. For, it will behove us no less then the Psalmist, to enter into the consideration of Quid retribuam: Especially, since we, by this day, both see and receive that, which he and many others desired to see, and receive, and could not. Or, if we have nothing to render, yet (our selves) to return with the Samaritan, and falling down at his feet, with a loud voice, to glorifie his goodness, who finding us in the estate, that other Samaritan found the forlorn and wounded man, healed us, by being wounded himself, and by his own death restored us to life. For all which his kindness, if nothing will come from us, not so much as a kind and thankful acknowledgment, we are certainly worthy, He should restrain the fountain of his benefits (which hitherto hath flowen most plenteously) and neither let us see nor feel him any more.

7. Respice & Retribue.

Psa. 119. 13.

But, I hope for better things: that love, such and so great love will pierce us, and cause both other fruits, and especially thoughts of thankfulness to issue from us. Thus many; and more, if the time would serve: But, thus many several uses may we have of thus many several respects, or reflexed lookings upon Him whom we have pierced.

Thirdly, Facient se respicere. For, the Holy Ghost did easily foresee, we would not readily be brought to the sight, or to use our eyes to so good an end. Indeed to flesh and blood it is but a dull and heavy spectacle; And, neither willingly they begin to look upon it; and having begun, are never well, till they have done, and look off of it again. Therefore is the Verb (by the Prophet) put into this Conjugation of purpose: which to turn in strict propriety, is Respicere se facient, rather than Rispicient: They shall procure or cause, or even enjoyn or enforce themselves to look upon it; or (as one would say) look that they look upon it.

5. With enforcement of themselves. Respicere se facient.

For some new and strange spectacle (though vain and idle, and which shall not profit us how strange soever) we cause our selves sometimes to take a journey, and besides our pains, are at expenses too, to behold them: we will not only look upon, but even cause our selves to look upon vanities; and in them, we have the right use of facient se respicere. And why should we not take some pains, and even enjoyn our selves to look upon this? Being neither far off, nor chargeable to come to: and since the looking on it may so many wayes, so mainly profit us; Verily it falleth out oft, that of Christ: Violenti rapiunt illud. Nature is not inclined; and where it is not inclined, force must be offered; which we call in Schools, Actum elicitum. Which very act by us undertaken, for God, and (as here) at His word, is unto Him a Sacrifice right acceptable. Therefore, facias, or fac facias; do it willingly, or do it by force: Do it, I say; for, done it must be. Set it before you and look on it: or, if you list not remove it, and set it full before you, though it be not with your ease, Respice, Look back upon it with some pain: for, one way or other, look upon it we must. The necessity whereof (that we may the better apprehend it) it will not be amiss, we know, that these words are in two sundry places, two sundry wayes applied: 1. once by St. John in the Gospel, 2. and the second time again, by Christ himself in the Revelation. By ~~S. John to Christ~~, at his first coming, suffering (as, our Saviour) upon the Cross. By Christ to himself, at his second coming, sitting (as our Judge) upon His throne, in the end of the world. Behold, He cometh in the clouds, and every eye shall see Him, yea even they that pierced him: Et plangent se super Eum omnes Gentes terræ. The meaning whereof is. Look upon Him, here, if you will: Enjoyn your selves if you think good: Either here, or somewhere else; either now or then, look upon Him you shall. And they which put this spectacle far from them here, and cannot endure to look upon Him whom they have pierced, & plangere Eum, and be grieved for Him, while it is time: a place and time shall be, when they shall be enforced to look upon Him, whether they will or no, Et plangent se super Eum, and be grieved for themselves, that they had not grace to do it sooner. Better, compose themselves to a little mourning here, with some benefit to be made by their beholding, than to be drawn to it there, when it is too late, and when all their looking and grieving will not avail a whit. For, there Respicientes respiciet, & despicientes despiciet: His look shall be amiable to them that have respected His piercing here; and dreadful on the other side, to them that have neglected it. And, as they that have enured themselves to this looking on (here) shall in that day, Look up, and lift up their heads with joy, the day of their Redemption being at hand. So, they that cannot bring themselves, to look upon Him here, after they once have looked upon

In a word; if thus cauſing our ſelves to fix our eyes on him, we ask, how long we ſhall continue ſo doing, and when we may give over? Let this be the anſwer, Donec totus fixus in Corde, qui totus fixus in Cruce. Or if that be too much or too hard, yet ſaltem at the leaſt, Reſpice in Illum, donec ille te reſpexerit.
Luc. 22. 61. Look upon him, till he look upon you again. For, ſo he will. He did, upon Peter; and with his look, melted him into tears. He that once and twice before denyed Him, and never wept, becauſe Chriſt looked not on him; then denyed, and Chriſt looked on him, and he went out and wept bitterly. And, if to Peter thus he did, and vouchſafed him ſo gracious a regard, when Peter not once looked toward Him, how much more ſhall he not deny us like favour, if, by looking on Him, firſt we provoke him in a ſort to a ſecond looking on us again, with the Prophet, ſaying; Propoſui Dominum coram me, I

And (to conclude) if we ask, how we ſhall know when Chriſt doth thus reſpect us? Then truly, when fixing both the eyes of our meditation upon Him that was pierced (as it were) one eye, upon the grief; the other, upon the love wherewith He was pierced, we find by both, or one of theſe, ſome motion of Grace ariſe in our hearts: the conſideration of His grief, piercing our hearts with ſorrow; the conſideration of his love, piercing our hearts with mutual love again. WHITE-HALL,

LAMENT. Chap. I. Ver. XII.

Have yee no regard, O all yee that paſs by the way? Conſider, and behold, if ever there were ſorrow, like my ſorrow, which was done unto me, wherewith the Lord did afflict me in the day of the fierceneſs of His wrath.

AT the very reading or hearing of which Verſe, there is none but will preſently conceive, it is the voice of a party in great extremity. In great extremity two wayes: 1. Firſt, in ſuch diſtreſs, as never was any; If ever there were ſorrow like my ſorrow: 2. And then in that diſtreſs, having none to regard him: Have yee no Regard all yee? A Complaint.

To be afflicted, and ſo afflicted, as none ever was, is very much: In that affliction, to find none to reſpect him or care for him, what can be more? In all our ſufferings, it is a comfort to us that we have a ſicut: that nothing hath befallen us, but ſuch as others have felt the like: But here, Si fuerit ſicut; If ever the like were, (that is) never the like was. 1 Cor. 10. 13.

Again, in our greateſt pains, it is a kind of eaſe, even to find ſome regard. Naturally we deſire it, if we cannot be delivered, if we cannot be relieved, yet to be pitied: It ſheweth, there be yet ſome, that are touched with the ſenſe of our miſery; that wiſh us well, and would give us eaſe if they could: But this afflicted, here, findeth not ſo much, neither the one nor the other: but is even as he were an outcaſt both of Heaven and Earth. Now verily an heavy caſe, and worthy to be put in this book of Lamentations. Job. 19. 21.

I demand then, Of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this? of himſelf, or of ſome other! This I find; there is not any of the ancient Writers, but do apply, yea, in a manner appropriate this ſpeech to our Saviour Chriſt: And that this very day, the day of his Paſſion, (truly termed here the day of Gods wrath:) And whereſoever they treat of the Paſſion, ever this verſe cometh in, (and to ſay the truth) to take the words ſtrictly as they lie, they cannot agree, or be verified of any but of him, and him only. For, though ſome other, not unfitly, may be allowed to ſay the ſame words: it muſt be in a qualified ſenſe: for, in full and perfect propriety of ſpeech, he, and none but he: None can ſay, (neither Jeremy, nor any other) Si fuerit dolor ſicut dolor meus, as Chriſt can: No day of wrath, like to his day: no ſorrow to be compared to his (all are ſhort of it;) not his to any, it exceedeth them all. Chriſt Complains.

And yet, according to the letter, it cannot be denied, but they be ſet down by Jeremy, in the perſon of his own people, being then come to great miſery; and of the holy City, then laid waſte, and deſolate by the Chaldees. What then? Ex Ægypto vocavi Filium meum, Out of Ægypt have I called Hoſea. 11. 1.

called my Son, was literally ſpoken of this people too: yet is by the Evangeliſt applied to our Saviour Chriſt. My God, My God why haſt thou forſaken me? at the firſt uttered by David; yet the ſame words our Saviour taketh himſelf, and that more truly and properly, than ever David could: and of thoſe of Davids, and of theſe of Jeremie's, there is one and the ſame reaſon.

Mat. 2. 15. Pſal. 22. 1. Mat. 27. 46.

1 Cor. 10. 11.

Of all which the ground is, that correſpondence which is between Chriſt and the Patriarchs, Prophets, and People before Chriſt, of whom the Apoſtles rule is, Omnia in figurâ contingebant illis: That they were themſelves Types, and their ſufferings fore-running figures of the great ſuffering of the Son of God. which maketh Iſaacs offering, and Joſephs ſelling, and Iſraels calling from Ægypt, and that complaint of Davids, and this of Jeremies, appliable to him; That he may take them to himſelf, and the Church, aſcribe them to him, and that in more fitneſs of terms, and more fulneſs of truth, than they were at the firſt ſpoken by David, or Jeremy, or any of them all.

And this rule, and the ſteps of the Fathers proceeding by this rule, are to me a warrant to expound and apply this Verſe (as they have done before) to the preſent occaſion of this time; which requireth ſome ſuch Scripture to be conſidered by us, as doth belong to his Paſſion, who, this Day, powred out his moſt precious Blood, as the only ſufficient Price, of the dear purchaſe of our Redemptions.

Be it then to us, (as to them it was, and as moſt properly it is) The ſpeech of the Son of God, as this day hanging on the Croſs, to a ſort of careleſs people, that go up and down without any manner of regard of theſe his ſorrows and ſufferings, ſo worthy of all regard. Have ye no regard? O all ye that paſs by the way, Conſider and behold, if ever there were ſorrow like to my ſorrow, which was done unto me, wherewith the Lord afflicted me in the day of the fierceneſs of his wrath.

The Parts.

Here is a Complaint, and here is a Requeſt. A complaint, that we have not: A Requeſt, that we would have the Pains and Paſſions of our Saviour Chriſt in ſome Regard. For firſt he complaineth (and not without cauſe) Have ye no regard? And then (as willing to forget their former neglect, ſo they will yet do it) he falleth to entreat, O conſider and behold.

And what is that we ſhould conſider? The Sorrow which he ſuffereth: and in it two things: The Quality, and the Cauſe. 1. The Quality, Si fuerit ſicut; If ever the like were: and that either in reſpect of Dolor, or Dolor meus; The Sorrow ſuffered, or the Perſon ſuffering. 2. The Cauſe: that is God, that in His wrath, in his fierce wrath, doth all this to him. Which cauſe will not leave us, till it have led us to another cauſe in our ſelves, and to another yet in him: All which ſerve to ripen us to Regard.

Theſe two then ſpecially we are moved to regard. 1. Regard is the main point. But becauſe therefore we regard but faintly, becauſe either we conſider not, or not aright; we are called to conſider ſeriouſly of them. As if he ſhould ſay, Regard you not? If you did conſider, you would: if you conſidered as you ſhould, you would regard as you ought. Certainly the Paſſion, if it were throughly conſidered, would be duly regarded. Conſider then.

I. So the Points are two: 1 The Quality, and 2. the Cauſe of his ſuffering. And the Duties two:
II. 1. To Conſider, and Regard, 2. So to conſider, that we regard them, and him for them.
III.
IV.

Have you no regard, &c.

The Parties to whom. O all ye that paſs by the way, conſider.

TO eaſe this Complaint, and to grant this Requeſt, we are to regard: and that we may regard, we are to conſider the pains of his Paſſion. Which, that we may reckon no eaſie common matter of light moment, to do or not to do, as we liſt: Firſt, a general ſtay is made of all paſſengers, this day. For, (as if it were from his Croſs) doth our Saviour addreſs this his ſpeech to them that go to and fro, the day of his Paſſion, without ſo much as entertaining a thought, or vouchſafing to look that way. O vos qui tranſitis! O you that paſs by the way, ſtay and Conſider. To them frameth he his ſpeech, that paſs by: To them, and to them all, O vos omnes, qui tranſitis, O all ye that paſs by the way, ſtay and Conſider.

Which very ſtay of His, ſheweth it to be ſome important matter, in that it is, of all. For as for ſome to be ſtaied, and thoſe the greater ſome, there may be reaſon; the moſt part of thoſe that go thus to and fro, may well intend it, they have little elſe to do. But to except none, not ſome ſpecial Perſon, is hard. What know we their haſt? Their occaſions may be ſuch, and ſo urgent, as they cannot ſtay. Well, what haſte, what buſineſs ſo ever, paſs not by, ſtay though. As much to ſay, as, Be they never ſo great, your occaſions; they are not, they cannot be ſo great as this: How urgent ſoever, this is more, and more to be intended. The regard of this, is worthy the ſtaying of a journey. It is worth the conſidering of thoſe, that have never ſo great affairs in hand. So material in His ſight in His account. Which ſerveth to ſhew the exigence of this duty. But as for this point, it needeth not to be ſtood upon to us here at this time: we are not going by, we need not be ſtaied; we have ſtaied all other our affairs, to come hither, and here we are all preſent before God, to have it ſet before us, that we may conſider it. Thither then let us come.

Sorrow. Heb. 13. 3.

That which we are called to behold and conſider, is His Sorrow: And Sorrow is a thing which of it ſelf Nature inclineth us to behold, as being our ſelves in the body, which may be one day in the like ſorrowfull caſe. Therefore will every good eye turn it ſelf, and look upon them that lie in diſtreſs.

Thoſe

Those two in the Gospel, that passed by the wounded man, before they passed by him, (though they helped him not, as the Samaritane did) yet they looked upon him as he lay. But, this party (here) lieth not, he is lift up, as the Serpent in the wilderness, that unless we turn our eyes away purposly, we can neither will nor choose, but behold Him. 1 Behold. Luke. 10. 33. John 3. 14.

But because, to Behold, and not to consider, is but to gaze; and gazing the Angel blameth in the Apostles themselves, we must do both: both Behold and consider, look upon with the eye of the body, that is, behold, and look into, with the eye of the mind, that is, Consider. So saith the Prophet here. And the very same doth the Apostle advise us to do. First, ἀφορᾶν to look upon him (that is, to Behold) and then ἀναλογίζεσθαι to think upon Him; that is to Consider His Sorrow: Sorrow (sure) would be considered. Acts 3. 12. 2 Consider. Heb. 12. 23.

Now then, because, as the quality of the Sorrow is, accordingly it would be considered, (for if it be but a common sorrow, the less will serve, but if it be some special, some very heavy case, the more would be allowed it: for, proportionably with the suffering, the consideration is to arise:) To raise our consideration to the full, and to elevate it to the highest point, there is upon His Sorrow set a Si fuerit sicut, a note of highest eminency: for, Si fuerit sicut, are words that have life in them, and are able to quicken our consideration, if it be not quite dead. For by them we are provoked (as it were) to Consider, and considering, to see whether ever any Sicut may be found, to set by it, whether ever any like it. The quality. If ever the like.

For if never any, Our nature is, to regard things exceeding rare and strange; and such as the like whereof is not else to be seen. Upon this point then, there is a Case made, as if He should say, If ever the like, Regard not this; but if never any, be like your selves in other things, and vouchsafe this (if not your chiefest, yet) some Regard.

To enter this Comparison, and to shew it for such. That, are we to do, three sundry wayes: For, three sundry wayes, in three sundry words, are these Sufferings of his here expressed: all three within the compass of the Verse. In the three parts of His Sorrow.

The first is, מכאוב Mac-ob (which we read Sorrow,) taken from a wound or stripe, as all do agree. 1.

The second is, יגוני Gbolel; we read Dare to me, taken from a word that signifieth Melting in a furnace; as S. Hierome noteth out of the Chalden (who so translateth it.) 2.

The third is, חמגו Hoga; where we read afflicted, from a word which importeth Rooting off, or Bereaving. The old Latine turneth it Vindemiavit me; as a Vine whose fruit is all pluched off. The Greek (with Theodoret) ἀπορφανίσθη με, as a Vine or Tree, whose leaves are all beaten off, and is left naked and bare. 3.

In these three, are comprized his Sufferings, Wounded, Melted, and Bereft, leaf and fruit, (that is) all manner of comfort.

Of all that is penal, or can be suffered, the common division is, Sensus & damni, Grief for that we feel, or for that we forgo. For that we feel, in the two former, Wounded in body, Melted in soul: for that we forgo, in the last; Bereft all, left neither fruit, nor so much as a leaf to hang on him. 1 Of the quality. First, of His Passion.

According to these three, To consider his Sufferings, and to begin first with the first. The pains of his Body, his wounds and his stripes. 1 Pœna sensûs in the body.

Our very eye will soon tell us, no place was left in his Body, where he might be smitten, and was not. His skin and flesh rent with the whips and scourges, his hands and feet wounded with the nails, his head with the thorns, his very heart with the spear-point; all his senses, all his parts loden with whatsoever wit or malice could invent. His blessed Body given as an Anvile to be beaten upon, with the violent hands of those barbarous miscreants, till they brought him into this case, of Si fuerit sicut. For, Pilates (Ecce Homo!) his shewing him with an Ecce, as if he should say, Behold, look if ever you saw the like ruefull spectacle: This very shewing of his sheweth plainly, he was then come into wofull plight: So wofull, as Pilate verily believed, his very sight so pitifull, as, it would have moved the hardest heart of them all to have relented, and said, This is enough, we desire no more. And this for the wounds of his body, (for on this we stand not.) John 19. 5.

In this one peradventure some Sicut may be found, in the pains of the body: but, in the second, the Sorrow of the Soul, I am sure, none. And indeed the pain of the Body is but the Body of pain: the very Soul of sorrow and pain in the souls sorrow and pain, Give me any grief, save the grief of the mind, saith the Wise-man: For (saith Salomon) The spirit of man will sustain all his other infirmities, but a wounded spirit, who can bear? And of this, this of His Soul, I dare make a Case, Si fuerit sicut. 2 Pœna sensûs in the Soul. Syra. 15. 57. Prov. 18. 14.

He began to be troubled in Soul, (saith S. John:) To be in an agony, (saith S. Luke:) To be in anguish of mind and deep distress, (saith S. Mark) To have His Soul round about on every side invironed with sorrow, and that sorrow to the death. Here is trouble, anguish, agony, sorrow and deadly sorrow: But, it must be such, as never the like: So it was too. John 12. 27. Luke 22. 44. Mark. 14. 35. Mat. 26. 38.

The estimate whereof we may take from the second word of Melting, that is, from His sweat in the Garden; strange, and the like whereof was never heard or seen. Luke. 22. 44.

No manner violence offered Him in body; no man touching him, or being neer him, in a cold night (for they were fain to have a fire within doors) lying abroad in the air, and upon the cold earth, to be all of a sweat, and that sweat to be Blood; and not as they call it, Diaphoreticus, a thin faint sweat, but Grumosus, of great Drops; and those, so many, so plenteous, as they went through His apparel and all; and through all, streamed to the ground, and that in great abundance: Read, enquire, and Consider, Si fuerit sudor, sicut sudor iste; If ever there were sweat like this sweat of His? Never the the like ſweat certainly, and therefore never the like Sorrow. Our tranſlation is, Done unto me: but we ſaid, the word properly ſignifieth (and ſo S. Hierome and the Chaldee Paraphraſt read it,) Melted Me. And truly it ſhould ſeem by this fearfull ſweat of his, he was neer ſome furnace, the feeling whereof, was able to caſt him into that ſweat, and to turn his ſweat into drops of bloud. And ſure it was ſo: For ſee, even in the very next words of all to this verſe, he complaineth of it, Ignem miſit in oſſibus meis, That a fire was ſent into His bones which melted him, and made that bloudy ſweat to diſtil from him. That hour, what his feelings were, it is dangerous to define: we know them not, we may be too bold to determine of them. To very good purpoſe it was, that the ancient Fathers of the Greek Church in their Liturgy, after they have recounted all the particular Pains, as they are ſet down in his Paſſion, and by all, and by every one of them, called for mercy, do, after all, ſhut up all with this, Δι' ἀγνώστων ἡμῖν καὶ βασάνων ἐλέησον καὶ σῶσον ἡμᾶς, By thine unknown Sorrows, and Sufferings, felt by Thee, but not diſtinctly known by us, Have mercy upon us, and ſave us.

Vaſe 13.

Now, though this ſuffice not, nothing neer; yet let it ſuffice (the time being ſhort) for his pains of body and Soul. For thoſe of the Body, it may be, ſome may have endured the like: but the ſorrows of his Soul are unknown ſorrows: and for them, none ever have; ever have, or ever ſhall ſuffer the like; the like, or neer the like in any degree.

3. Tæna tamni.

And now to the third. It was ſaid before, To be in diſtreſs, ſuch diſtreſs as this was, and to find none to comfort, nay not ſo much as to regard Him, is all that can be ſaid, to make his ſorrow a Non ſicut. Comfort is it, by which, in the midſt of all our ſorrows, we are Confortati, that is, ſtrengthned and made the better able to bear them all out. And who is there, even the pooreſt creature among us, but in ſome degree findeth ſome comfort, or ſome regard at ſome bodies hands? For, if that be not left, the ſtate of that party is (here) in the third word ſaid to be like the tree, whoſe leaves and whoſe fruit are all beaten off quite, and it ſelf left bare and naked both of the one and of the other.

1. Leaves

And ſuch was our Saviours caſe in theſe his Sorrows this day, and that ſo, as what is left the meaneſt of the ſons of men, was not left him: Not a leaf. Not a leaf! Leaves I may well call all humane comforts and regards, whereof he was then left clean deſolate. 1. His own, they among whom he had gone about all his life long, healing them, teaching them, feeding them, doing them all good he could, it is they that cry, Not Him, no, but Barabbas rather; away with Him, His bloud be upon us and our children. It is they, that in his midſt of his ſorrows, ſhake their head at him, and cry, Ah thou wretch: they, that in his moſt diſconſolate eſtate, cry, Eli, Eli; in moſt barbarous manner; deride him, and ſay, Stay, And you ſhall ſee Elias come preſently and take Him down. And this was their regard.

1. Withered leaves. John 18. 40. and 19. 15. Mat. 27. 25. Mar. 15 29, 36.

But theſe were but withered leaves. They then that on earth were neareſt him of all, the greeneſt leaves and likeſt to hang on, and to give him ſome ſhade: even of them, ſome bought and ſold him; others denied and forſwore him, but all fell away, and forſook him Ἀπερύλλισέ με (ſaith Theodoret) not a leaf left.

2. Green leaves.

Fruit.

But leaves are but leaves, and ſo are all earthly ſtaies. The fruit then, the true fruit of the Vine indeed, the true comfort in all heavineſs, is Deſuper, from above, is divine conſolation. But Vindemiavit me, (ſaith the Latine Text) even that was, in this his ſorrow; this day bereft him too. And that was his moſt ſorrowfull complaint of all others: not that His friends upon earth, but that His Father from Heaven had forſaken Him; that neither heaven nor earth yeelded Him any regard; but that between the paſſioned powers of His ſoul, and whatſoever might any ways refreſh him, there was a Traverſe drawn; and he left in the ſtate of a weather-beaten tree, all deſolate and forlorne. Evident, too evident, by that his moſt dreadfull cry, which at once moved all the powers in heaven and earth, My God, My God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Weigh well that cry; conſider it well, and tell me, Si fuerit clamor ſicut clamor iſte, if ever there were cry, like that of his: Never the like cry, and therefore never the like ſorrow.

Mat. 27. 46.

It is ſtrange, very ſtrange, that, of none of the Martyrs, the like can be read; who yet endured moſt exquiſite pains in their Martyrdoms: yet we ſee, with what courage, with what cheerfulneſs, how even ſinging they are reported to have paſſed through their torments. Will ye know the reaſon? St. Auguſtine ſetteth it down, Martyres non eripuit; ſed nunquid deſeruit? He delivered not His Martyrs; but, did He forſake them? He delivered not their bodies, but He forſook not their ſouls, but diſtilled into them the dew of His heavenly comfort; an abundant ſupply for all they could endure. Not ſo here: Vindemiavit me (ſaith the Prophet) Dereliquiſti me (ſaith He himſelf:) No comfort, no ſupply at all.

Leo it is, that firſt ſaid it, (and all Antiquity allow of it,) Non ſolvit unionem, ſed ſubtraxit viſionem. The union was not diſſolved; True, but the beams, the influence was reſtrained; and, for any comfort from thence, His ſoul was, even as a ſcorched heath-ground, without ſo much as any drop of dew of divine comfort: as a naked tree, no fruit to refreſh him within, no leaf to give him ſhadow without: The power of darkneſs let looſe to afflict Him: The influence of comfort, reſtrained to relieve Him. It is a Non ſicut, this: it cannot be expreſſed as it ſhould, and as other things may: in ſilence we may admire it, but all our words will not reach it. And though to draw it ſo farr, as ſome do, is little better than blaſphemy; yet on the other ſide, to ſhrink it ſo ſhort, as other ſome do, cannot be but with derogation to his love, Who, to kindle our love and loving Regard, would come to a Non ſicut, in his ſuffering: For, ſo it was, and ſo we muſt allow it to be. This, in reſpect of his paſſion, Dolor.

Now,

Now, in respect of his person, Dolor meus. Whereof, if it please you to take a view, even of the person thus wounded, thus afflicted and forsaken, you shall then have a perfect Non sicut. And indeed, the Person is here a weighty circumstance: It is thrice repeated, Meus, Mihi, Me, and we may not leave it out. For, as is the Person, so is the Passion; and any one, even the very least degree of wrong or disgrace, offered to a Person of excellency, is more than a hundred times more, to one of mean condition: So weighty is the circumstance of the Person. Consider then, how great the Person was; And I rest fully assured, here we boldly challenge, and say, Si fuerit sicut.

Secondly, of the quality of his Person.

Ecce homo, saith Pilate first, A man he is, as we are: And were he but a man; nay, were he not a man, but some poor dumb creature, it were great ruth to see him so handled as he was. 1. John 19. 5.

A man, saith Pilate: and a Just man, saith Pilates wife. Have thou nothing to do with that Just man. And that is one degree further. For, though we pity the punishment even of Malefactors themselves: yet ever, most compassion we have of them that suffer and be innocent. And he was innocent: Pilate and Herod, and the Prince of this world (his very enemies) being his Judges. 2. Mat. 17. 19. Luke 23. 14. & 15. Iohn 14 30.

Now among the innocent, the more Noble the Person, the more heavy the spectacle. And never do our bowels yern so much as over such, Alas, Alas for that noble Prince, saith this Prophet (the stile of mourning for the death of a great Personage.) And, He that suffered here, is such; even, a principal Person among the sons of men, of the race royal descended from Kings: Pilate stiled Him so, in his Title, and he would not alter it. 3. Jer. 22. 18. John 19. 22.

Three degrees. But, yet we are not at our true Quantus. For He is yet more: More than the highest of the sons of men: for He is The Son of the most High God. Pilate saw no further, but Ecce homo; The Centurion did, Vere, Filius Dei erat hic, Now truly, this was the Son of God. And here, all words forsake us, and every tongue becometh speechless. 4. John 19. 5. Mark 15. 39.

We have no way to express it, but a minore ad majus; (Thus.) Of this book, the book of Lamentations, one speciall occasion was, the death of King Josias: But behold a greater than Josias is here.

Of King Josias (as a special reason of mourning) the Prophet saith, Spiritus oris nostri, Christus Domini, the very breath of our nostrils, The Lords annointed (for so are all good Kings, in their Subjects accounts) he is gone. But behold, here is not Christus Domini, but Christus Dominus, the Lord's Christ, but the Lord Christ Himself: And that not coming to an honourable death in battel, as Josias did; but to a most vile reproachfull death, the death of Malefactors in the highest degree. And not slain outright as Josias was: but mangled and massacred in most pitifull strange manner; wounded in body, wounded in Spirit, left utterly desolate. O consider this well, and confess, the Case is truly put, Si fuerit dolor sicut Dolor meus. Never, never the like Person: And if, as the Person is, the Passion be; never the like Passion to His. Chap. 4. 20.

It is truly affirmed, that any one, even the least drop of bloud, even the least pain, yea, of the body only, of this so great a Person, any Dolor with this Meus, had been enough to make a Non sicut of it. That is enough; but that is not all: for adde now the three other degrees; adde to this Person, those wounds, that Sweat, and that Cry, and put all together: And, I make no manner question, the like was not, shall not, cannot ever be. It is far above all that ever was, or can be. Abyssus est: men may drowsily hear it, and coldly affect it: But Principalities and Powers stand abashed at it. And for the Quality, both of the Passion and of the Person, That Never the like; thus much.

Now to proceed to the Cause, and to Consider it: for, without it, we shall have but half a regard, and scarce that. Indeed, set the Cause aside, and the Passion (as rare as it is,) is yet but a dull and heavy sight: we list not much look upon spectacles of that kind, though never so strange; they fill us full of pensive thoughts, and make us Melancholike. And so doth this, till upon examination of the cause, we find it toucheth us neer; and so neer, so many wayes, as we cannot choose, but have some regard of it. 1. Of the cause. I.

What was done to Him, we see. Let there now be a quest of Inquiry to find, who was doer of it. Who? who, but the Power of darkness, wicked Pilate, bloudy Caiaphas, the envious Priests, the barbarous Souldiers? None of these are returned here. We are too low, by a great deal, if we think to find it among men. Quæ fecit mihi Deus, It was God that did it. An hour of that day was the hour of the power of darkness: but, the whole day it self, is said here plainly, was the day of the wrath of God. God was a doer in it; wherewith God hath afflicted me. I. God. Luke 22. 53.

God afflicteth some in Mercy: and others in wrath. This was in His wrath. In His wrath God is not alike to all; some He afflicteth in His more gentle and milde; others, in his fierce wrath. This was in the very fiercenes of His wrath. His Sufferings, His Sweat and Cry, shew as much: They could not come, but from a wrath, Si fuerit sicut: (for, we are not past Non sicut, no not here in this part it followeth us still, and will not leave us in any point, not to the end.) God's Wrath.

The Cause then in God, was wrath. What caused this wrath? God is not wroth, but with sin; Nor greviously wroth, but with grievous sin. And in Christ there was no grievous sin: Nay, no sin at all. God did it, (the Text is plain.) And in His fierce wrath, he did it. For what cause: For, God forbid, God should do, as did Annas the high Priest, cause Him to be smitten without cause. God forbid (saith Abraham) the Judg of the World should do wrong to any. To any, but specially, to his own Son: That his Son, of whom, with thundring voice from Heaven, he testifieth, all his joy and delight were in Him, in Him only, He was well pleased. And how then could his wrath wax hot, to do all this unto him? 2. Sinne. Not His. John 18. 22. Gen. 18. 25.

There

There is no way to preſerve Gods Juſtice, and Chriſts Innocency both, but to ſay as the Angel ſaid
Dan. 9. 26. of him to the Prophet Daniel, The Meſſias ſhall be ſlain, ואינלו ve-en-lo, ſhall be ſlain, but not for
But other mens. Himſelf. Not for himſelf? for whom then? For ſome others. He took upon him the perſon of others; and ſo doing, Juſtice may have her courſe and proceed.

Pity it is, to ſee a man pay that, he never took: but if he will become a Surety, if he will take on him the perſon of the Debtor, ſo he muſt. Pity to ſee a ſilly poor Lamb lie bleeding to death; but, if it muſt be a ſacrifice (ſuch is the nature of a ſacrifice) ſo it muſt. And ſo Chriſt, though without ſin in himſelf; yet as a Surety, as a Sacrifice, may juſtly ſuffer for others, if he will take upon him their perſons; and ſo, God may juſtly give way to his wrath againſt him.

Ours. And who be thoſe others? The Prophet Eſay telleth us, and telleth it us ſeven times over for Eſay. 53. 4, 5, 6. failing, He took upon Him our infirmities, and bare our maladies: He was wounded for our iniquities, and broken for our tranſgreſſions. The chaſtiſement of our peace was upon Him, and with His ſtrips were we healed. All we as ſheep were gone aſtray, and turned every man to his own way: and the Lord hath laid upon Him, the iniquity of us all. All, all: even thoſe that paſs to and fro, and for all this, regard neither Him nor His Paſſion.

The ſhort is: It was we, that for our ſins, our many great and grievous ſins, (Si fuerit ſicut, the like whereof never were) ſhould have ſwet this Sweat, and have cried this Cry; ſhould have been ſmitten with theſe ſorrows by the fierce wrath of God, had he not ſtept between the blow and us, and latched it in His own body and ſoul, even the dint of the fierceneſs of the wrath of God. O the Non ſicut of our ſins, that could not otherwiſe be anſwered!

To return then a true verdict. It is we, (we, wretched ſinners that we are) that are to be found the principals in this act; and thoſe, on whom we ſeek to ſhift it, to drive it from our ſelves, Pilate and Caiaphas and the reſt, but inſtrumental cauſes only. And it is not the executioner that killeth the man properly, (that is, They:) No, nor the Judg, (which is God, in this caſe:) Only ſin, Solum peccatum homicida eſt, Sin only is the murtherer, to ſay the truth; and our ſins, the murtherers of the Son of God: and the Non ſicut of them, the true cauſe of the Non ſicut both of Gods wrath, and of His ſorrowfull ſufferings.

Which bringeth home this our Text to us, even into our own boſoms; and applieth it moſt effectually, to me that ſpeak, and to you that hear, to every one of us: and that with the Prophet Nathan's appli-
2 Sam. 12. 7. cation; Tu es homo, Thou art the Man, even thou, for whom God in His fierce wrath thus afflicted Him. Sin (then) was the cauſe on our part, Why we, or ſome other for us.

3. But yet, what was the cauſe, why he, on his part: what was that, that moved him thus to become Love of us. our Surety, and to take upon Him our debt and danger? that moved Him thus to lay upon his Soul, a Eſay. 53. 7. ſacrifice for our ſin? Sure, Oblatus eſt quia voluit (ſaith Eſay again;) Offered He was for no other cauſe, but becauſe He would. For, unleſs he would, he needed not. Needed not, for any neceſſity of Juſtice. For, no Lamb was ever more innocent: Nor for any neceſſity of Conſtraint; For, twelve Legions of Angels were ready at his command: But, becauſe He would.

And why would he? No reaſon can be given, but becauſe he regarded us? (Mark that reaſon.) And what were we? Verily, utterly unworthy even his leaſt regard; not worth the taking up, not worth the
Rom. 5. 8. looking after. Cum inimici eſſemus (ſaith the Apoſtle) we were His enemies, when he did it; without all deſert before, and without all regard, after he had done and ſuffered all this for us: and yet he would Ephes. 2. 3. regard us, that ſo little regard him. For when he ſaw us (a ſort of forlorne ſinners) Non prius natos,
Rom. 2. 5. quam damnatos, Damned as faſt as born; as being by nature children of wrath, and yet ſtill heaping up wrath againſt the day of wrath, by the errors of our life, till the time of our paſſing hence; and then the fierce wrath of God, ready to overwhelm us; and to make us endure the terror and torments of an ever-dying death, (another Non ſicut yet:) When (I ſay) He was in this caſe, He was moved with compaſſion over us, and undertook all this for us. Even then, in His love, He regarded us, and ſo regarded us, that He regarded not Himſelf, to regard us.

Bernard ſaith moſt truly, Dilexiſti me, Domine, magis quàm te, quandò mori voluiſti pro me: In ſuffering all this for us, thou ſheweſt (Lord) that we were more dear to thee, that thou regardeſt us more, than thine own ſelf: and ſhall this Regard find no regard at our hands?

It was ſin then, and the hainouſneſs of ſin in us, that provoked wrath, and the fierceneſs of His wrath in God: It was love, and the greatneſs of His love, in Chriſt, that cauſed Him to ſuffer the Sorrows, and the grievouſneſs of theſe ſorrows, and all for our ſakes.

And indeed, but only to teſtifie the Non ſicut of this His Love, all this needed not, that was done to Him. One, any one, even the very leaſt of all the pains He endured, had been enough; enough, in reſpect of the Meus; enough, in reſpect of the Non ſicut of His Perſon. For, that which ſetteth the high price on this ſacrifice, is this; That He, which offereth it unto God, is God. But, if little had been ſuffered, little would the love have been thought, that ſuffered ſo little; and as little Regard would have been had of it. To awake our regard then, or to leave us excuſeleſs, if we continue regardleſs, all this He bare for us: that He might as truly make a Caſe of Si fuerit amor, ſicut amor meus, as He did before of, Si fuerit dolor, ſicut dolor meus. We ſay, we will regard Love; if we will, here it is to regard.

So have we the Cauſes of all three: 1. Wrath in God: 2. Sinne in our ſelves: 3. Love in Him.

Yet

Yet have we not all we ſhould. For, what of all this? What good? Cui bono? That, that is it (indeed) that we will regard, if any thing: as being matter of Benefit, the onely thing (in a manner) the world regardeth: which bringeth us about to the very firſt words again. For, the very firſt words which we read, Have ye no regard? are in the Original, לאאליכם lo alechem, which the Seventy turn (word for word) οὐ πρὸς ὑμᾶς; and the Latine likewiſe, Nonne ad vos pertinet? Pertains it not to you, that you regard it no better? For theſe two; (Pertaining and Regarding) are folded one in another, and go together ſo commonly, as one is taken often for the other. Then to be ſure to bring us to Regard, he urgeth this: Pertains not all this to you? Is it not for your good? Is not the benefit yours? Matters of benefit they pertain to you, and without them, Love, and all the reſt may pertain to whom they will. Our Benefit by it, Pertains it not to us?

Conſider then, the ineſtimable benefit that groweth unto you from this incomparable Love. It is not impertinent this; Even this; That to us hereby, all is turned about clean contrary: That by His ſtripes we are healed; by his ſweat, we refreſhed: By his forſaking, we received to Grace. That, this day (to Him, the day of the fierceneſs of Gods wrath) is to us the day of the fulneſs of Gods favour, (as the Apoſtle called it) A day of ſalvation. In reſpect of that he ſuffered, (I deny not) an evil day; a day of heavyneſs: But, in reſpect of that, which he, by it hath obtained for us, it is, (as we truly call it,) A good day, a day of joy and Jubilee. For it doth not only rid us of that wrath, which pertaineth to us for our ſins; but further, it maketh that pertain to us, whereto we had no manner of wright at all. 2 Cor. 6. 2.

For, not only by his death, as by the death of our ſacrifice, by the blood of his Croſs, as by the blood of the Paſchal Lamb, the Deſtroyer paſſeth over us, and we ſhall not periſh: But alſo by his death, as by the death of our High Prieſt (for he is Prieſt and Sacrifice both) we are reſtored from our exile, even to our former forfeited eſtate in the Land of Promiſe; Or rather (as the Apoſtle ſaith) Non ſicut delictum ſic donum: Not to the ſame eſtate, but to one nothing like it: (that, is) one far better, than the eſtate, our ſins bereft us. For they deprived us of Paradiſe, a place on earth: but by the purchaſe of his blood, we are intituled to a far higher, even the Kingdom of Heaven: And his blood, not only the blood of Remiſſion, to acquit us of our ſins; but the blood of the Teſtament too, to bequeath us and give us eſtate, in that heavenly inheritance. Exo. 12. 13. Num. 15. 28. Rom. 8. 15. Mat. 26. 28.

Now whatſoever elſe, this (I am ſure) is a Non ſicut: as that, which the eye, by all it can ſee, the ear, by all it can hear, the heart by all it can conceive, cannot pattern it; or ſet the like by it. Pertains not this unto us neither? Is not this worth the Regard? Sure, if any thing be worth the Regard, this is moſt worthy of our very worthieſt and beſt Regard.

Thus have we conſidered and ſeen, not ſo much as in this ſight we might or ſhould, but as much as the time will give us leave. And now, lay all theſe before you, (every one of them a Non ſicut of it ſelf) the pains of his body, eſteemed by Pilates Ecce; the ſorrows of his ſoul, by his ſweat in the Garden; the comfortleſs eſtate of his Sorrows, by his cry on the Croſs: And with theſe, his Perſon, as being the Son of the great and Eternal God. Then joyn to theſe, the cauſe: In God: his fierce wrath: In us, our heinous ſins deſerving it: In Him, his exceeding great Love, both ſuffering that for us, which we had deſerved; and procuring for us, that we could never deſerve: Making that to appertain to himſelf, which of right pertained to us; and making that pertain to us, which pertained to him only, and not to us at all, but by his means alone. And after their view in ſeveral, lay them all together, ſo many Non ſicut's into one, and tell me, if his Complaint be not juſt, and his requeſt moſt reaſonable. The recapitulation of all.

Yes ſure, his Complaint is juſt, Have ye no regard? None? and yet never the like? None, and it pertains unto you? No regard? As if it were ſome common ordinary matter, and the like never was? No regard? As if it concern'd you not a whit, and it toucheth you ſo near? As if he ſhould ſay: Rare things you regard, yea, though they no wayes pertain to you: this is exceeding rare, and will you not regard it? Again, things that neerly touch you, you regard, though they be not rare at all; this toucheth you exceeding neer, even as neer as your ſoul toucheth you, and will you not regard it? Will neither of theſe by it ſelf move you? Will not both theſe together move you? What will move you? Will Pity? Here is Diſtreſs, never the like: Will Duty? Here is a Perſon, never the like: Will Fear? Here is Wrath, never the like: Will Remorſe? Here are ſins, never the like: Will Kindneſs? Here is Love, never the like: Will Bounty? Here are Benefits, never the like: Will all theſe? Here they be all, all above any Sicut, all in the higheſt degree. The Complaint. The matter juſt.

Truly the complaint is juſt, it may move us: it wanteth no reaſon, it may move: and it wanteth no affection in the delivery of it to us, on his part to move us. Sure it moved him exceeding much: For among all the deadly ſorrows of his moſt bitter Paſſion; this, even this ſeemeth to be his greateſt of all, and that which did moſt affect him, even the grief of the ſlender reckoning moſt men have it in, as little reſpecting him, as if he had done, or ſuffered nothing at all for them. For lo, of all the ſharp pains he endureth, he complaineth not, but of this he complaineth, of No regard: That which grieveth him moſt, that which moſt he moaneth is this. It is ſtrange he ſhould be in pains, ſuch pains, as never any was, and not complain himſelf of them; But of want of regard only. Strange, he ſhould not make requeſt, O deliver me, or relieve me: But only, O conſider and regard me. In effect, as if he had ſaid; None, no deliverance, no relief do I ſeek: Regard I ſeek. And all that I ſuffer, I am content with it: I regard it not: I ſuffer moſt willingly, if this I may find at your hands, Regard. The manner of it.

Truly, This ſo paſſionate a Complaint may move us; it moved all but us: For moſt ſtrange of all it is, that all the Creatures in Heaven and Earth, ſeemed to hear this his mournful Complaint, and in The regard of the Creatures of it.

their kind, to shew their regard of it: The Sun in heaven shrinking in his light; the earth trembling under it; the very stones cleaving in sunder, as if they had sense and Sympathy of it: and sinful men onely, not moved with it. And yet it was not for the Creatures, this was done to him; to them it pertaineth not: But for us, it was, and to us it doth; and shall we not yet regard it? Shall the Creature, and not we? Shall we not?

The benefit if. If we do not, it may appertain to us, but we pertain not to it: It pertains to all, but all pertain not to it. None pertain to it, but they that take benefit by it; and none take benefit by it, no more than by the Brazen Serpent, but they that fix their eye on it. Behold, Consider, and Regard it: the profit, the benefit is lost without Regard.

The peril if not. If we do not, as this was a day of Gods fierce wrath against Him, only for regarding us; so there is another day coming, and it will quickly be here, a day of like fierce wrath against us, for not regarding him. And who regardeth the power of his wrath? He that doth, will surely Regard this.

Psal. 90. 11.

In that day, there is not the most careless of us all, but shall cry as they did in the Gospel; Domine, non ad Te pertinet, si perimus? Pertains it not to Thee? Carest thou not that we perish? Then would we be glad to pertain to him, and his Passion. Pertains it to us then, and pertains it not now? Sure, now it must, if then it shall.

Mar. 4. 38.

The Request, Have some regard. Then, to give end to this Complaint, let us grant him his request, and Regard his Passion. Let the Rareness of it: the Nearness to us: let Pitie or Duty: Fear, or Remorse: Love, or Bounty: Any of them, or all of them: Let the justness of his Complaint: Let his affectionate manner of Complaining of this, and only this: Let the shame of the Creatures regard; Let our Profit or our Peril: Let something prevail with us, to have it in some regard.

1. Our best Regard. Some regard! Verily, as his sufferings, his Love, our good by them are; so should our regard be, a Non sicut too: That is, a regard of these, and of nothing in comparison of these. It should be so: For, with the benefit, ever the regard should arise.

But God help us poor sinners, and be merciful unto us. Our regard is a Non sicut, indeed: but it is backward, and in a contrary sense: That is, no where so shallow, so short, or so soon done. It should be otherwise, it should have our deepest consideration, this; and our highest regard.

2. At least some Regard. But if that cannot be had (our nature is so heavy, and flesh and blood so dull of apprehension in Spiritual things) yet at leastwise some regard. Some, I say: The more the better: But in any wise, some. And not as here, No regard, none at all. Some wayes to shew we make account of it, to withdraw our selves, to void our minds of other matters, to set this before us, to think upon it, to thank him for it, to regard him, and stay and see, whether he will regard us or no. Sure he will, and we shall feel our hearts pricked with sorrow, by consideration of the cause in us, our Sin: And again, warm within us, by consideration of the cause in him, his Love; till by some motion of Grace He answer us, and shew that our regard is accepted of Him.

Act. 2. 37. Luc. 24. 32.

3. This day specially. And this, as at all other times (for, no day is amiss, but at all times, some time to be taken for this duty) so specially on this Day; this Day, which we hold holy to the memory of His Passion, this day to do it: to make this Day, the Day of Gods wrath and Christs suffering, a day to us of serious consideration and regard of them both.

It is kindly to consider Opus diei in die suo, The work of the Day, in the Day it was wrought: and this Day it was wrought. This Day therefore, whatsoever business be, to lay them aside a little; whatsoever our haste, yet to stay a little, and to spend a few thoughts in calling to mind and taking to regard, what this Day the Son of God did and suffered for us: and all for this end, That what He was then, we might not be; and what He is now, we might be for ever. Which Almighty God grant we may do, more or less, even every one of us, according to the several measures of His Grace in us.

A SER-

A SERMON Preached before the KINGS MAJESTY AT GREENWICH,

On the Nine and Twentieth of March, being Good-Friday.

An. Dom. 1605.

HEBR. Chap. XII. Ver. II.

Aſpicientes in Authorem fidei, & Conſummatorem Jeſum; qui propoſito Sibi gaudio, ſuſtinuit Crucem, confuſione contempta: atque in dextera Sedis Dei ſedet.

Looking unto Jeſus the Author and finiſher of our Faith; who for the joy that was ſet before Him, endured the Croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame; and is ſet at the right hand of the Throne of God.

SAINT Luke, though he recount at large our Saviour Chriſt's whole ſtory, yet in plain and expreſs terms he calleth the Paſſion θεωρίαν, a Theory or Sight, which Sight is it, the Apoſtle here calleth us to look unto. Luke 23. 48.

Of our bleſſed Saviour's whole life or death, there is no part but is a Theory of it ſelf, well worthy our looking on; for from each part thereof, there goeth vertue to do us good. From each part: but of all, from the laſt part, or act of His Paſſion. Therefore hath the Holy Ghoſt honoured this laſt part only, with this name; and none but this. This, is the Theory ever moſt commended to our view. To be looked on He is, at all times, and in all acts; But, then, and in that act, ſpecially, When for the joy ſet before Him, He endured the Croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame. Then, ſaith the Apoſtle, look unto Him. Saint Paul being elſewhere carefull to ſhew the Corinthians (and with them, us) Chriſt; and as to ſhew them Chriſt, So to ſhew them, in Chriſt, what that is, that ſpecially concerneth them to know, or look unto, thus he ſaith: That, though he knew many, very many things beſides; yet he eſteemed not to know any thing, but Jeſus Chriſt, & Hunc crucifixum, Him, and Him crucified. Meaning reſpectivè (as they term it) that the perfection of our knowledg is Chriſt: and the perfection of our knowledg, in, or touching Chriſt, is the knowledg of His Croſs, and Paſſion. That, the chief Theory: Nay in this, all; ſo that, ſee this, and ſee all. 1 Cor. 2. 2. 7

The view whereof, though it be not restrained to any one time; but, all the year long, yea, all our life long, ought to be frequent with us; (and blessed are the houres, that are so spent:) yet, if at any time more than other, certainly, this time, this day may most justly challenge it. For, this day was this Scripture fulfilled, and this day, are our ears filled full with Scriptures about it. So that, though, on other dayes, we imploy our eyes otherwise; yet, that this day at least, we would (as exceeding fitly the Apostle wisheth us) ἀφορᾶν cast our eyes from other sights, and fix them on this object, it being the day dedicate to the lifting up of the Son of man on high, that He may draw every eye unto Him.

John 12. 32.

The Occasion of the speaking, is (ever) the best key to every speech. The Occasion then, of this speech was this. The Apostle was to encourage the Hebrews (and, in them, us all) to hold on the well-begun profession of Christ and His faith. This our profession he expresseth, in the former verse, in the terms of a Race, or Game; borrowing his similitude from the Games of Olympus. for, from those Games (famous then, over all the world) and by terms from them taken, it was common to all Writers of that Age, both Holy and Humane, to set forth, as, in the running, the laborious course; so, in the prize of it, the glorious reward of a vertuous life.

Which race, truly Olympique (because they and we (the most of us) either stand still, or if we move, do it but slowly, and are ready to faint upon every occasion) that we may run the sooner, and attain the better, two sights he sets before us, to comfort us and keep us from fainting. One, a Cloud of Witnesses, in the first Verse, that is, the Saints in Heaven: Witnesses, as able to depose, this race may be run, and this prize may be won, for they have run the one, and won the other long ago. These look on us now, how well we carry our selves; and we to look to them, that we may carry our selves well in the course we have undertaken.

On which Cloud when we have staid our selves a while, and made them fit for a clearer Object, he scattereth the cloud quite, and sets us up a second, even our blessed Saviour His own self. And here he willeth us ἀφορᾶν to turn our eyes from them, and to turn them hither and to fasten them here, on Jesus Christ, the Author and finisher of our faith. As if He should say; If you will indeed see a sight once for all; look to Him. The Saints, though they be Guids to us, yet are they but followers to Him. He, the Ἀρχηγὸς the Arch-guide; leader of them, and us all: Look on Him. They but Well-willers to our faith, but neither Authors nor Finishers of it: He, both. Both Author to call us to it, and set us in it; and Finisher to help us through it, and reward us for it: Look to Him. Hunc aspicite, is the Apostles voice, the voice that cometh out of this cloud; for, it is the wish of them all, even all the Saints, Hunc aspicite. At His appearing therefore, the cloud vanished. There is a time when Saint James may say, Take (my brethren) the Prophets for an example: But when He cometh forth that said, Exemplum dedi vobis, I have given you an example; Exemplum sine exemplo, an example above all examples: when He cometh in place, Sileat omnis caro, Let all flesh keep silence. Let all the Saints, yea, the Seraphins themselves cover their faces with their wings, that we may look on Him, and let all other sights go.

John 13. 15.
Zec. 2. 13.
Esay. 6. 2.

The Division I. Let us then turn aside to see this great Sight. The principal parts thereof are two: 1. The Sight it self (that is) the Thing to be seen: 2. and the Sight of it (that is) the Act of seeing it, or looking on it.

The whole Verse (save the two first words) is of the Object or Spectacle propounded. Jesus the Author, &c. The two first words ἀφορῶντες εἰς is the other, the Act, or Duty enjoyned.

But as in many other cases, so here, Et erunt primi novissimi, the first must be last. For, though the Act (in the verse) stand foremost, yet (in nature) it is last, and so to be handled. We must have a thing first set up before our eyes, before we can set our eyes upon it.

Of the Object then first, This Object is Jesus: Not barely, but with His double addition of 1. the Author, 2. the Finisher of our faith, Jesus: And in him more particularly, two Theories or Sights: 1. Of His Passion: 2. Of His Session. 1. His Passion, in these words: Who for the joy, &c. 2. His Session, in these: And is set, &c.

In the Passion, two things He pointeth at: 1. What He suffered, 2. and what moved Him to it. 1. What He suffered: the Cross and Shame: the Cross He endured; the shame He despised. 2. And what moved Him; For a certain joy set before Him.

II. Then is to follow the Act or Duty of looking on this sight, ἀφορῶντες εἰς. 1. Wherein first, the two Propositions, 1. Ἀπὸ and 2. Εἰς, From and To: To look from, and to look to. 2. Then the two Verbs. 1. One in the Verse expressed: that is) Ὁρᾶν in ἀφορῶντες: 2. The other of necessity implied: for, we have never a Verb in all the Verse. Ἀφορῶντες is a Participle, and but suspendeth the sentence, till we either look back to the Verse before; and so it is 1. Ut curramus: or to the verse next after; and so it is 2 Ne fatigemur. In the one, is the Theory or Sight we shall see thus looking. In the other, the praxis of this theory; What this sight is to work in us: and that is a motion, a swift motion Running: So to look on it, that we run; and so to run, that we faint not.

And, if the time will give leave, if our allowance will hold out, then we will take a short view of the Session: That He is set down: Wherein is 1. rest and ease opposed to His Cross, where He hung in pain 2. And in a throne: wherein is glory opposed to shame. 3. And at the right hand of God, wherein is the fulness of both the joy wherein He sitteth, and the joy which was set before Him, and which is set before us.

To

TO give the better aſpect to the Party whom He preſenteth to our view, that with better will we may behold Him, before He name His name, He giveth Him this double addition, as it were diſplaying an Enſign, proclaiming his Suit before Him; whereof theſe two are the two colours, 1. The Author, 2. The finiſher of our faith, Jeſus.

I. The Object. The Author, & Finiſher of our faith. Jeſus.

Author and finiſher are two titles, wherein the Holy Ghoſt oft fetteth Him forth, and wherein He ſeemeth to take ſpecial delight. In the very letters, He taketh to him the name of (a) Alpha the Author, and again of Omega the Finiſher of the Alphabet. From letters go to words: there is He (b) Verbum in principio, the Word at the beginning. And He is Amen too, the word at the end. From words to books: (d) In capite ſcriptum eſt de me, In the very front of the Book He is; and He is (e) ἀνακεφαλαίωσις the recapitulation, or concluſion of it too. And ſo, go to Perſons: there He is (f) Primus and Noviſſimus, the firſt and the laſt. And from Perſons to Things: and there He is, the (g) Beginning and the end; whereof ἀρχὴ the Beginning is in ἀρχηγὸς the Author; and τέλος the end is in (h) τελειωτὴς the Finiſher. The firſt beginning, à quo, He; by whom all things are made: and the laſt end He; Per or propter quem, by, for, or through whom all things are made perfect.

Both theſe He is, in all things. And, as in all things elſe, ſo in faith, whereto they are here applied moſt fully and fitly of all other. Therefore look not aſide at any in heaven or earth, for matter of Faith; look full upon Him: he is worth the looking on, with both your eyes: he hath matter for them both.

The honour that Zorobabel had in the material, is no leſs truly his in the Spiritual Temple of our faith: Manus Ejus, his hands have laid the corner ſtone of our belief, and his hands ſhall bring forth the head-ſtone alſo, giving us the end of our faith, which is the Salvation of our Souls.

Zec. 4. 9.

Of our faith, and of the whole race of it he is the Author, caſting up his glove at the firſt ſetting forth: he is the Finiſher, holding out the prize at the gole end. By his authority it is, our courſe is begun: we run not without warrant. By His bounty, it ſhall be finiſhed and crowned in the end: we run not in vain; or without hope of a reward.

Put, what is this title to the point in hand? So, as nothing can be more. Author and Finiſher, they are the two points that move us to look to Him. And the very ſame are the two points, wherein we are moved to be like to Him.

To fix our Eye, to keep it from ſtraying, to make us look on Him full, He telleth us, He is both theſe. In effect, as if He ſaid, ſcatter not your ſight, look not two wayes, as if He (I ſhew you) were to begin, and ſome other make an end. He (I ſhew you) doth both.

His main end being to exhort them, as they had begun well, ſo, well to perſevere; to very good purpoſe, he willeth them to have an eye to Him, and His example, who firſt and laſt, καὶ φανερὸς ἀρχὴ σανεῦ, from the cratch to the Croſs, from S. Luk's time (a) quo cœpit Jeſus facere & docere, that He began to do and teach, to (b) S. John's time, that He cried conſummatum eſt, gave them not over (c) ſed in finem uſque dilexit eos, but to the end loved them. And ſo muſt they Him, if they do Him right. Both, ſet out with Him, as Author by a good beginning; and hold out with Him, as Finiſher, to a far better end; and follow him, in both, who is both. Were He Author only, it would ſerve to ſtep forth well at the firſt. But He is Finiſher too: therefore, we muſt hold out to the laſt. And not read one of them for the other, ſeeing He requireth both: no either, but both: and is (indeed) Jeſus a Saviour of none but thoſe, that follow Him as Finiſher too, and are therefore marked in the (d) forehead with Tau the laſt letter of the Hebrew, as He Himſelf is Omega, the laſt of the Greek Alphabet. This is the Party, He commendeth to our view; Jeſus, the Author and the Finiſher of our faith. For theſe two, to look upon Him: and, in theſe two, to be like unto Him.

Our Sight then is Jeſus: and in Jeſus what? You have called us hither (ſay they in the Canticles) to ſee your Shulamite, what ſhall we ſee in Him? What? (ſaith the Eſpouſe) but as the company of an army (that is) many legions of good ſights, an Ocean or bottomleſs depth of manifold high perfections. We ſhall loſe our ſelves, we ſhall be confounded to ſee in Him, all that may be ſhewed us: the Object is too great. Two pieces therefore He maketh choice of, and but two; and preſenteth Him to our eye in two forms only; 1. As hanging on the Croſs; 2. As ſitting on the throne. 1. His Paſſion, and 2. His Seſſion; theſe two. And theſe two, with very good and perfect correſpondence to the two former. By the Croſs, He is Author: By the Throne, He is Finiſher of our faith. As Man on the Croſs, Author: As God on the Throne, Finiſher. Author, on the Croſs: there he paid the price of our admitting. Finiſher, on the throne: there he is the prize to us of our courſe well performed, of the well finiſhing our race, the race of our faith.

Cant. 6. 13.

And ſure, with right high wiſdom hath the Holy Ghoſt, being to exhort us to a race, combined theſe twain. For, in theſe twain, are compriſed the two main motives, that ſet all the world on running, 1. Love, and 2, Hope. The Love He hath to us, in His Paſſion on the Croſs. The Hope we have of Him, in His Seſſion on the Throne. Either of theſe alone, able to move; but, put them together, and they will move us, or nothing will.

1. Love firſt. What moveth the Mother to all the travel and toil ſhe taketh with her Child? She hopes for nothing, ſhe is in years (ſuppoſe;) ſhe ſhall not live to receive any benefit by it: It is Love and Love only. Love, firſt.

1. The Motives thereto. 1. Love.

2. And

2. Hope.

2. And then Hope. What moveth the Merchant, and ſo the Husbandman, and ſo the Military-man, and ſo all the reſt? All the ſharp ſhowers and ſtormes they indure, they love them not: It is hope, and hope only of a rich return.

If either of theſe will ſerve us, will prevail to move us, here it is. Here is Love; Love in the Croſs: Who loved us, and gave Himſelf for us, a Sacrifice on the Croſs. Here is Hope, hope in the Throne: To him that overcometh will I give, to ſit with me in my Throne. If our eye be a Mother's eye, here is Love worth the looking on. If our eye be a Merchants eye, here is hope worth the looking after. I know, it is true, that verus amor vires non ſumit de ſpe. (It is Bernard) Love, if it be true indeed, as in the Mother, receiveth no manner ſtrength from hope. Ours is not ſuch; but faint and feeble and full of imperfection: Here is hope therefore, to ſtrengthen our weak knees, that we may run the more readily, to the high price of our calling.

Eph. 5. 2

2. What he ſuffered.

To begin then with his Love, the Love of his Paſſion. (the peculiar of this Day.) In it, we firſt look to what he ſuffered; and that is of two ſorts: 1. The Croſs, He endured: 2. The ſhame, He deſpiſed. 3. And then with what mind: for the mind is worth all; and love in it, ſheweth it ſelf (if not more) as much as in the ſuffering it ſelf: but certainly, more. And this is His mind, propoſito ſibi gaudeo, as chearfully as if it had been ſome matter of joy. Of both firſt joyntly under one. Then ſeverally each by it ſelf.

1. The Croſs and ſhame jointly.

Two things are to us moſt precious, 1. our Life, and 2. our Reputation: Pari paſſu ambulant (ſaith the Lawyer) they go arm in arm, and are of equal regard, both. Life is ſweet; the Croſs coſt Him His Life. Honour is dear; Shame bereft Him His honour. In the race, which before us and for us our Bleſſed Saviour ran, theſe two great blocks, 1. Death, and 2. Diſgrace were in His way. Neither ſtayed Him: to teſtifie His Love, over both He paſſed. Put His ſhoulders under the Croſs and endured it, to the loſs of His life. Set His foot upon ſhame and deſpiſed it, to the loſs of His honour. Neither one nor other, life or honour, held He dear, to do us good. O, if we ſhould hazard but one of theſe two, for any creature living, how much adoe would we make of it, and reckon the party eternally obliged to us! Or if any ſhould venture them for us, we ſhould be the better, every time we ſaw him. O that it might be ſo here! O that we would meet this Love with the like meaſure! Certainly, in his Paſſion, the Love of us triumphed, over the love of his life, and honour both.

One view more of both theſe under one, and we ſhall by theſe two diſcover two other things in our ſelves, for which, very agreeable it was he ſhould ſuffer theſe two, that by theſe two of His, for thoſe two of ours, he might make full ſatisfaction. It will ſhew a good congruity between our ſickneſs and his ſalve, between our debt and his diſcharge.

The Mother-ſin then, the ſin of Adam and Eve, and their motives to it, are the lively image of all the after-births of ſin, and the baits of ſin for ever. Now that which moved them to diſobey, was partly pleaſure, and partly pride. Pleaſure; O the fruit was delightful to ſee and to take. Pride: Eritis ſicut Dii, it promiſed an eſtate equal to the Higheſt. Behold then (in His Paſſion) for our pleaſure, His pain; and for our pride, His ſhame and reproach. Behold Him in His patience, enduring pain, for our wicked luſt; in His humanity, having ſhame poured on Him, for our wretched pride. (a) The Lord of life ſuffering death; (b) The Lord of glory, vile and ignominious diſgrace. (c) Tanquam Agnus (ſaith the Prophet of Him) as a lamb, pitifully ſlaughtered: (d) Tanquam vermis (ſaith He of Himſelf) as a worme, ſpitefully trod upon. So, by his enduring pains and painful death, expiating our unlawful pleaſure: and, by His ſuſtaining ſhame, ſatisfying for our ſhameful pride. Thus may we, under one, behold our ſelves, and our wretched demerits, in the mirror of His Paſſion. Gregory ſaith well: Dicendum erat, quantum nos dilexit, ne diffidere; Dicendum erat & quales, ne ſuperbire & ingrati eſſe: How greatly He loved us, muſt be told us, to keep us from diſtruſt: And what we were when He ſo loved us, muſt be told us, to hold us in humility, to make us everlaſtingly thankful. Thus far both under one view.

2. The Croſs and ſhame ſeverally.

Now are we to part them, to ſee them apart. We ſhall have much adoe to do it, they are ſo folded and twiſted together. In the Croſs, there is ſhame, and in ſhame there is a Croſs, and that a heavy one.

The Croſs, the Heathen termed, Cruciabile lignum, a tree of torture: but they called it alſo, Arborem infelicem, & ſtipitem infamem, A wretched infamous tree withal. So it was in His Crown, the thorns pricked him; there was pain: the Crown it ſelf was a meer mockery, and matter of ſcorn. So, in his Robe; his purple body underneath in great pain certainly: His purple Robe over it, a garment of ſhame and diſgrace. All along the Paſſion, thus they meet ſtill together. In a word: the prints of his Paſſion, the Apoſtle well calleth Stigmata Chriſti: Both, are in that word: not onely wounds and ſo grievous; but baſe and ſervile marks, and ſo ſhameful; for, ſo are ſtigmata. Thus, ſhame and Croſs, and Croſs and ſhame run interchangeably.

Gal. 6. 17.

Yet, ſince the Holy Ghoſt doth ſhew us them ſeverally, ſo to ſee them, as he ſhews them. Enduring is the act of patience; and patience hath pain for her object. Deſpiſing ſhame is the property of humility, even of the higheſt humility; Not only ſpernere ſe, but ſpernere ſe ſperni. Firſt then we muſt ſee the pain, his patience endured; that is meant by the Croſs: and then ſee the deſpiſing, his humility deſpiſed; that is meant by the ſhame. Firſt then of his Croſs.

The Croſs.

It is well known, that Chriſt and his Croſs were never parted; but that all his life long was a continual croſs. At the very Cratch; his Croſs firſt began. All his life after (ſaith the Apoſtle in the next Verſe) was nothing but a perpetual gain-ſaying of ſinners: which we call croſſing; and profeſs, we cannot abide, in any of our ſpeeches or purpoſes to be croſſed, he was. In the Pſalms of the Paſſion (the XXII.) in the very front or inſcription of it, he is ſet forth unto us under the term of a Hart,

Verſe 3.

Cer-

Cervus matutinus, a morning Hart (that is) a Hart roused early in the morning: As, from His birth He was by Herod, and hunted and chased all His life long; and this day brought to His end, and as a poor Deer, stricken and wounded to the heart. This was His last; last and worst. And, this we properly call his Cross, even this dayes suffering. To keep us then to our day, and the Cross of the day. He endured the Cross.

He endured. Very enduring it self, is durum: Durum pati. Especially, for persons of high power or place, as the Son of God was. For great Persons to do great things, is no great wonder: Their very Genius naturally inclineth to it. But, to suffer any small thing, for them, is more than to do many great. Therefore, the Prophet placeth his moral fortitude, and the Divine, his Christian obedience, rather in suffering, than in doing. Suffering is (sure) the more hard of the twain. He endured.

If it be hard to endure, it must be more hard to endure hard things: And of all things hard to be endured, the hardest is death. Of the Philosophers τὰ τρία φοβερὰ five fearfull things, it is the most fearfull: And what will not a man? Nay, what will not a woman weak and tender, in Physick, in Chirurgery endure, not to endure Death? He endured death.

And, that if He endured, and no more but that, it might suffice; it is worth all we have; for, all we have, we will give for our life. But not death only, but the kind of death is it. Mortem, mortem autem Crucis (saith the Apostle, doubling the point:) Death He endured, even the death of the Cross. Phil. 2. 8.

The Cross is but a little word; but of great contents: but few letters; but in those few letters, are contained, multa dictu gravia, perpessu aspera, heavy to be named, more heavy to be endured. I take but the four things ascribed by the Holy Ghost to the Cross, answerable to the four ends or quarters of it. 1. Sanguis Crucis (Colos. 1. 20.) 2. Doloris Crucis (Acts 1. 2.) 3. Scandalum Crucis (Gal. 5. 11.) 4. Maledictum Crucis (Gal. 3. 13.) that is, The death of the Cross is all these four, a 1. bloudy, 2. dolefull, 3. scandalous, 4. accursed death.

1. Though it be but a cold comfort, yet a kind of comfort it is (if dye we must) that our death is mors sicca, a dry; not sanguis Crucis, not a bloudy death. 2. We would dye, when we dye, an easie, (not αἱματίαν ταύτην) not a tormenting death. 3. We desire to dye, with credit, if it might be; if not, without scandal, (scandalum Crucis.) 4. At least wise to go to our graves, and to dye by an honest, ordinary, and by no means, by an accursed death, (maledictum Crucis) In the Cross, are all these; all four. The two first are in the Cross: The two latter, in the shame. For, the Cross and the shame are (in very deed) two Crosses: the shame, a second Cross of it self.

To see then, as in a short time, shortly. That of the Poet (nec sicca morte Tyranni) sheweth plainly, it is no poor priviledg, to dye without effusion of bloud. And so it is. 1. For, a blessing it is, and our wish it is, we may live out our time, and not dye an untimely death. Where there is effusion of bloud, there is ever an untimely death. 1.

2. Yet every untimely death is not violent: but a bloudy death is violent and against nature; and we desire to pay Nature her debt by the way of Nature. 2.

3. A violent death one may come to, as in war (sanguis belli, best sheweth it) yet by valour, not by way of punishment. This death is penal: not (as all death) stipendium peccati; but (as evil mens death) vindicta sceleris, an execution for some Capital offence.

4. And not every crime neither: Fundetur sanguis is the punishment of Treason and other more heynous crimes, to dye embrued in their own bloud. And even they that dye so, dye not yet so evil a death, as do they that dye on the Cross. It is another case, where it is sanguis mortis, the bloud and life go away together at once; another, when it is sanguis Crucis, when the bloud is shed, and the party still in full life and sence, as on the Cross it was: the bloud first and the life a good while after. This is Sanguis Crucis, an 1. untimely, 2. violent, 3. penal, 4. penal in the highest degree: there bleeding out His bloud before He dye, and then dye. 3.

When bloud is shed, it would be no more than need: shed it would be, not poured out. Or if so, at one part (the neck or throat) not at all parts at once. But, here was fundetur, havock made at all parts, His Passion (as He termeth it) a second Baptism, a River of bloud; and He even able to have been baptised in it, as He was in Jordan. And where it would be Summa parcimonia etiam Vilissimi sanguinis, no waste, no not of the basest bloud that is; waste was made here. And of what bloud? Sanguis Jesu, the bloud of Jesus: and who was He? Sure, by vertue of the union Personal, God; and so, this bloud, bloud of Gods own bleeding; every drop whereof was precious, more precious than (that, whereof it was the price) the world it self: Nay, more worth than many worlds; yea, if they were ten thousand. Yet was this bloud wastfully spilt, as water upon the ground, The fundetur and the qui here, will come into consideration, both. This is sanguis Crucis: and yet, this is not all neither; there is more yet. Mark 10. 38.

For, the bloud of the Cross, was not only the bloud of Golgotha, but the bloud of Gabbatha too. For of all deaths, this was peculiar to this death, the Death of the Crosse; that they that were to be crucified, were not to be crucified alone (which is the bloud of Golgotha:) but they must be whipped too, before they were crucified, which is the bloud of Gabbatha; a second death, yea worse than death it self. And in both these places He bled, and in either place twice. They rent His body with the 1. whips, they guard His head with the 2. thornes, but these in Gabbatha. And again, twice in Golgotha; when they 1. nailed His hands and His feet; when He was 2. thrust to the heart with the spear. This is sanguis Crucis. It was to be stood on a little: we might not pass it: It is that, whereon our faith depends, Per fidem in sanguinem Ipsius: by it, he is Author of our faith. Faith in God, and Peace with God, both: Pacificans in sanguine Crucis, Pacifying all with the bloud of the Cross. Rom. 3. 25. Col. 1. 20.

Now

Now this bloudy whipping and nailing of His, is it which bringeth in the ſecond point of pain: that it was not bloud alone without pain, as in the opening of a vein; but it was bloud and pain both. The tearing and mangling of his fleſh, with the whips, thorns and nails, could not chooſe but be exceeding painfull to Him. Pains (we know) are encreaſed much by cruel, and made more eaſie by gentle handling, and even the worſt that ſuffer, we wiſh their execution as gentle, and with as little rigor as may be. All rigor, all cruelty was ſhewed to Him; to make his pains the more painfull. In Gabbatha, they did not whip Him (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) they ploughed His back, and made (not ſtripes, but)
Pſal. 129. 3. long furrows upon it. They did not put on His wreath of thorns, and preſs it down with their hands, but beat it on with batts, to make it enter through skin, fleſh, skull and all. They did not (in Golgotha)
Pſal. 22. 16. pierce his hands and feet, but made wide holes (like that of a ſpade) as if they had been digging in ſome ditch.

Theſe were pains, and cruel pains: But yet theſe, are not βάσανος (the Holy Ghoſts word in the Text) Thoſe are properly ſtraining pains, pains of torture. The Rack is deviſed as a moſt exquiſite pain, even for Pſal. 22. 14. terror. And the Croſs is a rack, whereon he was ſtretched, till (ſaith the Pſalm) all his bones were out of joynt. But even to ſtand (as He hung) three long hours together, holding up but the arms at length, I have heard it avowed of ſome that have felt it to be a pain ſcarce credible. But, the hands and the feet being ſo cruelly nailed (parts, of all other, moſt ſenſible, by reaſon of the texture of ſinews, there, in them moſt) it could not but make His pain out of meaſure painful. It was not for nothing, that dolores acerrimi dicuntur cruciatus (ſaith the Heathen man) that the moſt ſharp and bitter pains of all other, have their name from hence, and are called Cruciatus, pains like thoſe of the Croſs. It had a meaning, that they gave Him, that he had (for his welcome to the Croſs) a cup mixt with gall or myrrhe; and (for his farewell) a ſponge of vinegar: to ſhew by the one, the bitterneſs; by the other, the ſharpneſs of the pains of this painfull death.

Now, in pain (we know) the only comfort of gravis, is brevis; if we be in it, to be quickly out of it. This, the Croſs hath not; but is mors prolixa, a death of dimenſions, a death long in dying. And it was therefore purpoſely choſen by them. Blaſphemy they condemned Him of; then was he to be ſtoned: That death would have diſpatched him too ſoon. They indited him anew of Sedition; not, as of worſe fault, but only becauſe crucifying belonged to it: For, then he muſt be whipped firſt, and that liked them well: and then, he muſt dye by inch-meal; not ſwallow his death at once, but taſte it (as Chap. 2. 9.) and take it down by little and little. And then he muſt have his legs and arms
Chap. 2. 9. broken; and ſo was their meaning, he ſhould have been: Elſe (I would gladly know) to what purpoſe provided they to have a Veſſel of Vinegar ready in the place (John 19. 29.) but only, that he might not faint with loſs of bood, but be kept alive till they might hear his bones craſh under the breaking, and ſo feed their eyes with that ſpectacle alſo. The providence of God (indeed) prevented this laſt act of cruelty: Their will was good though. All theſe pains are in the Croſs: but, to this laſt ſpecially, the word in the Text hath reference ὑπέμεινε, which is, he muſt μεῖναι ὑπὸ, tarry, ſtay, abide under it: So dye, that he might feel himſelf dye, and endure the pains of an enduring death.

And yet, all this is but half, and the leſſer half by far, of Cruciatus crucis. All this, his body endured, was his ſoul free the while? No; but ſuffered as much: As much? nay more, infinitely much more, on the ſpiritual; than his body did, on the material Croſs. For, a ſpiritual Croſs there was too: all grant a Croſs, beſides that which Simeon of Cyren did help him to bear. Great were thoſe pains, and this time too little to ſhew, how great; but, ſo great, that in all the former, he never ſhrunk, nor once complained; but was, as if he ſcarce felt them. But when theſe came they made him complain and
Heb. 5. 7. cry aloud, κραυγὴν ἰσχυρὰν, a ſtrong crying. In all thoſe, no bloud came, but where paſſages were made for it to come out by: but in this, it ſtrained out all over, even at all places at once. This was the pain
Eſay. 33. 2. 1. of the Preſs (ſo the Prophet calleth it, Torcular:) wherewith, as if he had been in the wine-preſs, all his garments were ſtained and goared with bloud. Certainly, the bloud of Gethſemane was another manner of bloud than that of Gabbatha; or that of Golgotha either; and that was the bloud of his internal Croſs. Of the three Paſſions, that was the hardeſt to endure: yet that did he endure too. It is that, which belief it ſelf doth wonder, how it doth believe; ſave that it knoweth; as well the Love as the Power of God to be without bounds; and his wiſdome as able to find, how through Love it might be humbled, as exalted through power, beyond the uttermoſt that mans wit can comprehend.

b The Shame. And this is the Croſs He endured. And if all this might have been endured, ſalvo honore, without ſhame or diſgrace, it had been ſo much the leſs. But now, there is a further matter yet to be added, and that is ſhame, It is hard to ſay, of theſe two, which is the harder to bear; which is the greater Croſs, the croſs or ſhame. Or rather, it is not hard. There is no mean party in miſery, but, if he be inſulted on, his being inſulted on more grieves him, then doth the miſery it ſelf: But, to the noble generous nature, to whom Intereſſe honoris eſt majus omni alio intereſſe, the value of his honor is above all value; to him, the Croſs is not the Croſs: ſhame, is the Croſs. And any high and heroical Spirit beareth
1 Sam. 31. 4. any grief more eaſily, then the grief of contemptuous and contumelious uſage. King Saul ſhewed it plainly, who choſe rather, to run upon his own ſword, then to fall into the hands of the Philiſtins, who (he knew)
Jud. 16. 25, 30. would uſe him with ſkorn, as they had done Sampſon before him. And even he (Sampſon too) rather then ſit down between the Pillars and endure this, pulled down houſe and all, as well upon his own head, as theirs that ſo abuſed him. Shame then, is certainly the worſe of the twain. Now in his death, it is not eaſie to define, whether pain or ſhame had the upper hand: whether greater, Cruciatus or ſcandalum Crucis.

Was

Was it not a foul disgrace and scandal to offer him the shame of that servile base punishment of the whip; not to be offered to any but to slaves and bond-men? Loris? liber sum (saith he in the Comadie, in great disdain: as if being free-born, he held it great skorn to have that once named to him.) Yet, shame of being put out of the number of free-born men, he despised, even the shame of being in formâ servi. 1. Phil. 2. 7.

That, that is servile, may yet be honest: Then, was it not yet a more foul disgrace and scandal indeed, to appoint him, for his death, that dishoneſt, that foul death, the death of Malefactors, and of the worſt ſort of them? Morte turpissimâ (as themſelves termed it) the moſt shamefull opprobrious death of all other, that the persons are scandalous that ſuffer it? To take Him as a thief, to hang Him between two thieves: nay, to count him worſe then the worſt thief in the Goal; to ſay and to cry, Vivat Barabbas, pereat Christus, Save Barabbas and hang Christ? Yet this shame He despised too, of being in formâ malefici. 2.

If base, if dishoneſt, let theſe two ſerve: uſe him not disgracefully, make him not a ridiculum caput, pour not contempt upon him. That did they too: and a shame it is to ſee the shamefull carriage of themſelves all along the whole Tragedy of His Passion. Was it a Tragedy, or a Passion trow? A Passion it was: yet by their behaviour it might ſeem a may-game. Their ſhouting and outcries; their harrying of him about, from Annas to Caiaphas; from him to Pilate; from Pilate to Herod; and from him to Pilate again: One while in purple, Pilate's ſuit; another-while in white; Herod's livery: Nipping him by the cheeks, and pulling off his hair; blindfolding Him and buffeting Him; bowing to Him in derision, and then ſpitting in his face, was, as if they had not the Lord of glory, but ſome idiot or dizard in hand. Died Abner, as a fool dieth? (ſaith David of Abner in great regret) ô no. Sure, our bleſſed Saviour ſo died; and, that he ſo died, doth equal, nay ſurpaſs even the worſt of his torments. Yet this shame alſo He despised, of being in formâ ludibrii. 3. 2 Sam. 3. 33.

Is there any worſe yet? There is. For, though contempt be bad, yet deſpight is beyond it, as far as earneſt is beyond ſport: that, was ſport; this, was malice. Deſpight, I call it, when in the midſt of his miſery, in the very depth of all his diſtreſs, they vouchſafed him not the leaſt compaſſion: but, as if he had been the moſt odious wretched Caitiff and abject of men, the very out-caſt of Heaven and Earth; ſtood ſtaring and gaping upon him, wagging their heads, writhing their mouthes, yea blearing out their tongues; railing on him, and reviling him, ſcoffing at him and ſcorning him: yea, in the very time of his Prayers deriding Him, even in his moſt mournfull Complaint and cry, for the very Anguiſh of His Spirit. Theſe vile indignities, theſe ſhamfull villanies, ſo void of all humanity, ſo full of all deſpight; (I make no queſtion) entred into his ſoul deeper, than either nail or ſpear did into His Body. Yet all this He deſpiſed: to be in formâ reprobi. Men hid their faces at this; nay, to ſee this ſight, the Sun was darkned, drew back his light: the earth trembled, ran one part from the other; the powers of Heaven were moved.

Is this all? No, all this is but Scandalum: there is a greater yet remaining, then ſcandalum; and that is maledictum Crucis: That the death he died, was not only ſervile, ſcandalous, opprobrious, odius, but even execrable and accurſed. For men held ſo. For, as he had been a very reprobate, in his extream drought, they denied him a drop of water (never denied to any but to the damned in hell) and inſtead of it, offered him vinegar in a ſponge: and that in the very pangs of death, as one for whom nothing was evil enough.

All this is but man, and man is but man; his glory is ſhame oftentimes, and his ſhame glory: But, what God curſeth, that is curſed indeed. And this death was curſed by God Himſelf, His own mouth, as the Apoſtle deduceth, Gallath. 3. 13. When all is ſaid we can ſay, this, this, is the hardeſt point of his ſhame, and the higheſt point of his love in bearing it. Chriſtus factus eſt maledictum. The ſhame of a curſed death, curſed by God, is a ſhame beyond all ſhames; and he that can deſpiſe it, may well ſay, conſummatum eſt: there is no greater left for him to deſpiſe. O what contempt was powred upon him, O how was he in all theſe deſpiſed! Yet he deſpiſed them all, and deſpiſed to be deſpiſed in them all. The higheſt humility, Spernere Se ſperni: theſe ſo many wayes, ſpernere Se ſperni.

So have we now the Croſs ξύλον διπλοῦν, the two main barres of it, 1. Pain and 2. Shame: and either of theſe again, a Croſs of it ſelf; and that double, 1. outward, and 2. inward. Pain; bloudy, cruel, dolorous and enduring: Pain He endured: ſhame, ſervile, ſcandalous, opprobrious, odius: Shame He deſpiſed. And beſide theſe, an internal Croſs: the Paſſion of Gethſemane, and an internal ſhame; the Curſe it ſelf of the Croſs: Maledictum Crucis. Of theſe, He endured the one; the other He deſpiſed.

Theſe, all theſe,: and yet there remaineth a greater than all theſe, even quo animo, with what mind, what having in His mind, or ſetting before His eyes, He did and ſuffered all this. That he did it not, ut cunq; but propoſito ſibi, with an eye to ſomewhat He aimed at. 3. Quo animo.

We handle this point laſt, it ſtandeth firſt in the Verſe. And ſure, if this, as a figure, ſtand not firſt, the other two are but Ciphers: with it, of value; nothing without it.

To endure all this is very much, howſoever it were. So, to endure it, as to make no reckoning of it, to deſpiſe it, is more ſtrange than all the reſt. Sure, the ſhame was great, how could He make ſo ſmall account of it? and the Croſs heavy; how could He ſet it ſo light: They could not chooſe but pinch Him, and that extreamly: and how then could He endure, and ſo endure, that He deſpiſed them? It is the third point; and in it, is adeps arietis, the fat of Rammes, the marrow of the Sacrifice; even the good heart, the free forward mind, the cheerfull affection, wherewith he did all this.

There be but two ſenſes, to take this ἀντὶ in: Neither amiſs; both very good, take whether you will. Love is in both, and Love is a high meaſure. Ἀντὶ even either Pro or Præ: Pro, in ſtead; or Præ, in compariſon.

Ἀντὶ Pro, in ſtead of the joy ſet before Him. What joy was was that? Ἔξὸν γὰρ αὐτὸν ἐν οὐρανοῖς (ſaith St. Chryſoſtome) for He was in the joyes of Heaven: there He was, and there He might have held Him. Nothing did or could force Him to come thence, and to come hither thus to be intreated, Nothing but Sic dilexit, or Propter nimiam charitatem quâ dilexit nos, but for it. Yet was He content, being in the form of God, ἀντὶ in ſtead of it, thus to transform, yea, to deform Himſelf into the ſhape of a ſervant, a felon, a fool; nay, of a Caitiff accurſed: Content to lay down His crown of glory, ἀντὶ in ſtead of it, to wear a crown of thorns: Content, what we ſhun by all means, that to endure (loſs of life;) and what we make ſo great a matter of, that to deſpiſe (loſs of honor.) All this, with the loſs of that joy and that honor, He enjoyed in Heaven (another manner joy, and Honor, than any we have here) ἀντὶ for this, or in ſtead of this.

Eph. 2. 4. Phil. 2. 6.

But, the other ſence is more praiſed, ἀντὶ Præ, in compariſon. For indeed, the joy He left in Heaven, was rather ἀγαπητὸν than πρόκειμενον, joy wherein He did already ſit, than joy ſet before Him. Upon which ground, ἀντὶ, they turn Præ; and that better, as they ſuppoſe. For, that is, in Compariſon of a certain Joy: which he comparing with the Croſs and ſhame and all, choſe rather to go through them all, than to go without it. And can there be any Joy compared, with thoſe He did forgo? or, can any joy countervail thoſe barbarous uſages, He willingly went through? It ſeemeth, there can. What joy might that be? Sure none other, but the Joy He had to ſave us, the joy of our ſalvation. For, what was His glory, or joy, or crown of rejoycing, was it not we? Yes truly, we were His crown and His Joy. In compariſon of this joy he exchanged thoſe joyes, and endured theſe pains: this was the honey that ſweetned His gall: And, no joy at all in it, but this, to be Jeſus, the Saviour of a ſort of poor ſinners. None but this: and therefore pity He ſhould loſe it.

And it is to be marked, that though to be Jeſus, a Saviour; in propriety of ſpeech, be rather a title, an outward honor, than an inward joy, and ſo ſhould have been præ honore, rather than præ gaudio; yet He expreſſeth it in the term of joy, rather than that of honor, to ſhew, it joyed Him at the heart to ſave us; and ſo, as a ſpecial joy, he accounted it.

Sure, ſome ſuch thing there was, that made him ſo cheerfully ſay to His Father in the Pſalm, Ecce venio, Loe I come: And to his Diſciples in earth, This, this is the Paſſover, that (b) deſiderio deſideravi, I have ſo longed for (as it were imbracing and even welcoming His death:) And which is more, (c) quomodo coarctor! how am I pinched, or ſtreightned, till I be at it! as if he were in pain, till he were in pain to deliver us. Which joy if ever He ſhewed, in this he did, that He went to His Paſſion with Palms and with ſuch triumph and ſolemnity, as He never admitted all his life before. And that this His loweſt eſtate (one would think it) he calleth his Exaltation, Cum exaltatus fuero. And, when any would think, he was moſt imperfect, he eſteemeth (and ſo termeth) it his higheſt perfection, Tertio die conſicior. In hoc eſt charitas, here is love: if not here, where? But here it is and that in the higheſt elevation. That the joyes of Heaven ſet on the one ſide; and this poor joy of ſaving us on the other; He quit them, to chooſe this. That thoſe pains and ſhames ſet before him, and with them this joy, He choſe them rather than forgoe this.

a Pſal. 40. 7. b Luke 22. 15. c Luke 12. 15. John 12. 32. Luke 13. 32. 1 John 4. 10.

Thoſe joyes He forſook, and this He took up; and to take it, took upon Him ſo many, ſo ſtrange indignities of both ſorts; took them and bare them with ſuch a mind, as He not only endured, but deſpiſed; Nor that neither, but even joyed in the bearing of them, and all to do us good. So to alter the nature of things, as to find joy in death, whereat all do mourn; and joy in ſhame, which all do abhor, is a wonder like that of the buſh.

Exod. 3.

This is the very life and ſoul of the Paſſion; and all beſides, but the σκελετὸς only, the anatomy, the carkaſs without it.

II. The Act, or Duty.

So have we now the whole Object; both what; and with what mind. And, what is now to be done? Shall we not pauſe a while, and ſtay, and look upon this Theory yer we go any further? Yes, let us. Proper to this day is this ſight of the Croſs. The other (of the throne) may ſtay yet His time a day or two hence.

We are enjoyned to look upon Him. How can we, ſeeing He is now higher than the Heavens, far out of our ſight, or from the kenning of any mortal eye? Yes, we may for all that. As (in the 27. of the Chapter next before) Moſes is ſaid to have ſeen Him that is inviſible: Not with the eyes of fleſh; ſo, neither he did, or we can: But (as there it is) by faith. So, he did, and we may. And, what is more kindly to behold the Author of faith, than faith? or more kindly for faith to behold, than her Author here at firſt; and her Finiſher there at laſt? Him to behold firſt and laſt; and never to be ſatisfied with looking on Him, who was content to buy us and our eye at ſo dear a rate.

Our eye then is the eye of our mind, which is faith: And our aſpicientes in this, and the recogitantes (in the next Verſe) all one; our looking to Him here, is our thinking on Him there: On Him and His Paſſion over and over again, Donec totus fixus in corde, qui totus fixus in Cruce, till He be as faſt fixed in our hearts, as ever He was to His Croſs; and ſome impreſſion made in us of Him, as there was in Him for us.

In this our looking then, two acts be riſing from the two prepoſitions: One before, ἀπὸ, in ἀφορῶντες, looking from: the other after, εἰς looking upon, or into.

I. Looking from Ἀπὸ.

There is ἀπὸ, from, abſtracting our eye from other Objects, to look hither ſome time. The Prepoſition is not idle, nor the note, but very needfull: For, naturally we put this ſpectacle far from us, and endure not either oft or long to behold it. Other things there be, pleaſe our eyes better, and which we

We look on with great delight. And we muſt ἀποβλέπειν look off them, or we ſhall never ἰδεῖν, look upon this aright. We muſt (in a ſort) work force to our nature, and per actum ſelicitum (as they terme it in Schools) inhibit our eyes, and ever weine them from other more pleaſing ſpectacles that better like them, or we ſhall do no good here; never make a true Theory of it. I mean, though our proſpect into the world be good, and we have both occaſion and inclination to look thither oft; yet ever and anon to have an eye this way; to look from them to Him, who, when all theſe ſhall come to an end, muſt be He that ſhall finiſh and conſummate our faith and us, and make perfect both. Yea, though the Saints be fair marks (as at firſt I ſaid) yet even to look off from them hither, and turn our eye to Him, from all; even from Saints and all. But chiefly, from the baits of ſin; the concupiſcence of our eyes, the ſhadows and ſhews of vanity round about, by which death entreth at our windows: which unleſs we can be got to look from, this ſight will do us no good; we cannot look on both together.

Now our Theory, as it beginneth with ἀπο, ſo it endeth with εἰς. Therefore look from it: that look to Him: or (as the word giveth it rather) into Him, than to Him; εἰς is into rather than to. Which proveth plainly, that the Paſſion is a piece of Perſpective; and, that we muſt ſet our ſelves to ſee it, if we will ſee it well; and not look ſuperficially on it: Not on the outſide alone, but ἰδεῖν εἰς, pierce into it, and enter even into the inward workmanſhip of it; even of his internal Croſs which he ſuffered, and of His intire affection wherewith He ſuffered it. 2 Looking unto Eis into.

And we may well look into him; Cancellis plenum eſt corpus, His body is full of ſtripes, and they are as lattices: Patent viſcera, per vulnera, His wounds they are as windows, through which we may well ſee all that is within Him. Clavus penetrans factus eſt mihi clavis reſerans (ſaith S. Bernard:) The nails and ſpear-head ſerve as keyes to let us in. We may look into the palms of His hands, wherein (ſaith the Prophet) He hath graven us, that He might never forget us. We may look into His ſide (S. John uſeth the word) opened. Vigilanti verbo (ſaith Auguſtine) a word well choſen, upon good advice; We may through the opening, look into His very bowels, the bowels of kindneſs and compaſſion, that would endure to be ſo intreated. Yea, that very heart of his, wherein we may behold the love of our ſalvation to be the very hearts joy of our Saviour. Eſay. 49. 16. John 19. 34.

Thus looking from, from all elſe, to look into Him, what then? then followeth the participle, We ſhall ſee. What ſhall we ſee? Nay, what ſhall we not ſee? What Theory is there worth the ſeeing, but is there to be ſeen? To recount all, were too long: Two there are in eſpecial. 2. To ſee ἰδεῖν.

There is a theory medicinal, like that of the brazen Serpent; and it ſerveth for comfort to the conſcience, ſtung and wounded with the remorſe of ſin. For, what ſin is there or can there be ſo execrable or accurſed, but the curſe of the Croſs; what ſo ignominious or full of confuſion, but the ſhame of it; what ſo corroſive to the conſcience, but the pains of it; what of ſo deep or of ſo crimſon a dye, but the blood of it, the blood of the Croſs will do it away? What ſting ſo deadly, but the ſight of this Serpent will cure it? This a principal theorie; and elſewhere to be ſtood on but not here. For this ſerveth to quiet the mind, and the Apoſtle (here) ſeeketh to move it, and make it ſtir.

There is then another theory beſides, and that is exemplary for imitation. There He dyed (ſaith Saint Paul) to lay down for us ἀντίλυτρον, our ranſom: that is the former. There He dyed (ſaith S. Peter) to leave unto us ὑποχειμὸν, relinquens nobis exemplum, a patern an example to follow, and this is it; to this he calleth us; to have a directory uſe of it, to make it our pattern; to view it as our idea. And ſure, as the Church under the Law needed not, ſo neither doth the Church under the Goſpel need any other precept than this one, Inſpice & fac, See and do according to the theory ſhewed thee in the Mount: To them in Mount Sinai; to us in Mount Calvarie. 1 Tim. 2. 6. 1 Pet. 2. 21. Exod. 25. 4.

Were all Philoſophy loſt, the theory of it might be found there. Were all chairs burnt (Moſes chair and all) the chair of the Croſs is abſolutely able to teach all vertue new again. All vertues are there viſible: All, if time would ſerve: Now I name only thoſe five, which are directly in the Text.

1. Faith is named there: It is, it was moſt conſpicuous there to be ſeen: when being forſaken of God, yet He claſpeth (as it were) His arms, faſt about Him, with Eli, Eli, My God, My God, for all that. 2. Patience, in enduring the Croſs. 3. Humility, in deſpiſing the ſhame. 4. Perſeverance, in that it was nothing for Him to be Author, unleſs He were Finiſher too. Theſe four. But above theſe and all, that which is the 5. ratio idealis of all, the band and perfection of all, Love, in the ſignature of love, in the joy, which he found in all this, Majorem quâ nemo, to lay down His life: nay, parem cui nemo, in ſuch ſort to lay it down. Majorem quâ nemo, to do this for his friends: Parem cui nemo, to do it for his enemies. Notwithſtanding their unworthineſs antecedent, to do it; and notwithſtanding their unkindneſs conſequent, yet to do it. This is the chief theory of all, but of Love (chiefly) the moſt perfect of all. For, ſure, if ever ought were truly ſaid of our Saviour, this was; that being ſpread and laid wide open on the Croſs, He is [a] Liber charitatis: Wherein, he that runneth by may read [b] Sic dilexit, and [c] Propter nimiam charitatem, and [d] Ecce quantam charitatem! Love all over, from one end to the other. Every ſtripe as a letter, every nail as a Capital letter. His [e] livories, as black letters. His bleeding wounds, as ſo many rubrikes, to ſhew upon record His love towards us. Mat. 27. 46. John 15. 13. a Hab. 2. 2. b John 3. 16. c Eph. 2. 4. d 1 John 3. 1. e Eſay. 53. 5.

Of which Love the Apoſtle when he ſpeaketh, he ſetteth it out with height and depth, length and bredth (the four dimenſions of the Croſs) to put us in mind (ſay the ancient Writers) that, upon the extent of the tree was the moſt exact Love, with all the dimenſions in this kind, repreſented that ever was. Eph. 3. 18.

2. That we may runne.

Having ſeen all theſe, what is the end and uſe of this Sight? Having had the Theory, what is the Praxis of this Theory? what the concluſion of our contemplation? Looking into, is a participle; it maketh no ſentence, but ſuſpendeth it only, till we come to a verb, to which it relateth. That verb muſt be either the verb in the verſe before, Ut curramus; or the verb in the verſe following, Ut non fatigemur; that, thus looking, we run; or that thus looking, we tire not. This is the practice of our Theory.

We ſaid, the uſe was (and ſo, we ſee, it is) to move us, or to make us move: to work in our feet, to work in them a motion: not any ſlow but a ſwift motion, the motion of running; to run the race that is ſet before us. The operation it hath (this ſight) is in our faculties motive; if we ſtand ſtill, to cauſe us ſtir; if we move but ſlowly, to make us run apace: if we run already, never to tire, or give over, till we do attain. And by this we may know, whether our Theory be a true one: if this praxis follow of it, it is: if not, a gaze it may be; a true Chriſtian Theory, it is not.

And here firſt our ἀποβλεπειν (that is) our looking from, is to work a turning from ſin. Sure this ſpectacle, if it be well looked into, will make ſin ſhall not look ſo well favoured in our eyes, as it did, it will make us, while we live, have a leſs liking to look toward it, as being the only procurer and cauſe of this Croſs and this ſhame; Nay, not only, συγκυψαι to turn our eye from it, but ἀποπτυσαι to turn our feet from it too; and to run from; yea, to flie from it, quaſi à facie Colubri, as from the face of a Serpent.

1 Pet. 4. 1. At leaſt-wiſe, if not to run from it, not to run to it, as we have: to nail down our feet from running to ſin, and our hands from committing ſin, and (in a word) have Saint Peters practice of the Paſſion, to ceaſe from ſin. This abſtractive force we ſhall find and feel: it will draw us from the delights of ſin. And not only draw us from that, but draw from us too, ſomething; make ſome tears to run from us, or (if we be dry-eyed, that not them, yet) make ſome ſighs of devotion, ſome thoughts of grace, ſome kind of thankful acknowledgments to iſſue from our ſouls. Either by way of compaſſion, as feeling that, he then felt; or by way of compunction, as finding our ſelves in the number of the parties, for whom he felt them. It is a proper effect of our view of the Paſſion, this (as S. Luke ſets it down, at the very place where he Luk. 23. 48. terms it θεωρια) that they returned from it ſmiting their breſts, as having ſeen a doleful Spectacle, themſelves the cauſe of it.

Now, as the looking from, worketh a moving from; ſo doth the looking to, a moving to.

For, firſt, Who is there that can look unto thoſe hands and feet, that head and that heart of his, that endured all this, but muſt primâ facie at the firſt ſight ſee and ſay, Ecce quomodo dilexit nos? If the Jews (that ſtood by) ſaid truly of him at Lazarus grave, Ecce quomodo dilexit eum! when he ſhed but a few tears out of his eyes; how much more truly may it be ſaid of us, Ecce quomodo dilexit eos! for Ioh 11. 36. whom he hath ſhed both water and blood; yea, even from his heart, and that in ſuch plenty? And he loving us ſo, if our hearts be not iron; yea, if they be iron, they cannot chuſe but feel the magnetical force of this load-ſtone. For, to a load-ſtone doth he reſemble himſelf, when he ſaith of himſelf, Were I Ioh. 12. 32. once lift up, omnia trahàm ad me. This vertue attractive is in this ſight, to draw our love to it.

With which (as it were the needle) our faith being but touched will ſtir ſtraight. We cannot but turn to him, and truſt in him, that ſo many wayes hath ſhewed himſelf ſo true to us. Quando amor confirmatur, fides inchoatur (ſaith S. Ambroſe:) Prove to us, of any, that he loves us indeed, and we ſhall truſt him ſtraight, without any more ado; we ſhall believe any good affirm'd of him. And what is there (tell me) any where affirm'd of Chriſt to us-ward, but this love of his, being believed, will make it credible.

Iam. 2. 22. Now, our faith is made perfect by works, or well-doing (ſaith S. James:) it will therefore ſet us in a courſe of them. Of which, every vertue is a ſtadium, and every act, a ſtep toward the end of our race. Phil. 2. 5. Beginning at humility, the vertue of the firſt ſetting out. Let the ſame mind be in you, that was in Chriſt Jeſus, who humbled himſelf: and ſo proceeding from vertue to vertue, till we come to patience 1 Pet. 5. 10. and perſeverance, that keep the gole end. So ſaith S. Peter, Modicum paſſos, perficiet, ſuffering ſomewhat more, or leſs; ſome croſſing, if not the Croſs; ſome evil report, though not ſhame; So, and no otherwiſe we ſhall come to our race end; our final perfection.

Ver. 3. And, as the reſt move us, if we ſtand ſtill, to run: So, if we run already, theſe two (Patience and Perſeverance) Patience will make us, for all our encounters μὴ κάμειν (ſaith the Apoſtle in the next verſe) not to be weary; Not in our minds, though in our bodies we be: And Perſeverance will make us μὴ ἐκλύεσθαι, not to faint or tire, though the time ſeem long and never ſo tedious: (Both theſe, in the Verſe following.) But, hold on our courſe till we finiſh it, even till we come to Him, who was not only Gal. 5. 7. Author but Finiſher, who held out, till he came to Conſummatum eſt. And ſo muſt we finiſh, not ſtadium, but dolichum: not like thoſe, of whom it was ſaid, Currebatis benè, ye did well for a ſtart; but like 2 Tim. 4. 7. our Apoſtle, that ſaid (and ſaid truly) of himſelf, Curſum conſummavi, I have finiſhed my courſe, I have held out to the very end.

3. That we faint not.

And in this, in the Praxis of our firſt Theory or ſight of our love. But our love without hope is but faint: That then with better heart we may thus do, and beſtir our ſelves, it will not be amiſs, once more to lift up our eyes, and the ſecond time to look on Him. We have not ſeen the end: the Croſs is not the end: There is a better end then ſo, And is ſet down in the Throne. As the Prophet ſaw him, we have ſeen him: in ſuch caſe, as we were ready to hide our faces, at him, and his ſight. Here is a new ſight: as the Evangeliſt ſaw him, ſo we now may: even his glory, as the [a] glory of the only begotten Son of God. [b] Ecce homo, Pilat's ſight we have ſeen: [c] Ecce Dominus & Deus meus, S. Thomas ſight, we now ſhall. The former in his hanging on the Croſs, the beginning of our faith. This latter, ſitting on the Throne, the conſummation of it.

[a] Ioh. 1. 14.
[b] Ioh. 16. 5.
[c] Ioh. 20. 28.

Wherein,

Wherein, there is an ample manner of hope, as before of love; all being turned in and out. He ſits now at eaſe, that before hung in pain. Now, on a throne, that before on the Croſs, now, at Gods right hand, that before at Satan's left. (So Zachary ſaw him: Satan on his right hand, and then muſt he be on Satan's left.) All changed: His Croſs, into eaſe; his ſhame, into glory. Zc.3.1.

Glory and reſt, reſt and glory, are two things that meet not here in our world. The glorious life hath not the moſt quiet; and the quiet life is (for the moſt part) inglorious. He that will have glory muſt make account to be deſpiſed oft, and broken of his reſt: and he that loveth his eaſe better, muſt be content with a mean condition far ſhort of Glory. Here then, theſe meet not; there (our hope is) they ſhall: even both meet together, and glory and reſt kiſs each the other: So the Prophet calleth it a glorious reſt. Eſay.11.10.

And the right hand addeth yet a degree further. For, dextera eſt pars potior. So that, if there be any reſt more eaſie, or any glory more glorious, then other, there it is, on that hand, on that ſide; and He placed in it, in the beſt, in the chiefeſt, the fulneſs of them both. At Gods right hand is not only power; power, while we be here to protect us with His might outward, and to ſupport us with His grace inward: but at His right hand alſo is the fulneſs of joy, for ever (ſaith the Pſalms:) Joy, and the fulneſs of joy, and the fulneſs of it for ever more. Pſal.16.11.

This is meant by his Seat at the right hand on the Throne. And the ſame is our bleſſed hope alſo, that it is not His place only and none but His; but, even ours in expectation alſo. The love of His Croſs, is to us a pledg of the hope of His Throne, or whatſoever elſe, He hath or is worth. For if God have given us Chriſt, and Chriſt thus given Himſelf, what hath God, or Chriſt, they will deny us? It is the Apoſtles own deduction. Rom.8.32.

To put it out of all doubt: hear we his own promiſe, that never brake his word: To him that overcometh, will I give to ſit with me in my Throne. Where, to ſit, is the fulneſs of our deſire, the end of our race, omnia in omnibus: and further we cannot go. Of a joy ſet before Him, we ſpoke yer-while: here is now a joy ſet before us; another manner joy then was before Him: The worſe was ſet before Him; the better before us; and this we are to run to. Apoc.3.22.

Thus do theſe two Theories (or ſights) the one work to love, the other to hope; both to the well performing of our courſe, that in this Theater, between the Saints joyfully beholding us in our race, and Chriſt at our end ready to receive us, we may fulfil our courſe with joy, and be partakers of the bleſſed reſt of His moſt glorious Throne.

Let us now turn to Him, and beſeech Him by the ſight of this day, by himſelf (firſt) and by his Croſs and Throne both (both which He hath ſet before us, the one to awake our love, the other to quicken our hope) that we may this day and ever, lift up our eyes and heads; that we may, this day and ever, cary them in our eyes and hearts, look up to them both: ſo look, that we may love the one, and wait and hope for the other: ſo love and ſo hope, that by them both we may move, and that ſwiftly, even run to Him; and running not faint, but ſo conſtantly run, that we fail not finally to attain the happy fruition of Himſelf, and of the joy and glory of His bleſſed Throne: that ſo we may find and feel Him as this day here, the Author; ſo, in that day, there, the Finiſher of our Faith, by the ſame our Lord, Jeſus Chriſt. Amen.

A SERMON

Preached before the

KINGS MAJESTY

AT

WHITE-HALL,

On the Sixth of Aprill, being Easter-Day.

An. Dom. 1606.

Rom. Chap. VI. Ver. IX, X, XI.

Scientes, quod Christus, &c.

Knowing that Christ, being raised from the dead, dyeth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.

For, in that He dyed, He dyed once to sin: but in that He liveth, He liveth to God.

Likewise think (or account) ye also, that ye are dead to sin, but are alive to God, in Jesus Christ our Lord.

THE Scripture is as the Feast is; both of them of the Resurrection: And this we may safely say of it, it is thought by the Church, so pertinent to the feast; as it hath ever been and is appointed to be the very entry of this dayes Service; to be sounded forth and sung, first of all, and before all, upon this day, as if there were some special correspondence between the day and it.

Two principal points are set down to us, out of the two principal words in it: One Scientes (in the first verse) Knowing: the other, Reputate (in the last verse) Compt your selves: Knowing, and Compting: Knowledg, and calling our selves to accompt for our Knowledg.

Two points very needfull to be ever joyntly called upon: and more than needfull for our times, being, that much we know, and little we compt, oft we hear and when we have heard, small reckoning we make of it. What Christ did on Easter-Day we know well; what we are then to do, we give no great regard: our Scientes is without a Reputantes.

Now this Scripture, ex totâ Substantia, out of the whole frame of it teacheth us otherwise, that Christian knowledg is not a knowledg without all manner of accompt; but that we are accomptants for it: that we are to keep an Audite of what we hear, and take accompt of our selves of what we have learned. Λογίζεσθε, is an Auditors term: thence the Holy Ghost hath taken it; and would have us to be Auditors in both Senses.

And this to be general, in whatsoever we know: But specially, in our knowledg touching this Feast of Christs Resurrection; where there are special words for it in the Text, where in expres terms an accompt is called for at our hands as an essential duty of the Day. The benefit, we remember, is so great; the Feast, we hold so high; as, though at other times we might be forborn, yet on this day, we may not.

Verse 12. Now the Sum of our accompt is set down in these words [Similiter & vos:] that we fashion our selves like to Christ, dying and rising: cast our selves in the same moulds; express Him, in both as neer as we can.

To accompt of these, first: that is to accompt our selves bound, so to do.

To accompt for these, second: that is, to accompt with our selves, whether we do so.

Both to accompt our selves bound, thus to do: and to accompt thus with our selves: that to hear a Sermon of the Resurrection, is nothing; to keep a feast of the Resurrection is as much, except it end in Similiter & vos. Nisi (saith S. Gregory) quod de more celebratur, etiam quoad mores exprimatur, Unless we express the matter of the Feast in the form of our lives; Unless, as He from the grave, So we from sin: and live to godliness, as He unto God.

Then to accompt with our selves, whether we do thus: that is, to sit down and reflect upon the Sermons we hear, and the feasts we keep; how, by knowing Christs death we dye to sin; how, by knowing His Resurrection, we live to God; how our estate in our soul is bettered: how the fruit of the words we hear, and the feasts we keep, do abound daily toward our accompt against the great Audite. And this to be our accompt, every Easter-day.

The Division Of these two points, the former is in the two first verses, what we must know: the latter, is in the last, what we must accompt for. And they be joyned with Similiter: to shew us, they be and must be, of equal and like regard; and we, as know; So accompt.

But because, but knowing is the ground of our accompt, the Apostle beginneth with knowledg. And so must we.

I. Knowledg, in all learning, is of two sorts: 1. Rerum, or 2. Causarum, ὅτι, or διότι, That, or, in that. The former is in the first Verse: Knowing that Christ, &c. The latter in the Second: For in that, &c. And because we cannot cast up a Sum, except we have a particular; the Apostle giveth us a Particular of either: A particular of our Knowledg, Quoad res; which consisteth of these three: 1. That Christ is
1. risen from the dead. 2. That now, He dyeth not. 3. That from hence-forth death hath no dominion over
2. Him. All, in the first Verse. Then a particular of our Knowledg, Quoad causas. The cause 1. Of His death, sin, He dyed to sin: 2. Of His life, God, He liveth to God. 3. And both these, but once for all. All in the second Verse.

II. Then followeth our Accompt (in the third Verse.) Wherein we consider first; 1. The Charge;
1. 2. And then the Discharge. 1. The charge first, Similiter & vos: That we be like to Christ. And then, wherein: 1. Like, in dying to sin; 2. Like in living to God. Which are the two moulds,
2. wherein we are to be cast, that we may come forth like Him. This is the Charge: 2. And last of all, the means we have to help us to discharge it, in the last words: in Christ Jesu our Lord.

I.
Our Knowing: The Means of it

BEfore we take view of the two Particulars, it will not be amiss to make a little stay at Scientes, the first word: because it is the ground of all the rest. Knowing that Christ is risen. This, the Apostle saith, the Romans did: knowing. Did know himself (indeed) that Christ was risen, for he saw Him. But how knew the Romans, or how know we? No other way than by relation, either they or we: but yet we, much better, than they: I say, by relation, in the nature of a verdict, of them that had seen Him, even Cephas and the twelve; which is a full Jury, able to find any matter of fact, and to give up a verdict in it. And that Christ is risen is matter of fact. But, if twelve will not serve in this matter of fact (which in all other matters with us, will) if a greater Enquest far, if five hundred will serve, you
1 Cor. 15. 6. may have so many; for, of more than five hundred at once, was He seen; many of them then living ready to give up the same verdict, and to say the same upon their oathes.

But to settle a knowledg, the number moveth not so much, as the quality of the Parties. If they were persons credulous, light of belief, they may well be challenged; if they took not the way to ground their knowledg aright. That is (ever) best known, that is most doubted of. And never was matter carried with more scruple, and slowness of belief, with more doubts and difficulties, than was this of Christs rising.
Mark. 16. 11. Mary Magdalen saw it first, and reported it.: They believed her not. The two that went to Emaus, Luke 24. 13. they also reported it: They believed them not. Divers women together saw him, and came and told them:
16. their words seemed to them ὡσεὶ, an idle, fained, fond tale. They all saw Him; and even seeing Him,
11. yet they doubted. When they were put out of doubt, and told it but to one that hapned to be absent (it
36. was S. Thomas;) you know, how peremptory he was: Not he, unless he might not only see with his
John 20. 25. eyes, but feel with his fingers, and put in his hand into His side. And all this he did. S. Augustine saith
27. well, Profectò valde dubitatum est ab illis, ne dubitaretur à nobis: All this doubting was by them made,
28. that we might be out of doubt, and know, that Christ is risen.

Sure they took the right course to know it certainly: and certainly they did know it, as appeareth. For never was any thing known in this world, so confidently, constantly, certainly testified, as was this, that Christ is risen. By testifying it, they got nothing in the earth. Got nothing? Nay, they lost by it: their living

living, their life, all they had to loſe. They might have ſaved all, and but ſaid nothing. So certain they were; ſo certainly they did accompt of their knowing; they could not be got from it: but to their very laſt breath, to the very laſt drop of their blood, bare witneſs to the truth of this Article: and choſe rather to lay down their lives, and to take their death, than to deny; nay, than not to affirm His riſing from death. And thus did they know, and knowing, teſtifie; and by their teſtimony came the Romans to their knowing: and ſo do we. But (as I ſaid before) we, to a much ſurer knowing than they. For, when this was written, the whole world ſtopt their ears, at this report; would not endure, to hear them; ſtood out mainly againſt them. The Reſurrection! why, it was with the Grecians at Athens, χλεύασμα a very ſkorn. The Reſurrection! why, it was with Feſtus the great Roman, μανία, a ſickneſs of the brain, a plain phrenſie. That world that then was, and long after, in ſuch oppoſition, is ſince come in: and (upon better examination of the matter, ſo ſtrangely teſtified, with ſo many thouſand lives of men (to ſay the leaſt of them) ſad, and ſober) hath taken notice of it, and both known and acknowledged the truth of it. It was well fore-told by S. John, hæc eſt victoria, quæ vincit mundum fides veſtra. It is proved true ſince: That this faith of Chriſts riſing hath made a conqueſt of the whole world. So that after all the world hath taken knowledg of it, we come to know it. And ſo more full to us, than to them, is this Scientes knowing. Now to our particulars: what we know. Acts 17. 32. 26. 24. 1 John 5. 4.

Our firſt particular is: That Chriſt is riſen from the dead. Properly, we are ſaid to riſe from a fall: and from death, rather to revive. Yet the Apoſtle rather uſeth the term of riſing than reviving, as ſerving better to ſet forth his purpoſe. That death is a fall we doubt not: that it came with a fall, the fall of Adam. But, what manner of fall? for it hath been holden a fall, from whence is no riſing. But, by Chriſts riſing it falls out to be a fall, that we may fall, and yet get up again. For, if Chriſt be riſen from it, then is there a riſing; if a riſing of one, then may there be of another: If He be riſen in our nature, then is our nature riſen; and if our nature be, our perſons may be. Eſpecially ſeeing (as the Apoſtle, in the fourth Verſe before hath told us) He, and we, are σύμφυτοι, that is, ſo grafted, one into the other, that He is part of us, and we of Him: So that (as S. Bernard well obſerveth,) Chriſtus etſi ſolus reſurrexit, tamen non totus, That Chriſt, though he be riſen only, yet he is not riſen wholly, or all, till we be riſen too. He is but riſen in part: and that He may riſe all, we muſt riſe from death alſo. 2. The Particulars. Quod non. 1 That Chriſt is riſen from the dead.

This then we know firſt; That death is not a fall like that of Pharoah, into the Sea, that ſunk down like a lump of lead into the bottom, and never came up more: but a fall like that of Jonas, into the Sea, who was received by a Fiſh, and after caſt up again. It is our Saviour Chriſts own Simile. A fall, not like that of the Angels into the bottomleſs pit, there to ſtay for ever? but like to that of men into their beds, when they make accompt to ſtand up again. A fall, not as of a log or ſtone, to the ground, which where it falleth, there it lyeth ſtill; but, as of a Wheat corn, into the ground, which is quickned and ſpringeth up again. Exod. 15. 10. Jonah 1. 17. 2. 10. Mat. 12. 40. 25. 41. Eſay. 26. 19. 1 Cor. 15. 36.

The very word which the Apoſtle uſeth (ἐγερθεὶς) implyeth the two latter; 1. Either of a fall into a bed in our chamber; where though we lye (to ſee to) little better than dead for a time; yet in the morning we awake and ſtand up notwithſtanding. 2. Or of a fall into a bed in our garden: where though the ſeed putrifie and come to nothing, yet we look to ſee it ſhoot forth anew in the Spring. Which Spring is (as Tertullian well calleth it) the very reſurrection of the year: and Chriſts reſurrection falleth well with it: And it is, ſaith he, no way conſonant to reaſon, that man, for whom all things ſpring and riſe again, ſhould not have his ſpring and riſing too. But, he ſhall have them, we doubt not, by this dayes work. He that this day did riſe, and riſing was ſeen of Mary Magdalen in the likeneſs of a Gardiner: this Gardiner will look to it, that man ſhall have his ſpring. He will (ſaith the Prophet) drop upon us a dew like the dew of herbs, and the earth ſhall yield forth her dead: And ſo, as Chriſt is riſen from the dead, even ſo ſhall we. John 20. 15. Eſay. 26. 19.

Our ſecond Particular is: that as He is riſen; ſo, now He dyeth not. Which is no idle addition, but hath his force and Emphaſis. For, one thing it is, to riſe from the dead; and another, not to dye any more. The Widows ſon of Naim; the Rulers daughter of the Synagogue; Lazarus; all theſe roſe again from death, yet they dyed afterward; But, Chriſt riſing from the dead, dyeth no more. Theſe two are ſenſibly different, Lazarus reſurrection, and Chriſts: and this ſecond is (ſure) a higher degree than the former. If we riſe, as they did, that we return to this ſame mortal life of ours, again; this very mortality of ours, will be to us as the priſoners chain he eſcapes away withall, by it we ſhall be pulled back again, though we ſhould riſe a thouſand times. We muſt therefore ſo riſe, as Chriſt, that our reſurrection be not reditus, but tranſitus; not a returning back to the ſame life, but a paſſing over to a new, Tranſivit de morte ad vitam (ſaith he.) The very Feaſt it ſelf puts us in mind of as much: It is Paſcha (that is) the Paſſeover, not a comming back to the ſame Land of Egypt: but a paſſing over to a better, the land of Promiſe; whither Chriſt our Paſſeover is paſſed before us, and ſhall in His good time, give us paſſage after him. The Apoſtle expreſſeth it beſt, where he ſaith, that Chriſt by His riſing hath aboliſhed death, and brought to light life and immortality: not life alone, but life and immortality: which is this our ſecond particular. Riſen, and riſen to dye no more, becauſe riſen to life, to life immortal. 1 That Chriſt now dieth not. Luke 7. 11. 14. 8. 54. John 11. 43. John 5. 24. Deut. 17. 16. 1 Cor. 5. 7. 2 Tim. 1. 10.

But, the third is yet beyond both theſe: more worth the knowing, more worthy our accompt; death hath no more dominion over Him. Where, as we before ſaid, one thing it was to riſe again, another to dye no more: ſo ſay we now; it is one thing not to dye: another not to be under the dominion of death: For death, and deaths dominion are two different things. Death it ſelf is nothing elſe, but the very ſeparation of the life from the body: deaths dominion, a thing of a far larger extent. By which word (of dominion) the Apoſtle would have us to conceive of death, as of ſome great Lord, having ſome large Signiory: Even as three ſeveral times (in the Chapter before he ſaith) Regnavit mors, death reigned, as if death were ſome mighty Monarch, having ſome great dominions under him. And ſo it is: For look how 3. That from henceforth death hath no more dominion over him. Verſe 14. 17. 21.

many dangers, how many diſeaſes, ſorrows, calamities, miſeries there be of this mortal life: how many pains, perils, ſnares of death; ſo many ſeveral provinces are there of this dominion. In all which, or ſome of them, while we live we ſtill are under the juriſdiction and arreſt of death, all the dayes of our life. Job 18. 14. And ſay that we ſcape them all, and none of them happen to us, yet live we ſtill under fear of them, and that is deaths dominion too. For he is (as Job calleth him) Rex pavoris, King of fear. And, when we are out of this life too; unleſs we pertain to Chriſt and His Reſurrection, we are not out of his dominion Apoc. 20. 14. 21. 8. neither. For Hell it ſelf is ſecunda mors (ſo termed by S. John) the ſecond death, or ſecond part of deaths dominion.

Now, who is there that would deſire to riſe again to this life, yea, though it were immortal, to be ſtill under this dominion of death here; ſtill ſubject, ſtill liable to the aches and pains, to the griefs and gripings, to the manifold miſeries of this vale of the ſhadow of death? But then, the other, the ſecond region of death, the ſecond part of his dominion who can endure once to be there? There they ſeek and wiſh for death, and death flyeth from them.

Verily, riſing is not enough; riſing, not to dye again is not enough, except we may be quit of this dominion, and rid of that, which we either feel or fear, all our life long. Therefore doth the Apoſtle adde (and ſo it was needfull, he ſhould) death hath no dominion over Him. No dominion over Him? No; for He, dominion over it. For, leaſt any might ſurmiſe, He might break through ſome Wall, or get out at ſome window, and ſo ſteal a reſurrection, or caſually come to it; He tels them, no: it is not ſo. Ecce Apoc. 1. 18. claves mortis & infirni: ſee here the keys both of the firſt and ſecond death. Which is a plain proof, He hath maſtered, and got the dominion over both death, and him that hath the power of death, that is the devil. Both are ſwallowed up in victory, and neither death any more ſting, nor hell any more dominion. Sed ad 1 Cor. 15. 55. Dominum Deum noſtrum ſpectant exitus mortis: But now unto God our Lord be long the iſſues of death: Pſal. 68. 20. the keys are at His girdle; He can let out as many as He liſt.

Apoc. 2. 18. This eſtate is it, which he calleth Coronam vitæ; not life alone, but the Crown of life, or a life crowned with immunity of fear of any evil, ever to befall us. This is it which (in the next verſe) he calleth living Verſe 12. unto God, the eſtate of the children of the reſurrection, to be the ſons of God, equal to the Angels, ſubject to no part of deaths dominion, but living in ſecurity, joy and bliſs for ever.

And now is our particular full. 1. Riſing to life firſt; 2. and life freed from death, and ſo immortal; 3. and then exempt from the dominion of death, and every part of it; and ſo happy and bleſſed. Riſe again; ſo may Lazarus, or any mortal man do; that is not it. Riſe again to life immortal: ſo ſhall all do in the end, as well the unjuſt, as the juſt; that is not it. But, riſe again to life immortal, with freedom from all miſery, to live to, and with God in all joy and glory evermore, that is it; that is Chriſts Reſurrection. Et tu (ſaith St. Auguſtine) ſpera talem reſurrectionem, & propter hoc eſto Chriſtianus, Live in hope of ſuch a reſurrection, and for this hopes ſake, carry thy ſelf as a Chriſtian. Thus have we our particular, of that we are to know touching Chriſt riſen.

2. And now we know all theſe, yet do we not accompt our ſelves to know them perfectly, until we alſo know the reaſon of them. And the Romanes were a people, that loved to ſee the ground of that they received, and not the bare Articles alone. Indeed, it might trouble them, why Chriſt ſhould need thus to riſe again, becauſe they ſaw no reaſon, why He ſhould need dye: the truth is, we connot ſpeak of riſing well, without mention of the terminus à quo, from whence He roſe. By means whereof, theſe two, 1. Chriſts dying, and 2. His riſing are ſo linked together, and their Audites ſo intangled one with another, as it is very hard to ſever them. And this you ſhall obſerve, the Apoſtle never goeth about to do it, but ſtill (as it were of purpoſe) ſuffers one to draw in the other continually. It is not here alone, but all over his Epiſtles; ever they run together, as if he were loth to mention one without the other.

1. And it cannot be denied, but that their joyning ſerveth to many great good purpoſes. Theſe two, 1. His Death, and 2. His riſing, they ſhew His two natures, Humane and Divine: 1. His Humane na-
2. ture and weakneſs, in dying, 2. His Divine nature and power, in riſing again. 2. Theſe ſhew his two Offices; His Prieſthood and His Kingdom. 1. His Prieſthood, in the ſacrifice of His Death: 2. His
3. Kingdom, in the glory of His reſurrection. 2. They ſet before us, His two main Benefits, 1. Interitum mortis, and 2. Principium vitæ. 1. His death, the death of death; 2. His riſing, the reviving of
4. life again: the one, what He had ranſomed us from, the other, what He had purchaſed for us. 4. They ſerve as two Moulds, wherein our lives are to be caſt, that the dayes of our vanity may be faſhioned to the likeneſs of the Son of God: which are our two duties, that we are to render, for thoſe two benefits proceeding from the two offices of His two natures conjoined. In a word: they are not well to be ſundred; for when they are thus joyned, they are the abridgment of the whole Goſpel.

1 The cauſe of His dying. 1 His dying once. Of them both then briefly. Of His dying firſt: in that He dyed, He dyed once to ſin: Why dyed he once, and why but once? Once he died to ſin, that is, ſin was the cauſe, He was to dye once. As in ſaying, He liveth to God, we ſay, God is the cauſe of His life: ſo in ſaying, He dyed to ſin, we ſay, ſin was the cauſe of His death. God, of His riſing: ſin, of His fall. And look how the Reſurrection leadeth us to death; even as naturally doth death, unto ſin, the ſting of death.

To ſin then He dyed: Not ſimply to ſin; but with reference to us. For, a death leadeth us to ſin; ſo doth ſin to ſinners, that is, to our ſelves: And ſo will the oppoſition be more cleer and full: He liveth Eſay. 9. 6. unto God; He dyed unto man. With reference (I ſay) to us. For firſt He dyed unto us: and if it be true, that Puer natus eſt nobis, it is as true, that Vir mortuus eſt nobis: If being a child, He was born to us; becomming a man, he dyed to us. Both are true.

To us then firſt, He dyed becauſe He would ſave us. To ſin, ſecondly; becauſe elſe He could not ſave us. Yes, He could have ſaved us, and never dyed for us, ex plenitudine poteſtatis, by his abſolute power, if He would have taken that way. That way, He would not; but proceed by way of Juſtice; do all, by way of Justice. And, by Justice, Sin must have death; death, our death; for the sin was ours. It was we that were to die to sin. But, if we had dyed to sin, we had perished in sin; perished here, and perished everlastingly. That, His love to us could not endure: that we should so perish. Therefore, as in Justice He justly might. He took upon Him our debt of sin, and said (as the Fathers apply that speech of His) Sinite abire hos, let these go their wayes. And so, that we might not dye to sin, He did. We see, why He dyed once. Joh. 18. 8.

Why but once? because once was enough, ad auferenda (saith S. John;) ad abolenda (saith S. Peter;) ad exhauriendo (saith S. Paul) To take away: To abolish: To draw dry, and utterly to exhaust all the sins, of all the sinners, of all the world. The excellency of His Person that performed it, was such; The excellency of the obedience, that He performed, such; the excellency both of His humility and charity wherewith He performed it, such; and of such value every of them; (and all of them much more;) as made, that His once dying, was satis superque, enough, and enough again: which made the Prophet call it, copiosam Redemptionem, a plentious Redemption. But the Apostle he goeth beyond all, in expressing this: in one place terming it ὑπερβάλλον, in another ὑπερπερισσεύον, in another πλεονάζον: mercy, rich, exceeding, grace overabounding, nay grace superfluous (for so is πλεονάζον) and superfluous is enough and to spare; superfluous is (cleerly) enough and more than enough. Once dying then, being more than enough, no reason, He should die more than once. That, of His death; 2 And but once. Joh. 1. 29. Act. 3. 19. Heb. 9 28. Eph. 2. 7. Eph. 1. 1. 1 Tim. 1. 14.

Now of His Life: He lived unto God. The Rigour of the law being fully satisfied by His death: then was He no longer justly, but wrongfully detained by death. As therefore, by the power He had, He laid down his life, so he took it again, and rose again from the dead. And not only rose himself; But, in one concurrent action; God, who had by his death, received full satisfaction, reached him (as it were) his hand, and raised him to life. The Apostles word ἐγερθείς, in the native force doth more properly signifie, raised by another, than risen by himself. And is so used, to shew, it was done, not only by the power of the Son, but by the will, consent, and co-operation of the Father; and he the cause of it, who for the over-abundant merit of his death, and his humbling himself, and becoming obedient to death, even the death of the Cross, not only raised Him, but propter hoc, even for that cause, exalted Him also, to live with Him, in joy and glory for ever. For, as when He lived to man, He lived to much misery; so, now He liveth to God, He liveth in all felicity. This part being oppositely set down to the former: living, to exclude dying again; living to God, to exclude deaths dominion, and all things pertaining to it. For, as with God is life, and the fountain of life against death; (even the fountain of life never failing, but ever renewing to all eternity:) so with him also, is torrens deliciarum, a main river of pleasures, even pleasures for evermore; never ebbing, but ever flowing, to all contentment; against the miseries belonging to deaths dominion. And there he liveth thus: not now, as the Son of God, as he lived before all worlds; but as the Son of man, in the right of our nature: to estate us, in this life, in the hope of a reversion; and in the life to come, in perfect and full possession of his own, and his Fathers bliss and happiness: when we shall also live to God, and God be all in all; which is the highest pitch of all our hope. We see then, his dying and rising; and the grounds of both: And thus have we the total of our Scientes. 2 The cause of His living. Phil. 2. 8, 9. Phil. 3. 6. 10.

II. Our Accompt.

Now followeth our account. An account is either of what is coming to us, and that we like well: or what is going from us, and that is not so pleasing. Coming to us, I call matter of benefit: Going from us, matter of duty: where (I doubt) many an expectation will be deceived, making account to hear from the resurrection matter of benefit, only to come in, where the Apostle calleth us to account for matter of duty which is to goe from us. 1 Of our comings in, the benefit.

An account there is growing to us by Christs rising, of matter of benefit and comfort: such an one there is, and we have touched it before. The hope of gaining a better life, which groweth from Christs rising, is our comfort against the fear of loosing this. Thus do we comfort our selves against our deaths: Now blessed be God that hath regenerated us to a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ: Thus do we comfort our selves against our friends death; Comfort your selves one another (saith the Apostle) with these words: what words be they? Even those of our Saviour in the Gospel, Resurget frater tuus, Thy brother (or thy father, or thy friend) shall rise again. And not only against death, but even against all the miseries of this life: It was Jobs comfort on the dung-hill: well yet, Videbo Deum, in carne mea: I shall see God in my flesh. And not in our miseries alone, but when we do well, and no man respecteth us for it: It is the Apostles conclusion of the Chapter of the Resurrection: Be of good cheer yet, Labor vester non erit inanis in Domino: your labour is not in vain in the Lord: you shall have your reward at the resurrection of the just. All these wayes, comfort cometh unto us, by it. 1 Pet. 1. 3. 1 Thes. 4. 18. Joh. 11. 23. Job 19. 25. 1 Cor. 15 58.

But this of ours is another manner of account, of duty to go from us, and to be answered by us. And such an one there is too, and we must reckon of it. I add, that this here is our first account; you see it here called for, in the Epistle to the Romans; the other cometh after, in the Epistle to the Corinthians. 2 Of our going out. 1 The duty of charge.

In very deed, this of ours is the key to the other, and we shall never find sound comfort of that, unless we do first well pass this account here. It is (I say) first, because it is present, and concerneth our souls, even here in this life. The other is future, and toucheth but our bodies, and that in the life to come. It is an error certainly, which runneth in mens heads, when they hear of the resurrection to conceive of it, as of a matter meerly future, and not to take place till the latter day. Not only Christ is risen, but if all be, as it should be, We are already risen with him, (saith the Apostle; in the Epistle this day, the very first words of it:) and even here now (saith S. John,) is there a first resurrection, Col. 3. 1.

Apoc.20.6. rection, and happy is he that hath his part in it. A like error it is to conceit the Reſurrection as a thing meerly corporal, and no way to be incident into the Spirit or Soul, at all. The Apoſtle hath already given us an Item to the contrary, in the end of the fourth Chapter before: Where he ſaith; He roſe again
Chap.4.25. for our juſtification: and, juſtification is a matter ſpiritual: Juſtificatus eſt ſpiritu (ſaith the Apoſtle) of 1 Tim.3.16. Chriſt himſelf. Verily, here muſt the Spirit riſe to grace, or elſe neither the body nor it ſhall there riſe to glory. This then is our firſt account; that account of ours, which is preſently to be paſſed, and out of hand; this is it, which firſt we muſt take order for.

I. To be like CHRIST. The ſum or charge of which account, is ſet down in theſe words, Similiter & vos: That we be like Chriſt, carry his Image who is heavenly, as we have carried the Image of the earthly: Be conformed to his likeneſs; That what Chriſt hath wrought for us, the like be wrought in us: What, wrought for us, by his fleſh; the like wrought in us, by his Spirit. It is a Maxime or main ground, in all the Fathers, that ſuch an account muſt be: The former, what Chriſt hath wrought for us, Deus reputat nobis, God accounteth to us: for the latter, what Chriſt hath wrought in us; Reputate vos, we muſt account to God. And, that is, Similiter & vos, that we faſhion our ſelves like him.

1. In dying to ſin. Like him, in as many points, as we may: but namely, and expreſly, in theſe two here ſet down, 1. In dying to ſin, 2. In living unto God, in theſe two firſt: then ſecondly, in doing both theſe, ἐφάπαξ, Eph.5.1. but once, for all.
1 Pet.2.21. Like Him in theſe two: 1. In His dying. For He dyed not only to offer a ſacrifice for us (ſaith Saint
1 Pet.1.3. Paul) but alſo to leave an example to us (ſaith S. Peter.) That example are we to be like. 2. In his riſing: For he aroſe, not only that we might be regenerated to a lively hope, ſaith Saint Peter: but alſo that we might be grafted into the ſimilitude of his Reſurrection, ſaith S. Paul, a little before, in the fifth verſe of this very Chapter: That Similitude are we to reſemble. So have we the exemplary part of both theſe, whereunto we are to frame our Similiter & vos.

Verſe.2. He dyed to ſin, there is our pattern: Our firſt account, muſt be, Count your ſelves dead to ſin. And that we do, when, there is neither action, nor affection, nor any ſign of life, in us, toward ſin; no more then in a dead body: when, as men crucified (which is not only His death, but the kind of His death too) we neither move hand, nor ſtir foot toward it: both, are nailed down, faſt. In a word, to dye to ſin (with S. Paul here) is to ceaſe from ſin (with S. Peter, 1 *Pet.*4.1.)

To ceaſe from ſin (I ſay) underſtanding by ſin, not from ſin altogether (that is a higer perfection, than this life will bear) but as the Apoſtle expoundeth himſelf, in the very next words, Ne regnet peccatum, that is, from the dominion of ſin, to ceaſe. For till we be free from death it ſelf (which in this life we are not) we ſhall not be free from ſin altogether: only we may come thus far, ne regnet, that ſin reign not; wear not a Crown, ſit not in a Throne, hold no Parliaments within us, give us no laws; in a word (as in the fourth verſe before) that we ſerve it not. To dye, to the dominion of ſin; that, by the grace of God we may: and that we muſt account for.

2 In living to God. He liveth to God. There is our ſimilitude of His reſurrection: our ſecond account muſt be, Count your ſelves living unto God. Now, how that is, he hath already told us (in the fourth verſe) even, to walk in newneſs of life. To walk, is to move; moving is a vital action, and argueth life. But, it muſt not be any life; our old will not ſerve; it muſt be a new life; we muſt not return back to our former courſe, but paſs over to another new converſation. And in a word (as before) to live to God (with S. Paul here) is to live, ſecundum Deum, according to God, in the Spirit (with Saint Peter, 1 Pet. 4. 6.) And, then live we according to Him, when His Will is our law, His Word our rule, His Sons life our example, His Spirit, rather than our own ſoul, the guide of our actions. Thus ſhall we be grafted into the ſimilitude of his reſurrection.

Now, this ſimilitude of the reſurrection, calleth to my mind, another ſimilitude of the reſurrection, in this life too, which I find in Scripture mentioned; it fitteth us well: it will not be amiſs, to remember you of it, by the way, it will make us the better willing to enter into this account.

Gen.22.7. At the time that Iſaac ſhould have been offered by his Father, Iſaac was not ſlain: very neer it he was; there was fire, and there was a knife, and he was appointed ready to be a Sacrifice. Of which caſe of his, the Apoſtle in the mention of his Father Abrahams faith (*Heb.*11.) Abraham (ſaith he) by Faith
Heb.11.19. λογισάμενος, made full account, if Iſaac had been ſlain, God was able to raiſe him from the dead: And even from the dead God raiſed him, and his father received him, ἐν παραβολῇ, in a certain ſimilitude, or after a ſort. Mark that well: raiſing Iſaac, from eminent danger of preſent death is (with the Apoſtle) a kind of reſurrection. And if it be ſo, and if the Holy Ghoſt warrant us to call that, a kind of reſurrection; how can we, but on this Day, the Day of the Reſurrection, call to mind, and withal render unto God our unfained thanks and praiſe, for our late Reſurrection ἐν παραβολῇ, for our kind of reſurrection, He not long ſince vouchſafed us. Our caſe, was Iſaac's caſe, without doubt: there was fire; and inſtead of a knife, there was powder enough, and we were deſigned all of us, and even ready to be ſacrificed, even Abraham, Iſaac and all. Certainly if Iſaac's were, ours was a kind of reſurrection: and we ſo to acknowledg it. We were as neer as he; we were not only within the Dominion, but within the Verge, nay even within the very gates of death. From thence hath God raiſed us, and given us, this year, this ſimilitude of the reſurrection, that we might, this day of the reſurrection of His Son, preſent Him with this (in the Text) of riſing to a new courſe of life.

And now (to return to our faſhioning our ſelves, like to Him, in theſe) as there is a death natural, and a death civil; ſo is there a death moral, both in Philoſophie, and in Divinity: and, if a death, then conſequently a reſurrection too. Every great and notable change, of our courſe of life, whereby we are not now any longer the ſame men, that before we were, be it from the worſe to better, or from better to worſe, is a moral death: A moral death, to that, we change from; and a moral reſurrection, to that we change to. If we change to the better, that is sins death: if we alter to the worse, that is sins Resurrection: when we commit sin, we die, we are dead in sin; when we repent, we revive again: when we repent our selves of our repenting, and relapse back, then sin riseth again, from the dead: and so toties quoties. And even upon these two, as two hinges, turneth our whole life. All our life is spent in one of them.

Now then, that we be not, all our life long, thus off and on, fast or loose, in nettle out dock, and in nettle out dock: it will behove us once more yet, to look back upon our similiter & vos; even upon the word ἅπαξ, semel, once. That is, that we not only dye to sin, and live to God; but die and live as He did, (that is) once for all: which is an other abandoning, once, of sins dominion: and a continual constant persisting in a good course once begun. Sins dominion, it languisheth sometimes in us, and falleth haply into a swoun: but it dieth not quite once for all. Grace lifteth up the eye, and looketh up a little, and giveth some signe of life: but never perfectly recovereth. O that once we might come to this: no more deaths, no more resurrections but one! that we might once make an end of our daily continual recidivations, to which we are so subject: and once get past these pangs and qualms of godliness, this righteousness, like the morning cloud, which is all we perform: that we might grow habituate, in grace; radicati & fundati, rooted and founded in it: ἐρριζωμένοι steddie, and ἑδραῖοι never to be removed! that so we might enter into, and pass a good account, of this our Similiter & vos. 3 And that once for all. Eph. 3. 17. 1 Cor. 15. ult.

And thus are we come to the foot of our account, which is our Onus or Charge; Now we must think of our discharge, to go about it: which maketh the last words no less necessary for us to consider, than all the rest. For what? is it in us, or can we, by our power and vertue make up this account? We cannot (saith the Apostle:) nay, we cannot (saith he) λογίσασθαι, make account of any thing, no not so much as of a good thought towards it, as of our selves. If any think otherwise, let him but prove his own strength a little, what he can do, he shall be so confounded in it, as he shall change his mind (saith Saint Augustine) and see plainly, the Apostle had reason to shut up all, with In Christo Jesu Domino nostro: otherwise our account will stick in our hands. Verily, to raise a soul from the death of sin, is harder, far harder, than to raise a dead body, out of the dust of death. S. Augustine hath long since defined it: that Mary Magdalens resurrection in soul, from her long lying dead in sin, was a greater miracle, than her brother Lazarus resurrection, that had lyen four dayes in his grave. If Lazarus lay dead before us, we would never assay to raise him our selves; we know we cannot do it. If we cannot raise Lazarus (that is the easier of the twain) we shall never Mary Magdalen (which is the harder by far) out of Him, or without Him, that raised them both. 2 The discharg and means of it In Jesus Christ our Lord 2 Cor. 3. 5.

But, as out of Christ, or without Christ, we can do nothing toward this account: Not, accomplish or bring to perfection; but not do: not any great or notable sum of it; but nothing at all; (as saith S. Augustine, upon Sine me nihil potestis facere:) So, in Him, and with Him enabling us to it, we can think good thoughts, speak good words, and do good works, and dye to sin, and live to God, and all: Omnia possum (saith the Apostle.) And inable us He will, and can, as not only having passed the resurrection, but being the resurrection it self; not only had the effect of it in himself; but, being the cause of it, todus. So He saith Himself: I am the resurrection, and the life: the resurrection, to them that are dead in sin, to raise them from it; and the life, to them that live unto God, to preserve them, in it. Joh. 15. 5. Phil. 4. 13. Joh. 11. 25.

Where beside the two former (1. the Article of the resurrection, which we are to know: 2. and the Example of the resurrection, which we are to be like:) we come to the notice of a third thing; even a vertue or power flowing from Christs resurrection, whereby we are made able to express our similiter & vos, and to pass this our account, of dying to sin, and living to God. It is, in plain words, called (by the Apostle himself) virtus resurrectionis; the virtue of Christs resurrection, issuing from it, to us: and he prayeth that as he had a faith of the former, so he may have a feeling of this: and as, of them he had a contemplative, so he may of this have an experimental knowledg. This enabling vertue proceedeth from Christs resurrection. For, never let us think, if in the dayes of His flesh, there went vertue out, from even the very edge of his garment, to do great cures (as in the case of the woman with the bloodie issue, we read,) but that from his own self, and from those two most principal and powerful actions of His own self (his 1. death, and 2. resurrection) there issueth a divine power: from his death, a power working on the old man (or flesh) to mortifie it; from His resurrection, a power working on the new man (the Spirit) to quicken it. A power able to roll back any stone of an evil custome, lye it never so heavy on us: a power able to dry up any issue, though it have run upon us twelve years long. Phil. 3. 10. Luke. 8. 46.

And this power is nothing else, but that divine quality of grace, which we receive from Him. Receive it from him we do certainly; (only let us pray and endeavour our selves, that we receive it not in vain:) the Holy Ghost, by waies to flesh and blood unknown, inspiring it, as a breath, distilling it, as a dew; deriving it, as a secret influence, into the soul. For, if Philosophie grant an invisible operation in us, to the celestiall bodies; much better may we yeeld it, to His eternall Spirit: whereby such a vertue, or breath may proceed from it, and be recived of us. 2 Cor. 6. 1.

Which breath or Spirit, is drawn in by Prayer, and such other exercises of devotion on our parts: and on gods part, breathed in, by and with the Word: (well therefore termed by the Apostle, the word of grace.) And (I may safely say it, with good warrant) from those words especially and chiefly; which (as He Himselfe saith of them) are Spirit and Life, even those words, which joyned to the element, make the blessed Sacrament. Act. 20. 32. Joh. 6. 63.

There was good proof made of it, this day. All the way, did He preach to them, even till they came to Emaus; and their hearts were hot within them (which was a good signe) but their eyes were not opened, but at the breaking of bread; and then they were: That, is the best and surest sense (we know) and therefore most Luk. 24. 31.

Psal.34.8. 1 Cor.12.13. Heb.13.9. Heb.9.14. Joh.6.32. Joh.6.56.

most to be accompted of. There we taſt, and there we ſee, Taſt and ſee, how gracious the Lord is. There we are made to drink of the Spirit: There our hearts are ſtrengthened and eſtabliſhed with grace. There is the blood which ſhall purge our conſciences from dead workes, whereby we may die to ſin. There the bread of God, which ſhall endue our ſoules with much ſtrength; yea, multiply ſtrength in them, to live unto God, yea, to live to him continually; for he that eateth His fleſh, and drinketh His blood, dwelleth in Chriſt, and Chriſt in Him: not inneth, or ſojourneth for a time; but dwelleth continually. And, never can we more truly, or properly ſay, In Chriſto Jeſu Domino noſtro, as when we come new from that holy Action, for then He is in us, and we in Him, indeed. And ſo we to make full accompt, of this ſervice as a ſpeciall meanes, to further us to make up our Eaſter-dayes accompt, and to ſet off a good part of our Charge. In Chriſt, dropping upon us the anointing of His grace. In Jeſus, who will be ready, as our Saviour, to ſuccour and ſupport us, with his Auxilium ſpeciale, His ſpeciall help. Without which aſſiſting us even grace it ſelfe, is many times, faint and feeble in us. And both theſe, becauſe He is our Lord, who having come, to ſave that which was loſt, will not ſuffer that to be loſt, which he hath ſaved. Thus, uſing His owne ordinance of Prayer, of the Word, and Sacrament, for our better enabling to diſcharge this dayes duty, we ſhall (I truſt) yeild up a good accompt, and celebrate a good feaſt of his Reſurrection. Which Almighty God grant, &c.

SERMON

AT

WHITE-HALL;

On the Fifth of Aprill, being Easter-Day.

An. Dom. 1607.

1 Cor. Chap. XV. Ver. XX.

Nunc autem Christus resurrexit à mortuis primitiæ dormientium.

But, now is Christ risen from the dead, and was made the first fruits of them that sleep.

THE same Apostle that out of Christs Resurrection taught the Romans matter of duty; the same here, out of the same resurrection, teacheth the Corinthians matter of hope. There, similiter & vos, by way of pattern to conform our selves to Him in newness of life: And here similiter & vos, in another sense, by way of promise; that so doing He shall hereafter conform us to Himself; change our vile bodies, and make them like His glorious body. That former is our first resurrection, from sin: This latter, our second resurrection, from the grave: This, the reward of that. In that, the work, what to do: In this, our reward, what to hope for. These two, Labour and Hope, the Church joyneth in one Antheme to day, her first Antheme. They sort well; and being sung together, make a good harmony. But, that without this; labour without hope, is no good musick. Rom. 6. 4. Phil. 3. 21.

To rise and to reclaim our selves, from a sinfull course of life, we have long lived in, is labour (sure) and great labour. Now, labour, of it self, is a harsh unpleasant thing; unless it be seasoned with hope. Debet, qui erat, in spe arare (saith the Apostle) above; at the IX. Chapter in the matter of the Clergies maintenance) He that plowes must plow in hope: his plough will not go deep else; his furrowes Chap. 9. 10.

will be but ſhallow. Men may frame to themſelves what ſpeculations they pleaſe; but the Apoſtles ſaying will prove true: fever hope from labor, and you muſt look for labour and labourers accordingly; ſlight and ſhallow (God knoweth) Labour then, leads us to hope.

2. The Apoſtle ſaw this; and therefore is carefull, whom he thus preſſeth to newneſs of life, and the labour therefore, to raiſe for them, and to ſet before them matter of hope. Hope, here in this life, he could ſet them none. They were, as he was himſelf, at quotidiè morior (Verſe 31.) every hour in danger to be drawn to the block. It muſt therefore be from another; or at leaſt, as the Text is, by a hope of being reſtored to life again. It was their caſe at Corinth, here in this Chapter, plainly; If we muſt dye to morrow; if there be all that ſhall become of us, then let us eat and drink while we may. If we be not ſure of another life, let us make ſure of this. But when in the ſequele of the Chapter, he had ſhewed there was reſtoring; and that, ſo ſure he was of it, that he fals to inſult over them in theſe terms, they gird up their loins again, and fall to their labours afreſh, as knowing, their labour ſhould not be in vain in the Lord. This hope leads us to our reſtoring.

Verſe 32.

Our reſtoring is but a promiſe, ſhall be reſtored: that, neceſſarily refers to a Party that is to make it good. Who is that? Chriſt: Chriſt is our hope. Why, hope is joyned to the living (ſaith the Wiſe-man:) Chriſt is dead; buried, laſt Friday. If He be our hope, and He be dead; our hope is dead too: And, if our hope be dead, our labor will not live long: nay, both are buried with Chriſt in His grave. It was their caſe this day that went to Emaus: ſay they (ſuppoſing Chriſt to be dead) nos autem ſperabamus, we were once in good hope, by Him, that is, while He lived: as much to ſay, as now He is in His grave, our hope is gone; we are even going to Emaus. But then after, as ſoon as they ſaw, He was alive again, their hope revived; and with their hope, their labor: and preſently back again to Jeruſalem, to the Lords work, and bad Emaus farewell. So He leads us to labor; labor, to hope; hope, to our reſtoring; our reſtoring, to Chriſts, who, as He hath reſtored Himſelf, will reſtore us alſo to life. And this keeps us from going to Emaus. It is uſed proverbially; Emaus ſignifieth a people forlorn: all that are at ſperabamus, have loſt their hopes; are ſaid to go thither: and thither we ſhould all go, even to Emaus, but for the hope that breaths from this verſe: without which, it were a cold occupation to be a Chriſtian.

3. Eccleſ. 9. 4.

Luke 24. 21.

This then is the hope of this Text, ſpes viva, ſpes beata; worth all hopes elſe whatſoever. All hopes elſe, are but ſpes ſpirantium, hopes while we breath: This is ſpes expirantium, the hope, when we can fetch our breath no longer. The carnal man, all he can ſay, is, dum ſpiro, ſpero: his hope is as long as his breath. The Chriſtian aſpireth higher; goeth further (by vertue of this verſe) and ſaith, dum exſpiro, ſpero: his hope fails him not, when his breath fails him. Even then (ſaith Job) repoſita eſt mihi ſpes in ſinu meo; this hope, and only this is laid up in our boſom: that though our life be taken from us; yet (in Chriſt) we, to do it; and it, to us, ſhall be reſtored again.

Job 19. 17.

Our caſe is not, as theirs then was: No perſecution; nor we at quotidiè morior; and therefore, not ſo ſenſible of this doctrine. But yet to them that are falling toward death, riſing to life is a good Text; Peradventure, not when we are well and in good health; but the hour is comming, when we ſhall leave catching at all other hopes, and muſt hold only by this: in horâ mortis, when all hope ſave the hope of this verſe, ſhall forſake us. Sure it is, under theſe very words, are we laid into our graves, and theſe the laſt words that are ſaid over us, as the very laſt hold, we have: and we therefore to regard them with Job, and lay them up in our boſoms.

The Diviſion

There is in this Text. 1. a Text, and an 2. Expoſition. 1. The Text, we may well call the Angels Text: for from them it came firſt. 2. The Expoſition is Saint Pauls. Theſe words Chriſt is riſen, were firſt uttered by an angel, this day, in the Sepulcher; All the Evangeliſts* ſo teſtifie.

* Mat. 28. 6. Mark 16. 6. Luke 24. 6.

II. This Text is a good Text, but reacheth not to us, unleſs it be helped with the Apoſtles expoſition: and then it will. The Expoſition is it, that giveth us our hope, and the ground of our hope. Chriſt is riſen, ſaith the Angel: Chriſt, the firſt fruits, ſaith the Apoſtle. And, mark well that word firſt fruits: For, in that word, is our hope. For, if He be as the firſt fruits in His riſing, His riſing muſt reach to all, that are of the heap, whereof He is the firſt fruits. This is our hope.

III. But our hope muſt have a reaſon, (ſaith S. (a) Peter) and we be ready with it. (b) The hope that hath a ground (ſaith S. Paul) that is (c) ſpes quæ non confundit. Having then ſhewed us this hope, he ſheweth us the ground of it. This: That, in very equity, we are to be allowed to be reſtored to life, the ſame way we loſt it. But, we loſt it, by man: or, to ſpeak in particular, By Adam, we came by our attainder. Meet therefore, that by man (and to ſpeak in particular) that, by Chriſt, we come to our reſtoring. This is the ground or ſubſtance of our hope.

a 1 Pet. 3. 15. b Heb. 11. 1. c Rom. 5. 5.

IV. And thus he hath ſet before us this day, life and death, in themſelves and their cauſes; two things, that, of all other do moſt concern us. Our laſt point ſhall be to apply it to the means, this day, offered unto us toward the reſtoring us to life.

The

THe Doctrine of the Resurrection, is one of the Foundations, ſo called by the Apoſtle, Heb.6.1. It behoved him therefore (as a skilful workman) to ſee it ſurely laid. That is ſurely laid, that is laid on the rock: and the rock is Chriſt. Therefore he laid it on Chriſt, by ſaying firſt, Chriſt is riſen. I. The Text, Chriſt is riſen. Chap.10.4.

Of all that be Chriſtians; Chriſt is the hope: but, not Chriſt every way conſidered; but as riſen. Even in Chriſt unriſen, there is no hope. Well doth the Apoſtle begin here: and, when he would open to us a gate of hope, carry us to Chriſts Sepulchre empty; to ſhew us, and to hear the Angel ſay, He is riſen. Thence after to deduce; If He were able to do thus much for Himſelf, He hath promiſed us as much, and will do as much for us, we ſhall be reſtored to life. Hoſ. 2. 15.

Thus had he proceeded, in the four verſes before, deſtructivè. 1. Miſerable is that man, that either laboureth, or ſuffereth in vain. 2. Chriſtian men may ſeem to do ſo, and do ſo, if there be no other life but this. 3. There is no other life but this, if there be no Reſurrection. 4. There is no Reſurrection, if Chriſt be not riſen; for, ours dependeth on His. And now he turneth all about again. But now (ſaith he) 1. Chriſt is riſen. 2. If He be, we ſhall. 3. If we ſhall, we have (as Saint Paul calleth it) a bleſſed hope, and ſo a life yet behind. 4. If ſuch hope we have, we of all men, labour not in vain. So, there are four things: 1. Chriſts riſing, 2. our reſtoring, 3. our hope, and 4. our labour. All the doubt is of the two firſt: The two other will follow of themſelves. If a reſtoring, we have good hope: if good hope, our labour is not loſt. The two firſt are in the firſt: the other, in the laſt words. The firſt are; Chriſt is riſen; the laſt, we ſhall be reſtored to life. Our endeavour is to bring theſe two together: But firſt, to lay the corner-ſtone. Ver.19.18.17. 1 Tit.2.13. 1 Tim.3.16.

Chriſt is riſen, is the Angels Text: A part of the great myſtery of godlineſs; which as the Apoſtle ſaith, was ſeen of Angels, by them delivered, and believed on by the world. Quod credibile primum fecit illis videntium certitudo, poſt morientium fortitudo, jam credibile mihi facit credentium multitudo. It became credible at firſt by the certainty of them that ſaw it; then, by the conſtancy of them that died for confeſſion of it; and to us now, the huge multitude of them, that have and do believe it, maketh it credible. For if it be not credible, how is it credible, that the world could believe it? the world (I ſay) being neither enjoyned by authority, nor forced by fear, nor inveigled by allurement; but brought about by perſons, by means leſs credible, than the thing it ſelf. Gamaliel ſaid, If it be of God, it will prevail. And, though we cannot argue, all that hath prevailed is of God: yet, thus we can: That which hath been mightily impugned, and weakly purſued, and yet prevailed, that was of God certainly. That which all the Powers of the earth fought, but could not prevail againſt, was from heaven certainly. Certainly, Chriſt is riſen: for, many have riſen and lift up themſelves againſt it, but all are fallen. But the Apoſtle ſaith, it is a foundation; that he will not lay it again; No more will we, but go forward, and raiſe upon: And ſo let us do. Act.5.38

Chriſt is riſen: Suppoſe, He be: what then? Though Chriſts riſing did no way concern us, or we that; yet 1. firſt, in that a Man, one of our own fleſh and blood hath gotten ſuch a victory, even for humanities ſake: 2. Then, in that, one that is innocent, hath quit Himſelf ſo well, for innocencies ſake: 3. Thirdly, in that He hath foiled a common enemy, for amities ſake: 4. Laſtly, in that He hath wiped away the ignominie of His fall, with the glory of His riſing again, for vertue and valours ſake: for all theſe, we have cauſe to rejoyce with Him. All are matter of gratulation.

II. The Apoſtles Expoſition, CHRIST as the firſt fruits.

But, the Apoſtle is about a farther matter: that Text (the Angels Text) he ſaw, would not ſerve our turn, farther than I have ſaid. Well may we congratulate Him if that be all: but, otherwiſe it pertains to us, Chriſt is riſen. The Apoſtle therefore enters farther, telling us, That Chriſt did thus riſe, not as Chriſt only, but, as Chriſt the firſt fruits. Chriſt is riſen, and in riſing become the firſt fruits: riſen, and ſo riſen, that is (to ſpeak after the manner of men) that there is in Chriſt a double capacity. 1. One, as a body natural, conſidered by Himſelf, without any relative reſpect unto us, or to any: (in which regard, well may we be glad, as one ſtranger is for another, but otherwiſe His riſing concerns us not at all.) 2. Then, that He hath a ſecond, as a body Politick, or chief part of a Company, or Corporation, that have to Him, and He to them, a mutual and reciprocal reference: In which reſpect, His reſurrection may concern us, no leſs than Himſelf: It is that, He giveth us the firſt Item of, in the word Primitiæ; that Chriſt in His riſing, cometh not to be conſidered as a Totum integrale, or body natural alone; as Chriſt, only: but (that which maketh for us) He hath beſides another capacity, that He is a part of a corporation, or body, of which body we are the members. This being won; look what he hath ſuffered or done, it pertaineth to us, and we have our part in it.

As a part of the whole.

You ſhall find (and, ever when you find ſuch words, make much of them) Chriſt called [a] Head; a Head is a part: Chriſt called a [b] Root, a Root is a part: and here Chriſt called firſt fruits, which (we all know) is but a part of the fruits, but a handful of a heap, or a ſheaf; and referreth to the reſt of the fruits, as a part to the whole. So that, there is (in the Apoſtles conceit) one maſs or heap of all mankind: of which Chriſt is the firſt fruits; we, the remainder. So as, by the law of the body, all His concern us no leſs, than they do Him: whatſoever he did, he did to our behoof. Die he, or riſe; we have our part, in his Death, and in his Reſurrection, and all: why? becauſe he is but the firſt fruits.

[a] Eph. 5. 1. 12.
[b] Apoc. 22. 16.

And, if he were but Primus, and not Primitiæ dormientium, there were hope. For, primus is an ordinal number, and draweth after, a ſecond, a third, and God knoweth how many. But, if in that word, there be any ſcruple (as ſometimes it is, Ante quem non eſt, rather, than poſt quem eſt alius) if no more come but one: all the world knows, the firſt fruits is but a part of the fruits: there are fruits beſide them, no man knoweth how many.

As a part for the whole.

But, that which is more; The first fruits is not every part; but such a part, as representeth the whole, and hath an operative force over the whole. For the better understanding whereof, we are to have recourse to the Law, to the very institution or first beginning of them, Levit. 23. 10. (Ever, the Legal ceremony is a good key to the Evangelical mystery.) Thereby we shall see, why S. Paul made choice of the word first fruits, to express himself by: that he useth verbum vigilans, a word that is awake (as S. Augustine saith) or (as Salomon) a word upon his own wheel. The Head, or the root would have served: for, if the head be above the water, there is hope for the whole body: and if the Root have life, the branches shall not long be without: yet, he refuseth these, and others that offered themselves, and chooseth rather the term of first fruits. And why so?

Prov. 25. 11.

This very day (Easter day) the day of Christs rising, according to the Law, is the day or feast of the first fruits: the very Feast carrieth him to the word, nothing could be more fit or seasonable for the time. The day of the Passion, is the day of the Possessor; and Christ is our Passover: the day of the Resurrection, is the day of the first fruits; and Christ is our first fruits.

Chap. 5. 7.

And this term thus chosen, you shall see, there is a very apt and proper resemblance between the resurrection and it. The rite and manner of the first fruits, thus it was. Under the Law, they might not eat of the fruits of the earth, so long as they were prophane. Prophane they were, until they were sacred: And, on this wise were they sacred. All the sheaves in the field (for examples sake) were unholy. One sheaf is taken out of all the rest, which sheaf we call the first fruits. That, in the name of the rest, is lift up aloft, and shaken to and fro, before the Lord, and so consecrated. That done, not only the sheaf so lifted up, was holy (though, that alone was lift up) but all the sheaves in the field were holy, no less than it: The rule is, Rom. 11. 16. If the first fruits be holy, all the lump is so too.

Levit. 23 10 11. 14.

And thus (for all the world) fareth it in the Resurrection. We were all dead (saith the Apostle;) dead sheaves, all. One, (and that is Christ) this day, the day of first fruits, was (in manner of a sheaf) taken out of the number of the dead, and in the name of the rest, lift up from the grave (and in His rising, He shook; for there was a great Earth-quake:) By vertue whereof, the first fruits being restored to life, all the rest of the dead, are in Him entituled to the same hope; in that, He was not so lift up for Himself alone, but, for us, and in our names: And so the substance of this Feast fulfilled in Christs Resurrection.

2 Cor. 5. 14.

Not, of the dead, but, of them that sleep: Our Hope.

Now, upon this lifting up, there ensueth a very great alteration, if you please to mark it. It was even now, Christ is risen from the dead, the first fruits (it should be) of the dead, too; for, from thence He rose; it is not so, but, the first fruits) of them that sleep: that, you may see, the consecration hath wrought a change. A change, and a great change (certainly) to change κοιμητήρια into κοιμητήρια, a burial place, into a cœmetery, that is, a great Dortor: Graves, into beds; Death, into sleep; Dead men, into men laid down to take their rest; a rest, of hope; of hope, to rise again. If they sleep, they shall do well.

John 11. 12.

And, (that, which lieth open in the word) Dormientium, the very same is infolded in the word first fruits: Either word affordeth comfort. For first fruits imply fruits: And so we, as the fruits of the earth, falling, as do the grains or kernels into the ground, and there lying, to all mens seeming, putrified, and past hope, yet on a sudden, against the great Feast of first fruits, shooting forth of the ground again. The other of Dormientium, the Apostle letteth go, and fastens on this of fruits, and followeth it hard, thorow the rest of the Chapter: shewing, that the rising again of the fruits sowen, would be no less incredible, than the Resurrection, but that, we see it so, every year.

Verse 36.

These two words of 1. sleeping, and 2. sowing, would be laid up well. That, which is sowen, riseth up, in the spring: that, which sleepeth, in the morning. So conceive, of the change wrought in our nature; that feast of first fruits, by Christ our first fruits. Neither perish; neither that, which is sowen, though it rot: nor they, that sleep, though they lye as dead, for the time. Both, that shall spring, and these wake, well again. Therefore, as men sow not grudgingly: nor lye down at the night unwillingly; no more must we: seeing, by vertue of this Feast, we are now Dormientes, not mortui: now, not as stones, but as fruits of the earth: whereof, one hath an annual, the other, a diurnal resurrection. This, for the first fruits, and the change by them wrought.

III.

The ground of our hope.

There is a good analogy or correspondence, between these, it cannot be denied. To this question, Can one mans resurrection work upon all the rest? it is a good answer, Why not as well as one sheaf, upon the whole harvest? This Simile serves well to shew it: To shew, but not prove. Symbolical Divinity is good: but might we see it in the rational, too? We may see it in the cause, no less: in the substance, and let the ceremony go. This, I call the ground of our hope.

Why (saith the Apostle) should this of the first fruits seem strange to you? that by one mans resurrection, we should rise all, seeing by one mans death, we dye all? By one man (saith he, Rom. 5. 12.) sin entred into the world, and, by sin, death: to which sin we were no parties, and yet we all dye, because we are of the same nature, whereof he, the first person: Death came so certainly; and it is good reason, life should do so likewise. To this question, Can the resurrection of one, a thousand six hundred years ago, be the cause of our rising? it is a good answer, Why not, as well as the death of one, five thousand six hundred years ago, be the cause of our dying? The ground and reason is, that there is like ground and reason of both. The wisest way it is (if Wisdom can contrive it) that a person be cured by Mithridate made of the very flesh of the Viper bruised, whence the poyson came, that so, that which brought the mischief, might minister also the remedy: The most powerfull way it is (if Power can effect it) to make strength appear in weakness; and that He that overcame, should by the nature which He overcame, be swallowed up in victory. The best way it is (if Goodness will admit of it) that as next to Satan, man to man oweth his destruction; so, next to God, man to man might be debter of his recovery. So agreable it is to the Power, Wisdome, and Goodnesse, of God, this; the three Attributes of the Blessed and Glorious Trinity.

And, let Justice weigh it in her ballance, no just exception can be taken to it, no not by Justice it self; that, as death came, so should life too: the same way at least. More favor for life, if it may be; but, in very rigour, the same at the least. According then to the very exact rule of Justice, both are to be alike: If by man one: by man the other.

We dwell too long in generalities: let us draw neer to the persons themselves, in whom we shall see this better. In them, all answer exactly; word, for word. Adam is fallen, and become the first fruits of them that dye: Christ is risen, and became the first fruits of them that live (for, they that sleep, live.) Or you may (if you please) keep the same term, in both, thus: Adam is risen (as we use to call rebellions, risings:) He did rise against God, by Eritis sicut Dii: He had never fallen, if he had not thus risen: His rising, was his fall. Gen. 3. 5.

We are now come to the two great Persons, that are the two great Authors, of the two great matters in this world, life and death. Not, either to themselves, and none else: but, as two Heads, two Roots, two first fruits; either of them in reference to his company, whom they stand for. And of these two, hold the two great Corporations: 1. Of them that dye; they are Adams: 2. of them, that sleep and shall rise; that is Christs.

To come then to the particular: no reason in the world, that Adams transgression should draw us all down to death, only for that we were of the same lump; and, that Christs righteousnesse should not be available to raise us up again to life, being of the same leaven, whereof He the first fruits, no less than before of Adam. Look to the things, Death and life: Weaknesse is the cause of death: Raising to life cometh of Power. Shall there be in weaknesse more strength to hurt, than in Power to do us good? Look to the Persons, Adam and Christ: shall Adam, being but a living soul, infect us more strongly, than Christ (a quickening spirit) can heal us again? Nay then, Adam was but from the earth earthly; Christ the Lord from heaven: Shall earth do that, which heaven cannot undo? Never: it cannot be, Sicut, Sic: As, and So: so run the terms. 2 Cor. 15. 4. Verse 45. 47.

But the Apostle (in Rom. 5. where he handleth this very point) tels us plainly, Non sicut Delictum, ita & donum; Not, as the sinne, so the Grace: Not, as the fall, so the Rising: but, the Grace and the Rising, much more abundant. It seemeth to be, A pari; it is not, indeed: It is under value. Great odds between the Persons, the Things, the powers, and the means of them. Thus then, meet it should be: Let us see, how it was. Rom. 5. 15.

Here again the very terms give us a great light. We are (saith he) restored: Restoring doth always presuppose an attainder going before; and so, the term, significant: For the nature of attainder is, One person maketh the fault, but it taints his bloud, and all his posterity. (a) The Apostle saith, that a Statute there is, All men should dye. But, when we go to search for it, we can find none, but (b) Pulvis es, wherein only Adam is mentioned, and so none dye, but he. But, even by that Statute, death goeth over all men; even those (saith Saint Paul) that have not sinned after the like manner of transgression of Adam. By what Law? by the law of Attainders. a Heb. 9. 27. b Gen. 3. 19.

The Restoring then likewise was to come, and did come after the same manner, as did the attainders: That, by the first; this, by the second Adam (so he is called Vers. 45.) There was a Statute concerning Gods commandments, qui fecerit ea, vivet in eis: He that observed the commandments, should live by that his obedience, Death should not seize on him. Christ did observe them exactly; therefore should not have been seized on by death: should not, but was: and that seizure of his, was death's forfeiture. The laying of the former Statute on Christ, was the utter making it void. So, Judgment was entred, and an Act made, Christ should be restored to life. And because, He came not for Himself, but for us, and in our name and stead; did represent us, and so, we, vertually in Him, by His restoring we also were restored: By the rule si Primitiæ, & tota conspersio sic: as the First fruits go, so goeth the whole lump: as the Root, the branches. And thus we have gotten life again of mankind, by passing this Act of Restitution, whereby we have hope to be restored to life. Lev. 18. 5. Rom. 11. 16.

But, life is a term of latitude, and admitteth a broad difference, which it behooveth us much that we know. Two lives there be: In the holy Tongue, the word which signifieth life, is of the dual number; to shew us, there is a duality of lives: that, two there be, and, that we have an eye to both. It will help us to understand our Text. For, all restored to life: All, to one: not, all to both. The Apostle doth after (at the 44 Verse) expresly name them both. 1. One, a Natural life, or life by the living soul: The other, 2. a Spiritual life, or life by the quickening Spirit. Of these two, Adam (at the time of his fall) had the first, of a living soul; was seized of it: and, of him, all mankind, Christ and we all receive that life. But, the other, the Spiritual (which is the life chiefly to be accompted of) that, he then had not, not actually; Only, a possibility he had (if he had held him in obedience, and walked with God) to have been translated to that other life. For, clear it is, the life which Angels now live with God, and which we have hope and promise to live with Him, after our restoring (when we shall be equal to the Angels:) that life, Adam at the time of his fall, was not possessed of. Luke 20. 36.

Now Adam, by his fall, fell from both, forfeited both estates. Not only, that, he had in reversion, by not fulfilling the conditions: but, even that, he had in esse too. For, even on that also did Death seize after, Et mortuus est.

Christ in his restitution, to all the sons of Adam, to all our whole nature, restored the former: therefore, all have interest, all shall partake that life. What Adam actually had, we shall actually have, we shall all be restored. To repair our nature, He came: and repair it He did: all is given again really, that in Adam really we loſt, touching nature. So that, by his fall, no detriment at all, that way.

again

The other, the ſecond, that, he reſtored too; but, not promiſcué (as the former) to all, Why? for, Adam was never ſeiſed of it; performed not that, whereunto the poſſibilitie was annexed; and ſo had in it but a defeicible eſtate. But then, by His ſpeciall grace, by a ſecond particular act, He hath enabled us to attaine the ſecond eſtate alſo, which Adam had only a reverſion of, and loſt, by breaking of the conditiion whereto it was limited. And ſo, to this ſecond, reſtored ſo many, as (to uſe the Apoſtles words in the next verſe) are in Him: that is, ſo many, as are not only of that maſſe or lumpe, whereof Adam was the firſt fruits (for, they are intreſſed in the former only) but, that are beſides, of the nova conſperſio, whereof Chriſt is the Primitia.

[a] Ioh.1.12. [b] Ioh.20.17. [c] Rom.8.29. [d] Eſay.8.18. [a] They that believe in Him (ſaith Saint Iohn) them He hath enabled, [b] to them He hath given power to become the Sons of God: to whom therefore, He ſaith, this day riſing, Vado ad Patrem veſtrum: In which reſpect, the Apoſtle calleth him [c] Primogenitum inter multos fratres. Or (to make the compariſon even) to thoſe that are (to ſpeake but as [d] Eſay ſpeaketh of them) His Children; Behold, I and the children God hath given me. The terme, He uſeth (Himſelf) to them, after His reſurrection, and calleth them Children: And they, as His family, take denomination of Him, Chriſtians, of Chriſt.

Of theſe two lives, the firſt we need take no thought for. It ſhall be, of all; the unjuſt as well as the juſt. The life of the living ſonle, ſhall be to all reſtored. All our thought is to be for the latter; how to have our part in the ſupernaturall life: for that is indeed to be reſtored to life. For the former though it carry the name of life, yet it may well be diſputed, and is, Whether it be rather a death than a life; or a life, than a death? A life it is, and not a life: for it hath no living thing in it. A death it is; and not a death: it is an immortal death. But moſt certain it is (call it life if you will) they that ſhall live that life, ſhall wiſh for death, rather than it, and (this is the miſerie) not have their wiſh: for, death ſhall fly from them.

Out of this double life, and double reſtoring, there grow two Reſurrections, in the world to come, ſet down by our Saviour in expreſs terms (Iohn 19.) Though both be to life, yet, 1. that is called condemnation to judgment: and 2. This only, to life. Of theſe; the Apoſtle calleth one, the better Reſurrection: the better, beyond all compariſon. To attain this then, we bend all our endeavours; that, ſeeing the other will come of it ſelf, without taking any thought for it at all, we may make ſure of this.

Heb.11.35.

1. To compaſs that then, we muſt be in Chriſt, ſo it is in the next verſe: To all, but to every one in order; Chriſt firſt, the firſt fruits, and then, they that be in Him.

2. Now, He is in us, by our fleſh; and we in Him, by His Spirit: and it ſtandeth with good reaſon, they that be reſtored to life, ſhould be reſtored to the Spirit: For, the Spirit is the cauſe of all life; but ſpecially, of the Spiritual life, which we ſeek for.

3. His Spirit then we muſt poſſeſs our ſelves of: and we muſt do that here: for, it is but one and the ſame Spirit, that raiſeth our ſouls here, from the death of ſin, and the ſame that ſhall raiſe our bodies there, from the duſt of death.

Rom.8.11.

4. Of which Spirit there is firſt fruits (to retain the words of the Text) and a fulneſs: but, the fulneſs, in this life, we ſhall never attain: Our higheſt degree (here) is but to be of the number, whereof he was, that ſaid, Et nos habentes primitias Spiritus.

Rom.8.23.

5. Theſe firſt fruits we firſt receive in our Baptiſm, which is to us, our Laver of regeneration, and of our renewing by the holy Spirit; where we are made and conſecrate Primitia.

Tit.3.5.

6. But, as we need be reſtored to life, ſo (I doubt) had we need to be reſtored to the Spirit, too. We are at many loſſes of it, by this ſin that cleaveth ſo faſt to us. I doubt, it is with us, as with the fields, that we need a feaſt of firſt fruits, a day of conſecration, every year. By ſomething or other, we grow un-hallowed, and need to be conſecrated anew, to re-ſeize us of the firſt fruits of the Spirit again. At leaſt to awake it in us, as Primitiæ dormientium, at leaſt. That which was given us, and by the fraud of our enemy, or our own negligence, or both taken from us, and loſt, we need to have reſtored; that which we have quenched, to be light anew: that which we have caſt into a dead ſleep, awaked up from it.

Heb.12.1.

1 Theſ.5.19. Ephel.5.14.

If ſuch a new conſecrating we need, what better time than the feaſt of firſt fruits? the ſacrificing time under the Law; and in the Goſpel, the day of Chriſts riſing, our firſt fruits, by whom we are thus conſecrate. The day wherein He was Himſelf reſtored to the perfection of His Spiritual life (the life of glory) is the beſt for us, to be reſtored in, to the firſt fruits of that ſpiritual life, the life of grace.

IV. The Application of the Sacraments.

And if we ask, what ſhall be our means of this conſecrating? The Apoſtle telleth us (*Heb.*10 10.) we are ſanctified, by the Oblation of the body of Jeſus: That is the beſt means to reſtore us to that life. He hath ſaid it, and ſhewed it Himſelf; He that eateth Me, ſhall live by Me. The words ſpoken concerning that, are both Spirit and life; whether we ſeek for the Spirit, or ſeek for Life. Such was the means of our death, by eating the forbidden fruit; the firſt fruits of death: and ſuch is the means of our life, by eating the fleſh of Chriſt, the firſt fruits of life.

Joh.6.57.63.

And

And herein, we ſhall very fully fit, not the time only and the meanes, but alſo the manner. For, as by partaking the fleſh and blood, the ſubſtance of the firſt Adam, we came to our death; ſo to life we cannot come, unleſſe we doe participate with the fleſh and blood of the ſecond Adam. that is Chriſt. We drew death from the firſt, by partaking the ſubſtance: and ſo muſt we draw life from the ſecond by the ſame. This is the way; become branches of the Vine, and partakers of His nature, and ſo of His life and verdure both.

So, the time, the meanes, the manner agree. What letteth then, but that we, at this time, by this meanes, and in this manner, make our ſelves of that conſperſion, whereof Chriſt is our firſt fruits: by theſe means, obtaining the firſt fruits of His Spirit, of that quickning Spirit, which being obtained, and ſtill kept, or in default thereof, ſtill recovered, ſhall here begin to imitate in us, the firſt fruits of our reſtitution in this life, whereof the fulneſſe we ſhall alſo be reſtored unto, in the life to come: As Saint Peter calleth that time, the time of the reſtoring of all things. Then ſhall the fulneſſe be reſtored us too, when God ſhall be all in all; not ſome in one, and ſome in another, but all in all. Atq; hic eſt vitæ finis, pervenire ad vitam cujus non eſt finis: This is the end of the Text, and of our life, to come to a life, whereof there is no end. To which, &c. Act. 3. 21.

AT
WHITE-HALL,
On the seven and Twentieth of March, being Easter-Day.

MARK. Chap. XVI.

Et cum transisset Sabbatum, &c.

VER. 1. And, when the Sabbath day was past, Mary Magdalen, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome bought sweet oyntments, that they might come, and embalm Him.

2. Therefore, early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the Sepulcher, when the Sun was yet rising.

3. And they said one to another, Who shall roll us away this stone from the door of the Sepulcher?

4. And when they looked, they saw, that the stone was rolled away (for, it was a very great one.)

5. So they went into the Sepulcher, and saw a young man sitting at the right side; clothed in a long white robe: And they were afraid.

6. But, he said unto them, Be not afraid: Yee seek Jesus of Nazareth, which hath been crucified, He is risen, He is not here: Behold the place, where they put Him.

7. But, go your way and tell His Disciples, and Peter, that He will go before you into Galilee: there shall yee see Him, as He said unto you.

THE Sum of this Gospel is, a Gospel: that is, a message of good tydings. In a message, these three points fall in naturally: 1. The Parties, to whom it is brought: 2. The Party by whom: 3. And the Message it self. These three: 1. The Parties to whom; Three women; the three Maries. 2. The Party, by whom, an Angel. 3. The Message it self, the first news of Christs rising again. These three make the three parts in the Text. 1. The Women. 2. The Angel. 3. The Message. The Summe. I. II. III. The Division.

Seven verses I have read ye. The first four concern the Women. The fifth, the Angel. The two last, the Angels message. In the Women, we have to consider: 1. Themselves, in the first: 2. Their journey, in the second and third: and 3. Their success, in the fourth.

In the Angel, 1. The manner of his appearing, 2. and of their affecting with it.
In the Message, The news it self: 1. That Christ is risen: 2. That He is gone before them to Galilee: 3. That there they shall see Him: 4. Peter and all: 5. Then the Ite & dicite, the Commission ad Evangelizandum; not to conceal these good news, but publish it: these, to His Disciples: they, to others, and so to us: we to day, and so to the worlds end.

I.
The Parties to whom: Three women.

AS the Text lyeth, the part that first offereth it self, is the parties, to whom this message came. Which were three Women. Where, finding that Women were the first, that had notice of Christs resurrection, we stay. For it may seem strange, that passing by all men, yea, the Apostles themselves, Christ would have His Resurrection first of all made known, to that sex. Reasons are rendred, of divers diversly. We may be bold to alleage that, the Angel doth, in the Text (Vers. 5.) Vos enim quæritis, for they sought Christ. And Christ is not unrighteous to forget the work and labour of their love, that seek Him. Verily there will appear more Love, and Labour in these Women, than in Men; even the Apostles themselves. At this time (I know not how) Men were then become Women, and did animos gerere muliebres; and Women were Men: Sure the more manly, of the twain. The Apostles, they sat mured up, all the doors fast about them; sought not, went not to the Sepulcher. Neither Peter that loved Him, nor John whom He loved; till these Women brought them word. But these Women (we see) were last at His Passion, and first at His Resurrection: staied longest at that, came soonest to this: Even in this respect to be respected. Sure as it is said of the Law, Vigilantibus & non dormientibus succurret lex; so may it no less truly be said of the Gospel. We see it here, it cometh not to sleepers; but to them that are awake, and up and about their business, as these Women were. So that, there was a capacity in them to receive this prerogative.

Mary Magdalen first.

Before I leave this part; of the parties, I may not omit to observe Mary Magdalens place and precedence among the three. All the Fathers are carefull to note it. That she standeth first of them: For it seemeth no good order. She had had seven Divels in her, (as we find Vers. 9.) She had had the blemish to be called Peccatrix, as one famous and notorious in that kind: The other were of honest report, and never so stained: Yet, is she named with them. With them, were much: but, not only with them; but before them. With them: And that is to shew, Christs Resurrection (as well as His death) reacheth to sinners of both sexes: And that to sinners of note, no less than those that seem not to have greatly gone astray. But before them, too; And that is (indeed) to be noted; that, shee is the first, in the list of Women: and Saint Peter, in that of Men. These two: the two chief Sinners, either of their sex. Yet they, the two, whose lots came first forth in sorte Sanctorum, in partaking this news. And this, to shew, that chief Sinners (as these were) if they carry themselves, as they did, shall be at no loss by their fall: shall not only be pardoned, but honored (even as he was) like these, with stolâ primâ, the first robe in all the Ward-robe; and stand formost of all. And it is not without a touch of the former reason; In that, the sinner, after his recovery, for the most part seeketh God more fervently: Whereas they, that have not greatly gone astray, are but even so so; if warm, it is all. And with God, it is a Rule, Plus valet hora fervens quam mensis tepens. An hour of fervor, more worth then a month of tepor. Now, such was Mary Magdalen; here, and else-where, vouchsafed therefore this degree of exaltation, to be of the first three: nay, to be the first of the three, that heard first of His rising: Yea (as in the ninth Verse) that first saw Him risen from the dead. This of the Persons.

2.
Their journey: and therein, their love.

And now, because their endeavours were so well liked, as they were (for them) counted worthy this so great honor, it falleth next to consider, what those were: that we being like prepared may partake the like good hap. So, seeking as they, we may find as they did. They were four in number: The first and third in the II. the second, in the I. and the last, in the III. Verse. All reduced (as Christ reduced them, in Mary Magdalen) to Dilexit multùm, their great Love; Of which these four be four Demonstrations: Or (if love be an Ensign, as it is termed, Cant. 2.) the four Colours of it. 1. That they went to the Sepulcher: Love, to one dead. 2. That they bought precious odours; Love, that is at charges. 3. That out they went early, before break of day: Love, that will take pains. 4. That for all the stone, still they went on: Love, that will wrestle with impediments. The first is constant, as to the dead. The second bounteous, as at expence. The third diligent, as up betimes. The last resolute, be the stone never so great. According to which four, are the four denominations of Love: 1. Amor, à morte, when it surviveth death: 2. When it burneth dearly, it is Charitas: 3. When it sheweth all Diligence, it is Dilectio: 4. When it goeth per Saxa, when stones cannot stay it, it is Zelus, which is specially seen, in encountring difficulties. It shall not be amiss to touch them severally: it will serve to touch our Love, whether ours be of the same assay.

Cant. 2. 4.

1 Love to the dead: Amor.

The first riseth out of these words [They went to the Sepulcher] And (indeed) ex tota substantia, out of the whole Text. For, for whom is all this ado; is it not for Christ? But, Christ is dead, and buried three dayes since, and this is now the third day. What then, though He be dead; to their love, He liveth still: Death may take His body from their eyes, but shall never take His remembrance, from their hearts. Herein is Love, this is the first Colour (saith a great Master in that faculty) Fortis sicut Mors, Love, that death cannot foil: but continueth to the dead, as if they still were alive. And, when I say the dead, I mean not ſuch, as the dead have left behind them (though that be a vertue, and Boaz worthily bleſſed for it, that ſhewed mercy to the living for the deads ſake:) But I mean performing offices of love to the dead himſelf; To ſee, he have a Sepulcher to go to: Not, ſo to bury his friend, as he would bury his Aſs being dead. To ſee, he have one: and not thither to bring him, and there to leave him, and bury him and his memory both in a grave. Such is the worlds love. Salomon ſheweth it, by the Lion and the Dog. All, after Chriſt living: But, go to His Sepulcher who will, not we. The love that goeth thither, that burieth not the memory of Him that is buried, is Love indeed. Ruth 2. 20. Eccleſ. 9. 4.

Cant. 8. 6.

The journey to the Sepulcher is Iter amoris: had it been but to lament, as Mary Magdalen to Lazarus (John 11.) But then, here is a further matter: They went to annoint Him. That, is ſet for another ſign: that they ſpared for no coſt, But bought precious odours wherewith to embalm Him. 1 Love that was at charges: Charitas. John 11. 31.

1. To go to annoint Chriſt, is kindly; It is to make Him Chriſt, that is, Annointed. That term referreth principally, to His Fathers annointing (I grant:) but, what if we alſo annoint Him, will He take it, in evil part? Clearly, not: Neither quick, nor dead. Not quick, Luke 7. Mark 14. Not dead; this place is pregnant; it is the end of their journey, to do this. He is well content to be their, and our Annointed; Not His Fathers only: yea, it is a way to make Him Chriſtum noſtrum, Our Chriſt, if we break our boxes, and beſtow our odors upon Him. Luke 7. 46. Mark 14. 3.

2. To annoint Him; And, not with ſome odde caſt oinment, lying by them, kept a little too long; to throw away upon Him: But to buy, to be at coſt, to do it, Empris odoribus, with bought odors.

3. This to do, to Him alive; that would they with all their hearts: But, if that cannot be, to do it to Him dead, rather, than not at all. To do it, to whatſoever is left us, of Chriſt, to that to do it.

4. To embalm Chriſt, Chriſt dead, yea, though others had done it before: for, ſo is the caſe. Joſeph and Nichodemus had beſtowed Myrrh and Aloes to that end already: What then? though they had done it, it is not enough: nay, it is nothing: Nay if all the world ſhould have done it, unleſs they might come with their odors and do it too, all were nothing. In hoc eſt charitas, herein is love, and this a ſign of it. A ſign of it every where elſe; and, to Chriſt, a ſign it was. Indeed, ſuch a ſign there was; but it is beaten down, now. We can love Chriſt, abſque hoc, and ſhew it ſome other way well enough. It ſheweth, our love is not Charitas, no dear love; but Vilitas, love, that loves to be at as little charges with Chriſt, as may be: faint love. You ſhall know it thus: Ad hoc ſignum ſe contrahit, At this ſign it ſhrinks; at every word of it. 1. They bought; that is charge: we like it not; we had rather hear potuit vendi. 2. Odors: what need odors? An unneceſſary charge: We like no odor, but Odor Lucri. 3. To Chriſt: Nay, ſeeing it is unneceſſary, we truſt, Chriſt will not require it. 4. Not, alive; but eſpecially, not dead: there was much ado, while He lived, to get allowance for it; there was one of His own Apoſtles (a good charitable man, Pater pauperum) held it to be plain perditio. Yet, to annoint the living; that, many do: they can annoint us again: But, to the dead, it is quite caſt away. But then, if it had been told us, He is embalmed already; why then, take away their odours; that, at no hand would have been endured. This ſheweth, our love is not Charitas. But, ſo long as this is a Goſpel, it ſhall ſound every Eaſter-day in our ear, that the buying of odours, the embalming of whatſoever is left us of Chriſt, is (and will be ſtill) a ſign of our loving and ſeeking Him, as we ſhould: though, not heretofore, yet now: Now eſpecially, when that objection ceaſeth; He is embalmed enough already. He was (indeed) then; but moſt of the Myrrh and Aloes is now gone. That, there is good occaſion left, if any be diſpoſed in hoc ſigno ſignari, with this ſign to ſeal his love to Chriſt, anew again. John 19. 39. Mark 14. 5. Mark 14. 2.

From this of their expence [Charitas] we paſs to the third, of their Diligence [Dilectio:] ſet down (in verſe 2.) in theſe words Very early, &c. And but mark, how diligent the Holy Ghoſt is in deſcribing their diligence, The very firſt day of the week: the very firſt part of that firſt day, In the morning: the very firſt hour of that firſt part, Very early, before the Sun was up, they were up. Why good Lord, what need all this haſte? Chriſt is faſt enough under His ſtone. He will not run away (ye may be ſure:) ye need never break your ſleep, and yet come to the Sepulcher time enongh. No; if they do it not, as ſoon as it may be done, it is nothing worth. Herein is love, Dilectio: whoſe proper ſign is Diligentia, in not ſlipping the firſt opportunity of ſhewing it. They did it not at their leaſure: they could not reſt, they were not well till they were about it. Which very ſpeed of theirs doubleth all the former. For Citò (we know) is eſteemed as much, as Bis. To do it at once, is to do it more than once, is to do it twice over. 3 Love, that takes pains: Dilectio.

Yet, this we muſt take with us [Διαγενομένου σαββάτου] Where falleth a very ſtrange thing: that, as we have commended them for their quickneſs, ſo muſt we now alſo for their ſlowneſs (out of the very firſt words of all:) When the Sabbath was paſt, then, and not till then, they did it. This diligence of theirs, as great haſt as it made, ſtayed yet, till the Sabbath were paſt: and, by this means, hath two contrary commendations: 1. One, for the ſpeed; 2. another for the ſtay of it. Though they fain would have been embalming Him, as ſoon as might be, yet not with breach of the Sabbath: their diligence leapt over none of God's Commandments for haſte. No, not this Commandment, which (of all other, the world is boldeſt with; and, if they have haſt, ſomewhat elſe may; but ſure, the Sabbath ſhall never ſtay them. The Sabbath, they ſtayed: for then, God ſtayed them. But that was no ſooner over, but their diligence appeared ſtraight. No other thing could ſtay them. Nor their own Sabbath (Sleep,) but, before day-light, they were well onward on their way.

4 Love that wrestles with impediments: Zelus.

The last is in the third verse, in these words, As they went, they said, &c. There was a stone (a very great one) to be rolled away yet they could come at Him. They were so rapt with love, in a kind of extasie, they never thought of the stone; they were well on their way, before they remembred it. And then, when it came to their minds, they went not back though; but on still, the stone non obstante. And herein is love; the very fervour of it, Zeal: that word hath fire in it. Not only diligence (as lightness) to carry it upward, but zeal (as fire) to burn a hole, and eat it self away, thorow whatsoever shall oppose to it. No stone so heavy as to stay them, or turn them back. And this is S. Johns sign: Foras pellet timorem, Love (if it be perfect) casts out fear; Et erubescit nomen difficultatis, shames to confess any thing too hard for it. Ours is not so: we must have (not great stones (God wot) but) every scruple removed out of our way, or we will not stir. But as; if you see one Qui laborem fingit in præcepto, that makes a great deal more labour in a precept, than needs; that is afraid where no fear is; Of Leo in via, a Lion, or (I wot not what) perillous beast in the way, and no such matter: It is a certain sign, his love is small; his affection cold to the business in hand. So, on the other side, when we see (as in these here) such zeal to that, they went about, as (first) they forgot there was any stone at all; and, when they bethought them of it, they brake not off, but went on though: ye may be bold to say of them, dilexerunt multum, their love was great; that per saxa, thorow stones and all, yet goeth forward: that neither cost, nor pains, nor peril can divert. Tell them the Party is dead, they go to: It skils not, their love is not dead; that will go on. Tell them, He is embalmed already, they may save their cost: It is not enough, for them, except they do it too; they will do it nevertheless, for all that. Tell them, they may take time then, and do it: Nay, unless it be done, the first day, hour, and minute, it contents them not. Tell them, there is a stone, more than they remember, and more than they can remove: No matter, they wil try their strength, and lift at it, though they take the foil. Of these thus qualified, we may truly say: they that are at all this cost, labor, pains, to annoint Him dead, shew plainly, if it lye in them, to raise Him again, they would not fail, but do it: Consequently, would be glad to hear, He were risen: And so, are fit hearers of this Gospel; Hearers well disposed, and every way meet to receive this Messenger, and this Message. Now to the success.

1 John 4. 18.

Prov. 26. 13.

3. Their Success.

We see what they sought; we long to see what they found. Such Love, and such labor would not be lost. This we may be sure of, there is none shall annoint Him alive, or dead, without some recompence or consideration; which is set down, of two sorts. 1. They found the stone rolled away, as great as it was: That which troubled them most, how it might be removed, that found they removed, yet they came. They need never take pains with it; the Angel had done it to their hands. 2. They found not (indeed) whom they sought, Christ: but, His Angel they found, and heard such a Gospel of Him, so good news, as pleased them better, than if they had found His body to embalm it. That news, which of all other they most longed to hear; that He (they came to annoint) needed no such office to be done to Him, as being alive again. This was the Success.

And, from this success of theirs our lesson is. 1. That, as there is no vertue, no good work, but hath some impediment, as it were some great stone, to be lifted at, Quis revolvet? So, that it is (oft-times) the lot of them, that seek to do good, to find many imaginary stones removed to their hands: God so providing, Ut quod admovit Satanas, amoveat Angelus, what Satan layes in the way, a good Angel takes out of the way: That it may, in the like case be a good answer to Quis revolvet? to say, Angelus Domini, the Angel of the Lord, he shall do it; done it shall be: so did these here: and, as they did, others shall find it.

2. Again, it is the hope, that all may have, that set themselves to do Christ any service; to find His Angel at least, though not Himself: to hear some good news, of Him, though not see Him at the first. Certain it is, with Ungentes, ungentur; None shall seek ever to annoint Him, but they shall be anointed by Him again, one way or other: and find, though not always what they seek, yet some supply, that shall be worth the while. And this we may reckon of; it shall never fail us.

II. The Party by whom: the Angel.

To follow this further. Leave we these good Women, and come first to the Angel the Messenger, and after to his Message. An Angel was the messenger: for, none other messenger was meet for this Message. For, if His Birth were tydings of so great joy, as none but an Angel was meet to report it; His Resurrection is as much: As much? nay, much more. As much: for, His Resurrection is (it self) a birth too. To it doth the Apostle apply the verse in the Psalm, This day have I begotten thee (Acts 13. 33.) Even this day, when He was born anew Tanquam ex utero Sepulchri, from the womb of the grave. As much, then; yea, much more. For the news of His Birth might well have been brought by a mortal; it was but his entry into a mortal life: But this, here, not properly, but by an Angel: for that, in the Resurrection, we shall be like the Angels, and shall dye no more: and therefore an immortal Messenger was meetest for it.

Luke 2. 10.

Mat. 22. 30.

I. The Vision.

We first begin with what they saw, the Vision. They Saw an Angel in the Sepulcher. An Angel, in a Sepulcher, is a very strange sight. A Sepulcher is but an homely place; neither savory, nor sightly, for an Angel to come in. The place of dead-mens bones, of stench, of worms, and of rottenness: What doth an Angel there? Indeed, no Angel ever came there, till this morning. Not till Christ had been there: but, since His body was there, a great change hath ensued. He hath left there Odorem vitæ, and changed the grave into a place of rest. That, not only this Angel here now: but, after this, * two more, yea, divers Angels, divers occasions, this day did visit, and frequent this place. Which very finding of the Angels, thus, in the place of dead bodies, may be, and is to us a pledg, that there is a possibility and hope, that the dead bodies may come also into the place of Angels. Why not

* John 20. 12.

the bodies in the grave to be in heaven, one day; as well as the Angels of heaven to be in the grave this day.

This for the Vision. The next for the manner of his appearing; in what form he shewed himself. A matter worth our stay a little, as a good introduction to us, in him, as in a mirror, to see, what shall be the state of us and our bodies in the Resurrection. In as much as it is expressly promised, we shall then be ἰσάγγελοι, like and equal to the Angels themselves. The manner of his appearing. 2. Matth. 22. 30.

1. They saw a young man, one in the vigor and strength of his years: And such shall be our estate then: All age, sickness, infirmity removed clean away. Therefore it was also, that the Resurrection fell in the Spring, the freshest time of the year; and, in the Morning, the freshest time of the day, when (saith Esay) the dew is on the herbs. Therefore, that it was in a Garden (so it was) in Joseph of Arematheas's Garden: that, look as that garden was, at that time of the year, the Spring; so shall our estate then be, in the very flower and prime of it. 1. As a young man. Esay. 26. 19.

They saw him sitting: Which is (we know) the site of rest, and quietnesse; of them that are at ease. To shew us a second qualitie of our estate then; that, in it, all labour shall cease, all motions rest, all troubles come utterly to an end for ever; and the state of it a quiet and restfull state. 2. Sitting.

They saw him sit on the right side. And, that side is the side of pre-eminence and honour. To shew, that those also shall accompany us rising again. That, we may fall on the left side, but, we shall rise on the right; be sowen in dishonour, but shall rise again in honour; that honour which His Saints and Angels have, and shall have for ever. 3. On the right side. 1 Cor. 15. 43.

Lastly, They saw Him clouthed all in white. And white is the colour of gladness, as we find (Eccles. 9. 8.) All to shew still, that it shall be a state, as of Strength, Rest, and Honour; so, of Joy likewise. And that, Robe-wise: not short or scant, but (as his stole) all over, down to the ground. 4. Clothed in white.

Neither serves it alone to shew us, what then we shall be; but withal, what now we ought to be, this day, the day of His Rising. In that we see, that, as the heavens at the time of His Passion, were in black, by the great Eclipse; shewing us it was then a time of mourning: so, this day, the Angels were all in white, to teach us thereby, with what affection, with how great joy and gladness, we are to celebrate and solemnize this Feast of our Saviours rising. Matth 27. 45.

Their affection (here) was otherwise: And that is somewhat strange. In the Apparition, there was nothing fearful, as ye see; yet it is said, They were afraid. Even now, they feared nothing: and now, they fall to be afraid, at this so comfortable a sight. Had they been guilty to themselves of any evil, they came to do, well might they then have feared. God first, as the Malefactor doth the Judge, and then His Angel, as the Executioner of His Wrath. But their coming was for good. But (I find it is not the sinners case only, but even the best's, of our nature. Look the Scripture: (a) Abraham, and (b) Jacob in the Old: (c) Zacharie, and the (d) Blessed Virgin in the New, all stricken with fear still, at the sight of good Angels; yea, even then, when they came for their good. 3. Their affecting therewith. a Gen. 15. 12. b 28. 17. c Luke 1. 12. d 29

It fareth with the Angels of light, as it doth with the light it self: Sore eyes and weak, cannot indure it: No more can sinners, them: No more can the strongest sight neither bare the light, if the object be too excellent; if it be not tempered, to a certain proportion: Otherwise, even to the best that is, is the light offensive. And that is their case; afraid they are, not for any evil, they were about, but for that, our very nature is now so decayed, Ut lucem, ad quam nata est, sustinere nequeat, as the Angels brightnes, for whose society we were created, yet (as now we are) bear it we cannot, but need to be comforted at the sight of a comfortable Angel. It is not the Messenger Angelical, but the Message Evangelical that must do it.

Which leadeth us along, from the Vision that feared them, to the Message it self that relieved them: which is the third part. The stone lay not more heavy on the grave, than did that fear on their hearts, pressing them down hard. And no less needful was it, the Angel should roll it away (this spiritual great stone) from their hearts, than he did that other material from the Sepulchre it self. With that he begins: III. The Message.

1. Fear not. A meet Text for him, that maketh a Sermon at a Sepulchre. For, the fear of that place maketh us out of quiet all our life long (Heb. 2.) It lyeth at our heart like a stone: and no way there is, to make us willing to go thither, but by putting us out of fear; by putting us in hope, that the great stones shall be rolled away again, from our Sepulchres, and we, from thence, rise to a better life. It is a right beginning, for an Easter-dayes Sermon, Nolite timere. 1. Fear not. Heb. 2. 15.

2. And, a good reason he yields, why not. For, it is not every bodies case (this) Nolite timere vos, fear not You: Why not? For You seek Jesus of Nazareth, which hath been crucified. Nazareth, might keep you back (the meanness of His Birth;) and Crucified, more (the reproach of His Death:) In as much as these cannot let you, but ye seek Him; are ashamed neither of His poor birth, nor of His shameful death, but seek Him: And seek Him, not (as some did) when He was alive, when good was to be done by Him, but even now, dead, when nothing is to be gotten: And, not to rob or rifle Him, but to embalm Him, an office of love and kindness (this touched before) fear not You, nor let any fear that so seek Him.

Now, that they may not fear, he imparts them his Message full of comfort. And, it containeth four comforts of Hope, answerable to the four former proofs of their Love: 1. He is risen; 2. But, gone before you; 3. Ye shall see Him; 4. All his Disciples, Peter and all: Go tell them so.

In

1. He is risen.

In that you thus testifie your love in seeking Him, I dare say, ye had rather, He, ye thus come to embalm, that He were alive again: and, no more joyful tidings could come to you, than that he were so: Ye could (I dare say) with all your hearts be content, to lose all your charge you have been at, in buying your odours, on condition it were so. Therefore I certifie you, that He is alive, He is risen. No more than Gaza gates could hold Sampson; or the Whale, Jonas; no more could this stone keep him in the Sepulchre, but Risen He is.

Judg. 16. 3.
Jonas 2. 10.

First, Of this ye were sure, here He was; ye were at his laying in; ye saw the stone sealed, and the watch set: so that here he was. But, here He is not, now: Come see the place, trust your own eyes, None est hic.

But what of that, this is but a lame consequence, for all that: He is not here, therefore He is risen. For, may it not be, he hath been taken away? Not, with any likelyhood; though such a thing will be given out, That the Disciples stole him away, while the watch was asleep: But your reason will give you; 1. Small probability there is, they could be asleep, all the ground shaking and tottering under them by means of the * Earth-quake. 2. And secondly, if they did sleep for all that, yet then could they not tell (sleeping) how, or by whom, he was taken away. 3. And thirdly, that his Disciples should do it; they (you know) of all other were utterly unlike to do any such thing: So fearful, as miserably they forsook him yet alive, and have ever since shut themselves up since he was dead. 4. And fourthly, if they durst have done such a thing, they would have taken him away, linnen-cloaths and all (as fearful men will make all the haste they can possibly) and not stood stripping him and wrapping up the cloaths, and laying them every parcel, one by one in order, as men use to do that have time enough, and take deliberation, as being in no haste, or fear at all. To you therefore (as we say, ad hominem) this consequence is good. Not taken away, and not here, therefore risen he is.

Mat. 28. 13.
* Mat. 28. 2.

He is gone before.

But, to put all out of doubt: you shall trust your own eyes; Videbitis, you shall see it is so; you shall see Him. Indeed, Non hic would not serve their turnes: He knew their question would be, Where is he? Gone he is; Not, quite gone, but only gone before, which is the second comfort: For, if he be but gone before, we have hope, to follow after: I pra, sequar; so is the nature of Relatives. But, that we may follow then; Whither is he gone? Whither, he told ye himself, a little before his Passion (Chap. 14. 28.) into Galilee.

1. No meeter place, for Jesus of Nazareth to go, than to Galilee: there he is best known: there, in [a] Nazareth he was brought up; there, [b] in Cana he did His first miracle, sheweth his first Glory; meet therefore to see his last: there in Capernaum, and the coasts about, preached most, bestowed most of his labour.

[a] Mat. 2. 23.
[b] John 2. 11.

2. Galilee; it was called Galilee of the Gentiles; for, it was in the confines of them: To shew, his Resurrection (tanquam in Mediullio, as in a middle indifferent place) reacheth to both; concerneth and benefitteth both alike. As Jonas, after his resurrection, went to Nineve; so, Christ, after his, to Galilee of the Gentiles.

Matth. 4. 15.
Jonas 3. 4.

3. Galilee; that, from Galilee (the place, from whence, they said, No good thing could ever come) He might bring one of the best things, and of most comfort, that ever was; the sight and comfort of his Resurrection.

4. Galilee last, for Galilee signifieth a Revolution or turning about to the first point; Whither they must go, that shall see him, or have any part or fellowship in this feast of his Resurrection. Thither is he gone before: and, thither if ye follow, there ye shall see him.

3. Ye shall see Him.

This is the third comfort: and, it is one, indeed. For, Sight is the sense of certainty; and all that they can desire: And there they did see him. Not these here only, or the Twelve only, or the hundred and twenty names (in Act. 1.) only; but even five hundred of them at once (saith the Apostle, 1 Cor. 15.) a whole Cloud of witnesses, to put it clean out of question. And, of purpose doth the Angel point to that apparition, which was the most famous and publick of all the ten.

Act. 1. 15
1 Cor. 15. 6.

4. And his Disciples, Peter and all.

This was good news for those here; and they were worthy of it, seeking him, as they did. But, what shall become of the rest; namely, of his Disciples that lost him alive, and seek him not dead? They shall never see him more. Yes: (which is Evangelium, good tidings indeed, the chief comfort of all) they too, that left him so shamefully: but three dayes ago; them he casts not off, but will be glad to see them in Galilee. Well, whatsoever become of other, Peter (that so foully forsook and forswore Him both) he shall never see him more. Yes: Peter too, and Peter, by name. And indeed, it is more than needful, he should name him: He had greatest cause of doubt; the greatest stone upon him to be rolled away of any; that had so often, with oaths, and execrations, so utterly renounced Him. This, is a good message, for him: and Mary Magdalen as fit a messenger, as can be, to carry it; one great Sinner to another. That not only Christ is risen: but content, that his forsakers, deniers, forswearers, Peter and all should repair to him, the day of his Resurrection: That, all the deadly wounds of his Passion have not killed his compassion over sinners: That, though they have made wrack of their duty, yet he hath not lost his mercy, nor left it in the Grave; but is as ready to receive them as ever. His Resurrection hath made no change in him; dying, and rising, he is to sinners still one and the same; still like himself, a kind, loving, and merciful Saviour. This is the last: Peter and all may see Him.

Mar. 14. 71.

And

And with this he diſmiſſeth them, with Ite & dicite, with a Commiſſion and precept, by vertue whereof, He maketh theſe Women Apoſtolos Apoſtolorum; Apoſtles to the Apoſtles themſelves; (for, this Article of the Reſurrection, did they firſt learn of theſe Women; and they were the firſt of all, that preached this Goſpel:) giving them in charge, that, ſeeing this day is a day of glad tidings, they would not conceal it, but impart it to others; even to ſo many as then were or would ever after be Chriſts Diſciples. 2. Their Commiſſion.

They came to embalm Chriſts body natural; that needs it not; it is paſt embalming, now. But another body he hath; a myſtical body, a company of thoſe, that had believed in Him, though weakly: that they would go and anoint them, for they need it. They ſit drying away, what with fear, what with remorſe of their unkind dealing with Him: they need to have ſome oyle, ſome balm, to ſupple them. That, they doe, with this Goſpell: with theſe foure: Of which foure ingredients is made the balme of this day.

Thus we ſee, theſe that were at coſt to anoint Chriſt, were fully recompenced, for the coſts they have been at; themſelves anointed with oyle and odours of a high nature, and farre more pretious, than thoſe they brought with them, Oleum letitiæ (ſaith the [a] Pſalme) Odor vitæ (ſaith the [b] Apoſtle.) And that, ſo plentiouſly, as there is enough for themſelves; enough too, for others, for His Diſciples, for Peter and all. [a] Pſal. 45. 7. [b] 2 Cor. 2. 16.

But what is this to us? Sure, as we learned by way of duty, how to ſeeke Chriſt, after their example; ſo, ſeeking Him in that manner, by way of reward, we hope to have our part, in this good news, no leſs than they. The Application.

1 Chriſt is riſen; that concerneth us alike. [c] The Head is got above the water; [a] The Root hath received life and ſap: [b] The firſt fruits are lift up and conſecrate: We, no leſſe than they, as His members, His branches, His field, recover to this hope. [c] Eph. 4. 15. [a] Rom. 11. 16. [b] 1 Cor. 15. 23

2 And for His going before; that which the Angel ſaid here once, is ever true. He is not gone quite away, He is but gone before us: He is but the antecedent; we, as the conſequent, to be inferred after. Yea, though He be gone to Galilæa ſuperior, the Galilee that is above (Heaven) the place of the Celeſtiall Spheres and Revolutions; even thither is He gone, not as a party abſolute, of or for Himſelf; but a Harbenger (ſaith the Apoſtle) with relation to others, that are comming after, for whom He goeth before to take up a place. So, the Apoſtle there; So, the Angel here: So He himſelf, Vado; not Vado alone, but Vado parare, locum vobis, I go to prepare a place, wherein to receive you, when the number of you and your brethren ſhall be full. Heb. 6. 20. Joh. 14. 2.

3. To us likewiſe pertaineth the third videbitis: that is, the Goſpel indeed. He is riſen: Riſing, of it ſelf, is no Goſpel. But, he is riſen, and we ſhall ſee Him: that, is it. That the time will come alſo, that we ſhall ſee Him, in the Galilee Celeſtial, that is above; yea, that all ſhall ſee him, even they that pierced Him. But, they that came to embalm him, with joy and lifting up their heads, they ſhall ſee him: with that ſight ſhall they ſee him, that ſhall evermore make them bleſſed. Joh. 19. 37.

4. Laſtly (which is worth all the reſt:) That we ſhall not need to be diſmayed with our unworthineſs; in that, willing he is, Peter ſhould have word of this, and Mary Magdalen ſhould carry it. That (ſuch as they were) ſinners, and chief ſinners ſhould have theſe tidings told them, this Goſpel preached them: that he is as ready to receive them to grace, as any of the reſt; and will be as glad to ſee them, as any others in Galilee.

But then are we to remember the condition; that (here) we get us into Galilee, or elſe, it will not be. And Galilee is a revolution, or turning ad principia, to the firſt point, as doth the Zodiack, at this time of the year. The time of his Reſurrection is Paſcha, a paſſing over: The place Galilee, a turning about: It remaineth then, that we paſs over, as the time; and turn, as the place putteth us in mind. Re-uniting our ſelves to his body and blood, in this time of his riſing; of the diſſolving and renting whereof our ſins were the cauſe: The time of his ſuffering, keeping the Feaſt, of Chriſt our new Paſſover offered for us; leaving whatſoever formerly hath been amiſs, in Chriſts grave, as the weeds of our dead eſtate, and riſing to newneſs of life, that ſo we may have our parts in the firſt reſurrection: Which they are happy and bleſſed that ſhall have; for, by it they are ſure of the ſecond. Of which bleſſing and happineſs, he vouchſafe to make us all partakers, that this day roſe for us, Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous, &c. Apoc. 20. 6.

A SER-

A SERMON

Preached before the

KINGS MAJESTY

AT

WHITE-HALL,

On the Sixteenth of Aprill, being Easter-Day.

An. Dom. 1609.

JOHN Chap. XX. Ver. XIX.

Cum ergo sero esset die illo, Una Sabbatorum, & fores essent clausæ, ubi erant Discipuli congregati propter metum Judæorum: venit Jesus, & stetit in medio, & dixit eis, Pax Vobis.

The same day then, at night, which was the first day of the week, and when the doors were shut, where the Disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the middest, and said unto them, Peace be unto you.

THis is the enter-view of Christ and His Disciples: and this, His first speech, at His first enter-view: Both, this day; the very first day of His rising. 1 Mark 16. 9. 2 Mat. 28. 9.

Five sundry times, appeared He, this day. 1. to Mary Magdalen: 2. To the Women comming from the Sepulcher: 3. To the two that went to Emaus: 4. To Saint Peter: 5. And here now, to the Eleven, and those that were with them. The two first, to Women; the three last to men: So, both Sexes: To Peter, and to Mary Magdalen: So, to Sinners of both Sexes. To the Eleven, as the Clergy; to those with them, as the Laity: so, to both Estates. Abroad, at Emaus: at home, here. Betimes; and now, late. When they were scattered, severally; and now, joyntly, when they were gathered together. That no Sex, Sort, Estate, Place or Time excepted: but, as Visitavit oriens ab alto: so Visitavit occidens ab imo: Rising, from above, at His Birth; Rising, from beneath, at His resurrection, He visited all. 3 Luke 24. 10. 4 Luke 24. 44. 5 In Text. Luke 1. 78.

But, of all the five, this is the chief. Those were, to one; as Peter: Or two; as those of Emaus: Or three, as the Women: This, to all: The more, the more Witnesses; the better for faith. Those when they were scattered: this (here) when they were all together: The more together, the more meet for this salvation here, Peace be to you.

The division. Which Salutation is the very substance of the Text: the rest but appendent, all.

I. In it, two things give forth themselves: 1. The Persons, to whom, Vobis. 2. The Master of the Wish it self, Peace. The Persons are thus set down: Discipuli, congregati, conclusi: 1. His Disciples they were; 2. Gathered; 3. And the doors shut on them, for fear of the Jews.

There will fall out besides, four other points. 1. Christ his site; that, He stood, when he wished it: 2. His Place; that, in the middest, he stood. 3. The time, All this, the same day, the first day of the week, Sunday, Easter-day: 4. And, the very time of the day; that, it was late.

II. The speech, of it self, is a Salutation: any will so conceive it, at the first hearing. And, if it were but so, and no more; that were enough. Christs Salutations are not (as ours be) formal; but good matter in them.

But, it is more than a Salutation, say the Fathers, for this reason. At meeting, men use to salute but once: within a verse, he repeateth it again. So, it keeps not the law of a salutation: but, it is (certainly) somewhat, besides. Votum Christi, they call it. Votum pacis, votum Christi: Christs vow, or wish: His Vow; and his first Vow.

Now, every Vow, implyeth an advice, at the least. What Christ wisheth to us, he wisheth us to. Every wish, so: But, if it be the wish of a Superior, in his Optative, there is an Imperative; his Wish, is a command, if he have wit that hears it. So that these words (rightly understood) are both an Advice, and an Injunction to it; of the nature of an Edict. Pax vobis, is as much, as Pacem habete in vobis, Be at peace among your selves.

Mar. 9 50.

We are then, to joyn with Christ; to follow him, in his Wish. To whom he wisheth it: To all Christ's Disciples, together, even to his whole Christian Church; and, even to them, that (it may be) as little deserve it, as these here did. 1. To make it Caput voti, our first Vow: yea, first and second; as Christ here did. 2. Oportet stantem optare, to wish it, standing. 3. And, standing where Christ stood (that is material) in the Midst. 4. This day to do it; and think it pertinent to the time: It is Votum Paschale. As for Serò we shall never need to take thought for it: It is never too soon; late enough alwayes, if it be not too late; that, is all the fear.

I. The Personal part of Christs Salutation.

THe chief point, first: Pax vobis. The words are but two; yet, even between them there seemeth to be no peace: but one (in a manner) opposite to the other. Looking to Vobis (the Persons) this should not be a salutation for them, Pax. Looking to the Salutation (Peace) it should not be, to those Persons; Vobis, to you. So that, our first work will be, to make peace between the two words.

Pax and vobis reconciled.

Vobis, to you. Will you know, who they be? To you, Peter, and John, and the rest. To you, of whom none stood by me: To you, of whom some ran away, some denied, ye forswore me. To you, of whom, all, every one shrunk away and forsook me. How evil doth this greeting agree with this Vobis? Yet, even to these, Venit & stetit, & dixit; He came, stood, and said, Peace be to you.

Mat. 26. 56. 72. Mar. 14. 53.

Used by them, as he had been, no cause. He should come, or stand, or speak at all: Or, if speak, not thus. Not come to them, that went from Him: nor stand amongst them, that had not stood to Him: nor speak to them, that had renounced Him. It is said, they feared the Jews: All things considered, they had more cause to fear Him; and to look for some real revenge, at his hands: If not that, some verbal reproof, a Salutation, of another stile or tenour: And well, if they might scape so. Confitemini Domino, quia bonus; It is not so: No evil deed, for all this: No, not so much as an unkind word. Above that, they could look for, far above that, they deserved, it is, Pax vobis. You and I are at peace, you and I are friends; Peace be unto you. This is his first goodness: His making a peace between Pax and Vobis.

Mar. 14. 50. Joh. 9. 22. Psal. 106. 1.

Illo die, that is, Primo Die Phil. 2. 9.

This Speech to these Persons, is much mended, by adding the Time in the Text; that, it was illo die; the day of his rising. Pax vobis, is a good speech, for Good-friday, then, men grow charitable when ready to dye. But, on their Easter-day, at their rising, the day when Exaltavit Eum Deus, the day of their exaltation, they use to take other manner spirits, and remember former disgraces, with a far other congy. Hac est lex hominis; Men do thus: but, not Christ. Neither their indignity, Vobis; Nor his own dignity changeth him. Rising, exalted, the very day of His exaltation, illo die, He saith, Peace be unto you.

Ano-

Another yet: That it was Primâ Sabbati, the very first day of the week: took no long day for it: Nay, no day at all, but the very first day: Joseph (exalted) dealt well with his brethren; but, not the first day: it was some time first. He kept them in fear, a while; but shewed himself, at the last. Christ doth not so; hold them in suspense: illo die, primo die, the same day, the first day, He came, and shewed himself, and said, Peace be unto you. Primâ Sabbati, Luk. 24. 1.

Yea, not so much as dixit (here) but (as it fals out) will bear a note. Even, that it is dixit, and not Respondit; a Speech, not an Answer. That he spake it, unspoken to: He, to them, first; yet they, to Him. He might well have stayed till then: and reason would, they should first have sued for it. Yet they ask it, he giveth it: and prevents them with the blessings of peace. They first, in falling out; he first, at making friends. Dixit, non respondit. Psal. 11. 3.

A great comfort for poor sinners, when the many indignities, we have offered Christ, shall present themselves before us, to think of this Vobis. That, when the Disciples had done the like, yet he forgat all; and spake thus kindly to them, this day: That he will vouchsafe us the like (specially, if we seek it, he will) and say to us, Pax vobis.

Will ye remember now, to extend your wish of Peace, 1. To them, that (it may be) deserve it as evil, as these, here: Even, his qui longè. 2. To do it, at our rising, at our high-day, when it is Easter with us. 3. Not, to make their hearts to pant, and eyes to fail first; but, even primâ Sabbati, to do it. 4. And not so take state upon us, and be content, to answer, Peace; and not speak: be moved for it; but, not move it: yes, even move it, first. If we do, we joyn with Christ, in his first part, the personal part of the wish.

Illis, and illo die, and primo die, what they were, we see; and in what sort. Yet, (not to grate on this point altogether) some smoke yet was there in the flax; some small remainders, illices misericordiæ (as Tertullian) to move his mercy: In these words, 1. Discipuli, 2. Congregati, 3. Conclusi, 4. Propter timorem Judæorum: That, His Disciples (yet) they were; and, together they were; and, in fear of the Jews, they were shut up. 1. 2. The persons to whom.

Whatsoever, or howsoever they were else, yet; they were his Disciples: Unprofitable servants, yet Servants: Lost sons, yet Sons: forgetful Disciples, yet Disciples. His Disciples they were: and, howsoever they had made a fault (as it seemeth) so meant to hold themselves, still; and hereafter to learn their lesson better. 1 His Disciples. Luke 17. 10. 15. 24.

And, I like well their fear: that, they were afraid of the Jews. It shews, there were no good terms betwixt them; and that they shut their doors upon them, therefore they meant not to go out to them, or seek Pax vobis of the Jews. They had no meaning (it seemeth) to give over Christ. If they had, what need they fear the Jews? The Jews would have done them no harm, they might have set open their doors well enough. 2 For in fear of Iewes.

And Congregatis (I take it well) is no evil sign. It would have been Ex alia causa; for love, rather than fear: And again, for fear of God, rather than of the Jews. Yet, even thus, I mislike it not: And, much better this fear, than that at the Passion: That, scattered them one from another; every man shift for one. This makes them draw together, and keep together, as if they meant to stand out afresh. Which very [Congregatis] makes them fit for this Salutation. It cannot well be said, Disgregatis, to them that are in sunder. Unâ, is a disposition to unity; and gathering, to the binding up in the band of peace. Christ (that said, Quoties volui congregare?) liked it well, to find them thus together: And, his coming was, as to take away their fear; so, to continue their gathering, still. 3 Assembled. Matth. 23. 37.

And, shall we learn this of the Desciples? 1. If a fault fall out, not to give over school, but to continue our Discipleship still. 2. And, not to go over, to seek our Pax vobis, at the hands of his enemies: To shut out both them, and their peace, too. 3. And lastly, not to forsake the fellowship; to keep together, still. For, being so together, we are nearer our Peace. This shall make Christ come and say it to us the sooner, and the more willingly.

The real part, voti summa, that which he wisheth, is peace. First, Why peace? Then, what peace? II. The reall part.

Why, Peace? Is there nothing more worth the wishing? Nothing more, of it self; nothing more fit for these persons, this place, and this time. I. Why peace.

Of it self: Votum pacis, Summa votorum. It is, all wishes, in one; nothing more to be wished. For, in brevi voce Breviarium, this little word is a Breviary of all, that good is.

To shew how, a little: quàm bonum, how good, how worth the wishing it is. It is tam bonum, so good, as, without it, nothing is good. With it (saith Solomon) an handful of herbs; without it, an house full of sacrifices, is not good. With trouble and vexation, nothing is good; nothing is to be wished. 1 As, good. Psal. 133. 1. Prov. 15. 16. 17. Prov. 17. 1.

And as, without it, nothing is to be wished: so, all that is to be wished (all good) is within it. Evangelizantium pacem, Evangelizantium bona; quia, in pace, omnia bona: To bring news of peace, is to bring news of all good things; for, all good things are, in peace. Bona, is the true gloss or exposition of peace. Rom. 10. 15.

* Quàm bonum, you know: And, quàm jucundum, too: But good and pleasant; and pleasant, not only, as Aarons ointment (which was only pleasant:) but, as Hermon dew, which brings profit with it. Abundantia pacis (saith the Psalm) peace, and plenty go together. 2 Pleasant. * Psal. 133. 1. 3 Profitable. Psal. 72. 7.

And yet, how much it is to be wished, this sheweth, Pacem te poscimus omnes: All wish it: Angels wish it (Heaven, to Earth) Pax in terris: And Men wish it (Earth, to Heaven) Pax in cœlis. God wisheth it. 4 Wished by all.

Luke 2 14. 2 Cor. 13. 11. Phil. 4. 7. Luk. 4. 34.

wisheth it: most kindly for him; Deus pacis, pacem Dei; the God of peace, the peace of God. Yea, the enemy of all peace wisheth it: for, he complains, Venisti nos inquietare, are ye come to trouble us? So he would not be troubled, that troubles all; but, set altogether by the eares, and sit quiet himself.

But it is much for the honour of Peace, that cùm bellum geritur, pax quæritur. Even military persons, with sword in one hand, and fire in the other, give this for their Embleme, Sic quærimus pacem. Thus with sword and fire, seek we peace. As, seek it, at last, they must; we must, all. Best, Primâ Sabbati: but, Serò, sooner or later, come to it we must: If it be not the first, it must be our last.

2. And by CHRIST, often. Joh. 14. 27. Joh. 16. 23. Luk. 2. 14. Chap. 14. 28. Chap. 17. 21. Luk. 19. 42.

But, if there were nothing else, this only were enough; and, though there be many, this chiefly doth shew it: That our Saviour Christ, so often, so divers wayes, so earnestly wisheth it. Going, He did it, Pacem meam do vobis: And now coming, He doth it. Sitting, He did it (Chap. 16.) and now standing. Living, when He was born, Pax in terris, Xenium Christi, it was Christs New-years-Gift: Dying, when He was to suffer, Pacem meam, relinquo vobis, it was Legatum Christi, Christs Legacy. And now (here) rising again, it is His wish, still. To shew, not only the good of this life, but of the next, to be in peace. Prayed for it (Chap. 17.) Payed for it (Chap. 18.) wept for it, O if thou hadst known the things that pertain to thy peace! Wept for it, and bled for it: therefore, immediately (the very next words) he shewed them his hands and his side: As much to say; See, what I have suffered, to procure your peace: Your peace cost me this: Pax vobis, cost Crux mihi; See, you hold it dear. Now (sure) if there were any one thing better then other, those hands would not have with-held it, and that heart would wish it. And, Peace it doth wish: therefore nothing more to be wished. Complete it is, Votum pacis, Summa votorum.

Joh. 1 12.

There need no other sign be given, but that, of the Prophet Jonas; that Christ wished his wish: So the tempest may cease, and peace (as a calm) ensue, spare me not, take me, cast me into the Sea; make me a Peace-offering and kill me. This, is enough to shew, it is to be wished; to make it precious in our eyes. For, we undervalue it, at too low a rate, when (that, which cost so dear) for every trifling ceremonie, we are ready to loose it. Our faint perswasion in this point, is the cause, we are faint in all the rest.

Well, though this be this good; yet good it self is not good, unless it be in season, come fitly. Doth this so? Every way fitly. 1. For the Persons: 2. For the Place: 3. And for the Time.

1. And now fitly for the Persons. 1 By whom; CHRIST. Eph. 2. 14. 2 To whom. The Disciples.

The Persons: both 1. Christ by whom; and 2. they, to whom it is wished. 1. Christ, by whom: Decet largitorem pacis hac salutatio (saith Cyril) It is meet, for Him, to give peace, that made peace: Nay, Ipse est Pax nostra (saith the Apostle); and, for peace, what fitter salutation, than peace?

2. They, to whom: for, they needed it: with God, they had no peace, whom they had provoked: Nor peace with men; not with the Jews about them: Nor peace with themselves, for they were in fear, and night-fear, which is the worst of all others. Fit for them; and they, for it: for, together they were, and so, not unfit to entertain it.

2. For the Place.

And, with the place, it suiteth well. For, they were shut up, as men environed and beleagured with their enemies: Conclusi & derelicti, shut up and forsaken: And to such, peace is ever welcome.

3. For the Time.

And for the time, seasonable. For after a falling out, peace is so: And, after a victory, peace is so. Fit therefore, for this day, the day of the Resurrection: for, till then, it was not in kind: The great battel was not fought: The last enemy (death) was not overcome. Never, till now: but, now the last enemy is conquered, now it is in season.

1 Cor. 15. 26.

4. For the thing it selfe; Peace a resurrection. Gen. 45. 27.

And, for the thing it self, peace, is a kind of Resurrection. When Christ was risen, his Disciples were dead. Those dead affections, of sorrow and fear, when they seize throughly upon men, what are they, but Mors ante mortem? Upon good news of Joseph, Jacob is said to revive: as if, before, he had been given for dead. It was their case, here. The house was to them, as their grave; and the door as the grave-stone; and they buried in fear: when they saw him, in the next verse, and were thus saluted by him, they gate hope, were glad (that is) revived again. For, if those were the pangs of death, peace (after a sort) is a resurrection: and so, a fit wish for the time.

Never kindly till then.

And, to say truth, peace is never kindly, till then. They define felicity shortly; to be nothing else but Pax desiderii. For, give the desire perfect peace, and no more needs, to make us happy. Desire hath no rest; and will let us have none, till it have what it would; and, till the Resurrection, that will not be.

Chap. 16. 33. Psal. 119. 165.

1. Pax & pressura, our Saviour opposeth (Chap. 16.) If we be pinched with any want, desire hath no peace. 2. Let us want nothing (if it were possible) No peace, yet: Pax & scandalum (the Psalmist opposeth:) When we have what we would, somewhat cometh to us, we would not; somewhat thwarts us: Till non est eis scandalum, till that be had away, desire hath no peace. 3. Let that be had away, yet a new war there cometh. Peace and fear, are (here) opposed. We are well: neither pressura, nor scandalum: but we fear tolletur à vobis, that it will not hold, or we shall not hold. The last enemy will not let us be quiet. Till he be overcome, our desire hath no perfect peace. That will not be till the Resurrection. But, then, it is Pax plena, pura, perpetua: full, without want; pure, without mixture of offensive matter; and perpetual, without all fear of forgoing, of tolletur à vobis. And that is pax desiderii; and that, is perfect felicity: The state of the Resurrection; and the wish of the Resurrection-day.

Thus

Thus (we see) good it is: and, fit it is. It remains, we see, What it is; What, peace. When we speak of peace, the nature of the word leadeth us, to ask, With whom? And they be diverse. But, as diverse as they be, it must be understood of all; though, of some one, more especially than the rest. 2. What Peace.

There is a peace above us in heaven, with God: that first. They were wrong, here their fear ran all upon the Jews: It should have looked higher. The Jews they kept out, with shutting their doors: Against God, no door can be shut. First, peace with Him: and, with Him, thay have peace, to whom Christ saith Pax vobis. 1. Peace with God.

There is another peace, within us, in sinu, with our heart. For between our spirit and our flesh, there is in manner of a War: The lusts of the flesh, even Militare, wage War (saith St. Peter) against the soul: And, where there is a war, there is a peace, too. This is peace with fear, here. Which war is sometime so fearfull, as men, to rid themselves of it, rid themselves of life and all; Conclude a peace there. This, followeth of the first: If all be well above, all is well within. 2. With our own hearts. 1 Pet. 2. 11.

There is a Peace without us, in earth, with men, with all men: The Apostle warrants it; peace with the Jews here and all. I will never fear, to make civil peace, a part of Christs wish; nor, of his Beati Pacifici, neither. He will be no worse at Easter, than at Christ-mass, He was: at this, His second; than, at that, His first birth. Then, Janus was shut, and peace over all the world. Orbem pacatum was ever a clause in the prayers of the Primitive Church; that the World might be quiet. 3. With all men. Mat. 5. 9. Tertul. Apolog. pacatum

Yet is not this the peace of Christs principal intendment; but, their peace, to whom Christ spake: Pax Discipulorum; Pax vobis, inter vos: peace among them, or between themselves. It was the ointment on Aarons head: Aaron, that had the care of the Church. It was the dew that fell upon Sion: Sion, the place, where the Temple stood. The peace of Jerusalem; that it may be once, as a City at unity within it self. The primitive peace; that the multitude of Believers may be of one heart and one mind. All the rest depend upon our peace with God; and, our peace with Him, upon this: (a) Pacem habete inter vos, and Deus pacis erit vobiscum. The peace of Jerusalem; (b) they shall prosper that love it (saith David) (c) Joy shall be to them that counsel it (saith Salomon) (d) Blessed shall they be that make it (saith Christ.) How great a reward should he find in Heaven; how glorious a name should he leave on earth, that could bring this to pass! 4. Among themselves. Psal. 133. 2. Psal. 122. 3. Act. 4. 32. a Mar. 9. 50. 1 thil 4. 9. b Psal. 122. 6. c Prov. 12. 20. d Mar. 5. 9.

This, is Christs wish: And what is become of it? If we look upon the Christian world, we see it not; it is gone, as if Christ had never wished it. Between Jehu and Jeroboam, Salomons seed went to wrack. Jehu, his proceedings (like his Chariot wheels) headlong and violent. But Jehu, is but a brunt; too violent, to last long. Jeroboam is more dangerous: who makes it his wisdome, to keep up a Schisme, in religion; they shall sway both parts more easily. God forbid, we should ever think Jeroboam wiser than Salomon. If peace were not a wise thing, the Wisest mans name should not have been Salomon. A greater than Salomon would never have said, Habete sal em & pacem; If you have any salt, you will have peace. Sure, when the Disciples lost their peace, they lost their wisdom: their wisdom, and their strength both. They were stronger by congregatis, than by clausis foribus; more safe, by their being together, than any door could make them. 1. Peace, Christs wish. Mat. 12. 42. Mar. 9. 50.

It is, as Christ told us (Luke 10. where, He prescribes this form of salutation) it speeds, or it misses, there after, as it meets with the Son of peace: Speeds, if it find Him; if not, comes back again, and takes no place. Luke 10. 5, 6.

Well, though it do not, we must still hold us to Christs wish: and, when all fails, still there must be Votum pacis in corde; though enmity in the act, yet peace in the heart still. Still it must hold, Amicus, ut non alter; Inimicus, ut non idem: friends, as if never otherwise; enemies, as if not ever so. Quasi torrens, bellum: war, like a land-flood, that will be dry again; Quasi fluvius, pax; peace, as a river, never dry, but to run still and ever.

But yet, many times we ask, and have not, because we ask not aright (saith Saint James:) We know not the things, that belong to our peace; we erre in the order, manner, five, place, or time. Jam. 4. 3.

The Order: which helpeth much: first is is; first Primum & ante omnia; Caput fidei; the prime of His wishes. No sooner born, but Pax in terris: No sooner risen, but Pax vobis: Apertio labiorum, the very opening of his lips was, with these words: The first words: at the first meeting: On the very first day. It is a sign, it is so in His heart. That which most grieveth us, we first complain of: and that which most affecteth us, ever soonest speak of. This, is the first error. That which was first with Christ, is last with Christians: and, I would it were so (last:) for, then, it were some: Now, scarce any at all, as it seemeth. 1. The order of it: first wished.

In the Manner: for, first is but first, that is but once. This, is first and second. Here, He saith it: and, within a verse, He is at it again. Nay, first, second, and third: 1. in this, 2. the XXI, and 3. XXVI. verses: As if (like Actio, in Rhetoricke) all in all. 2. The Manner: thrice wished.

All Christs vowes are to be esteemed; especially, His solemn vowes: And His speeches; chiefly, those He goeth over and over again. That which, by Him, is double and treble said, would not by us, be singly regarded. He would have it better marked: therefore he speaketh it the second time. He would have it yet sink deeper; therefore, the third also. We faulty, in the manner. Once, we do it (it may be:) but upon any repulse, we give over: if it come not at first, we go not to it Secundo & tertio, repetitis vicibus. We must not leave at once, that Christ did so oft.

The

2. His Site in wishing it. Stetit. Exod. 12. 11.

The second errour is; we ask it sitting (I fear;) and Christ stood: His standing imports something. Standing is the site of them, that are ready to go about a matter, as they, to take their journey, in the XII. of Exodus, That Site, is the Site of them, that wish for peace: Oportet stantem optare. A Sedentary desire (it may be) we have; but, loth to leave our cushion: We would, it were well; but not willing, to disease our selves. Utinam hoc esset laborare, said he, that lay along and stretched himself. So say we: peace we would; but standing is painfull. Our wish hath lips, but no legs.

Isa. 52. 7. Rom. 10. 15. * Psal. 34. 14.

But, it could not be said: Beautifull are the feet of them that bring peace, if the feet had nothing to do, in this business. With sitting and wishing, it will not be had. * Peace will hide it self; it must be sought out: It will flye away, it must be pursued. This then, is a point, wherein, we are to conform our selves to Christ: as well to use our legs, as to open our lips for it. To stand, is Situs ventis: to hold up the hands, Habitus orantis. The meaning of which ceremony, of lifting up the hands with prayer, is, Ut, pro quo quis orat, pro eo laboret, what we pray for, we should labour for: what we wish for, stand for. We see, Christ sheweth His hands and His feet; to shew, what must be done with both, for it. If we should be put to do the like, I doubt, our wish hath never a good leg to stand on.

3. His place: In medio. Luk. 1. 79.

To stand then: But, to stand, in a certain place. Every where to stand; will not serve the turn. Stetit in medio, that standing place is assigned for it, thus guiding our feet into the way of peace. And, the Place, is material, for peace. All bodies natural never leave moving, are never quiet, till they recover their proper places; and, there they find peace. The midst is Christs place, by nature: He is the second Person in divinis; and so the middle-most of the other two. And on earth, follow Him (if you will) you shall not (lightly) find Him out of it. Not, according to the letter, speaking of the material place. At His birth, In medio animalium in the Stable. After (a Child) In medio Doctorum, in the Temple. After (a man) Medius vestrum stetit (saith John Baptist) in the midst of the people; saith He of Himself, Ecce ego in medio vestri, in the midst of his Apostles. At His death, it fell to His turn likewise, that place; even then He was in the midst. And now (rising) there He is (we see.) They, in the midst of the Jews: and He, in the midst of them. After this in Patmos, S. John saw Him in Heaven, in the midst of the Throne: in earth; walking in the midst of the Candlesticks. And at the last day, He shall be in the midst, too, of the Sheep on His right hand, and the Goats on His left. All which shew, the place and He, sort very well.

By nature. Luk. 2. 7. 46. Joh. 1. 26. Luk. 22. 27. 23. 33 Apoc. 7. 17. 1. 13. Mat. 25. 33.

By Office: as Mediator. 1 Tim. 2. 5.

But were it not natural for Him, as the case standeth, there, He is to stand, being to give peace. No place so fit, for that purpose: None, so kindly, as it. His Office being, to be a Mediatour, Medius between God and man, where should a Mediatour stand, but in Medio?

The reason of it.

Besides, the two qualities of good being to be Diffusivum and Unitivum; that, is the fittest place, for both. To distribute, best done, from the center. To unite, likewise sooneſt meet, there. The place it self hath a vertue specially to unite: which is never done but by some middle thing. If we will conclude, we must have a medius terminus: Else, we shall never get Majus and Minus extremum to come together. Nor in things natural; either combine two elements disagreeing in both qualities, without a middle symbolizing with both: Nor flesh and bone, without a cartilage between both. As for things moral; there, the middle is all in all. No vertue without it. In Justice; encline the ballance; one way or other, the even poize is lost: Et, opus Justitiæ, pax: Peace is the very work of Justice. And the way, to peace, is the mid way: neither to the right hand, too much; nor, to the left hand, too little. In a word; all analogy, symmetry, harmony, in the world, goeth by it.

It commeth all to this: the manner of the Place doth teach us, what manner of Affection is to be in them, that wish for, or stand for peace. The place is indifferent, equally distant, alike neer, to all. There, pitch the Arke; that, is the place for it, Indifferency in carriage, preserveth peace: By foregoing that, and leaning to extremities, it is lost. Thither we must get again, and there stand, if ever we shall recover it. Descessit à medio lost it: Stetit in medio must restore it.

Therefore when you hear men talk of peace, mark whether they stand where they should. If with the Pharisee, to the corners, either by partiality one way, or prejudice, another; no good will be done. When God will have it brought to pass, such minds He will give unto them; and make them meet, to wish it, seek it, and find it.

4. The time: In illo die.

A little (now) of the time. This was Christ's wish, at this time: And Christ never speaks out of season. Therefore, a special interest hath this Feast, in it. It is Votum Paschale, and this is Festum Pacis.

1 Cor. 11. 16.

And sure, Habemus talem consuetudinem, & Ecclesiæ Dei: Such a custome we have, and so, the Church of God hath used it; to take these words of Christ, in the nature of an Edict for pacification, ever at this time. That, whatsoever become of it, all the year beside, this time should be kept a time of peace; we should seek it, and offer it: seek it, of God; and offer it, each to other,

There hath not, these sixteen hundred years, this day passed, without a Peace-offering. And, the Law of a Peace-offering is; he, that offers it, must take his part of it; eat of it, or it doth him no good. This day therefore, the Church never fails, but sets forth her Peace-offering: the Body, whose hands were here shewed: and, the Side, whence issued Sanguis crucis, the blood that pacifieth all things in earth and heaven: that we, in and by it, may this day, renew the Covenant of our peace. Then can it not be, but a great grief, to a Christian heart, to see many, this day, give Christs peace the hearing, and, there is all; hear it, and then turn their backs on it; every man go his way, and forsake his peace: in stead of seeking it, shun it; and, of pursuing, turn away from it.

Col. 1. 20.

We

We have not ſo learned Chriſt: S. Paul hath not ſo taught us. His Rule it is: Is Chriſt our Paſſover offered for us (as, now, He was?) Epulemur itaque (That, is his Concluſion) Let us then keep a Feaſt, a Feaſt of ſweet bread, without any ſower leven, that is, of Peace without any malice. Ephel. 4. 20. 1 Cor. 5. 7, 8.

So to do: and even then (this day) when we have the Peace-offering in our hands, then, then to remember, alwayes (but then, ſpecially) to joyn with Chriſt, in his wiſh; to put into our hearts, and the hearts of all, that profeſs His name (theirs ſpecially, that are of all others moſt likely to effect it) that Chriſt may have His wiſh, and there may be peace through the Chriſtian World: That we may once all partake together, of one Peace-offering; and with one mouth, and one mind, glorifie God, the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

A SER

We have not to learn of Christ: S. Paul hath not to taught us. His Rule is in: Is Christ our Passover offered for us (as, now, He was?) Expedient itaque (That, is his Conclusion) Let us then keep a Feast, a Feast of pure bread, without any sower leven, that is, of Peace without any malice.

So to do: and even then (this day) when we have the Peace-offering in our hands, then, to remember, always (but then, specially) to join with Christ, in his will; to put into our hearts, and the hearts of all, that profess His name (theirs specially, that are of all others most likely to effect it) that Christ may have His will, and there may be peace through the Christian world: That we may once all partake together, of one Peace-offering; and with one mouth, and one mind, glorifie God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Preached before the

KINGS MAJESTY AT WHITE-HALL,

On the Eighth of April, being Easter-Day.

An. Dom. 1610.

JOB Chap. XIX.

Quis mihi tribuat, ut ſcribantur, &c.

Ver. 23. Oh that my words were now written! Oh that they were written even in a book,

24. And graven with an iron pen, in lead, or in ſtone for ever!

25. For I am ſure, that my Redeemer liveth, and he ſhall ſtand the laſt on the earth (or, and I ſhall riſe again in the laſt day from the earth.)

26. And though, * after my skin worms deſtroy this body: I ſhall ſee GOD in my fleſh.

27. Whom I my ſelf ſhall ſee, and mine eyes ſhall behold, and none other for me, though my reins are conſumed within me. (Or, and this hope is laid up in my boſome.)

* Or, And I ſhal be compaſſed again wth my skin.

THis day calleth us, to ſay ſomewhat of Chriſts Reſurrection. To find Chriſts Reſurrection, in the New Teſtament, is no mattery: out of many places, you have thence heard of it heretofore, many times; and many times may, hereafter, out of many places moe. If it be but for variety, it will do well, not to dwell ſtill on the New; but, otherwhiles to ſee, if we can find it, in the Old. It will give us good ſatisfaction to ſee Jeſus Chriſt to day, and yeſterday, the ſame: yeſterday, to them, to day, to us. To read Reſurget in Job, He ſhall riſe; as we read Reſurrexit, in John, He is riſen: To ſee their Creed, and ours differ but in tenſe, ſhall riſe, and is riſen: Shall and is: but, the Redeemer all one, in both. Much adoe is made by your Antiquaries, if an old ſtone be digged up with any dim letter on it. In this Text, I find mention of a ſtone to be graven; ſo that, I ſhall preſent you this day with an Antiquity; an old ſtone digged up in the land of Hus, as old as Jobs time, and that as old as Moſes; with a fair inſcription, the Characters of it yet legible, to prove the faith of this Feaſt, ſo ancient, that it began not with the Chriſtians, the Patriarchs had it as many hundred years before Chriſt, as we are after. This Text is a monument of it. And, it will be never the worſe welcome to us that are Gentiles, that it cometh from one that is a Gentile (as Job was) and not of Jacobs line. It is the ſtronger, for that Moſes and Job, the Jew and Gentile believed it: Moſes put it, in his ordinary prayer, (the nintieth Pſalm) as it were, his Pater noſter; and Job here, in his Creed.

Heb. 13. 8.

Pſal. 90. 9.

S. Hierome ſaith of Job: Nullum tam apertè poſt Chriſtum, quàm iſte hîc ante Chriſtum, de Reſurrectione loquitur Chriſti & ſuâ. No man, ever ſince Chriſt, did ſo clearly ſpeak of Chriſt's Reſurrection, and his own, as Job did here, before Chriſt: That his Redeemer liveth, and ſhall riſe again. Which is as much to ſay as, He is the reſurrection and the life: (S. John could ſay no more.) It is his hope: He hath by it regenerate to a lively hope: (S. Peter could ſay no more.) Enters into ſuch particulars, this fleſh, and theſe eyes: (S. Paul could do no more.) There is not in all the Old; nay there is not in all the New, a more pregnant direct place.

John 11.25. 1 Pet.1.3. 1 Cor.15.53.

There is then, in this monument of antiquity, a direct prophecie; or (if you will) a plain Creed, of the ſubſtance of this Feaſt, of his Redeemers riſing, and of his hope to riſe by him; the one poſitive, the other illative. There is a pathetical Poeme ſet before it; and there is a cloſe or farewel, by way of Epiphonema, after it, no leſs pathetical.

The ſumme and Diviſion.

The two firſt verſes, we may well call the Paraſceue, of preparation to the Feaſt of Paſſover: which ſerve to ſtir up our regard, as to a Myſtery or matter of great moment; worthy not onely to be written or inrolled in a book, but to be cut in ſtone; a monument to be made of it, ad perpetuam rei memoriam, Oh that, &c.

I.

II. Then followeth (in the third) his Redeemer and his riſing; his paſſing over from death to life: I know, &c. and out of it (in the laſt) by way of inference, his own: Et quòd ego, &c. ſet down with words ſo clear, and ſo full of caution, as, in the Epiſtle to the Corinthians, it is not fuller expreſſed.

III. Upon theſe two, there be two Acts here ſet down, 1. Scio, and 2. Spero. He begins with Scio, for the truth: and ends with Hæc mihi ſpes, for the comfort, or uſe of this knowledge. Graven, that it may be known: known, that it may be our hope. His it was, and ours it muſt be: repoſita, with him; reponenda, with us, to be lodged and laid up in our boſomes, againſt we be laid into the boſome of the earth. Indeed, [ſculpſit in lapide] is nothing without [reponi in ſinu;] Graving in ſtone will do no good, without laying it up in the boſome.

I. The Paraſceue or preparation. Jobs wiſh.

JOB, fearing (it ſhould ſeem) if he had but barely propounded the point following, it would have been but ſlenderly regarded; doth enforce himſelf, to ſet it down with ſome ſolemnity, to make the deeper impreſſion, (which I call the Paraſceue:) that we might not reckon of it, as a light holy-day; but as a high Feaſt. He would have the Scio of it ſtamped in ſtone, as worthy everlaſting remembrance; and the Spero of it carefully laid up, as worthy precious accompt. It is as much as S. Paul had ſaid: It is a faithfull ſaying, and by all means worthy to be received: For the ſcio, faithfull; for the ſpero, worthy all receiving: For the truth, to be graven in marble; for the comfort, to be lodged in the boſome.

1 Tim.1.15. 4.9.

For the firſt, thus he proceedeth. He was dying now; and ſeeing he muſt die, one thing he had, he would not have die with him: It was that, when he had loſt all, he kept in his boſome ſtill; when all comforters, and comforts forſook him, and (as he ſaith) his Phyſitians grew of no value, he found comfort in. This, he thought, it was pity ſhould periſh: but, though he die, it live. It was certain words; and, becauſe they had been cordial to him (had been, to him; and might be to others) he deſires they might remain to memory; and becauſe writing ſerves to that end, they might be written.

1. That it were written. Chap 6.26.

Which his wiſh of writing conſiſts of three degrees: is as it were three wiſhes in one.

1. They be words; and becauſe words be but wind (his own Proverb) that they might not blow away with the wind, he wiſheth they were written: Quis mihi tribuat, Who will help him to a Clerk, to ſet them down in writing?

2. Written in a book.

2. But then he bethinks himſelf better: they were no common ordinary matter, therefore not to be committed to common ordinary writing. So, they might be rent or loſt: they be more worth than ſo. Therefore now ſecondly, he mends his wiſh: he would not have them to be barely written, but regiſtred in a book, enrolled upon record, as publike inſtruments, mens deeds, judicial proceeding; or (as the very word gives it) Acts of Parliament, or whatſoever is moſt authentical.

3. Written in ſtone, with a pen of iron for ever.

And yet, upon further advice, he calls back, that too, by a third wiſh. If they were upon record, Records will laſt long, yet, even them, time will injure. No ink, no parchment, but will decay with time. Now, theſe he would have laſt for ever: therefore he gives over his Scribe, and in ſtead of him wiſheth for a Graver: No paper, or parchment will ſerve; it muſt be ſtone; and the hardeſt ſtone, the rock. For this paper he muſt have a pen of iron: that he wiſheth too. But, here is mention of lead: what is to be done with that? If we believe the Hebrews (that beſt knew the faſhion of their Countrey-Monuments,) when it is graven, the graving may be choaked with ſoil, and the edges of the letters, being rough, and uneven, may be worn in, or broken, and ſo defaced; to provide for that, the graving he would have filled with lead, that ſo it might keep ſmooth and even, from defacing; and full, from choaking up. That it be לָעַד (the laſt word) that is, laſt for ever, to the laſt Ages and Generations to come, never to be worn, but to hold for ever. If it were the beſt in the world, more cannot be done, or wiſhed, then this: and this he wiſhed, and not coldly, but earneſtly. Oh that it were, would God it were! Quis mihi tribuat? Who will do ſo much? Who? as if he were earneſt begging of God and man to have it done.

Now

Now in the name of God, what may this be, that all this work is kept about? It is the work of this day. And why would not a book serve for this? Why no remedy but it must be in stone? There want not reasons: Let me touch some few. Moses and Job are holden to have lived at one time. Moses Law was graven in stone, we know. This of Job (here) is Gospel, the substance, the chief Article of it. No reason, the Law, in tables of stone; and the Gospel in sheets of paper. Good reason, Job, as zealous for the Gospel, as Moses, for the Law. If that wrought in stone, this no less; as firm and durable, as it, every way. And the same reason is for the iron pen. As the stone for the Law, so the pen for the Prophets. If, in the Prophet, mens sins be written with a pen of iron; meet, the discharge should be written no less deep, with as hard a pen, as it; that so the Characters of one, may match the other at each point.

Why, In stone? &c. 1 Reason. Exod. 34. 1. 1 Cor. 15. 14. Jer. 17. 1.

This for Moses: now for our Redeemer. There it was meet, in de Petrâ, in petrâ: Petra autem Christus, Our Redeemer is a Rock: O Lord my Rock and my Redeemer, (saith David) or my Redeemer of the Rock, alluding to this of Job. Kindly it is, it should be wrought in the Rock, that is, of the Redeemer, who is the Rock. And so the resurrection, being a putting on incorruption, would not be written in corruptible stuff, but in that cometh nearest to incorruption, and is least of all subject to corrupt and decay; The words would be immortal, that treat of immortality.

2 Reason. 1 Cor. 10. 4. Psal. 19. 15. 1 Cor. 15. 54.

A third, in respect of those Works, that are usually wrought of stone, as Grave-stones, as Arches Triumphal. The Resurrection is mors mortis (saith Osee) O death I will be thy death: for the death of him that is the death of us all, here, is a grave-stone allowed, and an Epitaph graven on it. Here it is, and so doth Nazianzen call this Scripture, Deaths Epitaph. Either (if as Esay saith, Death by Christs rising be swallowed up in victory:) a trophee of this victory would remain; and that, as all victories, in a Pyramis of stone: and that Arch-wise on two pillars, 1 One for Christs; 2 One for our resurrection.

3 Reason. Hos. 13. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 54, 55. Esa. 25. 8. 1 Cor. 15. 54.

One more: That Job needeth this wish, in regard of those, that were to receive this doctrine. It will not well be written, there is such unbelief and hardness of heart, yea, even in the Disciples, and so generally in our nature; as, enough to do, to grave it in us: yet so necessary with all, as where it will not be written, he wishes it graven. Written, where it may; but graven, where it must. But written, or graven, one of them in us all.

4 Reason.

II.

This for Jobs wish. Shall we now pass to the third verse, and see what these words be, that no paper will serve, but stone; not pen, but iron; not inke, but lead? Great expectation is raised with this so stately an entry. The words be Jobs: his Scio, and his Spero, touching the two articles of this day, 1 His Redeemer, and His rising; 2 and the train of it, His own rising, and his seeing God. They begin with Scio, the pillar of this faith; and end with Hac mihi spes, the arch of his hope; ever, hope giving the assumption to faiths proposition.

The Object: Jobs Redeemer, and his resurrection.

Let's begin with the object of his knowledge. The first is news of a Redeemer. We owe this word to Job: he, the first, in the Bible, that ever named him so. Of the Creation, we read, in Moses: and God provided well for us, that we should no sooner hear of a Creator by Moses, but we should, of a Redeemer, by Job. For, though God by right of creation were (as saith Melchisedeck) owner of heaven and earth; yet the creature being subject to vanity, shewed they were gone, aliened from God. But this is good news, that seeing we were Gods, and not our own, he would not see that carried away that was his own, but would be content one should redeem it back.

1. Quod Redemptor. Gen. 14. 19. Rom. 8. 20.

But, it is news to hear, that Job is at his Redeemer; Job with all his innocency, with his so just, and holy life, as God himself bare witness unto it, as Satan himself could not except against it; yet he is not at Scio quod Judex; but Scio quod Redemptor: doth deprecari judicem; and, for all his vertues, a Redeemer will do well though; and he in the number of those that are glad to say Scio, to take notice of him.

Job 1. 8, 9. 2. 3, 4.

From which his Scio, his notice taking, we take a true estimate of Jobs estate. For, if he look after a Redeemer, then is he, either sold for a Servant, or carried away for a Captive: one of these. For, these two onely we read of; redeemed from Egypt the house of bondage: or redeemed from Babylon the land of their captivity. Saint Paul confesseth both by himself; Sold under sin, and led away captive under the law of sin. Job confesseth as much: Pescavi, quid faciam? sinned he had, and by committing of sin was become Servus peccati. Sold by himself, and made subject by sin; and sold by God, and made subject to corruption: from both which he needed a Redeemer. Whether servant, or captive, one or both, it falleth out well, that both states are redeemable; neither past redemption. Sinned: that he needs a Redeemer: Not so sinned, but a Redeemer will serve. God is willing (saith Elihu) to receive a reconciliation, to admit of a Redeemer: if we can get us one to lay down the price, there is hope, we may be restored, to see God again. A Redeemer will do it.

Rom. 7. 14, 23. Job 7. 20. 6. 20. Chap. 33. 24. 20. 34. 31.

Why then, Scio quòd, he knows of one, Good tidings, to all that need to know, there is one, presently in being. For then, Nunc dimittis, may Job say; he may depart in peace, die when he will, his Redeemer lives, who will never see that perish, he hath paid the price for; but, since he came to redeem that which was lost, will not suffer that to be lost which he hath redeemed.

2. Quod vivit.

This of his Redeemer, Now, what he believes of him. First, live he must: be a living, quick thing; not dead, or without life. Silver, Gold will not do it; our redemption is personal: not real, to give somewhat and save himself. But such a Redeemer, as must answer body for body, and life for life; give himself, for Job, and those he redeems: so is the nature of the word, so the condition of our redeeming. There is his Person.

Of what nature, out of the word Redeemer. Sure if a Redeemer, God. The Psalm deduceth at large: Man cannot redeem his brother, nor give an attonement unto God for him. It cost more to redeem soules: so that, he

His Nature: God. Psal. 49. 7, 8.

Psal. 49. 15. he must let that alone for ever. Then he tells us plainly; it is God shall redeem our souls from the hand of hell. Job saith the same in effect; In His Saints He found folly, and in His Angels pravitatem, some-Chap. 15. 15. 16. 25. 5. what awry. They (both) need a Redeemer, themselves. That, they want themselves, they cannot perform to others: And if neither Saint, nor Angel, then no Redeemer, but God.

And Man. Levit. 25. 25. Ruth 3. 12. On the other side, if a Redeemer, man He is to be, of necessity. So is the flat Law of Redemption of persons. He must be frater, or propinquus, a brother, or next of blood; else, not admitted to redeem a person. That He may be admitted then, He must be flesh of our flesh; and then He may. The very word גאל sheweth it, which doth as properly signifie, to be next of kin, as to redeem. Upon the point then, both He must be. Man cannot; God may not: But, God and Man both, may and can.

Deum in carne. But what stand we straining the word Redeemer, or the conditions of it, when we have both twain, his natures in formal terms, immediately in the verse following, videbo Deum in carne. There is God in plain terms; and his flesh is humane flesh; and that is man. I know in carne (there) may be construed two ways: But (I know) both ways well; and both ways it is taken, by the Fathers: 1. I in my flesh, shall see God: or, 2. I shall see Deum in carne, that is Deum incarnatum, God having taken flesh upon him. This latter way, I find, Saint Augustine taketh it: Videbo Deum in carne; quod, ad id tempus pertinet, cùm Christi Deitas habitu carnis induta est. I shall see God in my flesh: this pertains to the time, when the Godhead of Christ was clothed with the habit of flesh. And well both: For, one depends on the other; our seeing God in the flesh; upon God's being seen in our flesh. But, Deus, in carne, are the two natures.

quid rise gel. His Office. Now His office is Redeeming: how discharges He that? how brings He the work of our Redemption to pass? Many were his works concurring to it. Job singles out, and makes choise of one among them all, which is the chief of all, the accomplishment of all, and where he shewed Himself a compleat Redeemer. For then a Redeemer right, when he had brought his work to perfection: and that he did, when He rose again.

So I read, rise again; and not stand. It is well known, it is the proper word for rising, and not standing. The LXX. so turn it; not στήσεται, shall stand; but ἀναστήσεται, shall rise again. The Fathers so read it: Nec dum natus erat Dominus (saint Hierom) & Athleta Ecclesiæ Redemptorem suum videt à mortuis resurgentem, He was not yet born, and the Churches champion, Job, saw his Redeemer rising from the dead. Victurum me certâ fide credo, Liberâ voce profiteor, quia Redemptor meus resurget, qui iste impiorum manus accubuit: with assured faith I believe, and with free courage confess, that rise I shall, in as much as my Redeemer shall rise, who is to die by the hands of wicked men: (saith Gregory, upon these very words.)

Rise again then shall our Redeemer from the dead. There he was then, or he could not rise thence How came he there? So that, here is his death implied evidently, that brought him thither. Rise he cannot, except first he fall: Fall therefore He must, and be laid up in the earth, before he can rise from thence again. Specially seeing we find him first alive (in the fore-part of the verse;) and then rise again (in the latter.) For how can that be, unless death come between?

Yea, the Fathers go further: and from the words [carne meâ] set down the very state of his death. In my flesh, that is (say they) such flesh as mine, rent and torn. As (to say true) between Christ's flesh when Pilate shewed him, with Ecce homo, and Job's, no great odds: Unum in toto corpore vulnus: One resembled somewhat the other; scarce any skin left on him, no more then Job: postquam pellem meam contriverunt, might Christ as truly say. Joh 19. 1.

In this case, he saw him; brought to the dust: and thence he seeth him rising again: and so now, it is Easter-day with Job. For, this Text, this day, was fulfilled. Then, He rose again; and rising, shewed Himself a perfect Redeemer. Then: for, till then, though the price were paid, nothing was seen to come back. Now, His soul was not left in Hell; and so that came back: Nor His flesh to see corruption; and so that came back. And, having thus with a mighty hand redeemed and raised Himself, is able to do as much for us. Quam in Se ostendit, & in me facturus est (saith Gregory) Exemplo hîc monstravit, quod promisit in præmio: What he shewed in himself, he will perform in us; and what we see now in this example, then we shall feel in our own reward. Psal. 16. 10. Act. 1. 31. 13. 35.

But, thus have we, in this verse comprised, his Person, his two Natures, God-head and Man-hood; his Office, his Death, and his Resurrection, and his Second coming: (for, at his first, Job saw him not, as Simeon; but, at his second, shall.) What would we more? With a little help one might make up a full Creed.

Job's own resurrection. Very well then, on he goeth, and out of this [Scio quòd Redemptor] he inferreth [Scio quòd ego;] arguing, from his Redeemer to himself. Eâdem catenâ revincta est Christi resurrectio, & nostra; One chain they are linked with, his and ours: you cannot stir one end, but the other moveth with it. The sinews of which reason are in this; that the Redeemer doth but represent the person of the redeemed. For, a Redeemer is res propter alium; all he doth, is for another: Lives not, dies not, rises not to, or for himself; but to, or for others: him or them, he undertakes for. His life, death, resurrection, theirs; and the consequence (so) good: Scio quòd ille, & quod ego. So there is no errour in reading as we do, our Office of the dead, I shall rise again at the last. Though it be the third person in the Text, the first is as infallibly deduced by consequence, as if it were there expressly set down; as sure as he shall rise, so sure he shall raise: for, to that, is he a Redeemer.

The Benefit. We see the coherence; let us see the Benefit: which standeth of these four points. First, He shall see God: Secondly, See him in his flesh, and with his eyes: Thirdly, in the same flesh, and with the same eyes

eyes and no other: Fourthly, and he shall see Him, sibi, for his own good and benefit: and all this, non obstante the case, he was in, which gave but small likelihood of it.

The first and main benefit, his Redeemer will raise him to, is to see God. That, he lost, when he became alienes: that, he recovers, being redeemed. Here begins all misery, to be cast out of His presence: here, all happiness, to be restored to the light of His countenance. Visio Dei, all along the Scripture, is made our chief good; and our felicity still set forth, under that term. In thy presence is the fulness of joy, (saith the Psalm:) Ostende nobis Patrem & sufficit, and we will never desire more. A conjecture we may have, of the glory of this sight, from Moses: he saw Him; and not his face neither; and that but a glimpse, and as he passed by; yet got he so glorious a brightness in his countenance, he was fain to be veiled; no eye could indure to behold him. And, a like conjecture of the joy, by the transfiguration: they did but look up at it, they desired never to be any where but there; never to see any sight but that: so were they ravished with the beholding of it.

Videbo Deum. 1. I shall see GOD. Psal. 16. 11. Joh. 14 8. Exod. 33. 22, 23. Matth. 17. 2.

See God: and so he may in spirit, as do the souls of the righteous departed: it skils not for the flesh. Yes: I see him, in the flesh. That, as proper to this Text, and this day, which offers more grace. This day, Christ rose in the flesh, and this Text is, We shall see Him in the flesh. It is meet, the flesh partake the redemption wrought in the flesh; and He be seen of flesh, that was seen in the flesh. He will do it for the flesh; it is (now) his nature, no less then the Godhead: He will not forget it, we may be sure. It were hard the Redeemer should be in the flesh, and the flesh never the better for it.

2. Videbo in Carne. See him in my flesh.

For, the soul is but half; though the better half, yet but half; and the redeeming it, is but a half redemption; and if but half, then unperfect. And our Redeemer is God, and Gods works are all perfect: if he redeem, he doth it not by halves. His redemption is a compleat redemption, certainly. But, so it is not, except he redeem the whole man, Soul, flesh and all: his soul from hell, his flesh from the grave, both, to see God. His redemption is unperfect, till it extend so far. Therefore, at his coming again, they are willed to lift up their heads, their redemption is at hand, their full redemption; then full, when both soul and body shall enjoy the presence of God.

1. Reason. Luke 21. 28.

And, what we say of Gods work, the same we say of the souls desire: It is not full neither, without this. Every man, yea, the Saints, Saint Paul, by name, professeth all our desire, Nolimus expoliari, sed supervestiri, we would not be stripped of this flesh, but be cloathed with glory immortal, upon soul and flesh both: which desire, being both natural, and having with it the concurrence of Gods Spirit, cannot finally be disappointed.

2. Reason. 2 Cor. 5. 4.

I add further, that it is agreeable, not onely to the perfection of his work; but even to his justice, that Jobs flesh should be admitted, upon the Septuagints reason, in the forepart of the verse, τὰ ἀναπλήν ταῦτα, that it hath gone through, joyned in the good, indured all the evil, as well as the soul. For God is not unrighteous, to deprive the labourer of his hire; but, with him, it is a righteous thing, to reward them joyntly, that have joyntly done service; and not sever them in the reward, that in the labour were not severed. But, the flesh hath done her part, either in good or evil; her members have been members, either ways. In the good, the flesh hath kneeled, prayed, watched, fasted, wasted and wearied it self, to and for God: In evil, it hath done, I need not tell you what; and that, to and for sin. Therefore, even justice would, they should share in the reward of the good; and in the evil, take like part of the punishment. This may serve for the flesh.

3. Reason. Heb. 6. 10. Rom. 6. 13.

And sure, the very same may be said, and is no less strong for the third degree: as, for the flesh, and the eyes; so that the same flesh should participate, and the same eyes, and no other for them. No justice, one flesh should labour, and another reap that, it never laboured for. What comfort can it be for the poor body, to abridge it self of much pleasure, and to devour much tediousness, and many afflictions; and another strange body shall step up, come between, and carry away the reward? Nay; if these eyes of Jobs, have dropped many a tear, it is reason the tears be wiped from them, not from another pair of new-made eyes. If they have restrained themselves, even, by covenant, from straying after objects of lust; it is meet, they be rewarded with the view of a better object.

3. In carne mea, &c. In my own flesh, and with the same eyes. Chap. 16. 20. Chap. 31. 2.

But, to say true: so should there be no resurrection indeed; a rising up, rather, of a new, than a rising again of the old. Job should not rise again, this Job; but, another new Job, in his place, and stead. Therefore is this point ever most stood on, of the rest. S. Paul: not a corruptible, or a mortal, at large; but Hoc, this corruptible, this mortal. Yea, our Saviour himself, solvite Templum hoc, this very Temple: and to shew, it was that very one indeed, it pleased him, to retain the print, both of the nails and spear. And Job most plain of all, using not onely the word His, as it were pointing to it with his finger: positivè; but by adding, this, and no other, exclusivè too, to express it the more fully above exception.

1 Cor. 15. 53. John 2. 19.

But now, these all, 1 seeing God, and 2 in the flesh, and 3 in the same flesh, are all as good as nothing, without the fourth. Videbo mihi, a little word, but not to be little regarded. In the translation, it is left out sometimes, never in the treaty. To see him for our good; else, all the rest is little worth. For, all shall see him, and in the flesh, and in the same flesh; but all, not sibi; but many, contra se: not to their good, all; but many to their utter destruction.

4. Videbo mihi. I my self shall, &c.

This very word is it, which draweth the Diameter, between the resurrection of life, and the resurrection of condemnation; the right hand, and the left; the sheep, and the goats: They that see him sibi; to them, Esay: Arise and sing. They that, contra se; of them, Saint John: Videbunt & plangent: see they shall and mourn. Those shall flie, as Eagles, with all speed to the body: These other draw back, and shrink into their graves; creep into the clifts and holes, to avoid the sight; cry to the hills, to fall upon them, and hide them from that sight. One shall rapi in occursum, be caught up to meet: the other shall converti retrorsum, be tumbled backward into hell, with all the people that forget God. So that this word is all in all: which God after expounds, Videbit faciem meam in jubilo, with joy and jubilee, shall he behold my face;

Esay 26. 19. Apoc. 1. 7. Luke 17. 37. 23. 30. 1 Thes. 4. 17. Psalm 9. 17. Chap. 33. 26.

as a Redeemer, not as a revenger: and, as it followeth, with hope (and not with fear) in his bosome.

And the very next point was it, that revived him; and in very deed, the tenor of his speech, so often iterating the same thing, and dwelling so upon it, sheweth as much. Once had been enough; I shall see God: He comes over it again, and again; as if he felt some special comfort even by speaking it. Three several times he repeats, the seeing; and, three other, his person I, and I my self, and I and none other but I: And as if he were not enough, he reckons up three parts, his skin, flesh, and eyes; as if being once in, he could not tell how to get out. Blame him not: it seems he felt some ease of his pains; at least forgat them, all the while, he was but talking. It did so ravish him, having begun, he knew not how to make an end.

III:

The two Acts, Scio.

His Knowledge.

Thus much for the object. Now to his Scio, his knowledge first; and then his Spero, his hope after. For his knowledge: there be four things, I would note out of four words. 1 His certainty, out of Scio: 2 His propriety, out of meus: 3 His patient waiting, out of tandem: 4 and his valour or constancy, in non obstante.

1.

His certainty: Scio.

Scio, his certainty: That he did not imagine or conceive, it might be; but knew it for certain, even for a principle. Quis scit, Who knows (saith one, *Eccles.*3. 21.) Who knoweth, whether men die as beasts? Quis scit? Scio: Who knows? I know (saith Job) Putásne, (saith he, *Chap.*14.) Think you, one that is dead may rise again? Think? I know it (saith Job.) It was res facta, even this day, to his Disciples. It was res certa, to him, many hundred years before: It is much to the praise of his faith: so much was not found, no not in Israel. And we shall not need to trouble our selves to know how he knew it: Not by any Scripture; he had it not from Moses, but the same way that Moses had it; he looked in the same mirrour, Abraham did, when he saw the same Person, and the same day, and rejoyced to see it.

Mat.8.10.

John 8.56.

2.

His property Meus.

Out of Scio, his certainty; and out of Meus, his peculiar, as it were. The Redeemer of the world would not serve him, nor S. Paul's maximè fidelium, of the faithfull chiefly: This (of the Ephesians) would not content him, That loved us, and gave himself for us: None but (2 Gal.) That loved me, and gave himself for me. My Redeemer: which they call Faith's Possessive.

1 Tim.1.15.
Ephes.5.2.
Gal.2.20.

3.

His patience. Waiting. Tandem.

In Tandem, the third word, his patient enduring. For, patience is not onely shewed in suffering the Cross, but in waiting also for the promise. It will not be done by and by, this: but Tandem, at the last it will. He shall rise again at the last: he shall; and we shall. Qui crediderit, ne festinet; He that believeth, let him not be in all haste. No: Si moram fecerit; expecta eum; If he stay, stay his leisure. Tarry his Tandem.

Heb 12.6.
Tit.2.13.
Hab 2.3.
Esay 28.16.

4.

His courage. Tamen si

And last, all these, Non obstante, or Tamen si; the resolute courage, or valour of his faith; that this he saith, being in case he was, small likelihood of it in appearance, seeing and feeling, that he saw and felt. There sate he falling away by piece-meal, vivum cadaver. For him then to talk of Scio, and meus thus, having no better signs and arguments then he had; in the sense of his anger, to believe his favour; brought to the day of death, to promise himself so glorious an estate: This is Abrahams faith, Contra spem in spe credere; faith without, nay, faith against feeling. His state, in sense of misery, want of comfort; his friends dismaying him; for all that, he keeps to his Scio, and to his Meus still. All else, even all he hath (his righteousness too) they may take from him: Salutem non auferent, his Redeemer they should never get: non obstante, he would hold him fast.

Rom.4.18.

2 Act, Spero: His Hope.

This for his Scio, and now to his Spero, which word leadeth us to the use, he did, and we are to make, of this knowledge. Not, know, to know; or to be known to know; but, know, to lodge in our bosomes true hope: It is the general use of all our knowledge of the Scriptures, whatsoever is written for our learning, that we by patience and comfort in the Scriptures may have hope. Generally of all; but above all, of these, of Christ our Redeemer: He is our hope; and his rising, that is Caput bonæ spei, our cape of good hope, the most hopefull of all other.

Rom.15.4.

Spes reposita.
Hope laid up.
Hos.2.15.
Mark 16.6.
Luke 24.38.
Psal.16.9.

The use of hope is, to expel fear. No fear, to the fear of death: what shall become of us, after our short time here, which makes us never quiet, but in the valley of Achor, all our life long: The resurrection opens us a gate of hope. Therefore, this day, Noli timere, say the Angels: Nolite timere (saith Christ.) That our proper salutation of the day. This, a day of hope. And this use made David of it: My flesh shall rest in hope, though he were not in Jobs case, but in all his royalty. For, even Kings, in all their royalty, sometimes have before them the hand-writing on the wall: Numeravit, he hath numbred thy days; and even then they rest on this hope, and read this inscription not unwillingly. The same use do the Apostles: Who hath regenerated us, in spe, to a lively hope, by the resurrection of Christ; (it is Saint Peter.) Rest in hope (saith David;) a lively hope, (Peter;) Rest in hope of rising and living again.

Dan.5.5.

כליות

And the term, that Job here gives hope, is worth a note: he calls it the kidneys of the soul. It made the Translator miss, that knew not this idiome. For, as in that part of the body is bred, and from thence doth issue that same generativus humor, whereby we propagate our kinde, and live here (in a sort) after we be dead: In like manner, by this hope (saith Job, and so saith Saint Peter) we are begotten anew; we are sowen (saith Saint Paul) and of that seed, rise again in power, honour, and immortality.

1 Pet.1.
1 Cor.15.

And this is hæc spes, this hope. For, hope at large heareth evil, hath no good name; Many our hopes prove Vigilantis somnia, waking dreams: we cannot lay them up, and if we would; they are not worth the laying up, no more then our dreams be. That the Heathen man made it his happiness, to say: Vale spes, farewel all hoping. This is true, where the rest of our hope is vanishing, as man, whose breath is in his nostrils; and when that goeth, all his thoughts perish. But this hope is of another nature: Non confundet, it will not make you ashamed. There's a reality in it, and anchor-hold; it is built on the rock, it will endure,

Psal.146.5.
Rom.5.5.
Heb.6.19.
Luke 6.48.

endure, as the rock, on vvhich it is built, and on vvhich it is graven here: There vvill come an end, and his hope vvill not be cut off, of all other: You may make a Depositum of it, lay it up: Repone illam, & repone te in illa; you may rest on it, it is Spes viva, a living hope, in Him that liveth, and shall restore us all to life. 1 Pet.1.3.

Now, the place is much, where we lay it: Every thing is best kept in his proper place. Job saith, he bestowed it in his bosome, and vvould have us to do the like. Of that place, he made choice: of none vvithout us, behind us. That vve might ever carry it about us; ever have it before us, and in our sight; ever at hand: not to seek, but ready and easie to be had, vvhen vve call for it: and these, for the continual use vve are to have of it, in all the dismays and discomforts of our life. Beside, there it vvill be safely; that, being the surest place, as being vvithin the fold of our arm, vvhere our strength lieth, and vvhence, hardest to take it from us. And there it will be best cherished, in the vvarmth, and vital heat of the bosome. There, the nurse carrieth her child: and the wife is called the wife of the bosome: And what is dearer to us than these two? But, above all, there it vvill be next the heart, (for the bosome is but the coffer of the heart) and there Job vvould have it. As vvell, for that, that place is the best place, and so best for the best hope: as that, there is in it this hope, a special cordial vertue against the fainting of the heart: as (indeed) it is cor cordis, the very heart of the heart, and whereby the heart it self is more heartened. Job found it so: So did S. Paul, vvhen he grew out of heart. Put his hand in his bosome, took out this Hope, looks upon it, presently saith: Propter quod non deficimus. And vvhen Timothie vvas in the like deliquium, he applies to him: (What man! Memento, Remember, Christ is risen, and we shall rise and see God; an amends for all, vve can suffer:) as a special receipt against all cardiaque passions. Repositi in Sinu. In my bosome. Deut.13.6. 2 Cor.4.16. 2 Tim.2.8.

But, in chusing this place; Job's mind vvas specially, to except to the brain, vvhere (commonly) men lodge it, and are mistaken: it is not the right place. Scio, there (if you vvill;) in the brain; it is the place of memory: But Spero, in the heart, the place of affection (namely fear:) and till the heart be the less fearfull, and the more chearfull for it; it is not vvhere it should be; not laid in the right place. Nay, not Scientia cerebri; knowledge is not the best neither, not in the brain: Scientia sinus, and corde creditur; best, vvhen it hath his rest there. When knowledge in the heart, and hope in the reins; and He that searcheth heart and reins, may there find them. Erre not then in laying it up in the head, or any vvhere, but vvhither Job carried it, and where he laid it, in the bosome.

To end; because vve be speaking of a hope to be laid up in our bosome, it falleth out very fitly, that, even at this time (festum spei) the Church offereth us a notable pledge, and earnest of this hope there to bestow. Even the holy Eucharist, the flesh vvherein our Redeemer was seen, and suffered, and paid the price of our redemption; and together vvith it the holy Spirit, vvhereby vve are sealed to the great day of our redemption. To the laying up of vvhich earnest of our hope, and interest in all these, vve are invited at this time, even literally, to lodge, and lay it up in our bosome. We shall be the nearer our Scio, if vve taste and see by it, how gracious the Lord is; the nearer our Spero, if an earnest or pledge of it be laid up within us: the nearer our redemption, if vve have vvithin us the price of it: and the nearer our resurrection; they be his own vvords, He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh, &c. hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day. So dwell we in Him, and He in us; vve, in Him, by our flesh in Him; and He, in us, by His flesh in us. Thereby drawing life from him, the second; as vve do death, from the first Adam. Joh.6.24. Ephes.4.30. John 6.54.

But this hope hath this property (saith S. John) it will mundifie the place vvhere it lieth (Every one that hath this hope cleanseth himself;) vvhich place by vertue of it, vve shall so cleanse, Ut videatur in carne nostra Deus, that the life of Jesus may be manifest in our flesh; and all men see the vertue of his resurrection, to have his vvork in us, by our rising out of the old dusty conversation, to newness of life: His resurrection and the power of it being exemplarily seen in our flesh, our end shall be, to see Him in our flesh; and that, nobis (not, contra nos) for our eternal joy and comfort. And then have vve the Feast in kind, and as much fruit of it, as either Patriarch, or Apostle can vvish us. Which that vve may, pray vve to Him, &c. 1 John 3.3.

SERMON

Preached before the

AT

WHITE-HALL,

On the four and Twentieth of March, being Easter-Day.

An. Dom. 1611.

And being also the day of the beginning of His Majesties most Gracious Reign.

PSAL. CXVIII. Ver. XXII.

The Stone which the Builders refused, the same Stone is become (o. made) the Head of the Corner.

THE Stone; which the Builders refused: saith the Prophet David. This is the Stone which ye Builders refused: saith the Apostle Peter. And saith it of Christ our Saviour, Hic est lapis, He is the stone. And saith it to Caiphas and the rest, that went for Builders. We know then, who this stone is, and who these Builders be, to begin with. I. Acts 4. 11.

And in the very same place, the same Apostle telleth us further, what is meant by refused, and what, by made head of the Corner. Quem vos, whom ye denied and crucified: that was, His refusing. And then, Quem Deus, whom God hath raised again from the dead; that was His making Caput Anguli. Refused, when? three dayes ago. Made Head, when? This very day: for Hic est dies, followeth straight within a verse, this is the day. Which Day: there is not one of the Fathers, that I have read, but interpret it of Easter-day. Acts 4. 10. Verse 24.

And so we have brought the Text and the time together. We know, who is the stone: Christ. Who the Builders: Caiaphas and those with him. When refused: In His Passion. When made head? at His Resurrection, that is this day, which day is therefore (at the 27. verse) said to be, Constitutus dies solennis, made a solemn Feast-day: In condensis, on which the Church to stand thick and full: Usque ad cornua Altaris, even up to the very Corners of the Altar.

This (I take it) is a good warrant, for our Church, to make this Pſalm, a ſelect choice Pſalm, for this day; as peculiar and pertinent to the Feaſt it ſelf. And a good warrant; for us, ſo to apply it. It is the Holy Ghoſt's own application, by the mouth of S. Peter: we may boldly make it, ours.

2. But though this be the chief ſenſe: yet, it is not, the only. The chief it is: for the Spirit of Prophecy is in it, which is the teſtimony of Jeſus. Yet not the only: for according to the letter we cannot Apoc. 19. deny, but that originally it was meant of David. He was a Stone too, and in his time refuſed: yet after, raiſed by God to the higheſt place, even to be King over his people. The Chaldee Paraphraſt (the oldeſt we have) is enough for this, thus he turneth the verſe. רחיצ, &c. The Child, whom the chiefeſt men oppugned, He of all the ſons of Iſhai, was made Ruler of Iſrael. A ſecond ſenſe then it hath, of David.

3. And, by analogy it will bear a third; and it will ſort with ours, or with any Prince, in like manner banded againſt, and ſought to be put by, as He: and yet after, brought by God, to the ſame place, that David was. To any ſuch it will well agree, and be truly verified of him, and rightly applied to him. And, I confeſs, I choſe it the rather for this third. Becauſe, (as this year falleth out) upon one day (and Hic eſt dies, this is the day) We have in one, a memorial of two benefits: 1. of our Saviours exalting, by his Reſurrection: 2. and of our Soveraigns exalting, and making Head of this Kingdome. Both, lighting together, we were (as we thought) ſo to remember the one, that we left not the other out. And this Text, will ſerve for both. Both, may in one be ſet before us: and ſo we rejoyce and render thanks to God for both: For the Lord Chriſt; and the Lords Chriſt, under one.

Three ſenſes then, there are in the Text, and (to do it right) we to touch them all three. 1. Chriſt in prophecy. 2. David in hiſtory. 3. Our own in analogy. But we will give Chriſt the precedence. Both for his Perſon, he is Davids Lord, and the Head of all Head-ſtones: It is meet, he have Primatum in
Col. 1. 18. omnibus, he in all things, have the pre-eminence: And, for that the truth of the text, never was ſo verified in any, as in Him. We may truly ſay, None ever, ſo low caſt down: None ever, ſo high lift up again, as He. Others refuſed, but none like Him: and their heads exalted, but nothing in compariſon of his. 1. Firſt then of Chriſts. 2. after, of Davids briefly. 3. and laſt, of our own.

I. To apply it to Chriſt. The ſtone, is the ground of all. Two things befal it: two things as contrary as may be, 1. Refuſed, caſt away: 2. then, called for again, and made Head of the Building. So, two parts there are, to the eye. 1. The refuſing. 2. and the raiſing: which, are his two eſtates, his humiliation: and his exaltation.

1. In either of theſe you may obſerve two degrees. A quibus, and Quouſque: By whom, and How farre: By whom refuſed? We weigh the word, Ædificantes: Not by men unskilfull, but, by workmen, Builders profeſſed: It is, ſo much the more.

2. How far? We weigh the word, Reprobaverunt: uſque ad reprobari, even to a reprobation. It is not improbaverunt: diſliked, as not fit for ſome eminent place: reprobaverunt, utterly reprobate, for any place at all.

II. Again, exalted, by whom? The next words are, a Domino, by God, as good a Builder, nay better than the
1. beſt of them; which makes amends for the former.

2. And, how far? Placed by him, not in any part of the Building: but, in the part moſt in the eye (the corner:) and in the higheſt place of it (the very head.)

So, Rejected, and that by the Builders, and to the loweſt eſtate: And from the loweſt eſtate, Exalted in
Gen. 49. 24. Caput Anguli, to the chiefeſt place of all; and that by God himſelf. This for Chriſt.

3. And David is a ſtone, and ſo is ours, and ſo is every good Prince Lapis Iſrael (as Jacob, in his Teſtament, Pſal. 62. 4. calleth them.) And Builders there be, ſuch as by office ſhould, but many times do not their office, no more than Caiaphas here. Reprobaverunt is when they deviſe to put Him by, whom God would exalt: And Factus Caput: when God for all that, doth them right, and brings them to their place, the Throne Royal. As, this was the day, when God ſo brought David (as appeareth by the 24. verſe:) And Hic eſt dies, this is the day, when He brought His Majeſty to be Head of this Kingdome. Of theſe in their order.

The ſtone which the Builders refuſed, &c.

THe eſtate of mankind, as they are in Society, either to Church or Kingdome, is in divers times ſet forth to us in Scripture, ſometimes of a Flock, ſometimes of Husbandry: otherwhile, of a 1 Cor. 3. 9. Building. Ye are his Flock, divers times in the Pſalms, You are Gods husbandry, you are Gods building, both in one verſe. Now the ſtile of this Text, runs in terms of this laſt, of Building, or Architecture. For here are Builders, and here is ſtone, and a Coign or Corner, and a Top or Turret over it.

Of this Spiritual Building, we are all ſtones: and (which is ſtrange) we all are Builders too: to be built, and to build, both ſtones; in regard of them whom God hath ſet over us; who are to frame us, and we ſo to ſuffer them. Builders, in regard of our ſelves firſt: then, ſuch as are committed to us, by bond, either of duty, or charity; Every one, being (as Saint Chryſoſtome ſaith well) de ſubditâ ſibi plebe, quaſi domum Deo ſtruere, of thoſe under his charge, to make God an houſe. As ſtones; it is ſaid to us, by Saint Peter, Super-ædific amini, Be ye Built up, or framed. As Builders; it is ſaid to us, firſt, by S. Jude, Build your ſelves in your moſt holy faith. Then, by Saint Paul, Edifie ye, or build ye one another. Be built, by obedience and conformity: Build your ſelves, by encreaſe in vertue, and good works: Build one another, by good example, and wholſome exhortation. The ſhort is: this is to be our ſtudy, all: if we be, but our ſelves, every one in himſelf, and of himſelf, to build God an Oratory. If he have a Houſhold, of them, to build him a Chappel. If a larger circuit, then a Church. If a countrey or Kingdome, then a Baſilica, or Metropolitan Church: which is properly, the Princes Building.

2 Pet. 1. 5. Jude 20. 1 Theſ. 5. 11.

This is the text (the Builders here were in hand with) as a Baſilica; for it was the frame of the Jewes Government: but, is applied, to all States in general. For, Jewry was the Scene or Stage, whereon the errours or vertues of all governments, were repreſented to all poſterity.

Four words there be in the text: 1. Ædificantes, Builders, 2. Lapis, Stone. 3. Angulus, a Corner, and 4. Caput, the Head. From the firſt word Ædificantes, this we have: that States would not be, as tents: ſet up, and taken down, and removable. They would be buildings, to ſtand ſteddy and fixed. Nothing ſo oppoſite unto a State as not to ſtand.

2. From the ſecond, Lapis: that, this Building would be, not of clay and wood, or (as we call them) Paper-walls: but, Stone-work, as ſtrong, as defenſible, as little ſubject to concuſſion, or combuſtion: as might be.

3. From the two parts ſpecified, firſt, Anguli: this Stone-work, is not a wall forthright, to part in ſunder, or to keep out: but, it conſiſts of divers ſides: thoſe ſides meet in one Angle: where if they meet, and knit well, all the better will the building be.

4. Caput. And they will knit the better, if they have a good Head. For, where they meet, no place ſo much in danger of weather going in, and making the ſides fly of, if it want a Covering. A head it would have to cover it: It is a ſpecial defence, and beſides, it is a Soveraign beauty, to the whole building.

And that Head, would not be of playſter, to crumble away: or of wood; to warp or rot with the weather: or of lead, to bow or bend, or to crack: but of Stone, and the principalleſt Stone, that could be. The chief part it is, the head: the chief care, and conſultation would be, what Stone meets for that place: for indeed it is all in all.

That, is the conſultation here. Here is Chriſt, what ſay you to him? He is a ſtone, 2. A building ſtone. 3. A Corner ſtone. 4. A Head ſtone. A ſtone. So the Prophet terms Him. Dan. 2. 34. Zachar. 3. 9. Eſay. 28. 17. And ſo the Apoſtles, Peter, Act. 4. 11. Paul, 1 Cor. 10. 4. 1. In his Birth: Daniels ſtone, cut forth without hands, 2. In his Paſſion: Zacharies ſtone, graven and cut full of eyes, all over. 3. In his Reſurrection: Eſays ſtone laied in Sion, Qui credideret non confundetur, He that believeth in him then, ſhall not be confounded, ſaith S. Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 6. Hic eſt lapis. He is the ſtone of our faith, ſaith S. Peter, Lapis erat Chriſtus. And Petra erat Chriſtus, ſaith S. Paul. He is the ſtone of our Sacraments, the Water of our Baptiſm, and of our Spiritual drink (both) iſſue from him. A ſtone: firſt, for his nature, of the earth as ſtones are, out of Abrahams quarry (ſaith Eſay) to ſhew his Humanity. And, out of κατώτερα τῆς γῆς the very loweſt part of the earth (ſaith the Apoſtle;) to ſhew his Humility. Indeed, nothing ſo ſubject to contempt, to be trodden on, to be ſpurned aſide, as it. And ſuch was his condition, Vermis, non homo, and Lapis, non homo. A worm, or a ſtone, and no man.

The firſt ſenſe Chriſt. Dan. 2. 34. Zach. 3. 9. Eſay. 28. 16. Act. 4. 11. 1 Cor. 10. 4. Eſay. 51. 1. Epheſ. 4. 9. Pſal. 22. 6.

A ſtone will endure much ſorrow, nothing more. And, who did ever ſuffer like Him? or in his ſuffering, who more patient, or ſtill, or ſtone-like, than He? 2.

But the chief vertue of a ſtone is, that it is firm and ſure: And ſo it is He. Ye may truſt him, ye may build on him. He will not fail you. What you lay on him is ſure. (a) David may have ſure footing, and reſt his feet; (b) Moſes, his hands; (c) Jacob his head, on this ſtone. This is it he hath his denomination from. He that truſts in him, nothing, not the gates of hell, ſhall prevail againſt him. Truſtineſs, with non confundetur, the chief vertue of a ſtone: of Chriſt: and of thoſe that are Head-ſtones by, and under him. 3.

a Pſal. 40. 3. b Exod. 17. 12. c Gen. 28. 11. Mat. 16. 18.

But, there are ſtones, that lye ſcattered, that will neither head well, nor bed well (as they ſay) not meet to build withall: meet, for nothing, but to hurl, and to do hurt with. But Chriſt is a Stone, to do good with, to build with. Lapis ad ædificationem. And he loveth not to ſcatter, or be by himſelf, his delight is to be with the Sons of men: and to grow with them, into one frame of building. Pro. 8. 31.

A Corner ſtone. Of all the places in the building, that one ſpecial place liketh him: Where the ſides meet, there he is. To joyn together, to make two one, he loveth it above all: ſtretching himſelf, to both walls, that both may reſt on him. 3. Epheſ. 2. 14.

And laſtly, Lapis primarius, a Headſtone. For, there he ſhould be, there is his right place, and it will never be well with the Building, till he be in that place, till Chriſt be Ἀκρογωνιαῖος, Caput, in omni procuratione, the higheſt and chiefeſt end of all. This he is, and in the end, this he will be: if not by men, yet by God. 4.

But now we have to do with Men: and we are to put it to voices, their voices, with whom he lived, what they think of Chriſt for Caput Anguli. It is returned, Quem reprobaverunt: He is refuſed. Will you hear it, from themſelves? Nolumus hunc regnare, We will not have Him King; Not in that place; no Head, in any wiſe. Luke 19. 14.

But, à quibus, who are theſe? Theſe were fooliſh people, that knew not the vertue or value of a ſtone: no heed to be taken what they cry. We will get us, with Jeremy to men of skill, that know, what ſtone is for every place; profeſſed builders, by their trade: But theſe alſo, were no better conceited of him, than the other: for, do any of the rulers make any accompt of him? John 7. 48. As who ſay, None of them neither, the very Builders refuſe him too. 1. Jer. 5. 4. Jer. 5. 5.

2. Well we will make the beſt of it: It may be, not for the Head: but there be more places than that: If not allow him there, yet he may be in ſome elſe. Improbaverunt, it may be, but not reprobaverunt: diſallowed, but not caſt aſide quite. We aske then, how farre? Will ye put him up the ſecond time, and (to ſee the Quonſque in kind) will ye put up Barabbas with him? Non hunc, ſed Barabbam. So it went: That was John 18 40. their verdict. Now, by this time it is reprobaverunt (as flat as may be) a refuſe indeed, and that with a foul indignity.

But theſe, were but the Vulgar. again, What ſay the Builders to this? He: of them, that took himſelf for a very Vitruvius, ſuch a workman, as he ſaid, all the reſt underſtood nothing at all, the Maſter-builder
Joh. 11.49.50. Caiaphas, he was flat, Expedit, It was expedient he ſhould dye; be caſt aſide into the heap of rubbiſh, be put out of the building, clean. That, is his doom.

1. Now, lay theſe together. To be refuſed is not ſo much; it may be, it is of ſuch, as are ignorant. But
2. to be refuſed of builders, and thoſe the chief, is much; for, they are preſumed to be skilfull. Again, to be diſliked for the chief place, not ſo much; if not for that, he may be for another: But, to be utterly reprobate (that is) not refuſed, for the Head, nor refuſed for the Corner, but refuſed ſimply for any room at all: not in the top, nay, not in the bottom: not in the Corner, nay, not in any rank of the building: that, is as much as may be. And this, was Chriſts lot.

Yet this was all but in words, nothing was done to him. But there is a reprobation, indeed, and that is yet far worſe. And to that, they proceed, even to actual matters, to real reprobation. Before they caſt Him aſide (this poor ſtone) they hackt and they hewd it, and mangled it pitiouſly; they ſhewed their malice even in that, too. Cœlaverunt Scalptores ejus (ſaith the Prophet) their tools walked on Him, they graved Him, and cut Him with a witneſs, and made him full of eyes, on every ſide. What skilled that? What diſgrace, or what ſorrow is done, to a ſtone? the Stone feels it not. The cry, of Non hunc, or the edge of the Zach. 3 9. graving tool, affect it nothing. True: but He was Lapis vivus, a living ſtone (as Peter calleth Him, 1 Pet. 2. 5.) a ſtone that hath life, life and ſenſe, and felt all: Felt His graving, the edge and point both; felt His diſpiſing, the ſcorne, and malice both: (of the twain, this the more, but) both he felt. When they
Pſal. 129. 3. made furrowes on his back, with the ſcourges, when they platted the Crown of thorns, and made it ſit cloſe to
Mat. 27. 29. His head; when they digged His hands, and feet, He felt all. He endured it patiently, tanquam Lapis: but Pſal. 22. 26. He felt it ſenſibly, tanquam vivus, Had quick ſenſe, of His pain in graving: had lively apprehenſion, of His contempt in refuſing.

And theſe very two words (in the text) Lapidem, and Reprobaverunt, ſet out unto us, both parts of His Paſſion fully: As if he had been ſtone, ſo laid they on Him, As if He had been a Reprobate, ſo powred they all diſgrace upon Him. And even as a ſtone He was, in His paſſion. For, as the ſtones give againſt the Luke 22. 44. weather: ſo was there not to be ſeen upon Him a bloudy ſweat? Did He not give (as it were) of Himſelf, againſt the tempeſt came? And, when it came, was it not ſo ſtrange (even that, which this living ſtone ſuffered) as the dead ſtones, that had no life, as if they had had life and compaſſion of His caſe, rent in ſunder
Mat. 27. 51. John 19. 29. with it? Lapidem then, is true.

And, for reprobaverunt, that, is as true. For how could they have entreated a reprobate, worſe than they entreated Him? In His thirſt, In His prayer, In the very pangs of death, what words of ſcorn and ſpitefull opprobry? What deeds of malice and wretched indignity! of Himſelf, it is ſaid (and by way of exaggeration) He humbled Himſelf to death, the death of the the Croſs: of them, it may be no leſs, Reprobaverunt ad mortem, mortem crucis, they rejected Him to death, the death of Reprobates; the death, whereunto
Mat. 27. 47. Phil. 2. 8. a curſe is annexed, the death of the Croſs. And never gave Him over, till they brought Him, lapis ad lapidem, into a grave of ſtone, and rolled a ſtone upon Him, and there left Him. And thus much for Lapis quem
Mat. 27. 60. reprobaverunt.

2. It is the Feaſt of the Paſſeover: we now paſs over to His other eſtate; His Exaltation, ad caput Anguli. Were it not ſtrange, the ſtone ſhould be rolled away, and this ſtone ſhould be digged up again, and ſet up in the Ames, the place moſt conſpicuous (that is) made a Corner-ſtone: and that, in the very top, the higheſt part of all (that is) made a Head-ſtone? Were not this a ſtrange Paſſeover, from death, to life; from loweſt reprobation, to higheſt approbation; from baſeſt reproach, to greateſt glory?

But, ſeing builders (we ſee) may be deceived, and that in Capite (as we find here) and that, though Caiaphas be one of them: and a ſtone may have wrong. Would it not be well, we called to ſcrutiny again?
Heb. 3. 4. Is there any builder yet left, before whom we may bring the matter? Yes, there is. Every houſe is built of ſome man (ſaith the Apoſtle) but he that is the builder of all, is God. Hee that ſet up this great vaulted
Job. 38. 6. work, of Heaven over our heads: that laid the Corner-ſtone of the earth, Hee is a Builder. But, He that laid Pſal. 104. 3. His Chamber beams in the waters, Et appendit terram ſuper nihilum, hangs this great Maſs, no man knows
Job. 26. 7. upon what: He that beginneth at the top, and builds downwards, Heaven firſt, and then Earth (as He did:) He paſſeth all ours, He is a skilful Builder indeed. Is He of the ſame mind? Offer Chriſt to His probation. He will reprobare reprobantes: condemn them, that ſo refuſed Him: And all will turn, quite contrary. Saint Peter ſaith it: he was ἀποδεδοκιμασμένος, reprobate with men, but ἐκλεκτὸς, choſen of God, ἐξουδενωμένος, nothing worth with them, but ἔντιμος, precious, with Him. Meet to be in the 1 Pet. 2 4. building; Nay, no building, meet to be, without him. And in the building, if any part more object to the ſight, than other, there. And in that, if any place higher than another; there. In ædificio, Angulo ædificii, Capite Anguli: In the Building, the Corner of the Building, the Head of the Corner: (that is) in the higheſt place, of the chiefeſt part of all. This He thought Him, and as he thought Him, ſo He made Him: and made Him ſo this day, the day of His reſurrection. Whom they caſt down, God lift up, from the grave: whom they vilified, He glorified; glorified, and made him Caput anguli, The Head of the Corner.

How

How of the corner? The corner, is the place, where two wals meet: and there be many two's in this Building: The two wals of Nations, Jews and Gentiles: The two, of conditions, Bond, and Free: The two, of Sex, Male, and Female: the great two (which this day we celebrate) of the Quick and the Dead: above all, the greatest two of all, Heaven and Earth. Anguli.

The two first meet in Him: There was a partition, but he down with it: Et fecit utraque unum, Eph. 2. 14. So, that, there is neither Jew nor Greek, neither Bond nor Free, neither Male nor Female, but all one in Christ Jesus. Yea, the Quick and the Dead, both live to Him. And all these, so many Combinations, as in the Center, meet in him: and he in the mids of all, draws all, and knits all, in one holy faith, and blessed hope of his coming; one mutual and unfained love towards each other. Ex te angulus, well said Zachary. Gal. 3. 28. Zac. 10. 4.

And as Unitie is in the Angle; so Order, is under the Head. As all, one, in Him; so, he is Head of all. Head of the Jews, Jesus in their tongue: Head of the Gentiles, Christ in their tongue: Head of the Church: Head of all principalitie and power. Therefore this day, Christ that dyed rose again, that he might be Lord both of Quick and Dead, Rom. 14. 9. And of the great Angle of all, consisting of Heaven and Earth; for, all power was given him in heaven and earth, and he made Head of both. Caput. Col. 1. 18. Col. 2. 10. Mat. 28. 18.

Now then: will ye lay these together? There can come to a stone no greater dignity, than there to be in the (Head.) To any stone: but it is much increased, by that Circumstance, that it is not only, Lapis (barely;) but, Lapis quem reprobaverunt, that now is there in the Head: Not any stone, but a stone so refused (as we heard) for such a stone, there to be, from Terminus à quo, to come to this Terminus ad quem; from so base an estate, there to be: that is a great increase to it. 1. 2.

And thirdly, by such a person, a Builder so matchless, there to be: that is yet a degree higher: And this triplicity exalteth much his Exaltation. That by God, and not Gods suffering, but his doing: and that factum mirabile, his wonderful doing; it came to pass: As indeed, wonderful it is to see, that which all the world now seeth: Christ, that (for the present) was so strangely dejected; since to be so exceedingly glorified: So many knees to bow to Him, so many tongues to confesse Him, His Name to be above all Names, Heaven and earth to be full of the Majesty of his Glory. 3. Phil. 2. 9, 10, 11.

Now from these words, Caput Anguli: that which we learn morally, is: to make much of the two vertues commended to us, in these two words: 1. Virtus Anguli, 2. And Anguli sub capite.

First, the vertue of two wals united in one Angle, that is Unity. For Christ will not be Caput Maceria, of a Party-wall, but of an Angle joyned. He is not of their spirit, that, so they may be Head, care not, though it be never so broken a wall.

Secondly, not every Unity, but Unitas ordinata, that hath, or is under a Head; For it is not, Cujusvis Anguli, but Anguli cui Caput: not of every Angle, but of an Angle, the unity whereof, is neither in the tail, nor in the sides, but in the Head: That is commended to us, as Unity against Division; so Order against Confusion. They that can be content to corner well, but would be Acephali, headless, have no Head, please him not: No more do they, that would joyn, but would be Poli-cephali, have a Consistory of heads, many heads: as many as the beast of Babylon. For sure it is, an Angle can have no more heads but one. To love an Angle well, but an Angle that hath an head, and but one head. To love an head well; but an head, not of a single wall, but of an Angle. Both these, and both to be regarded. They be Zacharies two, Staves, Bands and Beauty, which uphold all government; break one, and the other will not long be unbroken. The head, without Unity; Unity, without the head: either without other will not long hold. Zach. 11. 7. 10. 14.

Both then: but especially Unity, for that cometh in here, not necessarily (as doth the head) but extraordinarily. And therefore, extraordinary regard to be had of it. For I was thinking, why he should here in this second part, say, That he was made head of the Corner? Why should it not suffice to have said, factus est Caput, and no more? Or if more, factus est Caput Ædificii? To have said, He was made the head: at least-wise, made the head of the whole building? Why must Anguli, be added? What needed any mention of the Corner? No occasion was given, no mention was made of it, in his refusing: The word [head] would have served fully, to have set his Exaltation forth. Some matter there was, that this word must come in. And sure, no other, but to shew Christ's special delight and love of that place. At his rising, this day, Stetit in medio: and here he is come to his place again: for, Stetit in medio, and Caput Anguli, come both to one. Therefore, that like love, like special regard be had by us of that place, and of the vertue of that place (unity;) that it be sought and preserved carefully, that the sides flie not off, the well knitting whereof, is the very strength of the whole building. Joh. 10. 19.

By Bede, it is rendred, as a reason why the Jewish Builders refused our Saviour Christ, for the head place, Quia in uno pariete, stare amabant. They could endure no corner; they must stand alone, upon their own single wall; be of themselves; not joyn with Gentile, or Samaritane. And Christ they endured not, because they thought, if he had been head, he would have enclined that way. Alias oves oportet me adducere: Alias, they could not abide. But sure, a purpose there must be alias oves adducendi, of bringing in others, of joyning a corner, or else we do not facere secundùm exemplar, build not according to Christs pattern; our fashion of Fabrick, is not like His. They that think, to make Christ head of a Single wall, are deceived, it will not be. They that say, so the head, all is well; it skils not for the corner; err too. He is γωνιαῖος, a Corner stone first, and then ἀκρογωνιαῖος, a head-stone after. And they that had rather be a Front in a wall, than in a meaner place sub lapide Angulari; And they, that stand upon their own partition, and will not endure to hear of any joyning; care not what become of Angulus, if it were stricken out; the same mind is not in them, in neither of them, which was in Christ Jesus. His mind we see. He looks to the Angle, as to the Head; and to the head, as to the Angle. And they build best, that build likest him, Wisdom is justified of all her Children. Joh. 10. 16. Heb. 5. 8. Phil. 2. 5. Luk. 7. 35.

And

1. And laſt; the duty of the whole ſecond part, and ſo, this dayes duty, is this. When the head-ſtone is Verſe 25.26. Zach.4.7. brought forth, and reared (as to day it was) we are to proſecute it, with Hoſanna, and Benedictus qui venit (as it ſtraightway followeth in the Pſalm) with acclamation of Grace, Grace unto it. For ſo (ſaith the Prophet) Lapis primarius would be laid with rejoycing. Rejoycing: as in his regard, that hath obtained his due: ſo, even in the Buildings, that hath got ſuch a head: Such and ſo gracious, a head, as could endure thus to be refuſed by them; and yet admit, yea even thoſe, that ſo refuſed him (if the fault be not in themſelves) to be Stones in his Building, for all that: and to be members of the Body, whereof he is the Head.

2. Then ſecondly, as God hath: ſo we to make him head. Actually, we can not; he is made to our hands:
Pſal.138.2. Joh.11.48. but in account, we may: Giving him, the higheſt place in all our reſpects; Magnifying his Name, and his Word; above all things: His Word; making it our chief ground: His Name, and the glory of it, making of it our chief end. That other conſiderations carry us not away, as theſe builders here it did, of Venient Romani, or I wot not what; but that ever (as the Heathen Lawyer ſaid) it be Potior ratio, quæ facit pro Religione, the beſt reaſon, that maketh beſt for Religion, and for the good of the body of this head (that is, the peace of his Church.) And this, for, Lapis erat Chriſtus.

1. But, Lapis erat David, is likewiſe true. Therefore, that we do King David no wrong, let us ſhew how
The ſecond ſenſe David. it fits him too: but briefly, becauſe, this, is not his day. David was a ſtone. The Jews ſay, it was his Nick-name, or name of diſgrace; that, in ſcorn they called him ſo. For that, all his credit (forſooth) came, by caſting a ſtone, and hitting Goliah, by chance, right in the fore-head: and ſo, they thwitted him with that name. They gave it him, in ſcorn: but he bare it, in earneſt. For ſure, much ſorrow he endured: had that property of a Stone. And nothing could remove him, or make him ſhrink, from his truſt in God, or from his Allegiance to Saul his liege Lord: that quality alſo.

2. And refuſed he was: not as Chriſt, we muſt not look for that, neither in him, nor in any. God forbid, that any, ever ſhould be ſo refuſed, as he. As Chriſt, none, but Chriſt. No: but yet, in his degree refuſed he was, though. A hard time he had, and many hard terms, and hard uſages he endured for many years together; purſued, and followed, and ſhould have been no head, nay, ſhould have had no head, if he had been gotten.

3. Refuſed, and by whom? Even by Saul, all his life-time: and when Saul was dead, Abner refuſed
2 Sam.2.8. 1 Sam.29.4. 1 Sam.17.28. 1 Sam.16.6. him, and ſet up another againſt him. And when he was out of his country, in Gath, refuſed there too, by the Princes of Achis. And even at home, by his own brethren, and fathers houſe. Yea, Samuel himſelf, had given it away (the head-place) from him, to Eliab, and ſo refuſed him; but, for God. And theſe, went then, for the chief Builders in Iſrael, at that time. So, the Builders refuſed him.

4. But after all this, all this notwithſtanding, this Stone became the head, (that is) David got the Crown,
Chap.2.38. and was King at laſt. For [head] is the Kings name. So doth Samuel call the King, 1 *Sam.*15.17. So doth Eſay, *chap.*7.4. So doth Hoſea, *chap.*1.11. But eſpecially, ſo Daniel, in expreſs terms, Tu es Caput aureum, ſpeaking to the King, Thou art the head of Gold.

Head, and of the corner: that is (as ſome interpret it) of Juda and Iſrael. But, that is thought ſomewhat hard. For, thoſe two, were not two Kingdoms, nor ever ſo reckoned, till Roboams time. And, what if David had not happened to have been firſt King of one Tribe, and after, of all; ſhould he have loſt this name then? Should he not have been Ἀκεφαλιαῖον? Shall no King be Caput Anguli, if he have but one entire Kingdom? Shall not Salomon, as well as David? No queſtion but he ſhall.

The better part therefore think good, to give it that ſenſe, which never fails in any State: and which a Ver.9,10.12. b Verſe 19. c Verſe 2,3. ſundry times you ſhall find pointed at by David himſelf, as in the [a] 115. before, and in the [b] 135. after: Yea, even here in [c] this Pſalm at the beginning, Domus Iſrael, and Domus Aaron, the Houſe of Iſrael, and the Houſe of Aaron; that is, the two eſtates, Civil and Eccleſiaſtical, which make the main Angle, in every Government. God himſelf hath ſevered them, and made theſe, two; but to meet in one: Not one to maligne and conſume the other. And the happy combining of theſe two, is the ſtrength of the head, and the ſtrength of the whole building. If it bear but upon one of them, it will certainly decay. It did ſo in Sauls time: He little regarded the Ark, and leſs the Prieſts. David ſaw
Pſal.75.3. Sauls error, and in his Pſalm (where he ſingeth Ne perdas, to a Common-wealth) promiſeth to have equal care of both pillars, and to uphold them both.

The firſt book of Chronicles, is ſufficient to prove, and perſwade any, he dealt in both, as chief over both. Not by right of Prieſt-hood, for none he had. And that, of his Prophecy, is as cold. Others alſo did the like, Aſa, Jehoſaphat, Ezekias, Joſias, that were no Prophets, nor ever ſo accounted.

In the Law (it is Philo's note) both Tables met in the fifth Commandment (which is the Crown Commandment) as it were in an Angle; which Commandment, is placed (ſaith he) ὡς ἐν μεσωνίῳ, as it were in the middle, or confines of both tables; that of Religion, and this other of Juſtice Civil: That, with the right arm, the Prince may ſupport that, and with the left, this: and ſo uphold both. And in the Goſpel, Chriſt applyeth this very verſe to himſelf, as heir of the Vineyard. Heir he was not, but as King, Matth.21.42. Heb.7.13,14. not as Prieſt: He could not; for, of that Tribe he was not born, but was called to it, as was Aaron.

Since then, here we find both, and that David was both, it is no error (I truſt) to call a King, Caput Anguli; No more is it, to call him Lapidem primarium, or angularem, chooſe ye whether. The Perſian (by the light of nature) called the King Ahaſhueroſh (that is) Soveraign head. The Grecian (by the a 1 Mat.21.42. 2 Mat.13.10. 3 Luk.20.17. b Act.4.21. c 1 Pet.2.7. ſame light) called the King, Βασιλέα, that is, βάσιν τῶν λαῶν the Baſe or Corner-ſtone of his people. Shall I add this? This word (Stone) which is here affirmed, of David, in this verſe: is, in the New Teſtament, five ſeveral times, turned by the Syrian Tranſlator, Cepha: [a] thrice in the three Goſpels: once in the [b] Acts: and once in [c] Saint Peter. So that, he did not think it ſtrange, to call King David

Cephas

Cephas. So Cepha, as well ſaid of David, as of Peter. And [d] Tu paſces, as well ſaid to David, as Paſce to Peter: And [e] Zorobabel hath in his hand, the Line, as well as Joſua the high Prieſt, towards the building of the Temple. The thing, the duty it ſelf, and the bounds of it, let us lay forth and agree of, as we can: but ſure, the Name is not to be ſtood on; it cannot be denyed him. [d] 2 Sam. 5. 2. 1 Chro. 11. [e] Zech. 4. 10.

And now to our ſelves: to whom, as This is the day which the Lord hath made, touching Chriſt and his Reſurrection; ſo is it, likewiſe, the day that he hath made, the ſecond time, by making on it, his Majeſtie, head of this Kingdom, the very Name whereof, hath affinitie, and carrieth an alluſion to the term, Anguli, in the ſound of it. 3. The third ſtate. His Majeſty.

And, neither were Your Majeſty, without your part of refuſing, in a kind: but did participate, ſomewhat of it, with David, though in a leſs degree. Good, and firm, and ſure, though your Right were, as any ſtone; yet allegations were ſtudied, to ſubject it to queſtion, yea, to refuſing. For, did no body ever ſee a project drawn wherein ſome other ſtone was marked out, to have been Caput Anguli? Yes; it is well known, Titles were raiſed, and ſet on foot, and Books written, to that end. 1.

And, they took themſelves for no mean Work-men, that were the deviſers of them: that, both at home and abroad, contrived it another way: and plotted to have put You by, and to have ſome other Head ſtone, of their own hewing out, in your room. 2.

Yea, to make your caſe, yet more like to Chriſts caſe: even the High Prieſt, he that claimeth Caiaphas's place, he and his crue, had their hands in it. We may no leſſe truly, ſay to them, than Saint Peter ſaid to Caiaphas; Quem vos, Whom ye would have caſt aſide, if you might have had your wills. And to that end had your firſt breves ready drawn, and ſent abroad; and others, in a readineſs, to ſecond them. 3.

Yet for all their Breves, and Bulls; this Stone is the Head, for all that. Factus, made he is; and made by God. For à Domino, Gods doing it was, evidently; that after ſo much plotting, ſo many years together, at the very time, God bowed the hearts of ſo many thouſands, as it had been the heart of one man, to agree in one; as that, all that foreſaw it, thought it had not been poſſible; and all that ſaw it, confeſſed it admirable; and all men ſaid, This hath God done: for they ſaw evidently, it was his work. 4. Pſal. 64. 9.

The Head, You were then made: And head, not of One Angle, as You were before (for Caput Anguli, I hold a King to be, though he have but one Kingdome) but Caput Trianguli, head now of Three, even of a whole Triangle. So, their titles were daſhed, their plots diſappointed, and all their devices as the potters clay. Yours it was of right, and God hath brought You to it. So, it is: and our eyes do ſee it, and our hearts do joy in it, and our tongues bleſs God for it; and here we are, this day, with all praiſe and thanks to acknowledg it, that ſo it is. It is a part of this dayes Duty, that ſo we ſhould acknowledg it, and give him thanks for it, that brought it to paſs. 1. Eſay. 29. 16.

And, may I not further put you in mind, of another making yet? And it is not impertinent neither: to this day, eſpecially. For, after the firſt making or placing, look, how many after-attempts are made, to unmake or diſplace the head-ſtone again; ſo many times, as it is heaved at, to that end, and thoſe attempts defeated: ſo many new placings, ſo many new makings, are we to reckon of. David was made head, not only when Saul and Abner thought to put him down, and were put down themſelves; which was, before he came to the Crown; but even after he had it, and had worn it long, when Abſalom and Sheba refuſed him (being their head) and cryed, No part in David, and ſo, ſought to put him beſides the Throne. 2. 2 Sam. 20. 1.

And Builders there wanted not in that deſign: Abſalom had Achitophel and Amaſa, two as principal Maſter-builders as then were any. When God brought David back to his Seat again, and delivered him from them, that ſought to remove him from it. He did as good as place him in it, anew. David himſelf ſaith ſo, before (at the 13 verſe) He was ſhrewdly lifted at, and ready to turn over; but God ſtayed him, and ſet him right in his Seat again. And in very deed, the Verſe next before (the XXI) where he ſaith, God had heard him, and was become his deliverer, makes the Writers to think, this Pſalm was endited rather for this ſecond, than for his firſt placing, 15. 30. 9. 30.

Now, a Second making we may well remember: and we cannot do it better, than upon this Day. This Day (as we ſhall ſee) hath an intereſt in it. That, ſince your ſitting in the Seat of this Kingdome, ſome there were, Builders one would have taken them to be, if he had ſeen them with their tools in their hands, as if they had been to have laid ſome foundation; where their meaning was to undermine, and to caſt down foundations and all: Yea, to have made a right Stone of You, and blown You up among the Stones You and Yours without any more ado.

And, Maſter-builders they had amongſt them, (ſo they will needs be accounted) that encouraged their hearts, and ſtrengthned their hands to the work. And that they might do, there was no Seal to hinder it: But diſcloſe it, that, they might not, for fear of breaking a Seal: there was a Seal for that. And thus they did edificare ad Gehennam: edifie their followers to Hell-ward, to ſet them forward and ſend them to their own place. That Day, which God undid that wretched deſign, and brought their miſchief upon their own heads, That Day, did God make You, Caput Trianguli, the ſecond time. That Day, that he brought You back (if not from death it ſelf, yet) from deaths door, from the very gates of deſtruction, That day was a very Eaſter day to You, though it were in November. And, ὡς ἐν παραβολῇ, after a ſort a very Reſurrection; as very a reſurrection, as Iſaac's was, which the Apoſtle there ſpeaketh of: That, the deſtroying Angel (I am ſure) paſt over You, and ſo, it was truly the Feaſt of the Paſſeover. Fit therefore to be remembred this Day, Hic eſt dies, This is the day of the Paſſover, This is Eaſter day, the day of the Reſurrection. 2. A&. 2. 25. 3. Heb. 11. 19.

But

But, to return to the first making of all. By the true course of the year, this month being the very month, this day being the very day, of that, of the first laying of the head stone: we are (as before in Christo Domino, so again here) in Christo Domini, to prosecute it with Davids cry of Hosanna and Benedictus: and with Zacharies acclamation of Grace, Grace unto it, even to this head-stone. Grace, in his eyes that so made you: And again, Grace in their eyes and hearts to whom he so made you: But above all, the Grace of all Graces, that you may make him ever Your Ἀκρογωνιαῖον, Your stone of chief trust, and Your mark of highest regard, in all your Counsels and purposes, that so made you: And, seek to reduce the disjecta latera, the sides and wals flyen off, of this great building (for which the world it self was built) his Church, and reduce them into one Angle: The greatest service that can be done him, on earth.

And so: He that this day made You the head, so make You, and so keep You, long, and many dayes. He that refused them, that refused You (refused them, with reprobation) still may he so do, toties quoties, to their continual confusion: That, the head over the Triangle, and the Triangle under the head, may many years stand fast and flourish, in all peace, plenty, and prosperity, health, honour, and happiness. And, after all: He that hath crowned You here, with two Crowns, already; crown You also with the third, of Glory and Immortality, in his heavenly Kingdom.

I have now done. Only I would move one thing, and it shall well agree with that, hath been said of the Corner-stone: and it shall serve to further our duty of thanks; and be a good closing up of the whole. Many wayes, was Christ our blessed Saviour, a Corner-stone: among others, especially in this, saith S. Hierome: Quando agnum, cum pane conjunxit, finiens unum, inchoans alterum, utrumque perficiens in semetipso. One chief Corner-point of his, was: when he joyned the Lamb of the Passeover, and the Bread of the Eucharist: ending the one, and beginning the other, recapitulating both Lamb and Bread into himself: making that Sacrament (by the very institution of it) to be, as it were, the very Corner-stone of both the Testaments.

No act then, more fit for this Feast (the Feast of the Passeover) than that Act which is it self the passage over, from the Old Testament to the New. No way better to express our thanks, for this Corner stone, than by the holy Eucharist, which it self is the Corner-stone, of the Law, and the Gospel.

1. And there is in it, a perfect representation of the substance of this verse and the text set before our eyes. Wherein, two poor Elements of no great value in themselves, but that they might well be refused, are exalted by God, to the estate of a Divine mystery, even of the highest mystery in the Church of Christ.

2. And, a kind of resurrection there is in them, and therefore fit for the day of the Resurrection (as ever, in
1 Cor. 15. 43. Christs Church, Easter-day hath pleaded a special propertie in them.) Sowen, as it were, in weakness and dishonour: and (after they be consecrated) rising again, in honour and power.

3. And that a great honour and power: not only to represent; but to exhibit that, it representeth: nor to set before us, or remember us of; but even to serve us for a Corner-stone. First, uniting us to Christ the head, whereby we grow into one frame of building, into one body mystical, with him. And again, uniting us also as living stones, or lively members, omnes in id ipsum, one to another, and all together in one,
Joh. 6. 56. by mutual love and charity. Qui comedit de hoc pane, & bibit de hoc Calice, manet in me, & ego in illo. He that eateth of this bread, and drinketh of this cup, abideth in me, and I in him. There is our Corner
1 Cor. 10. 17. with Him. And again, Unum corpus omnes sumus, qui de uno pane participamus: All we, that partake of one bread, or cup, grow all, into one body Mystical. There is our Corner, either with other. By the same means, expressing our thanks for it; and by the same possessing our selves of it: Sealing up both wayes our duty to God for making Christ the Lord, our greatest and chiefest: and for making His Anointed this day, under Him, either in their several degrees, our Ἀκρογωνιαῖον our Chief, or Head Corner-stone. For which, together with all other his benefits, but especially, as the time calleth to us, for these two, [Christs rising] [and [our Soveraigns raising to his Royal place] render we, as we are bound, to God the Father, &c.

SERMON

Preached before the

AT

WHITE-HALL,

On the Twelfth of April, being Easter-Day.

An. Dom. 1612.

1 COR. Chap. V.

Expurgate vetus fermentum, &c.

Vers. 7. Purge out therefore the old leven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unlevened: For, Christ our Passeover is sacrificed for us.

8. Therefore, let us keep the Feast, not with old leven, neither with the leven of maliciousnes and wickednes; but, with the unlevened bread of Sincerity and Truth.

THere be two things, give themselves forth upon the very first view of this Text. 1. First, here is news, that we Christians, we also have our Passeover: 2. Then, that in memory of it, we are to keep a feast. Pascha Judæorum, the Jews Passeover we find, in John, Chap. II. and XI. Pascha nostrum, Our Passeover, never till now. And indeed, to find a Passeover, in Saint Pauls Epistles, and his Epistle, not to the Hebrews, but to the Corinthians; their Passeover as well as his: For him to call, not his Countreymen the Jews at Jerusalem, but the Gentiles at Corinth, to keep such a Feast, is news indeed. But Pascha nostrum, the words be plain: One we have. Itaque, and therefore let us hold a feast, for it.

And truly, upon this word [Celebremus] may this Feast of our Easter seem to be founded. There, is not onely a Warrant, but an Order for the making it a feast. And sure, howsoever it will fall out with other feasts, this of Easter, if there were nothing else, but the Controversie that was about the time of keeping it, in the very prime of the Primitive Church, even immediately after the Apostles, it were enough to shew, it was then generally agreed of all, Such a Feast was to be kept. And the alledging on either side (one, S. Johns manner of keeping; the other, S. Peters) prove plainly, it is Apostolical (this feast;) and that the Apostles themselves kept it. Itaque celebremus, therefore let us keep it.

The Division. The word Itaque, in the later Verse, is ever a note of a Conclusion: And where a Conclusion is, there is an Argument: And this is the Text. It standeth of an 1. Antecedent, and a 2. Consequent. 1. The Antecedent, in these words, Let us keep Passeover, &c. 2. The Consequent, in these: Itaque celebremus, &c. Supply but this Major of reason and law; If we have one, we are to hold one; The Text will make up a compleat Argument: But, one we have; therefore we are to hold it. Habendum & tenendum, as our Termes run.

I. In the Antecedent there rise these five points: 1. The main word Passeover, what is meant by it: Pascha. 2. That we have one, in the word nostrum. 3. Who it is expresly: Christ. 4. Christ how, or when? not every way, nor at every time considered; but, as, and when he was offered up; Immolatus, offered up as a Sacrifice. 5. And lastly, the word of our Interest, Propter nos, For us; that so, we might pass over our sins, and be passed over by the punishment due to them.

II. In the Consequent, there arise two points: 1. There is an Itaque, to conclude us to keep this feast. 2. And there is a Non, and a Sed, to direct us how to keep it. The former binds us to Celebremus, to celebrate a feast; or to Epulemur, to make a feast. Both are read; and both well, for both are due. The latter, by Non in fermentis, sed in azymis (not so, but thus) teacheth us, how to hold it: How to keep a Passeover? But as a Passeover should be kept. How was that? not with leven, but with sweet bread. And then he takes off the veil from Moses face, that under the legal types of Leven, and Sweet bread, these Evangelical duties are expressed unto us: By leven, is meant malice and lewdness: and so, we may not. By sweet bread, is meant Sincerity and Truth: and so, we are (with them) to celebrate our feast.

So, in the Antecedent, there is the 1. Benefit, and the 2. Means: that is Christs part. In the Consequent, 1. the Feast, and the 2. Duty: that is Ours. Indeed, to the word Passeover, ye may reduce them all. 1. The Benefit: for it is a Passeover; even the passing over of the Destroyer. 2. The Means: that is Christ, by the Sacramental figure called the Passeover, as the means of it. 3. The Feast: whether that we solemnize, or that we are invited to, either is a Passeover. 4. And last, our Duty: for, that is also a kind of Passeover, from Vetus fermentum, to Nova conspersio. So, 1. the Benefit, 2. the Means, 3. the Feast it self, and 4. the Duty of it, all are recapitulate, in this one word, Passeover.

The Sum of all is; that we perform the duty, that we so may partake of the benefit: all is but to conclude us ad hoc festum, ad hoc epulum, to the Feast and the feast of the feast; that we pass not them over. This is all, that S. Paul (here) pleads for, and all that we. Enough, to let you see the Text, in the feast; and the feast, in the Text: in the Text, the parts and the order of them.

I. The Antecedent.

1. What is meant by Pascha.

PAscha, a Passeover. * Quanam est hæc Religio (saith God) shall be our question? What is the meaning of this observance, and what good is there in it? For, every Feast is in remembrance of some benefit (ἑορτὴ, ὅτι ἐπέρασε.) Passing over is (of it self) a thing indifferent; good or bad, thereafter as that is, which passeth over us, or we over it. For, if any good over-pass us, we lose by it; but, if any danger, we are the better. Again, if we pass from better to worse, it is a detriment. But, if from a worse case or place, to a better, it is a benefit. And this is a benefit: for, here is a Feast holden for it. Then did some evil pass over us; or we our selves pass over into some better estate.

* Exod. 12. 26.

The Law must be our line, to lead us along this Text; the Character of it is legal. How was it there? Evil passed them; a destroying Angel, that slew the first-born in every house through Egypt, but passed them over, and touched them not. And yet there was another: They passed out of Egypt, to the Land of promise, over the Red-sea. They passed it well: As for Pharaoh and his host, they perished, in it. Ye shall find both these thus set down together (Heb. XI. in the 28. verse) the Destroyer did pass over them: (In the 29. verse) they did pass over into Canaan. The Egytians perished in both; had no Passeover: Gods people had.

Exod. 12. 29.

2. Our Passeover. What is it.

But what is this to us? Here is Pascha, but where is Nostrum? We are not in Egypt, no fear of our first-born; here is no destroying Angel: And we are far enough from the red sea. What then, if our case fall out to be like, if our danger as great: and so it will: Here we live, we call it a vale of misery, in a world, whereof Egypt is but a corner, and was but a Type; Nor their Pharaoh but a limb of the great Pharaoh, that tyrannizeth here in this world. 2. We have every one a soul; it is not our first-born, it is more; even Unicam meam (as the Psalmist calleth it) the first, and all that we have. 3. It skils not for the Angel; Gods wrath is still ready to be revealed on our sins: from that cometh all destruction. The Angels do but carry the Vials of it. 4. And death will match the red-sea: all must through it, and some pass well, but the most part perish.

Psal. 84. 6.

Psal. 22. 20.

Apoc. 16.

Now then for Nostrum. Our abode here is as dangerous, as theirs in Egypt: as many destroyers, yea, as many Crocodiles too; and therefore we need a Pascha, to escape Gods wrath, to have it pass over us here.

And yet, there rests another besides, For, how well we shall do with that former, I know not; but, to the latter we must all come, to death, to the Red-sea brink: and there, either perish, or pass well over, one of the twain. Sure Pascha nostrum is not more then needs; Pascha nobis opus est, we need one (a Passeover) no less then they.

Nay, I go further: Ours is such as theirs. Theirs is nihil ad nostrum, nothing to ours. For, what talk we of a delivery of one poor Nation; and that, but from a bodily danger; and but one neither?

Call

Call ye that a Paſſe-over? How much more then, ours, the great, and general Paſſeover, that freeth us? that freeth all mankind, from the total deſtruction both of body and ſoul; and that by an eternal delivery, both here and for ever? How to eſcape that, Gods wrath, ira ventura; that is the true Paſſe-over. And what mention we Canaan? Is there any compariſon, between the two Kingdomes of Canaan, and Heaven, whither Chriſt ſhall make us paſs? Indeed, Paſcha noſtrum is it: ours, and none but ours. Theirs, but a ſhadow; Ours, the ſubſtantial, very Paſſeover indeed. When all is done; Paſcha noſtrum is it. Matth. 3.7.

Will ye give me leave, to preſent you with a meditation upon this point? it will fit the feaſt well, and ſerves us for a preparation to our Paſſeover, and I will not fetch it far, but even from the word Paſſeover. For, all the labour is, but to make us feel the want of it.

Eſt ſapientis querela, tranſire generationem, aliam ſuccedere, aliam quoque tranſire. It is that, the Apoſtle tels us, and we feel it, Mundus tranſit, that the World paſſes: Παράγει (ſaith S. Paul,) παράγεται (ſaith S. John,) in the Active, and Paſſive both, the world paſſeth away. Et en Paſcha, tranſitus, a kind of Paſſeover of the world it ſelf, of this tranſitory world (as we term it) Ubi non habemus manentem, &c. where we cannot long have any abode. Eccleſ. 1.4. Chap. 7.31. 1 Joh. 2.17. Heb. 13.14.

But then, if we look home to our ſelves, we ſhall find another Paſſeover there; even that of the Pſalmi, Cito tranſit & avolamus, we paſs as a ſhadow, as a dream, when one awaketh; we bring our years to an end, as it were a tale that is told. Cito tranſit, ſo ſoon paſſeth it, and we are gone. Saint James very excellently expreſſeth it: Τροχὸς, a very wheel of our nature whirling about: That the world paſſeth; but we, faſter then it. 2. 3. 1 Pſal. 90.10. James 3.6.

But the third is the complaint indeed: that tranſitory though this world be, and we yet more tranſitory; yet we cannot paſs it quietly for all that. But, ſome wipe we have of the Angels ſword; at leaſtwiſe, in fear we live ſtill, of thoſe in the Pſalm, Sagitta volans, or Terror nocturnus, or Incurſus, or Damon meridianus; one of Egypts ten plagues: One of the Angels vials, or of the Horſes, red, black, or pale, are ſtill abroad; much adoe we have, without ſome miſ-hap, to paſs this life that paſſeth ſo faſt. 3. Pſal. 91.5,6. Apoc. 6.4. 5. 8.

But laſtly, ſay that we have the good hap, to ſcape well here; yet hence we muſt yet long, to the red-ſea-bank: we muſt come to death all: and death is not Interitus (a final end) but Tranſitus (a paſſage over to a new eſtate.) There, is the main peril, that we miſcarry not; (great odds there is, for many do;) but paſs well over into the land of promiſe. 4.

Theſe four Paſſeovers it will not be amiſs to think of. And, in all theſe, need we not one, to help us well through, that theſe perils may well paſs us over? Need we not one, that may make the red-ſea paſſable for us, that we may well come to the land of the living?

And now then, tell me, what is the ſum of all our deſires? Is it not Bonum paſcha? While we are here, the Deſtroyers may paſs? and when we go hence, we may well get over? Is it not, Sic tranſire tranſitoria, ut tranſeundo perveniamus ad æterna? So to paſs theſe tranſitory things, that we may well come to thoſe, that ſhall never paſs? A good Paſſeover is our wiſh; and againſt we ſhall need it, a good one God ſend us. Upon the point, if we weigh well, Salus ipſa nihil eſt, niſi Paſcha. The benefit of all benefits (ſalvation it ſelf) is compriſed, in this word; is nothing but a Paſſeover: As much, in one word, as the other, tranſire à malo, to be ſaved from evil; tranſire ad bonum, to be ſet ſafe in good: To theſe two may all be reduced. This is all we need, and all we ſeek. And this Paraſceue (or preparation) will ſet us in hand to ſeek it, and make us ſay (with our Saviour) deſiderio deſideravi nt, &c. earneſtly to deſire, to have our part in this Paſſeover. Luke 22.15.

The next point; if we need one, and if we deſire one, where ſhall we have one? Quis revolvet nobis hunc lapidem? Who will roll us away this ſtone? (ſaid the Women this day.) To our line again, the Law. How did they there in the Type? (for, ſo it muſt be, in the truth.) They had a means, that helped them through both, which (per Metonymiam cauſæ) they called their Paſſeover. And it was a Lamb. 3. Who it is. Mark 16.3.

Have we ſo? yes: Ecce Agnus Dei (ſaid the Baptiſt, at the firſt ſight.) But every Lamb will not ſerve; it muſt be a Paſchal Lamb. Is Chriſt that Lamb? S. John puts it out of queſtion: That which was ſaid of the Paſchal Lamb [ye ſhall not break a bone of him] he applies to Chriſt; and ſaith, in him the Scripture was fulfilled. Eodem tempore, illorum, & noſtrum: adductus in Feſto ipſo. CHRIST the Lamb of GOD. John 1.29. John 19.36.

Then a Paſchal Lamb, he is; and ſo in caſe, to be made a paſſe-over of. But, a Paſſeover he is not, till he be offered. For (if ye mark it) offering is a paſſing over of that is offered, to him, we offer it to: Offered he muſt be. Et oblatus eſt (ſaith Eſay) offered he was. 4. Chriſt offered in a ſacrifice. Eſay 53.7.

Oblatus; ſo he may be, and yet alive: but the word is προσφορὰ, Immolatus, offered, and offered in ſacrifice. A live Lamb is not it; it is a Lamb ſlain muſt be our Paſſeover. And Chriſt is a Lamb ſlain (ſaith S. John) from the beginning, and the ſprinkling of his blond in Baptiſm, maketh the Deſtroyer paſs over us. Apoc. 5.12. 13.8.

There be many kinds of offerings: This determineth which of them Chriſt was. Such an one, as we muſt epulari; that is the Peace-offering. For, of the Peace-offering, the fleſh was to be eaten: Part God had, and part the offerer eat: in ſign of perfect peace and reconciliation between them. Chriſts blond not onely in the Baſon, for Baptiſme; but, in the Cup, for the other Sacrament. A Sacrifice; ſo, to be ſlain: A propitiatory Sacrifice; ſo, to be eaten. As a Peace offering. Levit. 7.17.

Thus Chriſt is a Paſſeover. But, where is noſtrum, without which all this is nothing? Propter nos, for us, that maketh it ours. That which is for us offered, is ours: and we ſo reckon it. The Lamb was not ſlain, for it ſelf: (Quid agnus committere?) but for the firſt-born: So Chriſt; not for himſelf (Nothing worthy death in him, witneſs Pilate;) but, for us. 5. Our intereſt. Propter nos. Exod. 13.15. Luke 23.4. 14. 15.

To ſave us from our ſins.

For us, that is, for our ſalvation, to ſave us: Save us, from what? from our ſins. And here now, we are come to the point of the Paſſe-over indeed: the quitting us, and the manner of quitting us from our ſins. All the buſineſs whereof was carried in the very manner of a Paſſe-over.

1. ἀφεσία.

Firſt, ſin it ſelf, what is it but a tranſgreſſion, or paſſing over the lines and limits of our Duty, ſet us in the Law of God? And why hovers the deſtroying Angel over us? Why goeth he not on his way, but ſeeks to bring deſtruction upon our heads? What is the mark, he ſtriketh at? What, but our ſins? But for them, no Deſtroyer ſhould have power over us. But for them th at hang ſo heavy on us, and ſo preſs us down, we ſhould go thorow well enough.

2. Joh.1.29.

Why then, Hic eſt omnis fructus, ut auferatur peccatum: All is but this, to have our ſins taken away. And who ſhall take them away? Ecce qui tollit peccata mundi; that taketh away ours; nay the ſins of the world.

3. 2 Sam.12.13. נשא

How taketh away? God hath taken away thy ſin (ſaith Nathan to David:) the word is not abſtulit, but tranſtulit (that is) tranſferendo abſtulit; or (as the Hebrew word is) tranſtit fecit: to take it from David, make it paſs from him upon ſome others; (that is) even the Son of David, Him God hath given us, to paſs our ſins over, from us to him.

4. Levit.1.4. 3.2. 8. 13.

And when that? when he was offered, made a ſacrifice for us. It is the nature of every Sacrifice, tranſferendo auferre. He that offers it, layes his hand over the head of it, confeſſes his ſins over it, and his juſt deſert to be ſmitten by the Deſtroyer; but prays, he may put this offering, in his own place, and what is due to him (that is death) may be tranſferred from him, and light on the offering; that may ſerve, and he ſcape.

5. Exod.12.15.

In all offerings thus it was: but in the Paſchal Lamb ſpecially: that it hath carried away the name from all the reſt, to be called the Paſſe-over onely. In it (evidently) the death of the firſt-born was tranſlated upon the poor Lamb. The Lamb died, the firſt-born was ſaved; his death paſſed over unto the Lamb: that it was juſtly called the Paſſe-over, for ſo it was.

But much more juſtly Chriſt: who (ſure) was even a Paſſe-over throughout from the firſt to the laſt. At the firſt? his birth, what was it but a Paſſe-over, from the boſome of his Father, to the womb of his Mother, to take our nature? And his Circumciſion what, but a Paſſe-over, from the ſtate of one free, to the condition of one bond, to undertake our debt? And at the laſt, his Reſurrection (this day) what was it, but a paſſage from death to life? and his Aſcenſion another, de mundo ad Patrem, from the world to his Father? Firſt and laſt, a Paſſeover he was.

7. Eſay 53.6. 2 Cor.5.21. Gal.3.13.

But, above all, his death, his offering was it: then, he was Paſcha pro nobis, indeed. For then, he paſſed over into the eſtate of us wretched ſinners, laid off his own (as it were) and took upon him our perſon; became tanquam unus è nobis, nay tanquam omnes nos. For, God took from us, and laid them on him, Poſuit ſuper Eum iniquitates omnium noſtrum, Laid upon him (our Paſſe-over) the tranſgreſſions of us all. Fecit peccatum, made him ſin for us; there, our ſins paſſed from us; fecit maledictum, made him a Curſe for us; there the puniſhment of our ſins paſſed from us to him. Then, and there, paſſed the Deſtroyer over us.

Matth.26.39. Luke 22.44.

Over us, to him. But, when he came at him, he paſſed him not. Tranſeat à me calix would not be heard; and it was Paſcha, non paſcha; a Paſſe-over to us, no paſſe-over to him. We had one: He had none. Him it paſſed not, but light upon him ſo heavy, that, it made a ſweat of bloody drops, paſs from him; yea, life and ſoul and all, yet it left him. At which his paſſion, he was a right Paſſe-over; Chriſtus πάσχων, Chriſtus paſcha. Then, he was pro nobis; then, he was noſtrum: Chriſt, Chriſt offered, offered for us. Of which paſſing our ſins to him, and Gods wrath over us, this day, and the action of this day, is a memorial.

II. The Conſequent

And ſo let us paſs over from the Antecedent, to the Conſequent: which is, Itaque celebremus, Therefore let us keep a Feaſt. A Feaſt, and Chriſt ſlain, and ſo handled as he was? A Faſt rather, one would think. True: but that, we heard again of ours; ſo did not they, of theirs. For, this, he came again ſafe; and opened unto us a new paſſage, by his ſecond Paſſe-over. All we ſpake of right now, was done the third day ſince: But we hold not our Feaſt, till this day. For, till this day, we knew not what was become of him. Paſſed he was hence; but, whether in his paſſage he had miſcarried or no, we knew not. But now, this day, by his Reſurrection (we know) he is well paſſed over; and ſo, omni modo, a true Paſſe-over.

Rom 4.25.

So now, we hold our Feaſt, as a feaſt ſhould be holden, with joy. And a double Feaſt it is: 1. One, that by his ſuffering, he paſſed from life to death for our ſins. 2. A ſecond, that by his riſing again this day, he paſſed from death to life for our juſtification. And ſo, two Paſſe-overs in one. He died, and by his death made the Deſtroyer paſſe over us: He roſe again, and by it, made death (as the Red-ſea) paſſable for us. Itaque celebremus, Itaque epulemur.

Ἑορτάζωμεν. Celebremus Epulemur.

Ἑορτάζωμεν, the word is one, but two wayes it is turned. 1. Some read, Celebremus. 2. Some other, Epulemur. But well: for firſt, it is kindly, when we keep a feaſt, we make a feaſt. But this, this feaſt is not celebrated ſine hoc epulo. If Chriſt be a propitiatory ſacrifice, a Peace-offering, I ſee not how we can avoid, but the fleſh of our peace-offering muſt be eaten in this feaſt by us, or elſe we evacuate the offering utterly, and loſe the fruit of it: And was there a Paſſe-over heard of, and the Lamb not eaten? Time was, when he was thought no good Chriſtian, that thought, he might do one without the other. No Celebremus, without Epulemur in it.

1. Immolatus and Celebremus.

But firſt, will ye lay the former and this together, immolatus and celebremus; and ſee how it falleth out with us. Immolatus is his part, to be ſlain; Celebremus is ours, to hold a feaſt: Good-Fryday, his; Eaſter-day, ours. His premiſſes, bitter; our concluſion, joyfull: a loving partition, on his part; an happy, on ours.

Again,

Again, will we lay immolatus to epulemur. That the Paſſe-over doth not conclude in the ſacrifice, the taking away of ſin onely; (that is) in a pardon, and there an end: But, in a feaſt; which is a ſign, not of forgiveneſs alone, but of perfect amity, full propitiation: Ye may propius ire, draw near unto him; ye are reſtored to full grace and favour, to eat and drink at his Table. 2. Immolatus and Epulemur, Heb. 10. 12.

Beſides, there was an offering in Immolatus; and here is another (a new one) in Epulemur. Offered for us, there; offered to us, here: There, per modum victimæ; here, per modum epuli. To make an offering of; To make a refreſhing of. For us, in the Sacrifice: to us, in the Sacrament. This makes a perfect Paſſe-over. We read both in the Goſpel, θύειν, to ſacrifice the Paſſeover; and φαγεῖν, to eat it. It was eaten (the Paſchal Lamb) and it was a ſacrifice: It cannot be denied, there is a flat Text for it Exod. 12. 27. both propounded here, in the terms of the Text: 1. The Sacrifice, in Immolatus: 2. The Supper, in Epulemur. Luke 22. 7. Matth. 26. 17. John 18. 28.

Celebremus, and Epulemur. There be, that refer Celebremus to the Day; Epulemur, to the Action; and ſo it may, well: Both Day, and Action have intereſt in this Text. And then, the Text is againſt them, that have never an Eaſter day in their Calender. But the Fathers uſually refer both to the Action. Their reaſon: Becauſe (in truth) the Euchariſt now, in the Goſpel, is that, the Paſſe-over was, under the Law: The Antitype anſwering, to their Type of the Paſchal Lamb. It is plain by the immediate paſſage of it from the one to the other: that, no ſooner done, but this began. Look; how ſoon the Paſchal Lamb eaten, preſently the holy Euchariſt inſtituted, to ſucceed in the place of it for ever. And yet more plain, that this very Scripture of my Text was thought ſo pertinent, and ſo proper to this Action, as it was alwayes ſaid, or ſung at it. And, I know no cauſe, but it might be ſo ſtill. Two things Chriſt there gave us in charge: 1. ἀνάμνησις, Remembring, and 2. λῆψις, Receiving: The ſame two, S. Paul (but in other terms) 1. καταγγελία, ſhewing forth, 2. κοινωνία, communicating. Of which, Remembring and Shewing forth refer to celebremus: Receiving and Communicating, to epulemur here. Chap. 11. 25. Chap. 11. 29.

The firſt, in remembrance of him, Chriſt: What of him? Mortem Domini, his death (ſaith Saint Paul:) to ſhew forth the Lords death. Remember him, that we will, and ſtay at home; think of him there: Nay, ſhew him forth ye muſt. That we will, by a Sermon of him: Nay, it muſt be Hoc facite. It is not mental thinking, or verbal ſpeaking: there muſt be actually ſomewhat done, to celebrate this Memory. That done, to the holy ſymboles, that was done to him, to his body, and his blood, in the Paſſe-over: Break the one, pour out the other; to repreſent κλώμενον how his ſacred body was broken; and ἐκχυνόμενον, how his precious blood was ſhed. And in Corpus fractum, and Sanguis fuſus there is Immolatus. This is it, in the Euchariſt, that anſwereth to the Sacrifice, in the Paſſe-over: The Memorial, to the Figure. To them it was: Hoc facite in mei præfigurationem, Do this in præfiguration of Me: To us it is, Do this, in commemoration of Me. To them, Præmunciare; to us, Annunciare: there is the difference. By the ſame rule, that theirs was; by the ſame, may ours be termed a Sacrifice. In rigour of ſpeech, neither of them: for (to ſpeak after the exact manner of Divinity) there is but one onely ſacrifice, veri nominis, properly ſo called: That is Chriſts death. And that ſacrifice but once actually performed, at his death: but ever before repreſented, in figure, from the beginning; and ever ſince repeated, in memory, to the worlds end. That onely abſolute; all elſe relative to it, repreſentative of it, operative by it. The Lamb, but once actually ſlain, in the fulneſs of time: but virtually, was from the beginning, is, and ſhall be, to the end of the world. That, the Center, in which their lines and ours, their types and our antitypes do meet. While yet this offering was not, the hope of it was kept alive, by the præfiguration of it, in theirs: And after it is paſt, the memory of it is ſtill kept freſh in mind, by the commemoration of it, in ours. So it was the will of God; that ſo there might be with them a continual fore-ſhewing, and with us a continual ſhewing forth the Lords death till he come again. Hence it is, that what names their's carried, ours do the like, and the Fathers make no ſcruple at it; no more need we. The Apoſtle (in the X. Chapter) compareth this of ours, to the Immolata of the Heathen: And (to the Hebrews) Habemus aram, matcheth it with the Sacrifice of the Jews. And we know the rule of compariſons: They muſt be ejuſdem generis. 1. Celebremus: In the Sacrifice. 1 Cor. 11. 26. Luke 22. 19. 1 Cor. 11. 26. Heb. 10. 4. Heb. 9. 26. 1 Cor. 10. 21, &c. Heb. 13. 10.

Neither do we ſtay here, but proceed to the other [Epulemur.] For, there is another thing yet to be done, which doth preſent to us that, which Celebremus doth repreſent. From the Sacrament, is the applying the Sacrifice. The Sacrifice, in general, pro omnibus. The Sacrament in particular, to each ſeveral receiver, pro ſingulis. Wherein, that is offered to us; that, which is common to all, made proper to each one, while each taketh his part of it; and made proper by a communion, and union, like that of meat and drink, which is moſt nearly and inwardly made ours, and is inſeparable for ever. There, Celebremus paſſeth with the repreſentation: But here, Epulemur (as a nouriſhment) abideth with us ſtill. In that we ſee; and in this we taſte, how gracious the Lord is, and hath been to us. And ſo much for theſe two, as two means to partake the Benefit, and we to uſe them: and as Duties required of us, and we to perform them. 2. Epulemur: In the Sacrament. Pſal 34 8.

Will ye mark one thing more: That Epulemur doth here refer to Immolatus. To Chriſt, not every way conſidered, but as when he was offered. Chriſts body that now is; True: but not Chriſts body as now it is, but as then it was, when it was offered, rent, and ſlain, and ſacrificed for us: Not as now he is glorified; for ſo, he is not, ſo he cannot be immolatus; For he is immortal, and impaſſible. But, as then he was, when he ſuffered death (that is) paſſible and mortal. Then, in his paſſible eſtate, did he inſtitute this of ours, to be a memorial of his paſſible, and paſſio, both. And we are, in this action, not onely carried up to Chriſt (Surſum corda) but, we are alſo carried back, to Chriſt; as he was at the very inſtant, and in the very act of his offering. So, and no otherwiſe, doth this Text teach, So, and no otherwiſe do we repreſent him. By the incomprehenſible power of his eternal Spirit, not he alone, but he, as at the very very act of his offering, is made present to us, and we incorporate into his death, and invested in the benefits, of it. If an Host could be turned into him now glorified as he is, it would not serve: Christ offered is it: Thither we must look. [a] To the Serpent lift up, thither we must repair, [b] even ad cadaver: we must [c] hoc facere, do that, is then done. So, and no otherwise, is this Epulare to be conceived. And so (I think) none will say they do or can turn him.

a Joh. 3.14.
b Luk. 17.37.
c 1 Cor. 11.24.

1. Itaque: We bound to keep it.

Now, all we have to do, is to shew what we think of this Itaque, whether it shall conclude us or no: and that we shew it by our practice; for, other answer, the Apostle will take non: If we play fast or loose with it on this fashion (as divers do) upon the matter as good to say, The Holy Ghost cannot tell, how to make an argument: Christ is offered, but no Itaque epulemur, for all that. Thus we will not say, for very shame. What then? will we dispensari contra Apostolum (which we blame as a foul abuse in the Pope? and yet, I cannot see, but every mean person takes upon him Papal authority, in this case;) and, as oft as we list, dispense with the Apostle and his Itaque; exempt our selves from his Conclusion: That we will not seem to do. No: it is not at Itaque: The truth is, it is at Non in fermento, we stick: we leave our leven so well (be it malice, or be it some other leven as bad:) so well we love it, we will not part with it; we loath the Lamb, rather then the leven shall out. But, in the mean time, there is no trifling with this conclusion; there is no dispensing with the Apostle: there is no wanton wilfull disabling our selves will serve. Itaque will not be so answered: Not, but with Epulemur. It layeth a necessity upon every one, to be a guest at this Feast. The Jews (we know) were held hard to theirs, upon a great pain, to have (not their names, but) their souls cut off from Gods people. And is it a less trespass for Christians to pass by this Passe-over? or hath the Church less hand, to exact like care at our hands? No indeed: we must know, the Holy Ghost can tell how to infer: And that this Itaque of the Apostles is a binding conclusion. To the next point,

Exod. 12.19.

2. Direction how to keep it.

Absolutely, we are to keep this Feast: but not to keep it Quovis modo: No matter how; prepared, unprepared: in any garment, in any sort. No: this Non, and this Sed; Not on that manner, but this; shew plainly, every manner will not serve. What then is the Manner? not in old leven. With the Passe-over he began, and he holds him to it still: that, if it be a Passe-over, reason would, it should be kept like a Passeover, even in the same manner. Now, the Passeover was not a loose lawless thing; to hold it in any fashion, it skilled not how. No: it had his laws. Even that, Hæc est lex Paschalis, (ye shall read it, Exod. 12.43.) This is the law of keeping it.

1. Non in fermento. Not with the old Leven.

Indeed, divers laws it had in type, that concern us in truth: Among the rest this, for one, in the Text, The Lamb would not be eaten, with every kind of bread: Every paste was not for this Feast; not levened, in any wise. Such an antipathie there was between leven, and it, as it might not (I will not say, come to the board; but not) be endured in the house, all the Feast long, though it were neither tasted nor touched. If it were not thrown out; if any never so little of it remained in any corner, the Law was broken, the Feast illegitimate. To make it up then a perfect Passeover; here is another yet (which I called our Passeover duty:) the not staying still, in our old leven; but passing over (as it were) to a new paste, a necessary condition for the right holding this Feast. For sweet bread was so proper to the Passeover, as (Luke 22.) ye shall find, they be but two divers names, of one and the same thing.

Exod. 12.19.

Luk. 22.7.

1 Cor. 10.11.

Omnia in figuram illis (saith the Apostle) With them, all was in type: What is the spirit of this letter? What meant by leven? The Apostle tels us, the old leven of Ægypt, is our former vicious course of life, sowred with the leven of the old Adam; and Nova Conspersio is newness of life. The time of offering the Lamb, is the time of casting out this. Meet, if we would have our sins pass from us, we should pass from them also, and throw their leven out.

And well is Sin resembled to leven. Leven will grow noisome, if it be kept long: and sin, if it have lien long in us, or we in it, turns to a certain sowrness, that we our selves feel an unpleasant savour or upbraiding of it, in our souls. Our Saviour felt it so (I am sure;) the Vinegar he took, shewed the relish of it. By which upbraiding, we find, we need an Expurgate for it, as it were a corrupt humour in our souls, that needed to be purged out.

Generally, all old leven whatsoever, namely, two sorts of it, 1. κακία, and 2. πονηρία turned, Naughtiness and Malice. The words, in their own nature (as they properly signifie) 1. One noteth a loose licentious lewdness, lightly ending in Lust. 2. The other, an unquiet working wickedness, that will take pains to do a shrewd turn, commonly the effect of Malice. The sins of Lust are well set out, in old corrupt leven: for, so they end, most-what in corruption, and rottenness. The sins of malice likewise. For, as leven, it makes men swell one against another as if they would burst; and sowr are the fruits of it, and unpleasant, as any leven in the world

These two to be cast out, as those that have a special antipathy with this Feast and Offering. For, no agreement between a foul life, and the Feast of an undefiled Lamb. Nor, no fellowship, between sowr malice, and the feast of Sweet-bread. And these two are specially named, because they were the faults wherewith the Corinthians specially were levened, to whom he writes. Incest (at the first Verse:) as (we know) Corinth heard evil for looseness: There is Nequitia. And again, swelling one against another (at the second) there is Malice.

Sed &c.

As, to rid our selves of this leven; so to furnish our selves (as with new paste) with the two levenless vertues, Sincerity and Truth. Sincerity (that is) cleanness of life: (a word thought to be taken from Honey, which is then mel sincerum, when it is sine cera, unmingled, without Wax, or any baggage in it.) εἰλικρίνεια, the Greek word is (properly) of uncounterfeit wares; such, as we may κρίνειν ἐν ἡλίῳ, bring forth, and shew them in the Sun; as need not the false light of a close shop, to utter them.

But,

But Truth, that, runs thorow all; flat againſt all kind of leven: if it have any manner leven, true it is not; and ſo, out it muſt.

Of leven in the Goſpel, I find three ſorts intrepreted to our hands, that we cannot miſtake. Chriſt willed his Diſciples, to beware of the leven of the Phariſees and Sadducees. It is after ſaid, He meant it of their doctrin, that was full of corrupt leven. 1. The Phariſees; of the leven of ſuperſtion, conſiſting in Phylacteries, phraſes, and obſervances, and little elſe. 2. The Sadducees; of a leven that ſmelt ſtrong of profaneneſs, in their liberty of propheſying, calling in queſtion Angels, and Spirits, and the Reſurrection it ſelf, 3. And a third leven Chriſt names, the leven of Herod; 'ware that too: Many times, it is the bane of true Religion, when Gods truth and worſhip muſt be moulded up with Jeroboams, and with Herods ends; ſquared to them juſt, as is fitteſt to do their turns; that Jeroboam may be ſafe. No ſuperfluous Caveat: many times, this marreth all. Let all be abandoned; Phariſees, Sadducees, Herods: and the truth take place. 1. The leven of Doctrine. Matth.16.6. 12. Mark 8.15.

Now, as in that place, the Phariſees leven is Doctrine: ſo, in another, I find, that Chriſt expounds it hypocriſie: and that is meerly oppoſite to truth, in meaning, ſpeaking, and dealing. The Phariſee was a great dealer with this leven. He had it on his face, to make him look ſowr; men might take notice, when they faſted. He had it on his tongue; Rabbi, O you teach the truth, you reſpect no mans perſon; when they ſought to cut his throat. He had it in his whole courſe; all for ſhew; to ſeem that, they were not: Gabbatha, without; and Golgotha, within. 2. The leven of life. Luke 12.1. Matth.6.16. Matth.23.7. 27.

But yet, even they, though they uſed it, they taught it not for a doctrine; not avowed not the lawfull uſe of it; that one might ſpeak the one half without, and the other half within: (as our Phariſees now do.) Men, ye ſhall never have any ſincere truth from them. Search them, they have ſtill a piece of leven in their boſome: ſpeak ſo, and deal ſo, as if they would take the ſentence by the end, and turn it clean againſt the Apoſtle; to purge out all his ſweet bread, all ſincerity, and truth; and hold their Paſſover in leven, or not at all. Antichriſts goat may be ſo eaten: The Lamb Chriſt cannot. To the Lambs nature (that is ſincere) nothing ſo contrary, as this, to mean, ſpeak, or deal unſincerely.

You ſee a leven of Doctrine, and Life: (that is, the leven of the Goſpel.) A third there is (the leven of the Epiſtle) and that is of Corrupt company: and that is (in very deed) the leven of this Text. For, when the Apoſtle would have this leven here purged, what means he? To have the inceſtuous Corinthian removed, and caſt out of the Fellowſhip of the Faithfull, by the Cenſures of the Church. True: but thoſe not in every mans power. But, this is? To avoid, and ſhun them, and their company: ſo, we may; and ſo, we are bound to caſt them out. 3. The leven of company corrupt in Life.

There is very great danger in perſons ſo levened; great ſcandal, even to the well-diſpoſed: but far greater danger, to the moſt; that will ſoon take this leven: Our nature is apt to take it; it is eaſily fermented that way. As much good leven, as will ſerve three pecks, ſo much evil will do more then ſerve three buſhels, and never leave till it have ſowred them all. That, except this be looked to, all the reſt will be to ſmall purpoſe.

Now, when Saint Paul ſpeaks of perſons thus levened, he means not onely ſuch, as are lewd of life, tainted that way: but, even ſuch alſo, as are unſound in matter of Religion, and have a ſowr ſavour that way. Here (to the Corinthians) he would have the inceſtuous perſon caſt out, with his levened life: But (to the Galatians, after) he preſſeth the ſame point againſt another kind; ſuch as levened the Goſpel, with Moſes ceremonies, and ſo corrupted the truth in Religion; and them he would have cut off: both Corinthian and Galatian leven both muſt out. And mark, upon the ſame reaſon, both; and in the very ſame words. That a little leven doth not a little hurt; but otherwhile, marreth the whole batch of bread. Evil doctrine is againſt Truth: Evil life, againſt walking in the Truth: Evil company will bring us to both. Therefore, away with them: but, away with this eſpecially. If they will not purge out their leven, purge them out. And that eſpecially, againſt this Feaſt, in the nature whereof, there is a contrariety to all leven. In Religion. Gal.5.3.4,&c. 9. 12. Gal.5 9.

Now then, this is our concluſion: Come we muſt, and Itaque celebremus. This is our Caution: Thus we muſt come, Non in fermento, ſed azymis. If we ſay; it skils not, whither we come; Itaque meets with us: If we ſay; it skils not, how we come, Non in fermento meets with us too. It is with us here, as with the Prophet; when we would heal one, the other breaketh forth. If we preſs Non in fermento, we loſe Itaque epulemur, they come not all: No Feaſt. If we urge Itaque epulemur, they come; how? levened, and unlevened, all; clap them down together. We need a Quomodo intrâſti huc? to keep ſome back: And yet, we need a Compelle intrare, to bring others in. But, the manner, but the caution, remember that. The main concluſion is, that we come. The other we muſt not leave undone: But, this (peremptorily) we are bound to do. Hoſ.7.1. Matth.22.12. Luke 14.23.

The Apoſtle binds us to do it: The time to do it, now. For, if this follow: Chriſt is offered, Therefore we are to come to His feaſt: This will follow as ſtrongly, Chriſt is now offered, therefore let us now come. Go by degrees: The Chriſtian Paſſover (our Paſſover) a time it muſt have; ſometime it is to be kept. We would do it, at that time, when it were beſt for us to do it. When beſt for us to do it, but at the time, he did it himſef? And that did he, even at this feaſt, now. Now then, at this feaſt, it is moſt kindly to do it: moſt like to pleaſe him, and to proſper with us.

And indeed, if at any time we will do it, Quando Paſcha, niſi in Paſcha, what time is the Paſſeover ſo proper, as at the feaſt of the Paſſeover? Quando tempus epulandi, niſi quando tempus immolandi? When the time of his receiving, as at the time of his offering? Therefore they both, the feaſt and the Lamb, have one name; to ſhew the near conjunction, that ſhould be between them. When the day cometh, to remember what was done on the day; and so, what we to do, on that day. Pascha quod celebramus, to put us in mind, of Pascha quod epulamur. For, tell me, will the Sacrifice commemorative, or the Sacrament communicative ever fall more fit, then, when that was offered, which we are to commemorate, and to communicate withal? Is not the fittest time of doing it, the time when it was done? of Hoc facite, then, when Hoc factum est? So that, without any more adoe, the season it self pleadeth for this effectually.

And now is the time of Expurgate, for our bodies: the corrupt humours, that leven it, now we cast them out. And why not, now likewise, those that lie sour in our souls? And even Natures Passeover, the general Passeover is even at this time, both in heaven and earth. Above, in heaven: where, the Sun having past over all the Signs is come about, and renews his course, at the first Sign in the Zodiack. And beneath in earth, from the sharp time of Winter, and fermenting time of the earth, to the renewing sweet time, the time of the Spring, wherein there is nova conspersio, in Nature it self. And why should not the Passeover of grace be now likewise in season, and have due concurrence with Nature?

Sure, all agree well, if we but agree our selves. And if we agree, for our parts, to do the days duty: Christ will not be behind with his, the dayes benefit. But, during our time, and in the hour of death, be our true Passeover; shielding us from all deadly mishaps, while we here live; and giving us a sure and safe passage at our end, even a passage to the last and great Passeover of all; the truth of that, whereof theirs was the shadow, and ours the image now. For, we have not yet done with our Lamb; nor the work of this Passeover is not yet fully accomplished.

There is is a further matter yet behind: for as this Feast looketh back, as a memorial of that, is already past and done for us: so doth it forward, and is to us a pledge of another, and a better yet to come,
Apoc. 19. 7. The Feast of the marriage of the Lamb here, that is our Passeover: where, whosoever shall be a guest, the Angels pronounce him happy and blessed for ever.
Matth. 25. 21. That, is the last and great Feast indeed, when all Destroyers and all destructions shall cease and come to an end for evermore; and we hear that joyfull voice, Transi in gaudium Domini; Pass over into the joy of the Lord; the joys of Heaven: Joys not mingled with any sour leven (as this worlds joy is) but pure and entire: nor transient (as that of this world) and ever flitting and forsaking us then soonest, when we think, we have best hold of them; but permanent, and abiding still. A Passeover, that will never be passed over, but last and continue a Feast to all Eternity. Of that, this here is a pledge, if we neglect it not, as if it were not worth the taking. And he, that at this time gave us this pledge, in his good time also bring us to the Passeover, whereof this is the pledge, even to the never passing, but everlasting joys, and happiness, of his heavenly kingdome, through the offering of his blessed Son the very Paschal Lamb. To whom with, &c.

A

Preached before the

AT

WHITE-HALL,

On the Eighteenth of Aprill, being Easter-Day,
An. Dom. 1613.

COL. Chap. III.

Igitur, ſi con-ſurrexiſtis Cum Chriſto, quæ ſurſum ſunt quærite, ubi Chriſtus eſt in dextera Dei ſedens.:
Quæ ſurſum ſunt ſapite, non quæ ſuper terram.

Ver. 1. If ye then be riſen with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God.
2. Set your affections (or minds) on things which are above; and not on things which are on the earth.

THe Wiſdom of the Church hath ſo diſpoſed of her Readings in theſe great Feaſts; as (lightly) the Goſpel lets us know, what was done on the day, (done for us) and the Epiſtle, what is to be done by us. To inſtance in this preſent: Surrexit Dominus verè, The Lord is riſen indeed (ſaith the Goſpel:) In quo con-ſurrexiſtis & vos, and you are riſen with Him (ſaith the Epiſtle.)

2. That which is in the Goſpel, is Chriſts Act, what he did: That which in the Epiſtle, our Agendum, what we to do.

3. Or rather, both ours: 1. what he did; matter of faith: 2. what we to do, matter of duty, Our Agendum upon his Act.

☞ The common ſort look to Eaſter-day, no further than Eaſter-day fare, and Eaſter-day apparel: and other uſe they have none of it. The true Chriſtian enquireth further, what is the Agendum of the feaſt, what is the proper Act of, Eaſter-day? The Church hath hers; and we have ours. Nothing more proper to a Chriſtian than to keep time with Chriſt: to riſe with him, this day, who this day did riſe. That ſo it may be Eaſter-day with us, as it was with him: the ſame, that was the day of his, be alſo the day of our riſing.

The Summe.

Thus then it lieth: Christ is risen; And, if Christ, then We. If we so be, then we seek: and that we cannot, unless we set our minds. To set our minds then. On what? One things above. Which above? Not on earth (so is the Text) but, where Christ is. And why there? Because, where He is, there are the things, we seek for, and here cannot find. There, He is sitting; So, at rest: And, at the right hand; so, in glory: Gods right hand, and so, for ever. These we seek; rest, in eternal glory. These Christ hath found: and so shall we, if we make this our Agendum; begin, this day, to set our minds; to search after them.

Because it is to the Colossians, the Colossus, or capital point of all, is, To rise with Christ: That is the main point. And if you would do a right Easter-dayes work, do that. It is the way to entitle us to the true holding of the Feast, That so we may, these two Opera Paschalia are commended to us. Things above, 1. to make them our seach, 2. to fix our minds on them. These two we read, quærite, sapite, in the Imperative: we may, in the Indicative, as well: ζητεῖτε is quæritis, as well as quærite; and φρονεῖτε sapitis, as well as sapite. If you read them imperative, thus: This ye are to do, to seek, to set your minds; then be they in præcepto, and per modum Officii, by way of precept, and in nature of a duty. If you read them indicative, thus: If you be risen, then you do seek, and set your minds; then, they be in elencho, and per modum signi, by way of trial, and in nature of a sign. Both well; and a good use of both.

The Parts lye thus. Two things are supposed: Two other inferred: And a third Two, we are referred to, or given hope of. The Two supposed, these: 1. Christ is risen. 2. and We with Christ: If ye be risen with Christ. The Two inferred, these: If risen, then 1. to seek; 2. then, to set our minds above, on things there, where Christ is. The two he referreth to, or giveth hope of, Rest with him in glory. 1. Rest, to sit: 2. Glory, at the right hand. And God maketh up all (the perfect number of seven:) For, eternal is the rest, and eternal the Glory, that is at his right hand.

These we heard of at his Birth, in the Epistle then. This we hear of again at his Rising, or second Birth, from the grave, in the Epistle, now. This we shall hear of again at his Ascension too. This is remembred in all, as the fruit of all; at every Feast, set before us, as our hope, and all we seek, To sit with Christ at the right hand of God.

Heb. 1.
Acts 1. 11.

I.

The two suppositions.

1 Christs rising.

IF Ye be risen. This seemeth prima facie to be but a single supposition: but being well looked into, resolves into two risings: 1. Christ's and 2. Ours: 1. He, and 2. We with him. Of which, the first (Christs) doth immutabiliter supponere; his; needs no If. It is not, If Christ be: but If we, with Christ. For, Christ is certainly. Three hundred years the World opposed it: Thirteen hundred (ever since) the World hath supposed it. And so let us: and so pass to our own, and begin every year, to lay our grounds anew; every Easter, to be teaching our rudiments over again.

There is an [If] that supposeth but mobiliter; may be, or not be, thereafter as we seek, and our minds be set. But yet (if ye mark it) is not his supposed, by it self, and ours inferred upon his; but ours supposed likewise: His, and ours (both) supposed under one; under one and the same If. And as they are close linked, that one supposition serveth for them: so are they woven together that one Preposition (σὺν) holdeth them: under one Si, and one σὺν both. The Apostle hath framed a new word here, for the purpose [con-surrexistis.] The Resurrection, we have heard of: The con-surrection we are now to hear, and take notice of.

Our Rising.

1 Si vos, If you.

To set our Suppose right, I ask two questions: 1. the one of these [If you:] 2. the other of these [If you be risen.] Si vos, if you: Why, doth the resurrection pertain but to some certain vos? Is it not Si omnes? concerns it not all? As Christ died, so is he risen for all: and shall not all rise with him? What do we then do with Si vos? Yes, all rise with him out of their graves: but, not all rise to the right hand after mentioned. A great part rise, to stand on the left: not to sit on the right hand of God. With that, the Apostle here dealeth. The resurrection reacheth to all: This resurrection, to such only as Seek, and set their minds.

2 Si consurrexistis, If you be risen.

The other, be risen (the tense) is that right? For, (ever) when we hear of the Resurrection, we are carried straight, to that of the dead, from their graves, at the latter day. We conceive: Well, if he be risen we shall rise: shall, in the future tense. But, here is newes of another, in the preter tense: (For, so it is; Be risen, not shall rise; be already, not shall hereafter.) It cannot be taken of that, which is to come: It should then be, Si consurgetis. But needs, of one present, or past: it is, Si consurrexistis.

2 Tim. 2. 18.

How then? Fall we in with them, qui dicunt resurrectionem jam esse factam, that say the resurrection is already past? Nor that neither. We are no Sadduces: Nor we are not of Hymenæus's sect, neither. But, this we believe: as there is one to come, of the body, at the last and great resurrection, which he treats of, to the Corinthians: so is there also one, which we are to pass here, of the mind's; which here he commendeth to the Colossians

1 Cor. 15.

And

And these two lead us directly to the two Resurrections, which Saint John (after) doth more expresly deliver, under the terms of first and second (Apoc. 20. 6.) And this withal, that all the good or evil, of that of the Corinthians, doth depend much upon the well or evil, passing, of this of the Colossians.

This we are to look after, to rise before; a resurrection now in being. This of ours imports us (we see) no less, than Christs own (which, I wish, well laid up in mind) since both are under one If, supposed alike, one no less than the other. Christ is risen, is not enough; nay, nothing at all, if that be all; if he be risen without us; he risen, and we lye still: if with this dayes resurrection on his part, there be not also a con-surrection on ours.

Now then we are to look to our If; that it supposeth aright. And if he be risen, to cry to him, Trahe nos post Te, to draw us with him, and not leave us still in our graves of sin. He said of himself, that if once he were exalted, he would make his magnetical vertue to appear, and draw all to him. All, but not all at once: but (as the Apostle saith) each in his order. And that order is to begin with the soul first, and draw it. For, the soul being (as the very Philosophers have acknowledged (it is Aristotles own word) drawn from above) will the more easily be drawn to τὰ ἄνω things above. It is kindly, it is con-naturall for it, to draw thither-ward. And then after, in the second place, together with it self, to elevate and lift up the flesh thither with it. For (as well observeth Chrysostome) these two were not thus joyned (the Spirit, and the flesh, I mean) that the flesh should pull down the spirit to earth, but that the Spirit should exalt the flesh to heaven. And this subliming or lifting up the Spirit, is the rising with Christ, here in the Text. The other, in his time and turn, to follow. But, if this go not before, the other will not come after, take that for certain. This then to endeavour; and this day to set in hand with it. For, this is the main point, that we find our selves risen with Christ; find it, or procure it: find it already, or procure it, as soon as may be.

Col. 1. 3. Joh. 12. 23. 1 Cor 15. 23.

Now, thus we shall know, if we be risen, and thus procure it, if we be not: If we seek, if we set our minds on things above: which is the double inference, upon the former double suppose: which I divide into the 1. Act, and the 2. Object. The 1. Act, Quærere, and sapere: the 2. Object, qua sursum.

II. The double Inference. 3. If we seek. 4. If we set our minds, &c. on things above.

Of the two acts, one referreth to action: (seeking, is a matter of endeavour. The other to the affection: (set your affection, or mind; it is both. There be two works arguing the Spirit: 1. Motion, and 2. Sense. Motion, in the one, Seeking: Sense, in the other, so it is turned (Phil. 2. 5.) Idem sentite, let the same mind be in you. There is Motus lasus, in them that seek not: and Sensus lasus, in them that savour not. To these two reduce all: 1. Quærenda sapere, 2. and Sapienda quærere: To mind, what we are to seek; and to seek, what we mind. Of these two 1. joyntly first: 2. then severally; and 3. last of their order.

I. The two acts joyntly. Seek, and set your minds. Mat. 16. 23. Prov. 19. 2.

Joyntly: for, dis-joyned they may not be. One is little worth, without the other. There be, that seek, and be very busie in it, and yet savour not the things that are of God. So sought a great Apostle once: and our Saviour did not let to tell him of it, οὐ φρονεῖς (the very word here) thou savourest not. Men, that are possessed with false principles, and yet fall a seeking; zealous in their way, but want true knowledg, to fix their minds aright. Now, without knowledg, (saith Salomon truly) the mind is not good: and we know, Mala mens, malus animus, the mind mis-led, will set the affections awry straight.

Will ye see them in kind? Look but to the end of the last Chapter before. There, they seek so, as they will neither taste, handle nor touch. So seek, as down they go to worship, not only God, but the Angels too. So seek, as spare not their own bodies, and yet wrong all the while; and yet with all their seeking, not risen with Christ, for all that. Why? For, quærunt, non sapiunt.

Cap. 2. 21. Verse 18. Verse 23.

On the other side: there be, that sapiunt, non quærunt; that sapiunt qua Christi, quærunt qua sua, Savour Christ, but seek themselves. Of whom the Apostle (Phil. 2. 21.) they have knowledg competent, but without so much as a spark of true endeavour: Pariter intelligunt nobiscum (saith Augustine) pariter non diligunt; Understand well enough, but coldly affected: So sit still, and seek not.

So that, both would be kept together; Quærite, and Sapite both. For, as in the body natural, it fareth between the stomach and the head: (a rheumatique head spoiles the stomach with distillations; and a distempered stomach fils the head with raw vapours, and soon mars the other:) So it is here: our mind mistaking, mis-leads the affection: and a wrong set affection puts the mind out of frame. That, in sunder they would not be, but joyned ever. Sapere, without quærere, will not rise, but lye still; and quærere, without sapere, will rise, but lead you astray.

Now severally. If we be risen, to move, and to seek: that is, to resolve, that with sitting still without seeking, what we are here willed to seek, will not be had. We shall not stumble on it, or hit upon it unawares; there needs a seeking. If our Saviour knew the way well, it is hard to hit, and few there be that find it. The short: there goeth search and enquiry to it; pains, and diligence are requisite: we shall not come thither, with the turning of a gin. It were great folly (when we see daily, things here beneath, without travel, will not be come by) once to think, things above will drop into our laps, without any seeking.

2. The Acts severally. 1. Seek. Mat. 7. 14.

To seek then: but, to do it to purpose. For, that which we call seeking, is nothing less. Those, to whom the Prophet Esay said (Chap. 21. 12.) Si quæritis, quærite, If ye will seek, why then seek; do it, in earnest; earneſt; it ſeems, they ſought ſo ſlightly, ſo ſlenderly, as it deſerved not the name of ſeeking. Pilate Joh. 18 38. asked, Quid eſt veritas? and then ſome other matter took him in the head, and ſo up he roſe and went his way, before he had his anſwer: He deſerved never to find what truth was. And ſuch is our ſeeking moſt what; ſeldome or never ſeriouſly: but ſome queſtion, that comes croſs our brain, for the preſent: Some Quid eſt veritas? ſo ſought, as if, that we ſought were as good loſt as found. Yet, this, we would fain have go for ſeeking: but it will not be. O ſi quæritis quærite (ſaith Eſay; look the place) The morning comes, ſo doth the night; that is, our dayes, ſpend apace; and we ſay, we will ſeek: If we will, Iſa. 21. 12. Joh. 20. 4. let us once do it indeed: ſeek it, as they did, this day; follow it hard, and make it our race, with the one; our morning-work, with the other.

I. Set your minds.

But, we ſhall never ſeek, as we ſhould, unleſs we put to the other word, Set our minds on them. For, will a man ever kindly ſeek that he hath no mind to? Never. The mind is all. Be it what it will, or whence it will, above or beneath, if we affect it not, we ſhall ſeek but faintly. That we may ſeek things Pro. 3. 14. above, as it is meet, we muſt priſe them; prize them, as a ſilver mine (ſaith Salomon:) as a treaſure hid in Mat. 13. 44. a field (ſaith our Saviour) and go ſell all, to compaſs them. Then ſhall we ſeek to ſome purpoſe.

But in the word φρονεῖν there is more. There is (I told you) idem Sentire, the ſenſe; (He that ſeeks, ſhould have as well eyes to diſcern, as feet to go about it: It is no buſineſs for a blind man, no more than for a lame, to ſeek:) And that is knowledg, which would be had too. To ſeek, we know not what, is but to err, and never find that we ſeek for. To quærere then; but, Sapere, to be wiſe in our ſeeking, to get us true directions; elſe, for all our ſeeking, we may be to ſeek ſtill.

Which φρονεῖν is a word, the Apoſtle much uſeth, as being very ſignificant, full, and forcible. Four things are in it: 1. To ſet the mind; the mind, not the phanſie: not to take up a phanſie, and fall to ſeeking, as we ſee many now adayes; no ground in the world, but their own conceipts. Yet ſeek they will needs, and have all the world follow them, and have nothing to follow themſelves, but their own folly. So as, being very idiots, they take themſelves, for the only men; And till they come into it, never was wiſe man in the world, that knew what to ſeek, or how.

2. It is then an act of the underſtanding (φρονεῖν) but not of it alone: for then νοῦν were enough. Yet the greateſt part make no matter of it, but even νόημα. It is, as to ſet our mind, not our phanſie; ſo, our, mind, not only to know it, but to mind it. It is Sentire, and Sapere; And it is beſt ſeen in Sapire, which is not only to diſtinguiſh taſtes; but, in and with the taſte, to feel ſome delight, to have a ſenſe of the ſweetneſs withal, which will make us ſeek it again plus magis: and without it, our ſeeking will be but unſavoury.

3. So to ſavour it, as we hold quærere, to be ſapere, that, to ſeek, is our wiſdom; that we do not raſhly ſapere, unleſs we do hoc ſapere, Hæc erit ſapientia veſtra (ſaith Moſes) This ſhall be your wiſdome, before Deut. 4. 6. God and man, and you ſo to reckon of it: even this, to ſeek things above; and to think, when ye are about that buſineſs, ye are about a point of high wiſdome; and that to performe it well, is the wiſeſt action of our life.

4. To hold it our wiſdom: and (laſt) I ask what wiſdom? Not that, which doth contemplate, that is Copia; but the active wiſdom, for that is φρόνησις rerum agendarum. To ſhew that not only our Grounds, for Judgment; but our Rules, for Action, are to be fet thence. Thither to get us, thence to derive our reaſons, why we do things, or leave them undone. Thus to caſt with our ſelves: this, that now I am about, He that ſitteth on high, at Gods right hand, what will He ſay or think of it? May I offer it to Him? Will He allow of it? Will He help me forward with it? Will He, in the end reward me for it? Yea, even Phil. 3. 20. our πολίτευμα (as to the Philipians) is to be from thence, even the wiſdom, that ſwayeth there, to be from Jam. 3. 15. above, de ſurſum. If it be not, S. James is ſomewhat homely with it.

3 The Order, Quærite, Firſt. I. Mat. 6. 33.

By this time, we know, what it is to ſeek, and what to ſet our minds. But, in the marſhalling theſe, there is ſomewhat, that quærite is called on firſt. 1. To teach us, that it is the firſt thing, we are to have care of; Chriſts primùm quærite makes quærite, to be primùm, to ſtand firſt. That we then do it the honour, to make it our firſt act, our riſing with him; at this feaſt, the, riſing of the year; and on this feaſt, in the morning, the riſing of the day. For, then He roſe.

2. It is firſt called on, becauſe (to ſay truth) there is more need of diligence, in this buſineſs, than ought elſe. Always, we have more ado, to quicken the affection, than to enform the judgment. And that did they, this day, know: who ſought, before they had light, while it was yet dark. So much did they know, diligence to import, in this buſineſs. The greateſt defect is in that point: therefore it needs firſt to be urged. For, though we ſee, yet we ſit ſtill and ſeek not.

III.

The thing referred to, or the Object Quæ ſurſum.

And now to the Object. Of ſeeking we ſhall ſoon agree: Generatio quærentium we are all (ſaith the Pſalm:) even a generation of ſearchers. Somewhat we are ſearching after ſtill Our wants, or our wanton deſires find us ſeeking-work enough, all our lives long. What then ſhall we ſeek, or where?

Pſal. 24. 6.

He (ſaith the Apoſtle) that will thus beſtow his pains, let it be, where? Above. On what? The things there: Quæ ſurſum he repeats in both; tels it us twice over: 1. Quæ ſurſum quærite; quæ ſurſum ſapite. Above it muſt be.

Judg. 9. 15.

And, of this alſo, we ſhall not vary with him, but be eaſily enough entreated to it. We yield preſently (in our ſenſe) to ſeek to be above others, in favour, honour, place and power, and what not? We keep the Text fully in this ſenſe: we both ſeek, and ſet our whole minds upon this. Altum ſapimus omnes; all would be above, Bramble and all, and nothing is too high for us

Mat. 20. 21.

It is true, here; for on earth, there is a ſurſum above: there be high places, we would not have them taken away; we would offer in them, and offer for them too, for a need. And, there is a right hand here too, and ſome ſit at it; and almoſt none, but thinks ſo well of himſelf, as why not he? Our Saviour Chriſt, when when it was phanſied, that he ſhould have been a great King upon earth, there was ſung ſtraight, for his right-hand place. Not ſo much as Good-wife Zebedees two ſons (that ſmelt of the Fiſher-boat) but, means was made for them, to ſit there.

But, all this while, we are wide. For, where is all this? Here upon earth. All our above, is above one another, here; and is Ambitious above; and further it mounteth not. But, this is not the Apoſtles; not the above, nor the right hand, he meaneth. No: not Chriſts right hand upon earth: but, that right hand, he ſits at, himſelf, in Heaven. The Apoſtle ſaw cleerly, we would err this error: therefore, to take away (as he goes) all miſtaking, he explains his above, two wayes. 1. Privativè: Non qua ſupra terram, Hear, you, not upon earth: His above, is not here, upon earth. This is, where not? 2. Then Poſitivè: to cleer it from all doubt, where; he points us to the place it ſelf, above, there above, where Chriſt is (that is) not on earth: Earth is the place, whence he is riſen. The Angels tell us, Non eſt hic; ſeek him not here Luk. 24. 6. now, but in the place, whither he is gone, there ſeek him; in heaven. Heaven is a great circle; where, in heaven? In the chiefeſt place: there where God ſits, and Chriſt at his right hand. That place ſeek: there ſet your minds.

So that, upon the matter, the fault he finds, the fault of our [above] is; it is, not above enough: It is too low, it is not ſo high, as it ſhould be. It ſhould be higher, above the hils; higher yet, above the clouds; higher yet, higher than our eye can carry, above the heavens. There now, we are right.

I.

And indeed the very frame of our bodies (as the Heathen Poet well obſerved) giveth thither, upward: The reaſons. ~~Cœlumque tueri Juſſit~~, and bids us look thither. And, that way, ſhould our ſoul make; it came from thence, and thither ſhould it draw again: And we do but bow, and crook our ſouls, and make them Curvæ in terras animæ, againſt their nature, when we hang yokes on them, and ſet them to ſeek nothing but here below.

2.

And, if Nature would have us no Moles, Grace would have us Eagles, to mount, where the body is. Luk. 17. 37. And the Apoſtle goeth about to breed in us, a holy ambition; telling us, we are ad altiora geniti, born for higher matters than any here: therefore, not to be ſo baſe minded, as to admire them; but to ſeek after things above. For contrary to the Philoſopher's ſentence, Qua ſupra nos nihil ad nos, things above they concern us not; he reverſes that: Yes (and we ſo to hold) Ea maxime ad nos, they chiefly concern us.

3.

Come to the laſt now. And why this place, above? I ſhall tell you: For, there is Chriſt, and Him we ſeek, to day, if it be, Eaſter day with us; and if we ſeek where he is, he is above, certainly. But he implyeth a further reaſon yet: Becauſe, in very deed, there, with him, are the things which we, of all other, ſeek for; and when all is done, all our ſeeking is to them referred, as to the end. We would not ever travel, but after our laborious toyling courſe here, find a place of reſt, and this we ſeek. But not this alone: but a ſeat of glory withal. Sit we would; but in ſome eminent place; not, at the left foot, but at the right hand; in light, and honour, as much as might be.

What the things above are, Reſt.

We ſeek reſt: Specially, they that are toſſed in a tempeſt, how do they deſire a good haven, a harbour of reſt! And ſure, here we dwell in Meſech, meet with much diſquietneſs. None but, ſometime, hath ſenſe of the verſe in the Pſalm: O that I had wings like a Dove! then would I fly and be at reſt. And the more our incolatus is prolonged, the more we ſeek it, find it how we may.

Pſal. 120. 5. Pſal. 55. 6. Mat. 12. 29.

And, it is not the bodies trouble ſo much, but invenietis requiem animabus, to find reſt to our ſouls; that is it. And, the ſoul is from above; and but in her own place; never finds it. Turn thee to thy reſt, O my ſoul, that is worth all. But, both are beſt: and not after all our turmoils here in this world, to hear non introibunt in requiem meam, in another world, but to be caſt into that place, where there is no reſt day nor night: but enter into His reſt, which (in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews) he ſo much beats upon.

Pſal. 116. 7. 95. 11. Chap. 3. 11. 18, 19.

And verily, if we ſeek reſt; glory we ſeek much more. For, for it, we are content to deprive our ſelves of all reſt, which otherwiſe we love well enough. And a reſtleſs courſe we enter into, and hold out in it, all our life long, and all to win it, though it be but a little before our death. For, no reſt will ſatisfie, or give us full content, unleſs it be on the right hand.

1. Glory.

Theſe two then we ſeek for; where are they to be found? Not in qua ſupra terram: Not here therefore: but folly to ſeek them here. We are by all means to avoid their error, that ſought, this day, to ſeek Luk. 24. 5. the living among the dead; a thing where it is not to be had.

Never ſeek, to ſet up our reſt here, in this tumultuous troubleſome place, this [a] vale of Achor right (as Hoſee;) this [b] Gnds (as S. James) a wheele ever wherling about, [c] quærens requiem & non invenit eam. Where, we ſhall ſoon be diſeaſed with a Surgite poſtquam ſederitis, after we ſit a little, quickly diſquieted again. The Prophet Mica tels us plaine, Non habetis hic requiem, here we cannot have it, this is not our reſt.

a Hoſ. 2. 15. b Jam. 3. 6. c Mat. 12. 43. Mic. 2. 10.

Nor never ſeek for true glory here? Why? Locus eſt pulicum, & culicum. Is is, the place of fleas and of gnats, this. In the garden, the place of our delight, we meet with worms; and there be Spiders, even in the Kings Palace. This place of worms and ſpiders, call ye this the place of glory, in duſt and cobwebs?

Say it be: yet ſuch is the nature of theſe two (ſuch as they be) the reſt, and the glory here, as they divide it ſtill: have ye one, ye muſt quit the other. They that are in glory, have not the quieteſt life: And they that are moſt at reſt, fartheſt off from being glorious. Reſt is here, a thing inglorious: and glory a Gen. 49. 14. thing reſtleſs. Thus it ſtands with us: Iſſachars condition like ſome; Reſt is good, though it be between a pair of panniers: If that like us, we muſt live in this eſtate, the moſt obſcure of all the Tribes. But, if we will have a name among the great ones of the earth, if it be glorious, then farewel reſt: We muſt take our lot among them, that live not moſt at eaſe, certainly. For, here they meet not, but are in ſunder ſtill.

But

7. At the right hand of God. Joh. 31. 22.

But ſay yet, we could make them meet; be at all eaſe, and in all glory together? ſeated, and ſeated at the right hand both. (Now come we to weigh the word Dei:) The right hand (here) ſuper terram is not the right hand of God, but of a man which ſhall wither, and within a certain of years (as the Prophets term is) fall from the ſhoulder. And ſo this reſt, and this right hand, we can have no hold of either. It is Acts 24. 28. ſaid in the Acts, After two years, Felix went his way, and another came Governour in his place. And then the places were changed; ſome were diſeaſed: and ſo is the caſe of all felicity here.

Upon the point then. Reſt, and glory we ſeek not barely: but, we ſeek them ſo as they may endure: and our wiſh is, if it might be, even for ever. And this may be had: but, it will be had at no right hand, but ad dexteram Dei; Gods only. Then, ſeek them there. Not here, where either we ſhall ſeek and not find them; or find one from the other; or, if both together, yet have no hold of them, but ſoon loſe them again. Seek, where we may,; nay, where we ſhall be ſure to find them; where, both will be had; and both together, and good aſſurance of both, even to eternity, as, at Gods right hand, a right hand that withereth not. If ye ſeek reſt, let it be in his holy hill; if glory, Gloria in excelſis, where Chriſt is already; Set, ſo at reſt; at the right hand, ſo in glory; at Gods right hand, and ſo, in both, for ever. There Pſal. 15. 1. Luk. 2. 14. they be, there ſeek, there ſet your minds.

To withdraw our ſelves, to ſequeſter our minds from things here below, to think of him, and of the place where now he is, and the things, that will bring us thither.

The Application to the time.

It is a prerogative, that a Chriſtian hath: to make it Eaſter, any day in the year, by doing theſe duties on it. They come no day amiſs. But, no day ſo fit, as this day, the very day of his riſing. Then, of very congruity; we to riſe alſo. For, no reaſon in the world, if he riſe, that we ſhould lie ſtill. Nor is it good for us, that he ſhould riſe without us, and leave us behind in the grave of our ſins ſtill. But, when, he, then we too.

Riſing is not ſo proper to the day, but the two ſignes, or two duties (call them which ye will) are as proper. For, this day was (indeed) a day of ſeeking. I know whom you ſeek, ye ſeek Jeſus that was crucified (ſaith one Angel:) Why ſeek ye the living among the dead (ſaith another?) To riſe, when he roſe; to ſeek

Mar. 16. 6. Luk. 24. 6. him, when he was ſought. This day, he was ſought by men, ſought by women. Women, the three Maries; Men, the two Apoſtles. The Women, at charges; the Apoſtles at pains. Early, by the one, earneſtly, by the other. So, there was ſeeking of all hands.

Luk. 24. 13. And they which ſought not, went to Emaus, yet they ſet their minds on him; had him in mind, were talking of him by the way. So that, theſe do very fitly come into the Agendum of this day: Thus to ſeek, and ſet our minds. At leaſt, not to loſe him quite, that day, we ſhould ſeek him; nor have our minds farther from him, that day, they ſhould be moſt upon him.

To the Sacraments.

The Church, by her Office, or Agendum, doth her part, to help us herein, all ſhe may. The things, we are willed to ſeek, ſhe ſets before us; the bleſſed Myſteries. For, theſe are from above: the bread

Joh. 6. 50. Heb. 9. 12. that came down from heaven; the blood that hath been carried into the holy place. And I add, ubi Chriſtus: For, ubi corpus, ubi ſanguis, Chriſti, ibi Chriſtus, I am ſure. And truly, here, if there be any ubi Chriſtus, there it is. On earth, we are never ſo neer him, nor he us, as then and there. There, in efficacia; and, when all is done, efficacie, that is it, muſt do us good; muſt raiſe us here, and raiſe us at the laſt day, to the right hand: and the local ubi, without it, of no value.

Luk. 24. 30 35 He was found in the breaking of bread: that bread She breaketh, that there we may find him. He was found by them, that had their minds on him: to that end, She will call to us, Surſum corda, lift up your hearts: which when we hear, it is but this Text iterated, Set your minds, have your hearts, where Chriſt is. We anſwer, We lift them up; and ſo (I truſt) we do; but (I fear) we let them fall too ſoon again.

Therefore (as before, ſo after) when we hear, Thou that ſitteſt at the right hand of the Father; and when again, Glory to God on high, all is but to have this. But eſpecially, where we may Sentire and Sa-

Heb. 6. 4. pere quæ ſurſum, and guſtare donum cœleſte, taſte of the Heavenly gift (as in another place he ſpeaketh:) ſee in the breaking, and taſte in the receiving, how gracious he was and is; was, in ſuffering for us; is, in riſing again for us too, and regenerating us thereby to a lively hope. And gracious, in offering to us, the means (by his Myſteries and grace with them) as will raiſe us alſo and ſet our minds where true reſt, and glory are to be ſeen.

That ſo, at this laſt and great Eaſter, of all (the Reſurrection-day) what we now ſeek, we may then find; where we now ſet our minds, our bodies may then be ſet; what we now but taſte, we may then have the full fruition of: Even of his glorious God-head, in reſt, and glory, joy and bliſs, never to have an end.

A

Preached before the

AT

WHITE-HALL,

On the four and Twentieth of Aprill, being Easter-Day.

An. Dom. 1614.

PHIL. Chap. II.

Ver. 8. He humbled Himself, made obedient, unto death, even the death of the Cross.

9. For this cause, hath God also highly exalted Him; and given Him a Name, above every name.

10. That at the Name of Jesus, every knee should bow, of those in Heaven, and in earth, and under the earth.

11. And that every Tongue should confess, that Jesus Christ is the Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

FOr this cause, God hath exalted him (saith the Text:) Him (that is) Christ. And, for this cause are we now here, to celebrate this exalting. Of which his exalting, this is the first day: and the Act of this day, the first step of it: even, his rising again from the dead. Hæc est clarificatio Domini nostri Jesu Christi, quæ ab Ejus resurrectione sumpsit exordium (saith S. Augustine upon this place:) This now, is the glorifying of our Lord Jesus Christ, which took his beginning, at his glorious resurrection. The Summe.

This, is the summe and substance of this Text, set down by that learned Father. The Division.

By him also, is it likwise divided to our hands: Into Humilitas Claritatis meritum; and, Claritas humilitatis præmium. Humility, the merit of glory (in the first verse of the four.) And glory, the reward of humility (in the other three.) Which two, here and ever, are so fast linked together, as, there is no parting them. I cannot, but touch; and I will, but touch the Merit (in the first verse:) It properly pertains, to another day. And so, come to Opus diei. I.

The matter of this exultation, is called here, his exaltation. II.

And is, of two sorts. By God (in the ninth verse:) And by us (in the two last.)

By God; And that, is double: Of his Person: Of his Name. Two Super's, either, one. Super exaltavit Ipsum, his Person; there is one (in the fore part of the ninth verse.) And Nomen super omne nomen, his name; there is the other (in the latter part of it.) And this is Gods. 1.

Then

2. Then cometh ours. For God exalting it Himself; He will have us to do the like. And not to do it inwardly alone: but even outwardly to acknowledg it for such: And sets down precisely this acknowledgment, how, He will have it made by us. Namely, two wayes: By the Knee: by the Tongue. The Knee, to bow to it (verse 10.) The Tongue, to confess it (Verse 11.) And both these, to be general; Every Knee, every Tongue. And not in gross, but deduced into three several ranks: All in Heaven, All in earth, All under the earth: which comprehends all (indeed) and leaves none out. This acknowledgment, thus, but only insinuated by the Knee, is by the Tongue more plainly expressed: And this it is, That Jesus Christ, is the Lord, Lord of all those three. This, to be done, and so done, as it redound all, to the glory of God the Father.

Verse 5. But then last, take the Use with us: that, since in Him, His humiliavit se-ipsum, ends in Superexaltavit Deus; His humbling Himself, in Gods Exalting; That the same mind be in us: And the same end shall come to us. As his end was, so ours shall be, in the glory of God the Father.

Propter quod, For this cause.

I. WE touch first upon this word. It is the Axis and Cardo, the very point, whereupon the whole Verse 8. Text turneth.

1. Propter. First, Propter; A cause there is. So God exalts ever, for a cause. Here, on earth, other-
Esay 22. 15. Ester. 3. 1. Nehem 4. 1. while, there is an Exaltavit, without a Propter quod. Some, as Subna, Haman, Sanballat, sometimes exalted; no man knows, wherefore. With God, there goeth ever; with men, there should go, a Propter quod, before Exaltavit.

2. Propter quod. Humiliavit. For a cause: for what? for this cause. And this now, casts us back to the former verse, where it is set down, Humiliavit: There it is, for His Humility.

Now, of all causes, not for that: if we go by this world, which (as the Proverb is) was made for the presumptuous. Not for that vertue of all others. A vertue (before Christ thus graced it) so out of request, as the Philosophers (look into their Ethicks) you shall not so much as find the name of humility, in the least of all their vertues. Well, this cast vertue, of no reckoning, is here made the Propter quod, of Christs exalting. As, Respexit humilitatem, the ground, of His Mothers Magnificat. And he, that by him brought Luke 1. 48. light out of darkness, at the first: will by him, bring glory out of humility at last, Or this book deceiveth us. With God, it shall have the place of a Propter quod; how poor account soever, we make of it here.

1 Ipse. But, this Quod, is a Collective, there be in it more points than one. I will but point at them.

Humiliavit ipse, He humbled. (He) which many times is idle, but here, a circumstance of great weight. He: so great a Person; being in the form of God, and without any disparagement at all, equall to God (as he Verse 6. tels us a verse before) He humbled. Ubi, Majestatem præmisit; humilitatem illustraret: That discourse of His High Majesty, was but to set out, to give a lustre to His humility. For, for one of mean estate, to be humble, is no great praise: It were a fault, if he were not. But, In alto nihil altum sapere: For a King (as David) to 2 Sam. 6. 22. say, I will yet be more humble: for the King of Kings, for Him, to shew this great humility; that is a propter quod indeed. Humiliavit ipse.

2 Se. Then secondly, that Humiliavit Ipse se. Ipse se: and not alius ipsum; that he was not brought to it by any other, but of his own accord, He humbled Himself. There is a difference between humilis, and humi-
Exod. 10. 16. liatus. One may be humbled; and yet not humble. Pharao was humbled, brought down, by his ten
Mat. 27. 32. plagues. Simeon of Cyrene, angariatus, to humble his neck under the Cross. This was, alius ipsos. But Ipse se, is the true humility. For then, it is laudabili voluntate, not miserabili necessitate: of a willing mind; and that is, commendable; not of force and constraint; for that is miserable. For this cause, that He humbled Himself.

3 Obediens. And thirdly, humiliavit ipse se (Obediens.) It was not Absolons humility, in shew and com-
2 Sam. 15. 5. plement; and his heart full of pride, disobedience, yea rebellion. (And yet it is a glory for humility, that even proud men take a pride, to shrowd themselves in her mantle: that pride wears humilities livery.) But it is not humble courtesie, but humble Obedience, that is the Propter quod. Till it come to that, many bear themselves in tearms and shew, low, ad humum, even touch the ground. But come once thither, to obedience; then, give lawes they must, but obey none, make others obedient (and ye will) but not factus obediens, not made themselves so. Christ was so made. And for this cause.

4 Factus. And somthing strange it is, why Humiliavit ipse se Obediens, would not serve and no more; but (factus) must be added. Somewhat there was, in that. An Obedience there is, that cometh from the dictamen of natural reason: in some things we so obey; we will do it, because our reason so moveth us. That is, Obediens natus. But, some other there be, wherein there is no other reason, to lead us to do it, but only this, that it is enjoyned us by a lawfull Superiour, and therefore we do it, and for no other cause. This is Obediens factus; and that in true proper terms, is the right obedience indeed. All look to the former; and very few Luke. 2. 51. obey thus. But even so obeyed Christ, & erat subditus illis. And for this cause then, that he was factus Obediens.

And

And Obediens factus: (usque) is afifth. For the very ſize, the extent of our obedience is a matter conſiderable. For, if we come to any, it is Agrippa's, In modico, in ſome petty ſmall matter. Or Saul's, in the refuſa of the ſpoile little worth. And, that obedience is little worth, that is ſo ſhrunk up: The drawing out, the usque of it, is all in all. How far obedient? until what? Usque quò? Which very Extent, or usque, is many times as much worth as the Obedience it ſelf. This alſo will come into the Propter quod. 5. Usque Acts 26.28. 1 Sam. 15.9.

Now many Usque's there be, in this, of his. 1. Usque naturam hominis, Thither. His very humanity had been humility enough. 2. Usque formam Servi, is more: How? Even to waſh the feet of thy ſervants (ſaid Abigail, and took her ſelf to be very humble in ſo ſaying) Thither he came too. Verſe 7. 1 Sam. 25.41. John 13.5.

What ſay ye to usque mortem, (the ſixth point?) Mortem? that will ſtagger the beſt of us. We love Obedience in a whole skin: Usque any thing, rather then that. And (to ſay troth) no reaſon in the world, Obedience ſhould come to that. Death is the wages of ſin, of diſobedience. Factus obediens? What, and factus reus too? Obedient, and yet put to death? Heaven and earth ſhould ring of it, if the caſe were ours. Well, even thither came his obedience: Et, ne perderet obedientiam, perdidit vitam. And rather then to loſe his obedience, loſt his life. This is indeed, a great Propter quod. 6. Mortem. Job 2.4. Rom. 6.23.

Enough now: For, death is ultima linea (we ſay.) Nay, there is yet an Autem more behind, to make it up full ſeven. For, One death is worſe then another. And his, was Mortem autem, the worſt death of all: the death of malefactors: and of the worſt ſort of malefactors, Mortem Crucis. 7. Mortem autem Crucis.

Nay; if he muſt die, let him die, an honeſt, a fair death. Not ſo: nay, Morte turpiſſimâ (ſaid they of it, that put him to it) the foulelt death of all other: usque mortem, mortem autem Crucis. Chap. 2.10.

Died, and, ſo died. Ever the (So) the manner is more then the thing it ſelf, in all of Chriſt. To be born (So) to be born, usque preſepe, to the Cratch: To die, nay (So), to die, usque Crucem, to the Croſs. Usque naturam hominis; usque formam ſervi; usque mortem maleficii. 1. So great a Perſon: 2. Thus to humble: 3. Humble his own ſelf: 4. To be obedient: 5. To be made obedient: 6. Obedient with an usque, ſo far: 7. So far, as to death: 8. And to a death, ſo opprobrious: Theſe extenſives, and intenſives put together, will (I truſt) make up a perfect Propter quod. And this, for humilitas claritatis meritum (in the firſt verſe.) Luke 2.7.

II.

Now, for Claritas humilitatis præmium (in the reſt.) And, will ye obſerve how they anſwer one another? For humiliavit there, here is exaltavit: For Ipſe there; Deus, God here: For Ipſe ſe, Deus ipſum. He humbled himſelf; God, exalted him. For humiliavit usque, there: here is exaltavit ſuper: For, factus obediens there; here factus Dominus. For mortem Crucis, the death of the Croſs there: here, is the glory of God the Father. Verſe 9.

This exalting, we reduced to two: 1. Of his Perſon; 2. Of his Name. Of his Perſon, in ſuper-exaltavit Ipſum: Of his Name (in the reſt of the verſe.) Super-exaltavit Ipſum.

To begin with his perſonal exaltation. Super-exaltavit, is a de-compound. There is, Ex and Super (both) in it. His exalting hath an Ex, whence or out of what: His exalting hath a ſuper, whither or whereunto.

Ex, from whence? from the two very laſt words, Mortem Crucis. His raiſing to life oppoſed to Mortem, the ſorrows of death. The giving of his Name; to Crucis, the ſhame of the Croſs. This days (Ex) was from death. His humiliavit had been ad humum, to the ground: Nay further, into the ground: Nay further yet, εἰς κατώτερα, into the very loweſt parts of it. His exaltavit then was from thence, from death: and not the gates of death (then, he was not in:) nor the jaws of death (then, he was not quite down:) out from inferiora, and interiora, the lowermoſt, and innermoſt rooms of death. From under the Stone, thence; from the Dungeon, with [a] Joſeph; From the bottome of the Den, with [b] Daniel; From the belly of the Whale, with [c] Jonas: (All three, Types of him.) There is his Ex. Ex. Ephes. 4.9. Pſal. 9.13. 49.15. Prov. 7.27. Matth. 28.2. [a] Gen. 40.15. [b] Dan. 6.23. [c] Jonas 2.10.

Now then, whither? From Death, to Life: from ſhame to glory: from a death of ſhame, to a life of glory. From the form of a ſervant, in factus obediens; to the dignity of a Soveraign, in factus Dominus. Super.

But will ye mark again? For, Non ſtout delictum, ſic donum (ſaith he, elſewhere.) So here, not as his humbling, ſo was his exalting: but more. That, of his humbling, was diſpatched in one verſe. This, of his exalting, hath no leſs then three. So the amends is large, three to one. Rom. 5.15.

But, that is not it I mean: but this Super, is not thither onely; but above and beyond it. From death to life: Nay, Super, more then ſo: Not to Lazarus life, to die again, but to life immortal: Ut vitam habeat, & abundantius habeat: That abundantius is immortality. From ſhame to glory: onely that? Nay, Super, to the glory of the Father, (that is) glory, that ſhall never fade, as all here ſhall. So downward, it was but usque, had his ſtint, ſo far, and no further: upward now, it is, Super, no ſtint, but higher and higher ſtill. John 11.44. John 10.10. 1 Pet. 1.4.

This day is the feaſt of the firſt fruits. On it, he had no more, but the firſt fruits of his exalting. He was exalted, but with Jonah's exaltation onely, from the lower parts, to the upper parts of the earth. But we ſhall follow him higher, to the exaltation of Elias, Super, above the clouds: Nay, Super, above the Stars, above the Heavens, and the heavens of the heavens: till we have brought him, from de profundis, to in excelſis; from the loweſt parts of the earth, to the higheſt place in Heaven, even to the right hand of God. And higher, we cannot go. Levit. 23.10. John 2.10. 2 Reg. 2.11.

Will ye obſerve yet once more, a kind of Omen or preſage, of both theſe exaltings; and that at the very time of his humiliation? For, even that his humiliation was acted, after the manner of an exalting (though in a meer mockery.) For, to all their diſgraces, they added this, of ſcorn: They lift him up, upon his croſs, for all the world as the Philiſtines did Sampſon; ſet him aloft, between the two pillars, to make ſport at him. This was his exaltation. And they gave him a Name too, Pilates title over his head: And bowed their knees; and cried, Ave Rex, (a kind of Confeſſion.) Judic. 16.25. Mar. 15.16. 19. 18.

This, as they performed it, was grande ludibrium; but as God turneth it, it was grande mysterium. For, to earnest, God turneth both. A kind of strife there seemed to be: the lower they, the higher God: the more odious they sought to make him, the more glorious God: He exalted his Person, in stead of the Cross, to his own high Throne of Majesty. And instead of Pilates title, gave him a Title of true honour, above all the Titles in the world.

And this, for Super-exaltavit ipsum: And so, I pass from the exalting of his Person (the amends for Mortem.) And come to the exalting of his Name, the amends for Crucis, (in the latter part of the same Verse.)

Dedit Ei Nomen.

He gave Him a Name. For, without a Name, what is exalting? What is his Nativity, without an Epiphanie? For, to those two, may these two here well be compared. His Resurrection is a very Nativity. To it doth S. Paul apply the Verse of the Psalm, Hodie genui te, Acts 13. And this Name giving, is as the Epiphanie; to make it apparent and known to the world. And indeed, why are things exalted or lift up, but that they may be in view, and notice taken of them? So that, they which be exalted, seem not so to be, till their so being be made publick, and, there go a Name of it abroad in the world.

Acts 13.33.

And sure, when men are so high, as higher they cannot be (as Kings) there is no other way to exalt them, left us, but this; to spread abroad, to dilate their names. Which every noble generous spirit had rather have, then any dignity; though never so high. For, being in their dignities, how far will they venture; even to jeopard dignity, life and all: and all, but to leave a glorious Name behind them? That, To give a Name, is even to exalt his very exaltation it self; and to make him, that is at the highest, higher yet.

Super omne nomen.

A Name he gave him: what Name? not (inter) among the famous names on the earth; but (Super omne nomen) above them all. Here is, Super upon Super: another Super to his Name, no less then his Person. That, above all persons; and this, above all names whatsoever. And now, by this time, his exaltation is compleat, and not one (Super) to be added more.

This Name, is named in the Verse, and it is the Name of Jesus. Of the giving first, and then of the Super of it.

Dedit Ei.

Of the giving, three doubts arise: 1. How given him, and others had it also? 2. How given now, and he had it before, even in the womb of his Mother? 3. How given him of grace, and yet he deserved it? Propter quod.

1.
Others had it.
Heb. 4.8.
Agg. 1.1.
Matt. 1.21.

How is this Name said to be given him, (as some special dignity) and others had it besides, and before him? Jesus the Worthy, the son of Nun: Jesus the High-Priest, the son of Josedek (to say nothing of Jesus, the son of Sirach.) They had it (it is true) but not given them by God, as He, by the mouth of the Angel, Gods Deputy. But they, by men, had men to their God-fathers. As now, we have a Sect or Society of Jesus: but they gave themselves the Name: God never gave it them. He gave it here, for humiliavit, a vertue they little regard: For he that doth but smell of it, is eo ipso, not meet to be of that Company. Other manner spirits, they.

Ser. at Christm. 1610.
Zac. 8.23.

I have before this, told you, of four main differences, between this Jesus, and all others. This one now, shall serve for all. All those Jesus, and every one of them, had need of, and were glad, to lay hold of the skirts of this Jesus, to be saved by him: otherwise, they had been falsely so called; lost men all. And so, will be willing, to resign this Name to him: that he may bear it (at least) with a main difference from them all.

Dedit Ei.
He had it before.
Matt. 27.42.
John 10.18.
Heb. 5.9.

But what tell ye us of it, now, after the Resurrection? do not we know it was given him, being yet in the womb? It was so; but, by a kind of anticipation. For, it never had the perfect verifying, the full Christendome (as they say) till this day. Not yet full three days since, they upbraided him with it: Jesus, a Saviour, A wise Saviour, and cannot save himself! For, he seemed to perish then, to loose his life in their sight: but, now, this day taking it again, he shewed, He did but lay it down, he lost it not: He was now Jesus indeed, able to save himself; and able to save all those that trust in him for their salvation. So, it was never in kind till now: but now, it was.

Dedit Ei.
3.
He did merit it.
1 Cor. 7.9.

But, if he gave it him, and ἐχαρίσατο, gave it him, of grace: where is the merit then, the Propter quod we spake of, what is become of that? Safe enough, for all this. That, which is otherwise due, it may be so chearfully parted with, as if it were a frank and free gift indeed. The Apostle elsewhere, hath taught us to ioyn debita and benevolentia in one: They will stand together well enough.

In many things, we suffer slander by the Church of Rome: In this among many; as if we pinched at Christs merit, and were loth, he should be allowed himself to merit ought, because of this ἐχαρίσατο that foundeth all upon grace. Wherein, it is well known, take the most that can be made of it, and we say no other thing, then do their own Schoolmen. It is not gratia adoptionis, this; the grace of adoption (as in us) that is here spoken of: It is gratia unionis, the grace of union. And that grace Christ had. For, seeing, in the humanity of Christ, there was not, there could not be, any possibility of merit, to deserve the uniting it self, or the being assumed into the God-head: to be so assumed, and so united, was that grace, we term, the grace of union. Other grace, we know none in Christ. But being once so united, there was in him, to deserve, and deserve again, and that amply. Propter quod, might then be truly said of him, every way.

1 Cor. 15.27.
Esay 43.11.

This, for the giving. But now, how is this Name, said to be above all names? what, above the Name of God? We may say, with the Apostle, When he saith, God did give it Him, it is manifest, He is excepted, that did give it Him. But we need not so say; for, this is one of Gods own Names. I am (saith he) and besides me, there is no Saviour.

How is it then given him? Accepit ut homo, quod habebat ut Deus. What, as God, he had: as Man, he received: with his Nature, his Name; and the chief of all his Names, the Name of a Saviour. For, Above all, it is; Above all, to him; Above all, to us.

To

To him: for though many Titles of the Deity, ſound, and ſeem, to be more glorious; Yet he eſteems them all, not like this: Why? For no other reaſon, but that, they had not, nos homines, and noſtram ſalutem, in them. No Name he ſets by, like that, wherein, with his glory, is joyned, our ſafety. And this, of all, he made choice of (as to him, above all) that we might accordingly eſteem of him, that eſteems it above all, onely for our ſakes. Above all to Him.

But howſoever, to him: To us ſure, above all. For no Name, do we hold by, No Name under heaven, given us, whereby we may be ſaved, but it. To us more worth it is, then all: yea (I may ſay) then the very name of God. For, God in him reconcileth the world; without him, is enemy to it, and to us: So, with this Name, there is comfort in the Name of God: without it, none at all. The Name (ſure) which we have uſe of above all. For it is the Name, which in the depth of all our diſtreſs, by ſin or by miſery, we even adjure him by, ut rem nominis impleat, that he make good his own Name; ſhew, he bears it not for nought, and ſo, ſave us: That he would never ſo remember our wretched ſins, as that thereby to forget his own bleſſed Name: That Name ſpecially, which he of all other moſt eſteemeth: and ſo, of all other will leaſt forget. To him then, and to us both; it is Nomen ſuper omne nomen. And, ſo let it be, even Suprema lex, ſalus; and ſupremum nomen, Jeſus. To ſave, the higheſt law: And the Name of a Saviour, the higheſt Name. Let it ſo be, let it ever ſtand higheſt, and let no name whatſoever, get above it. And ſo, I come to the tenth verſe: Above all to us. Acts 4.12. 2 Cor. 5.19.

That at the Name of Jeſus, &c. Verſe 10.

To give him ſuch a Name, is one gift: To give him, that for ſuch an one, it ſhould be reputed and taken, is another; For, given it may be, on his part; and not acknowledged on ours. So that, this is a new degree. At the Name of JESUS.

That God, though he have ſo exalted it, yet reckons it not exalted, unleſs we do our parts alſo, unleſs our exaltation come too. At which words, comes in our duty: the part that concerns us. Thus to eſteem it Super omne nomen, above all: And in ſign we ſo do, to declare as much. And therein, he leaves us not to our ſelves, but preſcribes the very manner of our declaration, how he will have it: Namely, theſe two ways: The knee to bow to it; the tongue to confeſs it.

Now, theſe are outward acts, both. So then: firſt we are to ſet down this for a ground; that the exalting of the ſoul within, is not enough. More is required by him: more to be performed by us. He will not have the inward parts onely, and it skils not for the outward members, though we favour our Knees, and lock up our lips. No: Mental devotion will not ſerve: He will have, both corporal and vocal, to expreſs it by. Knee and Tongue.

Our body is to afford her part, to his glory: and the parts of our body: And namely, theſe two, the Knee, and the Tongue. Not onely the upper parts, the Tongue in our head: but even the nether alſo, the Knee, in our leg. The words be plain, I ſee not how we can avoid them.

For the Knee, two things: 1. He would have it bow. 2. He would have it bow to his Name. Bow, firſt: For, what better way, or more proper, then by our humility to exalt him, who for his humility was exalted? Or what way more fit, to expreſs our humility by, then by this ſign of humbleneſs? For a ſpecial way it is of exalting, or making a thing high, by falling down, and making our ſelves low before it. Then ſecondly, That God careth for our knees, will be ſerved with them. Negatively; he will not have them [a] bow to Baal. Poſitively; he will have them bow to himſelf. Will ye believe him, if he bind with an Oath? I have ſworn (ſaith he) by my ſelf that every knee ſhall bow to me, Eſay 45.23. And will ye make God forſworn? And it cannot be ſaid, this is Old Teſtament: For even in the New, Rom. 14.11. theſe very words are applied to Chriſt, as meant to be fulfilled in, and to him. Knee bow, 1. 2. [a] 1 Reg. 19 18.

But, this here in the Text, is more ſtrong: that, it is aſſigned him (this honour) as a part of his reward, for Mortem crucis. And ſhall we rob him, or take from him the reward of his Paſſion.

We begin our Liturgie every day, with the [b] Pſalm: (and we had it from the Primitive Church, they did begin theirs with the ſame) Wherein we invite our ſelves to it: Come, let us worſhip, and fall down, and kneel before the Lord our maker. Shall we ever ſay it, and never do it? Is not this to mock God. [b] Pſal. 95. 6.

* They in the Scripture, They in the * Primitive Church, did ſo, did bow. And verily, he will not have us worſhip him like Elephants, as if we had no joynts in our Knees; he will have more honour of men, then of the pillars in the Church. He will have us to bow the Knees: And let us bow them in Gods Name. * Flexis genibus Orantes Reges. David, Pſal. 95 6. Solomon, 2 Kin. 8. 58.

Ezekias, 2 Chro. 29. 30. Prophetæ Daniel, Dan. 6. 10. Eſdras, Eſ. 9. 5 Micæ, Mic. 6. 6 Chriſtus ipſe, Luc. 22. 41. Apoſtoli Petrus, Act. 9. 4. Paulus, Eph. 3. 14 Jacobus. Hegeſio 5 *lib apud Hiero. To bow the Knee, and to his Name, to bow it. For, this is another prerogative. He is exalted, to whoſe Perſon Knees do bow: but he, to whoſe Name onely, much more. But the cauſe is here otherwiſe. For, his Perſon is taken up out of our ſight: all we can do, will not reach unto it. But, his Name, he hath left behind to us, that we may ſhew by our reverence and reſpect to it, how much we eſteem him; how true the Pſalm ſhall be, Holy and reverend is his Name. Bow to His Name. Acts 1.9. Pſal. 16.2. Pſal. 111 9.

But if we have much adoe, to get it bow at all: much more ſhall we have, to get it done to his Name.

1. There be, that do it not.

2. What speak I of not doing it? There be, that, not onely forbear to do it themselves, but put themselves to an evil occupation, to find faults where none is, and cast scruples into mens minds, by no means to do it

3. Not to do it at his Name? Nay, at the holy Mysteries themselves, not to do it: Where, his Name is (I am sure) and more then his Name, even the body and bloud of our Lord Jesus Christ: And those, not without his soul: Nor that, without his Deitie: Nor all these, without inestimable high benefits of grace, attending on them. And yet they, that would be glad and fain, a Pardon for this life, or some other Patent, with all humility to receive upon their knees: This, so great, so high, so heavenly a Gift, they strain, and make dangerous, to bow their Knees to receive it: as if it were scarce worth so much. But, it hath ever been the manner in Christs Church, whether we [a] offer to him, [b] or receive ought offered from him, in this wise to do it.

[a] Matth. 2. 11.
[b] Chrys hom. ad Pop Antioc.61. Ambros.in Psa. 118 bis.& lib. 3 cap.12. De Spir.S. Aug.Epist.120 cap.17.

But, to keep us to the Name: This is sure, the words themselves are so plain, as they are able to convince any mans conscience: And there is no Writer (not of the Ancient) on this place, that I can find [c] (save he, that turned all into Allegories) but literally understands it, and likes well enough we should actually perform it.

[c] Amb Hexam. lib 6 cap.9. Hiero in Esa. 45.ver.23. Cyril in Esa. To.4 Orat.3.

Yet will ye see, what subtilties are taken up, to shift this duty?

1. All Knees are called for, and all have not Knees. Here are three ranks reckoned: and two of them have none. What is that to us? we have: To us, it is properly spoken, and we to look to it. And if this were ought, that the spirits in Heaven and Hell have no bodies, and so no Knees: Why, they have no Tongues neither properly, and then by the same rule, take away confessing too, and so do neither.

But the Apostle, that in another place, gives the Angels tongues, (with the tongues of Men and Angels,) might as well in this place give them Knees: they have one, as much as the other. And in both places humanum dicit, he speaks to us, after the manner of men: that we by our own language, might conceive, what they do. For sure it is, the spirits of both kinds, as they do yield reverence, so they have their ways, and means, to express it, by somewhat, ἀναλογὸν to the Knee. They do it, their way: we to do it, ours. And this is ours: let us look to our own then, and not busie our brains about theirs. But for us, and for our sakes they are divers times expressed in the Revelation, even doing thus, falling down before him.

1 Cor.13.1.
Rom.6.19.
Rev.4.10. 5.8.14.7.11.

2. Secondly, why to this Name, more then to the Name of Christ? There want not reasons why.

The Name of JESUS.

Christ is not, cannot be, the Name of God: God cannot be anointed. But, Jesus is the Name of God, and the chief Name of God (as we have heard.)

Esa.43.11.

The name Christ, is communicated, by him to others, namely to Princes: So is not Jesus: that is proper. Ego sum, & praeter me non est alius. And ever that which is proper, is above that which is holden in common.

Christ is anointed, to what end? to be our Saviour. That is the end then. And ever, the end is above the means: ever the name of health, above the name of any medicine.

But, when we find expresly in the verse, this Name is exalted above all names, and this act, limited, to it, in direct words; and so, this Name above them, in this very peculiar: Why seek we any further.

3. Thirdly, What? to the two syllables, or to the sound of them? What needs this? Who speaks of sound or syllables? The Text saith, do it to the Name. The name is not the sound, but the sense. The caution is ease then: Do it to the sense; have mind on him that is named, and do his Name the honour, and spare not.

4. Fourthly, But it cannot be denied, but there hath superstition been used in it. Suppose there hath. And almost, in what not? In hearing of Sermons now, is there not superstition in a great many? What shall we do then? Lay them down? Abandon hearing as we do Kneeling? I trow, not: but remove the superstition, and retain them still; do but even so here, and all is at an end.

2 K.18.4.

Indeed, if it were a taken-up worship, or some humane injunction; it might perhaps, be drawn within the case of the brazen Serpent. But being thus directly set down by God himself; in us, there may be superstition; in it, there can be none. And, if it be in us, we are to mend our selves, but not to stir the act, which is of Gods own prescribing. It was never heard in Divinity, that ever superstition could abolish a duty of the Text.

That we set our selves to drive away superstition, it is well: But it will be well too, that we so drive it away, as we drive not all reverend regard and decency away with it also. And are we not well toward it? We have driven it from our head; for we keep on, of all hands: And from our Knees; for, Kneel we may not: we use not (I am sure.) Sure, heed would be taken, that by taking heed we prove not superstitious, we slip not into the other extreme, before we be aware: Which, of the two extremes, Religion worse indureth; as more opposite unto it. For, believe this, as it may be superstitiously used, so it may irreligiously be neglected also.

Look to the Text then, and let no man perswade you, but that God requireth a reverent carriage, even of the body it self: And namely, this service of the Knee; and that, to his Sons Name. Ye shall not displease him by it, fear not: Fear this rather, for the Knee, if it will not bow; that it shall be stricken with somewhat, that it shall not be able to bow. And for the Name, that they that will do no honour to it; when time of need comes, shall receive no comfort by it. And so I leave this point.

The tongue. Psal.30.12. 57.8.

For, the Knee is not all: He further requires somewhat, from the Tongue. And, reason: That member of all other, the Psalmist calls our glory: a peculiar, we have more then beasts: They will be taught to bow, and bend their joynts: We have Tongues besides, to do something more then they. And indeed, the Knee is but a dumb acknowledgment; doth but signifie implicitè: but a vocal confession, that doth utter our mind plainly. And so, is looked for, at our hands.

To confess.

This he calls, ὁμολόγησις. Three things are in it: First, λόγος: speak we must, say somewhat. And secondly,

ſecondly, ἁμῶ; do it together; not ſome ſpeak, and ſome ſit mute. And thirdly, ὁξ ſpeak out, not whiſpering, or between the teeth; but clearly and audibly. And this is ὁξομολόγησις. And it was the praiſe of the Primitive Church, this, that joyntly they did it, and aloud; that their Amen (as S. Hierome ſaith) was like a clap of thunder; and their Alleluja as the roaring of the Sea: And no praiſe it is to us; who, as our joynts are ſtiff to bow, ſo our voices are hoarſe to confeſs. We can neither ſee the former, nor ſcarce hear the latter; as if (there being but two duties in the Text) we meant to ſuppreſs them both.

The Knee, and the Tongue: Why the Knee firſt? why begins he there? They be marſhalled right. For, having by our Knee bowed, put our ſelves in mind of due regard of him in fear and reverence; we are then the fitter to ſpeak of him, and to him, with that reſpect is meet: And, not be ſo homely with him, as in their geſture and ſpeech both, ſome are: as if they were hail fellow, even familiar with God. And all (forſooth) as they call it, to caſt out the ſpirit of bondage. From a heart poſſeſſed with the humble fear of God, from ſuch an heart, Confeſſion is ever moſt kindly: Faith being as the heart; and fear being as the lungs; (ſo the Fathers compare them:) It will get an heat, and an over-heat (our faith,) if by fear, as cool air, it be not tempered: But, faith and fear together, make the bleſſed mixture. Knee firſt, and then tongue.

The Tongue, and every Tongue; as the Knee, and every Knee: they to bow all, and theſe all to confeſs. But for all that, not all alike. They, in heaven, caſt down their crowns, and fall down themſelves of their own accord: And confeſs him, ſinging, as at his birth, and in the Revelation divers times. They under the earth do it too, but not ultrò, are thrown down, and even made his foot-ſtool. So; down they go, though ſore againſt their wills: And confeſs him too, though roaring, and as it were upon the rack. They, on Earth (as in the midſt) partake of both. The better ſort, with the Angels, get them to their Knees gladly; and chearfully confeſs him: The reſt (as Infidels, and ſome Chriſtians little better) are forced to fall backward, and made in the end to cry, Viciſti Galilæe, though they gnaw their tongues when they have done. Every Knee. Every Tongue. 1. Revel. 4. 10; Luke 2. 14. Rev. 15. 3. 4. 8. 5. 9. 2. Pſal. 110. 1. Mark 9. 26. 3. John 18. 6. Revel. 16. 10.

So, we ſee our lot: One way, or other, we ſhall come to it, all: if not now, in die illo: Which is the reaſon, that Rom. 14. 11. the Apoſtle applieth this place in Eſay, to Chriſts ſitting in Judgement, at the latter day. Exalted, he ſhall be, with our good wills, or whether we will or no. Either fall on our Knees now; or be caſt flat on our faces then: Either confeſs him cantando, with Saints and Angels; or ululando, with Devils and damned ſpirits. For, the Father will be glorified in the Son, by the glorious Confeſſion, of them that yield; or the glorious confuſion, of them that ſtand out.

The Tongue, and every Tongue: that is, every Speech, Dialect, Idiome, Language, in the world, ſtand charged with this Confeſſion. Omnis ſpiritus, every ſpirit to give breath; and Omnis Lingua, every Tongue to be as a Trumpet, to ſound it forth. And, where are they then, that deny any Tongue the faculty here granted; Or bar any of them the duty here enjoyned? That lock up the publick Confeſſion (the chief of all other) in ſome one Tongue or two, and ſend forth their Superſedeas to all the reſt? No, his Title here, hath more Tongues then Pilate's on the Croſs: That had but three; this, hath every Tongue, what, where, whoſoever, none except. A Præludium whereof was in the Tongues ſent from Heaven, whereby every Nation under Heaven, heard, each in their own Tongue ſpoken, Magnalia Dei, the glad tidings of the Goſpel. Every Tongue. Pſal. 150. ult. Acts 2. 6.

But, though thus many Tongues, yet one Confeſſion, even this, that Jeſus Chriſt is the Lord. And a bleſſed Confeſſion is it (this) that Jeſus (that is) a Saviour, that He, that ſuch a one is the Lord: that not a fleecer, or a flayer, but a Saviour, hath the place. 2. That Chriſt (that is) one which ſaveth and cureth, unctione, non punctione, with anointing, not with ſearing or pricking, that we acknowledge Him to be the Lord. Lord: before, by that he is Son: And now Lord again, by vertue of his Propter quod. Confeſs that JESUS CHRIST is the LORD.

Lord, whereof? Nay not qualified, of ſuch a Place, Barony, County, Seigniory; but Lord in abſtracto. But, if we will qualifie him, we may. Lord of theſe three ranks of Confeſſours (here in the Verſe) and of thoſe three places and Regions, that contain them: 1. Lord of Heaven, he gave the Keys of it: 2. Lord of Earth; He hath the Key of David (and, if of his, of every Kingdome elſe:) 3. Lord of Hell; for, lo, the Keys of Hell and of Death, Apoc. 1. 18. Of Death, to unlock the grave: of Hell, to lock up the old Dragon, and his crew, into the bottomleſs pit. A great Lord: For, whither ſhall one go, to get out of his Dominion. Matth. 16. 19. Revel. 3. 7. Revel. 20. 3.

Well, if it be but to confeſs this, that is no great matter, we will not ſtick with him; who cannot ſay, Jeſus Chriſt is the Lord? That can no man (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſay it, as it ſhould be ſaid, but by the Holy Ghoſt. For, confeſſing Him Lord, we confeſs more things by him, then one. For, two things go to it. 1. S. Peter gives us one; 2. S. Paul, the other. 1. Domine ſalva, pereo, ſaith S. Peter. Save Lord, I ſink: A Lord to ſave. 2. Domine quid me vis facere? ſaith S. Paul. Lord, what ſervice wouldeſt thou I ſhould do? A Lord to ſerve. 1 Cor. 12. 3. Matth. 14. 30. Acts 9. 6.

S. Peters, we like well; to ſuccour and ſave us, when we are in any danger: He ſhall hear of us then. But S. Pauls Quid me vis facere? when it comes to that, then our confeſſion ſumbles, and ſticks in our teeth: Nay, then, Quis eſt Dominus noſter? we have no Lord (we) then. So, we play faſt and looſe, with our confeſſion; faſt, at ſuccour, looſe at ſervice; in, at one, out, at the other. Pſal. 12. 4.

But what ſpeak I of doing his will? when, if he do not ours, in each reſpect; if we have not this or that when we would, we fall from confeſſing, and fall to murmuring. And it fareth with us, not as if He were Lord, and we to do his will: but as if, we (indeed) were the Lords, and he to do ours: As if there were nothing between us and him, but he to do our turns, and then Tu autem Domine, his Lordſhip were expired, and at an end.

Upon the point, thus it is: we confeſs it, the wrong way; the Lord to be Jeſus; but not Jeſus to be the Lord. O Lord be Jeſus: but not, O Jeſus be Lord. O Lord be Jeſus, to ſave us: but not, O Jeſus be Lord, to command us. So that, all our humiliavit ſtill, is without factus obediens.

Ye ſee then, it is worth the while, to confeſs this, as it ſhould be confeſſed. In this wiſe none can do it, but by the Holy Ghoſt. Otherwiſe, for an Ore tenus onely, our own ghoſt will ſerve well enough. But that, is not it. Quid me vis facere? is it, that makes the Lord. He tells us ſo himſelf, and with a kind Luke 6.46. of admiration, that any ſhould think otherwiſe: How call ye me Lord (ſaith he) and do not as I will you?

but

Matth.7.21. Tit.1.16. As much to ſay, as, It is to no purpoſe, though you ſay Domine, Domine, double it, and treble it too, it will go for no confeſſion, if a factis negant come in the neck of it: if S. Pauls Quid me vis facere be left out?

Confeſs to the glory of GOD the Father. And this, is yet more plain, by the laſt words of all. Namely, that this confeſſion is ſo to be made, as it redound to the glory of God the Father. Whoſe great glory, it is, that his Son is Lord of ſuch ſervants, That men ſhall ſay, See what ſervants he hath! how full of reverence to his Name! how free, how forward to do his will! Herein is his Name much magnified. As on the other ſide, it muſt needs be evil ſpoken of,
Rom.2.24. and that among the very Heathen, when, not a Knee, got to bow; when this ſyllable (Lord) comes out of our mouth, but no Quid me vis facere? to follow it. When they ſee, how unſervice-like, our ſervice is; how rude our behaviour toward him, and his Name, whom we term Lord (indeed) but uſe him nothing ſo. But, come hither into his preſence, and carry our ſelves here, for all the world, as the fellow did before Auguſtus, of whom, Mecanas well ſaid: Hic homo erubeſcit timere Cæſarem. And ſo we, as if we were aſhamed, to ſeem to bear any reverence at all, to him, or his Name. It would not be thus. I am privie, there is no one thing, doth more alien thoſe, that of a ſimple mind refuſe the Church, then this; that they ſee ſo unſeemly behaviour, ſo ſmall reverence ſhewed this way. But ſure, the Apoſtle
1 Cor.14.25. tels us, our carriage there ſhould be ſuch, ſo decent, as if a ſtranger, or unbeliever ſhould come into our aſſemblies, the very reverence he there ſeeth, ſhould make him fall down, and ſay, Verily God is among us; to ſee us ſo reſpectfully bear our ſelves, in the manner of our worſhip.

JESUS is the LORD to the glory of GOD the Father. This Confeſſion that Jeſus is the Lord, is to be, to the glory of God the Father: So we take it one way. Or, this Confeſſion is to be, that Jeſus is the Lord to the glory of God the Father: ſo another way. And both well. To confeſs: that He is the Lord, that all his Lordſhip is, not to his own glory; but to his Fathers. Think not then, that Gloria Filio, ſhall abate ought of Gloria Patri. The Son is Lord, to the glory of his Father, and not otherwiſe. Let that fear then be far from us, that in exalting the Son, we ſhall in the leaſt minute eclipſe the glory of his Father. Here is no fear of emulation, that it will prove the caſe of Jupiter and Saturn. No ſo bleſſed is the accord of this Father, and this Son, as the Father thinketh it ſome blemiſh to his glory, if ſo profound humility, ſo compleat obedience, he had not ſeen highly rewarded, with Super upon Super. And the Son will admit of no glory, that ſhall impair his Fathers in the leaſt degree: For ſo, He is Lord to the glory of God his Father. This, is the end of His (of Chriſts:) And the ſame may be the end of all Exaltations; that a Saviour ever may be Lord, hold that place: and hold it, and be Lord, not to his own, but to the glory of God, even God the Father.

The concluſion. The end of all: And, we muſt needs know and take that, with us; for which, all this here is brought And it is a Leſſon; even, his Diſcite à me: and it is a Pattern; even his Exemplum dedi vobis, to commend unto us, the vertue of the Text; the Propter quod of the Feaſt; even Humility: Hoc erit ſignum;
Matth.11.26. John 13.15. Luke 2.12. it is his ſign at Chriſtmas: As his ſign then, ſo his Propter quod now, at Eaſter. So, the vertue of both Feaſts: I will offer you but three ſhort points touching it.

1. Humiliavit. CHRISTS Perſon. It is no humble man is ſet before us here, it is the Son of God, and himſelf God: Et quomodo non humiliatur homo, coram humili Deo? How is not the ſon of man humble, and the Son of God is? Even for him, to love it; for his very Perſon.

2. Work. And, in this vertue, he is not barely ſet out to us, but in it, and by it, bringing to paſs the works of our redemption: Which, cannot but extraordinarily commend this vertue to us; in that it hath pleſed God,
John 10.38. 14.11. to do more for us, in this his Humility, then ever he did, in all his Majeſty: even, to ſave and redeem us by it. To love it then; if not for Him, yet for the works ſake.

3. Reward. But ſpecially (which is the third) for the Propter quod, in the Text: if not for the work, yet for the Rewards ſake. That, as Chriſt was no loſer by it, no more ſhall we: For, all this Glory here, the way to it, is, by the firſt verſe. Humiliavit, is the beginning, and the end of it is exalting. That, the mother;
James 4.10. 1 Pet.5.6. this, the daughter: all riſeth from Humiliavit ipſe ſe. Hamiliamini ergo, ſaith Saint James: Humiliamini ergo, ſaith Saint Peter: and after it there followeth ſtill, & exaltabit vos Deus, a promiſe of a like glorious end. And what ſaith the Apoſtle here? This mind (ſaith he) was in Chriſt; and it was φρονῆν, Verſe 5. a wiſe mind: That, we count it a wiſe mind, and worth the carrying, and carry it; and it ſhall carry us, to the ſame journeys end, it brought him: even to the glory of God the Father. This for Humility.

Obediens Domino. And what? Shall we not give ſome light trial, of our Obedience alſo, to aver our Confeſſion, that, He is our Lord? It would be, by Domine, quid nos vis facere? (that is the true trial.) Say then, Domine, quid nos vis facere? And, he will anſwer us; Hoc facite in Mei memoriam. Will ye know, what I would have you do? Do this in remembrance of Me: In ſign that I am Lord, do but this: Here is a caſe of inſtance, and that now; even at this very preſent, a proof to be made. By this, we ſhall ſee, whether He
2 Kin.5.13. be Lord or no. For, if not this; but ſlip the collar here, and ſhrink away: Si rem grandem dixiſſet, in a far greater matter, how would we ſtand with him, then? We were wrong before, here is the ſound and ſyllables (we ſpake of) here it is. For, all is but ſound and ſyllables, if, not this.

Heb. 6.9. But of us, I hope for better things, that by our humble carriage, and Obedience (at leaſt, in this) we will ſet our ſelves, ſome way to exalt Him, in this His day of Exaltation: Which, as it will tend to his glory; ſo will he turn it to matter of our glory: and that, in his Kingdome of glory; or (to keep the word of the Text) in the glory of God the Father. That ſo we may end, as the Text ends. A better, or more bleſſed end there cannot be. And, to this bleſſed end, He bring us, that by his humility and obedience, hath not onely purchaſed it for us: but ſet the way open, and gone it before us, Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous, &c.

A SER-

A SERMON

Preached before the

KINGS MAJESTY

AT

WHITE-HALL,

On the Ninth of April, being Easter-Day.

An. Dom. 1615.

JOHN Chap. II. Vers. XIX.

Respondit Jesus, & dixit, Solvite Templum hoc, & in tribus diebus excitabo illud.

Jesus answered and said, Dissolve (or, destroy) this Temple, and within three dayes I will raise it up again.

HE answered and said this, to the Pharisees. Who sought a Sign of him (the Verse next before.) A Sign they would have; And (he tels them) a Sign they should have. Themselves should minister him occasion to shew a Sign; the like was never shewen For, destroy him they should (his body, so) and he within three dayes, would raise it again, from death to life. The Occasion A Sign. Verse 18.

But this Answer of his, is a figurative speech, and runs under the terms of the Temple. The reason whereof was: they were then in the Temple; there, fell out this Question. And (as it appeareth in the Verses before) much adoe there had been between them, and that a long time, about the Temple. The speech, figurative.

Now, his manner still was; the Place, the Time, the Matter in hand, ever to frame the tenour and terms of his speech, according to them. And so, now, being in the Temple, he takes his terms from thence; even from the Temple.

But he doth, (as I may say) Solvere Templum hoc, loose and undoe this term for us: For (within a Verse) we are told, this Temple is no other, then the Temple of his Body. (Now the rest follows of it self.) The Solvite, is a taking him in sunder, his soul from his body: The excitabo, is the setting them together, and raising them up again. And both these, within three days, (the onely word in the Text, wherein there is no figure) The figure interpreted. Verse 21.

And this now was his Sign. And a great Sign it was. Great, even in their sense, if it had been, but of the Pile of Building (as they took the word Temple.) But greater far, far another manner Sign in his sense, in the true. How a Sign in the true sense.

For, as for that Temple, Zorobabel, and Herod had raised it: and other great Persons, as great Buildings as that. But, the Temple of the body, if that were once down, all the Temple-builders that ever were, with all their care and cost could never get it up more. Therefore, in his (in Christs) sense it is far the greater sign, then as they fancied it.

Indeed,

Indeed, ſo great a Sign, as he, that was in hell-fire, could not deviſe, nor did not deſire a greater. If but Luke 16.30. Lazarus, if but one come from the dead: then, then regard him: that ſign, out of queſtion. Why, here is one come from the dead, and this day come, and a greater then Lazarus: I truſt then, we will regard him, we will regard this ſign, and not be worſe then he in hell was. Let us then regard it.

The Diviſion. The ground of this ſign (and of all here) is Templum hoc. About it, two main Acts, they ſhew forth themſelves: The taking of it down, in Solvite; The raiſing of it up, in Excitabo. Thus in figure. Anſwerable to theſe, This Temple, is Chriſt's body. The taking it down, is Chriſt crucified and ſlain. The raiſing it up, is Chriſt reſtored to life.

Of which two (to divide it by the Perſons) Solvite is their part: Excitabo, His. Their, his Paſſion by their act (Solvite.) This, his Reſurrection, by his own, (Excitabo.)

Now, this (he ſaith) ſhall be done: And ſaith further, ſhall not be long in doing: No longer, then three days. And within the compaſs of the time limited, he did it: For, this is now the third day; and to day, by Sun-riſing, it was done.

I. So upon the matter, there come to be handled theſe four points. 1. That Chriſt's body is Templum
II. III. hoc. 2. The diſſolution of it by death, in Solvite. 3. The rearing it up again by his reſurrection, in Ex-
IV. citabo. 4. The time to do it in, three days.

By which circumſtance of three days, and this day the third of them, cometh this time, to claim a kind of property in this paſſage of Scripture. And that, two wayes.

For firſt; at this Feaſt, were theſe words here ſpoken: (you may ſee, they were ſo, at the thirteenth verſe before: at the Feaſt of Eaſter.)

And ſecondly: at this Feaſt again, were they fulfilled after: the Solvite, three days ſince; the Excitabo, this very day. So, at this Feaſt, the promiſe, and at the very ſame, the accompliſhment of it. The accompliſhment, once; the memorial, ever.

Being then, at this very time, thus ſpoken and done: Spoken, here now; done, three years after: Being (May) ſpoken, and done, and at this time ſpoken and done; Never ſo fit as now.

I. SOlvite Templum hoc. Templum hoc, we begin with. It is a borrowed term. But we cannot miſs
The two ſenſes of Templum hoc the ſenſe of it. For, both are ſet down here to our hand: the wrong ſenſe, and the right. The Verſe 20. wrong (the next Verſe of all) for the material Temple. So the Phariſees took it, and miſ-took it, Verſe 21. The right, (the next Verſe after) for the Temple of his body. So they ſhould have taken it. For ſo he meant it: Ipſe autem dicebat, &c. But he ſpake of the Temple of his Body. And he knew his own meaning beſt; and reaſon would, ſhould be his own Interpreter.

And this meaning of his, it had been no hard matter for them to have hit on: but they came but a birding, but to catch from him ſome advantage, and ſo were willing to miſ-take him. As, this they caught as Matth. 26.61. an advantage (we ſee) and laid it up for a rainy day, and three years after, out they came with it, and fra-
Mar. 14.58. med an Indictement upon it, as if he had meant to have deſtroyed their Temple.

The Phariſees But was it likely, or could it once be imagined, he meant to deſtroy it? It was Gods houſe, and the zeal ſenſe could not of Gods houſe (but even a Verſe before) conſumed him. And doth his zeal now (like the zeal of our be true. times) conſume Gods houſe? What, and that ſo quickly? but a Verſe between? But even very now, he Verſe 18. purged it. And did he purge it to have it pulled down? That were prepoſterous. Now it was purged, pull it down? Nay pull it down, when it was polluted. Now it is cleanſed, let it ſtand. To reforme Churches, and then ſeek to diſſolve them, will be counted among the errours of our Age. Chriſt was far from it. He that would not ſee it abuſed, would never endure to have it deſtroyed; ſpecially, not, when he had reformed the abuſes: and yet more ſpecially, not even preſently upon it (they might be ſure.)

But, that, which muſt needs lead them to the right meaning, was; that, theſe words (Templum hoc) he could not ſay them, but, by the manner of his uttering them, by his very geſture, at the delivery of this particle (hoc,) they muſt needs know what Temple it was, he intended. It was eaſie to mark, whether he carried his hand, or caſt his eye up to the fabrick of it; or whether he bare them, to his body: Which one thing onely, was enough to have reſolved them of this point, and to quit our Saviour of equivocation.

The true ſenſe. We will then wave theirs, as the wrong meaning; and take it, (as he wiſheth, who leant on his breſt, Chap. 13.23. and beſt knew his mind) of the Temple of his body.

I. But what reſemblance is there, between a Body and a Temple? or how can a Body be ſo termed? Well
A Body, a Temple. enough: for I ask, why is it a Temple? what makes it ſo? Is it not, becauſe it is Domus Patris mei, (as Verſe 16. he ſaid a little before) becauſe God dwelleth there? For, as that, wherein man dwels, is a houſe: So, that, wherein God, is a Temple properly. That (I ſay) wherein; be it place, or be it body. So come we to have two ſorts of Temples; Temples of fleſh and bone, as well as Temples of lime and ſtone. For, if our bodies be termed houſes, becauſe our ſouls (tenant-wiſe) abide and dwell in them; If, becauſe our ſouls dwell, they be houſes; if God do ſo, they be Temples; why not? Why not? why
1 Cor. 6.10. know ye not this, (ſaith the Apoſtle) that your very bodies (if the Spirit of God abide in them) eo ipſo, Temples they be, (ſuch as they be?) But then they be ſo ſpecially, when actually we imploy them in the ſervice of God. For, being in his Temple, and there ſerving him, then, if ever, they be Templa in

Templo,

Templo, living Temples in a Temple without life. A body then, may be a Temple: Even this of ours.

And if ours, theſe of ours (I ſay) in which, the Spirit of God dwelleth only by ſome gift or grace: with how much better right (better infinitely) His body (Chriſts) in whom the whole Godhead, in all the fulneſs of it, dwelt corporally? Corporally (I ſay) and not Spiritually alone (as, in us:) By nature; by perſonal union: not (as in us) by grace, and by participation of it, only. Again, if ours, which vve ſuffer oft to be polluted with ſin, that many times they ſtand ſhut up, and no ſervice in them for a long ſeaſon together; how much more His, that never was defiled vvith any the leaſt ſin, never ſhut, but continually taken up, and wholly imployed in His Fathers ſervice? His, above all exception; His, without all compariſon, certainly. Alas, ours but Tabernacles under goat skins; His, the true, the Marble, the Cedar-Temple indeed. Chriſts body then, a Temple. 2. Chriſts body a Temple. Col. 2. 9.

But a Temple at large, will not ſerve: It muſt be Templum hoc, that very Temple, they took it for. And ſo vve to proceed yet further, and to ſeek a congruity of His body with the materiall Temple (it was taken for) to vvhich there is no doubt, His intent was to reſemble it. 3. Chriſts body This Temple, et templum hoc.

The Rabbins, in their Speculative Divinity, do much buſie themſelves, to ſhew, that, in the Temple, there was a model of the vvhole vvorld, and that all the Spheres in heaven, and all the Elements in earth were recapitulate in it, They vvere vvide. The Fathers took the right, and beſtowed their time and travel more to the point: to ſhew, how, that Temple and all that was in it, was nothing elſe, but a compendious repreſentation of Chriſt, for whom, and in whoſe honour, was that and all other true Temples. And this they did by warrant from the Apoſtle, who (in Heb. 9) aimeth at ſome ſuch thing. Heb. 9. 5.

Now the points of congruity, they found, vvere many, they may be reduced to theſe four. 1. Whether you look to the compoſition or parts of it. 2. Or, to the furniture, and veſſels of it. 3. Or, to that was done in it. 4. Or, to what vvas done to it (that is) what, firſt, and laſt befel it. In all which, they hold, that Templum hoc might more truly be affirmed of Him, that was in the Temple; than of the Temple, He was in. Chriſts body & templum hoc wherein like.

The laſt of the four (what was done to that Temple, vvhat befel it, and ſo vvhat befel the Temple of Chriſts body) that (I take) to be moſt proper to this Text, and to that vve have in hand. (For, to go through all four, would take up a whole Sermon.) So, I take my ſelf to the congruity only.

Mark then what befel either: by that ſhall you beſt find, that Fata utriuſq; Templi, the deſtinies of both Temples were alike. Pſal. 132. 6. Mat. 2. 1.

They began alike. The firſt news of the Temple was heard at Ephrata (which is Bethlehem.) So vvas it of Him; for there vvas He born. Like in Solvite, and Excitabo.

Like, in their beginnings: and in their ends, no leſs. I apply to this Text, and content me with thoſe two, He inſiſts on Himſelf. Both were deſtroyed, both vvere reared again; that in all things, His body, and His Temple might be ſuitable.

That Temple was deſtroyed by the Caldees; down with it, even unto the ground. Imitated by them here: down with it, even into the ground. For they never left, till they had Him there: paſt Excitabo (as they thought) paſt riſing any more. But, as the Temple, after it was ſo razed, had an Excitabo; was raiſed again up by Zerobabel: So was this too. Solvite, took place: but there came an Excitabo after, that made amends for it. And, as the glory of the ſecond houſe, was greater than the firſt: So the eſtate He roſe to, far more glorious than that, He was in before. 2 Chr. 36. 19. Pſal. 137. 7. Agg. 1. 14. Agg. 2. 10.

And mark (I pray you) if theſe two vvere not to be ſeen as brim, in the little glaſſes about it, as in the great Mirror it ſelf. For, the Temple was as a great Mirror, and the furniture, as ſo many little glaſſes round about it. Take but the Ark (the Epitome as it were of the Temple.) The two Tables in it, the type of the true treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledg hid in Him: they were broken firſt, there is Solvite: but they vvere new hewen, and written over again, there is excitabo. The Pot of Manna (a perfect reſemblance of Him; the Urna, or the veſſel being made of earth, ſo earthly; The Manna, the contents of it, being from heaven, ſo heavenly.) The Manna (we know) would not keep paſt two dayes at the moſt, there is Solvite: but, being put into the Urna, the third day it came again to it ſelf, and kept in the Pot without putrifying ever after; there is excitabo. Aarons rod (the type of his Prieſthood and of the rule of ſouls annexed to it) that Rod was quite dead and dry; but revived again and bloſſomed, yea brought forth ripe Almonds. In every and in each of them, His deſtiny whom they repreſented; Solvite and Excitabo in all. Col. 2. 3. Exod. 32. 19. 34. 4. Exo. 16. 20. 24. Exod. 16. 32. Num. 17. 8.

But, the End is all in all; and in reſpect of that (of the end) well ſaith Ambroſe, of His body, Verè Templum, in quo noſtrorum eſt purificatio peccatorum. Truly a Temple He, no Temple ever ſo truly, as wherein was offered up the true propitiation for, and the true purification of our ſins; and of us from them: which is the end of all Temples that ever were or ſhall be; and was but ſhaddowed in all beſides, but in this truly performed.

There, the only true Holocauſt of his entire obedience, which burnt in Him bright and clear, from the firſt to the laſt, all His life long.

There, the only true treſpaſs-offering of His Death and Paſſion (the Solvite of this Temple) ſatisfactory to the full, for all the treſpaſſes and tranſgreſſions of the whole world.

There, the Meat-and-Drink-Offering of his bleſſed body and moſt pretious blood.

And the Exta of this ſacrifice, the fat of the entrails of it, that is the Love wherewith he did it; the deſire the longing deſire he had to it; that, that was the perfect Offering, that ſet at one all things both in heaven and earth. That, what ever was Sub figurâ in Templo illo, was really and in truth exhibited in Templo hoc. Luc. 12. 50. 22. 15. Col. 1. 20.

And judge now, vvhether the Sign vvere not vvell laid by our Saviour in the Temple, vvhich vvas it ſelf a ſign of Him. And whether, as He ſaid in a place, Ecce major Templo hic: So He might not have ſaid Ecce majus templum hic, when He was in the Temple; Behold a greater, a truer Temple now, in the Temple, than the Temple it ſelf. Mat. 12. 6.

II. Now to the second point, Solvite. [a] The saying it self, [b] The executing it after. The Solvite, and the Solutum est.

[a] A solvite, the saying

[b] Solutum est. Death

[a] loosing.

1. First, by Solvite (that is) dissolving is meant death. * Cupio dissolvi, ye know, what that is: And tempus dissolutionis mea instat, the time of my dissolution (that is, my death) is at hand. For, death, is a very dissolution: a loosing the cement, the soul, and body are held together with. Which two, as a frame or fabrick, are compaginate at first; and after, as the timber from the lime, or the lime from the stone, so are they taken in sunder. But death, is not this way only, a loosing; but a further than this. For upon the loosing the soul from the body, and the life from both, there follows an universal loosing, of all the bonds and knots here: of the Father from the Son; and otherwhile, of the Son from the Father first: of Man from Wife, of Friend from Friend, of Prince from People: So great a solvite is death, makes all, that is fast, loose: makes all knots flie in sunder.

* Phi. 1. 23.

2 Tim. 4. 6.

2. Solvite. Violent.

2. And all this in natural death. But a further matter there is in solvite. For that is against nature, aliis solventibus, by the hands of other, that are the solventes (them to whom this is spoken.) This temple, drops not down for age, or weakness; dissolves not of it self: Others (they to whom solvite is here said) they pull it down. It is then no natural, but a violent death, this. Well therefore turned (Solvite, destroy it) there is no destruction, but with force or violence.

3. Solvite. Voluntary.

3. So violent though, on theirs, as voluntary yet, on His part. Not against His will quite, not by constraint: For, He Himself, that is to be dissolved, He it is, doth here say Solvite. He could have avoided it, if He would; He would not: In sign He would not (we see) Himself saith Solvite. And solvite He must have said; He must have said it, or they could not have done it: It had passed all their cunning and strength to have undone this knot ever, but that He gave way to it.

4. Gave way to it (I say) that we take not this solvite otherwise, than He meant it. It is not of the nature of a charge, this; nor we, so to conceive it. Very expedient it is, that we know the nature of solvite templum.

2. Solvite templum, No commandement, Rom. 2. 17.

Solvite templum is no Commandement (be sure) in no sense; He commands not any temple; not that, they themselves meant, to be destroyed; It were sacriledg that, and no better. And Sacriledge the Apostle ranks with Idolatry; as being full out as evil, if not worse than it.

But indeed worse: for, what Idolatry but pollutes, sacriledg puls quite down. And easier it is, to new hallow a Temple polluted; than to build one anew out of an heap of stones.

Psal. 127. 7.

And if, but to spoil a Church, be Sacriledg: (as it is granted:) yet, that leaves somewhat; at least, the nails and the roof (so it be not lead:) To leave nothing, but down with it, is the cry of Edom, the worst sacriledg, of all: and never given in charge by God, to any (we may be sure.)

1 King. 8 18. 2 Chron 6. 8.

For, God Himself, said to David with his own mouth, Whereas it was in thine heart, to build me an House; thou didst well, that thou wast so minded. Didst well? well done, to think of building? then, à sensu contrario, evil done, to think of dissolving. And, that which is evil, Christ will never injoyn.

But, what is to be thought of solvite templum, I would have you to judge by these two (they be both in Text.) 1. To whom this is spoken. 2. And what is meant by it.

1. To whom Solvite Templum is said.

1. To whom, this is spoken: Distingue tempora, is a good rule; So is, Distingue personas. Distinguish the persons then, give every one his own, it will make you love solvite templum the worse, as long as you know it. Solvite? To whom is this spoken? Who be they? The Pharisees. To them, is this speech directed. That, is made work, work for a Pharisee, to dissolve Churches. And so it was. For, as hot and holy as they seemed, with their broad Phylacteries and long prayers, our Saviour saith, they loved the gold of the temple, better than the temple. So do their posterity, to this day. To the Pharisees then with them; to their marrows: that would fain hear Solvite, given in charge. The other person, is Christ: Christs word and work both, is excitabo: excitator templorum He, a Raiser of them; a raiser of them when they be down (we see here.) They will not let them stand when they be up. Christ, He sets them up, for His part: When you will have them down, you must bespeak some Pharisee: And they will do it, leviter rogati. For, as His speech to them, is Solvite & excitabo; So, theirs to Him may seem to be, Excita & solvemus. Set up, as many as He will, they will down with them; first with templum hoc, then with templum illud; and so, one after another (if they may have their will:) they lack but one, to give the Solvite to them, and to set them on work. Distingue personas then. And they, to whom solvite is said, are but bad persons certainly, and fit for a bad business.

Mat. 23. 5. 14. 15

2. What is meant by Solvite Templum.

2. Will ye mark again, what is meant here by it, by destroying the temple? What, but even the killing of Christ? Now the suiting and sorting of these two thus, hath but an evil aspect neither: but, this worse than the former, though. And, I wish but this one point well printed in all mens minds. Solvite templum: quid vult dicere? solvite templum (id est) Occidere Christum: that he that goes about to dissolve the Church, it is all one, as if he went about to make away Christ. One of these is implied under the other. Enough (I think) to take off the edge of any that are glad to hear, and ready to catch solvite templum out of Christs mouth, but quite besides His meaning. For His meaning was (and it was one special end of Christs comparing His body to the temple;) to shew, He would have us so to make account of the temple, and so to use it, as we would His own very body: And to be as far from destroying one; as we would be from the other. This may suffice to let you know the nature of solvite templum once for all, that you be not mistaken in it

3. Solvite templum hoc. Not by way of commandement

3. Of solvite templum (I say:) But now, to come to solvite templum hoc, to the temple of his body. Concerning; that it should enter into any mans heart, to think, Christ would open his mouth to command, or to counsel His own making away; (that is, the committing the most horrible foul murther that ever was) God forbid. It was a sin, out of measure sinful, that, if ever any were. And give me any Religion, rather than that, that draweth God into the society of sin: makes Him, or makes Christ, either

Author

Author or Adviser, Commander or Counsellor, of ought that is evil. Any (I say) rather than that.

1. How then? if no command, what is it? All that can be made of it (say the Ancient Fathers) is, but either, a prediction (in the stile of the Prophets) Come down Babel; (that is) Babel shall be brought down: So solvite, ye shall destroy; to warn them, what he saw, they were now casting about, and whither their malice would carry them in the end, even to be the destroyers and murderers of the Son of God. But by way of prediction. Esay 47. 1. Acts 7. 52.

2. Either this; Or (at most) but a permission; which, in all tongues, is ever made in this mood (in the Imperative.) So, we use to say; Go to, do and ye will; or, do what ye will with my body; when, we mean but sufferance, for all that, and no command at all. For all the world, this solvite to them, as Fac citò to Judas after. Quod facis, that, which you are resolved to do, and have taken earnest upon it; Fac, do it, and, Fac citò, Do it out of the way; which yet (it is well known) was nothing but a permission, and not a jot more. By way of permission. John 13. 17.

3. But, should such, so foul an evil, as that, be permitted though? No, not that neither, simply; It is not a bare permission, but one qualified; and that with two limitations, Will ye mark them? 1. For first he would not suffer any evill at all (least of all, that) but that out of the evil he was able (able and willing both) to draw a far greater good. Greater, for good (I say) than that was, for evil. And that was solutionem pœnæ, ex solutione templi. Permitted for a greater good.

For, we are not to think, that he would, thus down with it, and up with it again, only to shew them feats and tricks (as it were) to be wondred at, and for no other end. No, the end was the destroying of sin, by the destroying this temple. It went hard, Et vetibi atrocitas peccati nostri, and wo to the hainousnes of our sins, for the dissolving whereof, neither the Priest might be suffered to live, nor the temple to stand; but the Priest be slain, and the temple be pulled down, Priest and temple and all be destroyed. But, sin was so riveted into our Nature: And again, our Nature so incorporate into his, as no dissolving the one, without the dissolution of the other. No way to over-whelm sin quite, but by the fall of this temple. The ruine of it like that of Samsons: That, the destruction of the Philistines; this, the dissolving of all the works of the Devil. It is S. Johns own term, Ut solveret opera Diaboli. Judic. 16. 30. 1 John 3. 8.

2. But, neither was this enough yet: Neither would he, for all this, have at any hand let it go down, but that withall he meant to have it up again presently. Never have said solvite, but with an excitabo straight upon it; which is a full amends; so that the temple loses nothing, by the loosing. Permitted, for another as good.

The world with us, hath seen a solvite, without any excitabo; Down with this, but nothing raised in the stead. But, that is none of his: Solvite without excitabo, none of Christ's. We see, with one breath, he undertakes, it shall up again, and that in a short time: There is amends for solvite.

And so now with these two limitations, under these two conditions; 1. One of a greater good by it; the other, of another as good or better in lieu of it; may Solvite be said permissivè: and otherwise not, by any warrant from Christ, or from his example.

And thus, you have heard what he saith. Will ye now see, what they did: what became of this solvite of his? Solvite (saith he) and when time came, they did it. But he said solvite, that is loose; and they cryed Crucifige, at the time (that is) fasten; fasten him to the cross: but that fastening was his loosing; for it lost him and cost him his life, Which was the solutum est of this solvite. b Solvite the doing.

For indeed, Solutum est templum hoc, the temple of his body, the spirit from the flesh, the flesh from the blood was loosed quite. The roof of it (his head) loosed with thorns. The foundation (his feet) with nails. The side Isles (as it were) his hands both likewise. And his body, as the body of the temple, and his heart in the midst of his body, as the Sanctum Sanctorum, with the spear: Loosed, all. What he said, they did, and did it home.

Nay, they went beyond their commission, and did more than, solvere. A thing may be loosed gently, without any rigour: They loosed him not, but rudely they rent and rived him, one part from another, with all extremity; left not one piece of the continuum whole together. With their whips, they loosed not, but tore his skin and flesh all over; with their hammers and nails, they did not solvere, but fodere his hands and feet: With the wreath of thorns, they loosed not, but gored his head round about: and with the spear point rived the very heart of him: as if he had said to them, dilaniate, and not solvite. For, as if it had come è lanienâ, it was not Corpus solutum, but lacerum: his body not loosed, but mangled and broken (Corpus quod frangitur:) And his blood, not easily let out, but spilt and powred out (Sanguis qui funditur) even like water upon the ground. Well is it turned, destroy: It is more like a destruction, than a solution: More than solvite it was, sure. More then Solvite. 1 Cor. 11. 23. Mat. 26. 28.

Now, will ye remember? This was a Temple of flesh and bone, not one of lime and stone. Yet the ragged ruines of one of them demolished, will pity a mans heart to see them; and make him say Alas poor stones, What have these done? yet the stones neither feell their beating down, nor see the deformed plight, they lye in. But he, Sic solutus est, ut se solvi sentiret, the solution of his skin, flesh, hands, feet and head, he was sensible of all; he saw the deformity, he felt the pains of them all. The solvite of this Temple sensible.

So saw, and so felt, as with the very sight and sense, before it came, there befell him another solvite, a strange one: solutus est in sudorem, the orifices of the veins, all over the texture of his body, were loosed, and all his blood let loose, that he was all over in a strange sweat, stood full of great drops of blood. A Solvite, never heard of, nor read of but in him only. The solvite of this Sweat. Luke 22. 44.

And yet another solvite. For, that solvite templum hoc might every way be true; in all senses verified) what time the Veile of his flesh rent, that his soul was loosed and departed: at the very same instant, the veil of the material Temple, that split also in two from the top to the bottom: as it were for company, or in a sympathy with him: That, it was literally true (this Solvite) and of the temple, that they meant. And so, two solvite's of both temples, together at once. The solvite of the Veil. Mat. 37. 51.

One more yet (and I have done with solvite,) and that is, a solvite in a manner of all; of the great temple of heaven and earth. For the very face of Heaven, then all black and dark at noon day, yet no Eclipse (the Moon was at the full) the Earth quaking, the stones renting, the graves opening, as they then did, shewed plainly, there was then toward, some universal solvite, some great dissolution (as the * Philosopher then said) either of the frame of nature, or of the God of nature.

Cast your eye thither, look upon that, and there you shall see solvite templum hoc plainly, and what it means. And, it had been enough, if they had had any grace, even to have pointed them to the time, when this solvite templum hoc, was fulfilled by them. And this for both solvite, and solutum est (their part:) which was his passion by, their Act.

III.

a Excitabo the saying.

Now (to answer them two) to Excitabo, and Excitavit (his part:) his resurrection by his own.

And first to Excitabo. Hitherto, we are not come; but now, we come to the sign: for the sign is in Excitabo.

Et Excitabo, And I will raise it up. Which is spoken (as it were) by way of triumph, over all, they could or should do to him. Go to, dissolve it, destroy it, down with it; when you have done your worst, it shall be in vain; Excitabo illud, my power shall triumph over your malice: I will raise it, I will up with it again.

Excitabo how opposed to Solvite.

But to loose and to raise, these two are not opposite: Rather, to loose and to set together. Raising is opposed to falling; and resurrection to ruine, properly. But it comes all to one. Upon the dissolving of any frame, strait it drops. This goodly Temple of our body (on the decking and trimming whereof, so much is daily wasted) loose the soul from it but a moment, and down it falls, and there it lies, like a log (we all know.) In opposition to this fall, it is said He will raise. But, He will do both: as it was loosed yet it fell; so will He set it together, yet He raise it again.

Excitabo illud. Three points there are in it: 1. The Act; 2. And the Person, in Excitabo; and 3. the Thing it self, in illud.

Excitabo, the act, as from sleep. Psal. 16. 9. 1 Cor. 15. 20. Dan. 12 2.

1. The Act. The word he useth for it is ἐγερῶ in propriety, is a raising from sleep: And sleep (we know) is far from destruction, It is, to shew us first, what a strange metamorphosis He would make in death; turn it, but into a requiescet, and a requiescet in spe, and there is all. So made he his own; so will he make ours. This Day Christ is risen again, the first fruits of them that sleep; and the rest that sleep in the dust, when their time comes, shall do the like.

Jonah 2. 10.

2. To shew (secondly) they should miss of their purpose quite. They reckoned indeed, to destroy him; they were deceived; they made him but ready for a nights rest or two. They made full account; Death had devoured and digested him too: they were deceived, it was not so: Death had but swallowed him down (as the Whale did Jonas) upon the third day to cast him up again.

3. To shew (thirdly) not only that, this he would do, but, with what ease he would do it. With no more difficulty, than one is waked up, after a nights rest; with no more ado, than a knot that is but loose and untyed, is tyed again.

Excitabo, the person. He Himself

But besides the Act, we are to look to the Person, in Excitabo. It is not, destroy you, and some other shall raise it; but, I; even I my self, and none but my self, will do it; Nec aliena virtute, sed propriâ, and by none others beside; but, by mine own proper vertue and power. An argument of his Divine nature. For, none ever did; none ever could do, that. Raised some were, but not any by himself, or by his own power; but by a power imparted to some Prophet by God for that time and turn.

Christ, by none imparted from any other, but by his own from himself: And let it not stumble any, that elsewhere, the Father is said to raise and exalt him: That is all one. Both will stand well. The same power the Father, doth it by, by the same doth it, he. There is but one power of both: Of both, or of either of them, it is alike truly verified. This for the Person.

Illud. The same temple. In substance.

Now for the thing: Illud. Templum hoc before, and illud here: Hoc and illud are not two, but one, and the same. Not Solvite hoc, & suscitabo aliud; down with this, and I will up with another in the stead. No: but idem illud, the very same again. The very same you destroy, that, and no other, will I rear up again. With us, with the world, it is not so; when we fall to dissolve a frame of government (suppose of the Church) it is not solvite hoc, & excitabo illud; no, but excitabo aliud. We raise not the same, but another quite another, nothing like it; a new one never heard of before. But let them keep their aliud, and give us illud again. Illud we love; It is Christ's excitabo, that: and if we follow Christ, in his raising, the same again, or not at all.

Not the same, In quality.

But, though illud be the same again, in substance; yet not in quality the same for all that: but so far, different, as in that respect, it may seem aliud, another quite. At least, well may it be now called illud, as it were with an Emphasis, as qualified far beyond that it was before, when it was but Templum hoc. And to say truth, if it be but the same just, and no whit better; as good save his labour, and let the first stand. For, it is but his labour for his travel, if nothing won by it.

Esay 9. 10.

But if (though the same) yet not in the same, but in a far better estate, than before; (Cedar, for Mulberry; Marble for Brick, as the Prophet speaks:) then, ye say some-what, and then we will be content, to have it taken down.

Agg. 2. 10.

And such was the estate of this Temple after the raising. And such was it to be: For, the glory of the second House was much greater than of the first. Which encrease or bettering is implied in the word excitabo.

It

It is (I tould you) a Rising up after ſleep. Now, in the morning, after ſleep, the body riſeth more freſh, and full of vigour; than it was over night, when it lay down. The Apoſtle ſpeaks it more plainly: Templum hoc (ſaith he) at the looſing, it was in weakneſs, diſhonour, mortality; Templum illud, at the raiſing it, is in power and honour, and to immortality. 1 Cor. 15. 42, 43.

And ſure, one ſpecial reaſon of the diſſolving this Temple was, that, as then it was, Solvite might be ſaid of it; It was diſſoluble. But, being now raiſed again, it is faſter wrought; indiſſoluble, now: No Solvite to be ſaid, not to be looſed ever any more. This for Excitabo illud. Now the laſt point, of the time. The ſign is in that, too.

And when this? Within what time? Within three dayes. Which words, ſeemed to affect them moſt. All their exception lay to them. He looked not like one that would build Churches. But (let that paſs) were he never ſo likely, he takes too ſmall a time, far ſo great a work (as they thought.) But, if we agree once of his power to raiſe from death, the time will ſlide, we ſhall never ſtick at it much, but agree of that quickly. He that can raiſe from the dead (ten thouſand Churches will be built one after another, before one be raiſed thence) To him, that is able to do that, forty ſix hours are as good as forty ſix years: all one. Nay, even forty ſix minutes; (but that it was held fit, he ſhould lie longer in his grave than ſo, that there might be the ſurer certainty of his death.) Otherwiſe, years, dayes, or minutes, to him, are all alike. The ſign is in both: but (to ſay truth) in Excitabo, rather than in the three dayes. For, to the power of Excitabo, Nullum tempus occurrit. IV. The Time. Three dayes.

But, why three dayes, juſt? Neither more nor leſs? Becauſe, elſewhere he ſaith, No other time, but Jona's: that, ſhould ſerve him. No other, than Moſes time, (forty dayes) in his faſting. No other than Jonas time (three) in his riſing. Content to keep time with his Prophets before him. Far from the humour of ſome; that muſt vary (no remedy.) If Jonas three, they muſt four, or three and a half, at leaſt. If Moſes forty, they muſt be a day under or over; have a number, have a trick by themſelves, beyond others ſtill; Elſe, all is nothing worth. Far from them (I ſay:) and to make us far from them: By his example to keep us to that, which others before us, have well and orderly kept. Why three.

Now to the excitavit, of this Excitabo. Thus he ſaid it ſhould be, Et fuit ſic, and ſo it was. He would raiſe it, dixit: And he did raiſe it, fuit. His diſſolution laſted no longer than his limitation before-hand ſet. That, was not, poſt tres, but in tribus; not after, but within the compaſs of three dayes. And he came within his time: For, this is but the third day, and this day, by break of day, was this temple up again. b Excitavit, the doing.

This then being the day, not only of Excitavit, but of Excitavit illud (of the ſetting it up:) accordingly we, this day, to celebrate the Enæenia, or new dedicating of this temple. A dedication was ever a Feaſt of joy, and that great joy. Every Town had their wakes in memory of the dedicating of their Church. That we then hold it as a Feaſt of joy; that we be glad on it: as glad, nay more glad to ſee it up again, this day; than the third day ſince, we were ſorry, to ſee it down in the duſt. To Solvite, down with it (Edomi ery) belongs Jeremies Lamentation: to Excitabo (this dayes work) Zacharies joyfull ſhout, or acclamation, Gratiam Gratia, grace upon grace, and joy upon joy, and thanks upon thanks: Grace, joy, and thanks with an Emphaſis; for, it is now illud with an Emphaſis indeed. a Our duty upon theſe. To rejoyce. Zach. 4. 7.

But, our joy will quickly quail if we no good by it. I ask then, what is all this to us? And I anſwer (with the Apoſtle) Multum per omnem modum. 1. For, firſt, this Solvite of his, is a Solvite to us: a looſing us, not only from our ſins, the cords of our ſins here, as Salomon calls them; but the chains, the everlaſting chains of darkneſs, and of hell, there, due to them, and to us for them. For our good. Rom. 3. 2. By Solvite. Prov. 5. 22. Jude 6.

2. Then, this excitabo is not to end in him: What, we believe, he did for that temple of his body natural; the ſame, we faithfully truſt, he will do further for another temple, the temple of his body myſtical. For his myſtical, as much as for his natural; for whoſe ſake he gave his natural body, thus to be diſſolved. Of which myſtical body, we are parts (and the whole cannot be without his parts:) Every of us, members of this body for his part: Every one living ſtones of this ſpiritual Temple. Diſſipentur illa, reſtaurabit denuò (ſaith Origen:) ſcattered we may be, he will gather us again; looſed, he will knit us; fall down and dye, he will ſet us together and ſet us up again. After two dayes he will revive us, and in the third day raiſe us, And we ſhall live in his ſight, ſaith the Prophet Hoſea, of us all. By excitabo. Hoſea 6. 2.

And this, is to us all, matter of great Joy. For, to this Solvite in the end we muſt all come; Statutum eſt hominibus. There is an Act paſſed for the diſſolution of theſe our earthly tabernacles. Looſed they ſhall be, Spirit from Fleſh, Fleſh frome bone, each bone from other; No avoiding it. Heb. 9. 27.

All our care to be this; how to come to a good excitabo. Good (I ſay:) for, excitabo, we ſhall never need to take thought for: we ſhall come to that, whether we care for it or no. But to a good excitabo: ſuch an one, as he, as Chriſt, as this Temple is come to (that is) to a joyfull reſurrection (as we call it.) That, is worth our care: For, in the end, that will be worth all. b Our moral duty.

That, ſhall we come to, if we can take order, that while we be here, before we go hence, (our bodies) we get them Templified (as I may ſay:) procure, they be framed after the ſimilitude of a Temple, this Temple in the Text: For, if it be Solvite templum; at the diſſolution, a temple; a temple it will riſe again, there is no doubt of that. To make our bodies Temples.

Our bodies (as we uſe the matter many of us) are far from temples; rather Proſtibula than templa; brothel-houſes, brokers ſhops, wine caſks (or I wot not what) rather than temples. Or, if temples, temples the wrong way, of Ceres, Bacchus, Venus: or (to keep the Scripture phraſe,) of Camos, Aſtaroth, Baalpeor; and not Domus Patris mei (as this here, he ſpeaks of.)

But,

But, if this be the fruit of our life, and we have no other, but this; to fill and farce our bodies, to make them ſhrines of pride, and to maintain them in this exceſs; to make a money-change of all beſides, Common-wealth, Church, and all: I know not well, what to ſay to it: I doubt, at their riſing, they will rather make blocks for hell fire, than be made Pillars in the temple of God, in the holy places made without hands.

Ap. c. 3. 12
Heb. 9. 11

Otherwiſe, if they prove to be temples here, let no man doubt, then, let them be looſed when or how they will, He that raiſed this temple (ſo they be temples) will raiſe them likewiſe; and that, to the ſame glorious eſtate, Himſelf was raiſed to.

The moral ſolvite of them.

A courſe then muſt be taken, that while we are here, we do Solvere templa hæc, diſſolve theſe temples (of Camos and Aſhteroſh;) and upon the diſſolution of them, we raiſe them up, very temples to the true and living God: That we down with Bethaven, this houſe or ſhop of vanity (as by nature they are;) and up with Bethel, Gods houſe, as by grace they may be.

The moral Excitabo.
Apoc. 20. 6.

For, a ſolvite, and an excitabo, we are to paſs here in this life: and this, this excitabo, is the firſt reſurrection here to be paſſed: He that hath his part in this firſt, he ſhall not fail but have it in the ſecond.

If then, temples they would be, that we ſo make them: for, to make them ſo, is the Excitabo of this life.

That they may be Temples.

And ſo ſhall we make them, even temples: and no way ſooner, than if we love this place (the temple) well, and love to reſort to it, and to be much in it. By being much in it, we ſhall even turn into it. And ſure, if ever we have aliquid templi, any thing of a temple in us; then it is, when we are duely and devoutly occupied, and imployed, they and we, in His worſhip and ſervice. Then are we temples.

Temples, corporis ſui.

But, to be temples, is not all; we are further to be templum hoc, this temple: and this, was the temple of his body. And that are we, if at any time, then certainly, when, as if we were temples in very deed, we prepare to receive, not the Ark of His preſence, but Himſelf, that He may come into us and be in us: Which is, at what time, we preſent our ſelves, to receive His bleſſed Body and Blood: that body, and that blood, which for our ſakes was diſſolved; diſſolved three dayes ſince, when it ſuffered for our ſins. And this day raiſed again, when it roſe for our juſtification.

Rom. 4. 25.

Which, when we do; (that is) receive this body, or this temple: (for, Templum hoc, and Hoc eſt corpus meum are now come to be one: for, both Templum hoc, and corpus hoc, are in Templum corporis ſui: and when the Temples of our body, are in this Temple, and the Temple of His body in the Temples of ours; then are there three Temples in one, a Trinity, the perfect number of all.) Then, if ever, are we, not Temples only, but templa corporis ſui, Temples of His body; and this Scripture fulfilled in us.

This Feaſt a fit time for it.

This are we, when we receive. Now, at no time, is this act of receiving, ſo proper, ſo in ſeaſon, as, this very day (ſo hath Chriſts Church thought it, and ſo practiſed it, ever) the very day of this His Excitabo; the day of His riſing: And by means of it, of our raiſing: our raiſing firſt, to the life of righteouſneſs (to the eſtate of Temples) here in this world: And after, of our raiſing again, to the ſecond, the life of glory and bliſs (of glorious Temples) in the world to come; which is the Excitabo when all is done. What time, they and we ſhall be looſed: as now, from ſin; ſo then, from corruption. And raiſed, and reſtored: as now, to the eſtate of grace; ſo then, to the ſtate of glory, and glorious liberty of the ſons of God. To which happy and bleſſed eſtate, may He raiſe us all in the end, that this day, was raiſed for us, &c.

1 PET. Chap. I. Ver. III, IV.

Benedictus Deus, &c.

Blessed be God, and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.

THE Summe of this Text, and (if ye will) the name of it too, is set down in the very first word of it. It is a Benedictus. The first word is so. The first word Benedictus: and (if you look) the last word is [for you.] Give me leave to read it, for Us; to put in our selves. Seeing to us, and for us, it was written. So, a Benedictus it is; from us, to God, for something coming from God, to, or for us. The Summe.

Something? Nay many. Benedictus is but one word, but the first word: the rest of the words, of both Verses, are for us all.

And, many they are: We reduce them to three: 1. Our regeneration which is past: 2. Our hope, which is present: 3. And our Inheritance, which is to come. 1. Regenerating, or begetting, is (of it self) a benefit: We get life by it, if nothing else. 2. But, to beget to an Inheritance, is more than simply to beget. 3. And yet, more than that, to beget, to Such an Inheritance, as this; of which, so many excellent things are here spoken.

Three then, in this; 1. To be begotten: 2. To be begotten to Inherit: 3. To be begotten, to Inherit, such an Inheritance.

But

But, if this be the fruit of our life, and we have no other, but this; to fill and farce our bodies, to make them ſhrines of pride, and to maintain them in this exceſs; to make a money-change of all beſides, Common-wealth, Church, and all: I know not well, what to ſay to it: I doubt, at their riſing, they will rather make blocks for hell fire, than be made Pillars in the temple of God, in the holy places made without hands.

Apoc.3.12
Heb.9.11

Otherwiſe, if they prove to be temples here, let no man doubt, then, let them be looſed when or how they will, He that raiſed this temple (ſo they be temples) will raiſe them likewiſe; and that, to the ſame glorious eſtate, Himſelf was raiſed to.

The moral ſolvite of them.

A courſe then muſt be taken, that while we are here, we do Solvere templa hæc, diſſolve theſe temples (of Camos and Aſhteroſh;) and upon the diſſolution of them, we raiſe them up, very temples to the true and living God: That we down with Bethaven, this houſe or ſhop of vanity (as by nature they are;) and up with Bethel, Gods houſe, as by grace they may be.

The moral Excitabo.
Apoc.20.6.

For, a ſolvite, and an excitabo, we are to paſs here in this life: and this, this excitabo, is the firſt reſurrection here to be paſſed: He that hath his part in this firſt, he ſhall not fail but have it in the ſecond.

That they may be Temples.

If then, temples they would be, that we ſo make them: for, to make them ſo, is the Excitabo of this life. And ſo ſhall we make them, even temples: and no way ſooner, than if we love this place (the temple) well, and love to reſort to it, and to be much in it. By being much in it, we ſhall even turn into it. And ſure, if ever we have aliquid templi, any thing of a temple in us; then it is, when we are duely and devoutly occupied, and imployed, they and we, in His worſhip and ſervice. Then are we temples.

Temples, corporis ſui.

But, to be temples, is not all; we are further to be templum hoc, this temple: and this, was the temple of his body. And that are we, if at any time, then certainly, when, as if we were temples in very deed, we prepare to receive, not the Mark of His preſence, but Himſelf, that He may come into us and be in us: Which is, at what time, we preſent our ſelves, to receive His bleſſed Body and Blood: that body, and that blood, which for our ſakes was diſſolved; diſſolved three dayes ſince, when it ſuffered for our ſins. And this day raiſed again, when it roſe for our juſtification.

Rom.4.25.

Which, when we do; (that is) receive this body, or this temple: (for, Templum hoc, and Hoc eſt corpus meum are now come to be one: for, both Templum hoc, and corpus hoc, are in Templum corporis ſui: and when the Temples of our body, are in this Temple, and the Temple of His body in the Temples of ours; then are there three Temples in one, a Trinity, the perfect number of all.) Then, if ever, are we, not Temples only, but templa corporis ſui, Temples of His body; and this Scripture fulfilled in us.

This Feaſt a fit time for it.

This are we, when we receive. Now, at no time, is this act of receiving, ſo proper, ſo in ſeaſon, as, this very day (ſo hath Chriſts Church thought it, and ſo practiſed it, ever) the very day of this His Excitabo; the day of His riſing: And by means of it, of our raiſing: our raiſing firſt, to the life of righteouſneſs (to the eſtate of Temples) here in this world: And after, of our raiſing again, to the ſecond, the life of glory and bliſs (of glorious Temples) in the world to come; which is the Excitabo when all is done. What time, they and we ſhall be looſed: as now, from ſin; ſo then, from corruption. And raiſed, and reſtored: as now, to the eſtate of grace; ſo then, to the ſtate of glory, and glorious liberty of the ſons of God. To which happy and bleſſed eſtate, may He raiſe us all in the end, that this day, was raiſed for us, &c.

1 PET. Chap. I. Ver. III, IV.

Benedictus Deus, &c.

Blessed be God, and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.

THE Summe of this Text, and (if ye will) the name of it too, is set down in the very first word of it. It is a Benedictus. The first word is so. The first word Benedictus: and (if you look) the last word is [for you.] Give me leave to read it, for Us; to put in our selves. Seeing to us, and for us, it was written. So, a Benedictus it is; from us, to God, for something coming from God, to, or for us. The Summe.

Something? Nay many. Benedictus is but one word, but the first word: the rest of the words, of both Verses, are for us all.

And, many they are: We reduce them to three: 1. Our regeneration which is past: 2. Our hope, which is present: 3. And our Inheritance, which is to come. 1. Regenerating, or begetting, is (of it self) a benefit: We get life by it, if nothing else. 2. But, to beget to an Inheritance, is more than simply to beget. 3. And yet, more than that, to beget, to Such an Inheritance, as this; of which, so many excellent things are here spoken.

Three then, in this; 1. To be begotten: 2. To be begotten to Inherit: 3. To be begotten, to Inherit, such an Inheritance.

But

Titus 3. 7. But then, an inheritance is no preſent matter. All heirs be heirs, under hope, uſq; dum, till the appointed time. So comes hope in. Therefore, firſt to hope; After, to the thing hoped for, the Inheritance it ſelf. There is a reſemblance of both theſe, in the two Seaſons of the year. At this time, the time of Chriſts Reſurrection, and of our celebrating it, to hope; as to the bloſſome or blade, riſing now in the Spring: To the Inheritance; that, as the crop or fruit to come after, at harveſt: And the harveſt of this crop (ſaith our Saviour) is the

Mat. 13 39. end of the world.

We are not yet come to the point. Regenerate, wherto? to a lively hope: Hope, whereof? of an Inheritance: Inheritance, what maner one? Such as is here ſet down.

But, all theſe, whereby? Per reſurrectionem, by the reſurrection of Chriſt: All, by him: All, by that. This By, is the main, here. This Διὰ the διὰ παντὸς, that runs thorow all this Text. For, all ariſe, from Chriſt ariſing from the dead.

Now, if from Chriſt riſing, then from Chriſt, at this Feaſt. For this is the Feaſt of Chriſts riſing: And Luke 1. 68. ſo, this the proper Benedictus, for this Feaſt. We had a Benedictus made by Zachary, S. John Baptiſts Father, for his Birth, for Chriſtmaſs-day (known by the name of benedictus:) We have here now another, for his riſing, for Eaſter-day, of S. Peters ſetting. And this it is.

The Diviſion For the Order, we will put the words in no other, for we can put them in no better, than they ſtand: Every one is in his due place, from the firſt to the laſt.

1. God firſt, and the true God the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. 2. Then his mercy, the cauſe moving. 3. Then, Chriſts reſurrection, the means working. 4. Then our regenerating, the act producing.

Producing 1. hope (firſt) of the Inheritance: 2. then after the inheritance, we hope for. Of which, two points there are: 1. How it is qualified: Uncorrupt, undefiled, not fading. Every one hath his weight. 2. Then, how Seated: Even, in Heaven: There it is; there kept it is. And, which is the Capital chief point of all, kept; for us, there.

Now then, for theſe. 1. For his Mercy, firſt. 2. For our Regenerating, by his Mercy. 3. For the Hope, of this inheritance; 4. but more, for the inheritance it ſelf: Specially ſuch an one, ſo conditioned, Verſe 5. as here is ſet down. 5. For keeping it for us in Heaven (in this Verſe:) 6. For keeping us for it, on earth (the next verſe.) For theſe all: but above all, for the means of all, the riſing of Chriſt (this dayes work) the dew of this this new birth, the gage of this hope, the pledg of this inheritance. For theſe, owe we this benedictus to God. And, this day, are we to pay it, every one of us. It is a Sin of omiſſion, not to do it; he that doth not, is a debtor.

To God the Father, the Qui, and to Chriſt our Lord, the Per quem, by whom and by whoſe riſing, loſe this life when we will, we have hope of a better; beſide our Inheritance on earth what ſhall, we have another kept for us in Heaven. Thus, every one naturally ariſeth out of other.

1. The Act. Benedictus: Bleſſed be God.

BLeſſed be God. Yea, bleſſed and thanked, and praiſed; Benedictus, Magnificat, Jubilate, and all. All; But, here, bleſſed ſuits beſt: that the beſt: that the beſt and moſt proper return for a bleſſing. That we inherit, is the Bleſſing (Chap. 3. Ver. 9.) The hope is a bleſſed hope (Titus 2. 13.) But the Inheritance is the State of bleſſedneſs it ſelf. Therefore Benedictus bene dicitur, Benedictus is ſaid well. Said well, of God, who is above all bleſſed for ever: well alſo, of a Father; Benedictus, a fit term for him. And

2. The Party, God. God, in the tenour of this whole Text, is brought in, as a Father, a Father begetting; begetting us firſt by nature; begetting us again, in it, by grace.

Rom. 9. 5. Bleſs God we may. But thereby hangs a Scruple: For, what are we that we ſhould take upon us to bleſs God? S. Peter ſayes it here: S. Paul ſeems to gain-ſay it, Without all queſtion (ſaith he) the leſs is bleſſed by the greater.

Heb. 7. 7. And is he leſs, or we greater, that we ſhould offer to bleſs him? And, if not as God; not as a Father (the next word.) For, ſhall the Child preſume to bleſs his Father? It becoms him not. He us, then; and not We, Him.

Yes, He us; and We Him, too. We have ſo many Texts for it, I make no doubt, but there is bleſſing both wayes. Of the many, I remember that one of S. Pauls (Eph. 1.) Benedictus Deus qui benedixit nos, Epheſ. 1. 3. Bleſſed be God for bleſſing us. As if they were reciprocal, theſe: One, the Echo, the reflectio of the other. Equal they are not. It were fond to imagine, the Father gives the child no other bleſſing, but the child can give him as good again. No: aliter nos Deum, aliter Deus nos; Otherwiſe, God bleſſeth us; and the Parent, who repreſents God, in begetting our bodies; and the Prieſt, who repreſents him, in begetting again our ſouls. Otherwiſe, we them. Gods is real: ours but verbal. His cum effectu ever: Ours, if it be but cum affectu, that is all. His Operative; ours but Optative. What then? he that wiſheth heartily, would do more than wiſh, if his power were according. Even that then, in want of power, to ſhew a good will (I know not how, but) we take it well ever. God doth, I am ſure: as appeareth by the goats hair of the Old Teſtament, and by the Widows mites in the New. And this is S. Peters, but expreſſing a good mind only. And, without all queſtion, thus, the Greater may be bleſſed, even of the leſs: Not, tanquam poteſtatem habens, but tanquam vota faciens. So we may ſay Benedictus Deus: And let us then ſay it.

What

What ſay we then, when we ſay Benedictus? It is a word compound: Take it in ſunder, and Dicere, is to ſay ſomewhat, to Speak; and that we can: and bene, is (ſpeaking) to ſpeak well; and that we ought. To Speak, is Confeſſion: To ſpeak well, is Praiſe: And praiſe becometh Him, and us to give it Him. How we may bleſs God.

Put together in one word, and then, Benedicere to bleſs, in the phraſe of ours, and of all tongues elſe, is, not ſo much omnia bona dicere, to ſpeak all good of him, as omnia bona vovere, to wiſh all good to him. And that becomes him too; not only Laus, but Votum: ſpecially where Votum is totum, where we have little elſe left us, but [illegible].

And what good can we wiſh him that he hath not? Bonorum noſtrorum non eget (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) nor Benedictionum, neither. We can adde nothing to him by our Benedictus: Say we it, ſay we it not, he is bleſſed alike. Pſal. 16. 2.

True, to him, we cannot wiſh; not to his perſon: But, to his name, we can: (Add he is bleſſed, when his name is bleſſed:) We can wiſh his name more bleſſedly uſed, and not in curſing, and curſed oathes, as daily we hear it. In his Name.

And, to his Word, we can: We can wiſh it more devoutly heard, and not, as a few ſtrains of wit, as our manner is. In his Word.

Yea, even to his perſon, we can: There is a way, to do that, inaſmuch as he, and his Church, are now grown into one, make but one perſon: what is ſaid or done to it, is ſaid or done to himſelf: Bleſs it, and He is bleſſed. In his Perſon as united to his Church.

In a word then: to bleſs God, is to wiſh, his Name may be glorious; to wiſh, his Word may be proſperous; to wiſh, his Church may be happy. By wearing of which name, and by hearing of which Word, and by, being in, and of which Church, we receive the bleſſing here upon earth, that ſhall make us for ever bleſſed in heaven. This we ſay, if we marke what we ſay, when we ſay Bleſſed be God.

God, and the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. This is ſtylo novo the ſtyle of the New Teſtament; ye read it not in the old: No, nor in Zacharies neither. Between that of Zacharies, and this of S. Peters, it fell out, this. The Sun was yet under the Horizon, when Zachary made his: But (now) up, and of a good height. And thereupon, this taken up by S. Peter, here: by S. Paul, 1 Cor. 1. Epheſ. 1. and upon great reaſon. God, and the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: the Style of the New Teſtament.

1. Bleſſed be God: Say that, and no more, and never a Jew, Turk, or Pagan, but will ſay as much. Bleſſed be God, we; Bleſſed be God, they. It is never the worſe for that. But yet, ſeeing the world then was, ſtill is, full of many Gods, and many Lords (1 Cor. 8.) It would be known, which God. For, we would not beſtow our benedictus upon any, but the true God: neither they, nor we; I dare ſay. Which is then the true God? Pater Domini noſtri Jeſu Chriſti: and he that is not ſo, is a falſe fained God; [illegible] an Idol. Put them to it then, put this addition to; and neither Turk, Jew, nor Pagan will ſay after you: None, but the Chriſtian. For, this is the Chriſtian mans Benedictus. 1 Cor. 1. 3. Epheſ. 1. 3. 1 To ſever him from all falſe Gods. 1 Cor. 8. 5.

Now, ever ſince Idolatry firſt took head, it hath been held fit, they that are Gods choſen People of all the people upon earth, they ſhould have ſome mark of ſeverance, to diſtinguiſh, as theirs, the true God; ſo themſelves, the true worſhippers, from the falſe. So to ſettle our benedictus right; upon the right God, this is added.

2. For this cauſe: but, not for this alone. When we bleſs him, I dare ſay we would bleſs him, with his beſt Title. So hath it been ever. You ſhall obſerve in Titles, ever, upon the coming of a greater, the leſs is laid down, No more, the Lord liveth that brought thee out of Egypt; but, the Lord liveth that brought thy captivity from the North. And now, no more that neither; For, here, is one, that after it came, puts them down all, as being indeed the greateſt of them all, the greateſt that ever was, or that ever ſhall be. One, which when we adde, we ſet our benedictus at the higheſt. 2 As his beſt Title. Jer. 23. 7, 8.

For, if this be to be God, to be bounteous, beneficial (as we ſeem to think, when we ſay, homo homini Deus:) In nothing, was God ever ſo beneficial, ſo bounteous; and ſo, in nothing ever ſo God, as in ſending his only begotten Son into the world. In that, God, ſpecially; and, for that, ſpecially to be bleſſed. And becauſe, a greater than his Son he hath not, and ſo a greater than this ſhall never come, therefore this ſhall never be laid down. This ſhall be his Title, for ever. For ever to have a place, and a chief place, in our benedictus. John 3. 16.

And yet there is another, on Chriſts behalf, Our Lord: even to bring him in too. For, ſeeing all that which follows, comes not, but by the riſing of Chriſt, and ſo by Chriſt; I ſee not, how (well) we can leave him out. All the good, that comes to us, as it comes to us from God, ſo it comes to us, by Chriſt. God, the Qui; Chriſt, the Per quem. God, the cauſe; from him cometh all, Chriſt, and all: Chriſt the means; by him cometh all, God and all. All things from God; and nothing from God immediatly, but mediante Chriſto. He, the cauſe mediate, the Mediatour, the Medium. No benefactus (and ſo, no benedictus) without him. 3 To bring Chriſt in, too.

This is moſt plain, in this here. Benedictus Deus, qui generavit Chriſtum: firſt that did generate Chriſt; before Benedictus Deus, qui regeneravit nos, that did regenerate us. If he not generate, we not regenerate: then, no children; then, no Inheritance; then, all this Text void. For, in him, this Text and all other Texts are Yea and Amen.

By this time we ſee, why this addition. 1. It is his Title of Severance: 2. It is the higheſt Title of his Honour: 3. It takes in Chriſt, who would not be left out, in our Benedictus. Dixit Dominus Domino meo, The Lord ſaid to my Lord, to take both Lords in, and leave neither out. And ſo ſhall we knit it well to that, which follows. Pſal. 110. 1.

3. The cause why.

From the Party whom, we pass to the cause why. For, we say not this Benedictus, as we say many an one here, without any cause: Benedictus, for nothing: Nay, otherwhile a Benedictus, for a malefactus, for a shrewd turn; yea, and glad and fain too, No, here is a Qui, and in this qui, there is a quia. That doth it (that is) for doing it: that regenerates us (that is) for regenerating us. For, God is ever aforehand with us: Regeneravit is the Præter; that is past, before any Benedictus can come from us.

1 Mercy.

Pater, qui Regeneravit follows well, is kindly. For, Generation, it is Actus paternus, the proper act of a Father. But before we come to it, let us not stride over that, which (in the Text) stands before it, Secundum misericordiam. God did this, did all that follows, but upon what motive? According to what did he it, according to his mercy. And Mercy accords well with a Father: No compassion, no bowels like his. And as well, with regeneravit; for, of His own good will begat he us. How else? When as yet we were not, what should move him, but his meer mercy? Well therefore said, regeneravit secundum: for generation is but secundum, but a second, not a first: Would ye have a primum, a first for it? that first is his Mercy, ever.

His abundant (or great) mercy.

But the benefits ensuing are too great to run in the common current of Mercy. As they then are, so is the mercy that goes to them, Great: Therefore according to his great Mercy. Mercy, the thing; Great, the measure. And, great would not be passed by, lest we pass not greatly by it; lest we conceive, and count of it, as but of some ordinary matter.

His manifold mercy.

But (indeed) πολὺ is rather Multa, than Magna; a word of number, rather than Magnitude. The meaning is: no single mercy would do it; no, though Great: there must be many. For, many the defects to be removed, many the sins to be forgiven, many the perfections to be attained: Therefore, according to his manifold Mercy.

Luke 1. 78.
